AFTER THE FEAST.

Remnants of Fashionable Banquets Gathered Up and Sold as a Regular Business—Working the Restaurants and Free Lunch Places.

(New York Sun.)

There had been some entertainments at a handsome house on Madison avenue the preceding evening, for the canopy still stretched from the door to the curbstone. The hour was 2 a. m. A dilapidated wagon stood in front of the house, drawn by an aged horse. A related reporter chance to pass by and noticed two men hurrying from the cart, with empty pans and pails, into the basement of the house, and returning speedily with the same filled to the brim. For a moment it looked like a burglary, but the progress of a policeman on the nearest corner was assurance to the contrary. One of the men paused as if to rest for a moment, and the reporter accosted him.

"What's the racket?"

"The same old thing. Free lunches, cheap restaurants, and Ectellians."

"I don't quite catch on. What are you doing in the place?"

"Why, don't you see, they've had a party there to-night and a big supper. They've left three times as much as they've eaten, and we're buying it up from the steward. We'll take it around to our regular customers and sell it all before 9 o'clock to-morrow."

"Regular customers? Why, is this a regular trade?"

"Of course it is, and has been for over ten years of my own knowledge. You see, there are a hundred parties and over given every night here in New York. Nearly all of them are supplied by regular caterers. About half are noticed in the daily papers. Now, at these parties they always put up a lot more than they want. They can't help themselves, because it would never do to have just as much as their guests needed and no more. It would look as if they were dead broke. Old ladies order generally twice as much as they're going to use, new families about three or four times as much, and shoddies five and ten times as much. Why, last week we took in a small place where they had fifty people, and they had enough grub for 500. Now, what happens? The party or wedding is all over, and there's all that stuff left untested. All they can do is to throw it into the street barrel. That's where we come in. We come along and buy it up. Sometimes we buy it from the caterer. It saves him trouble and time, and we clean off all the dishes and leave them ready for his washers. Sometimes we make the deal with the cook or the butler, and sometimes, but not very often, with the old man of the house. Anyway, we manage to connect and get the stuff."

"What do you pay?"

"Well, that depends. With a reliable caterer we can find out what will be left over, and can make a fair bid. With cooks and servants we generally stake him with a $2 or $5 note. Almost always we come out ahead, but now and then we get lost. Cooks are getting two smart and want too much. With the head of the house, though, it's easy work, and a V will satisfy him every time."

"What do you do with the stuff?"

"Sell it to our customers. There's, first, the cheap restaurants. They're always ready to take anything cheap. If they can get a chicken salad for $2 that would cost them $5 to make they'll take it every time. You see, they can afford them to sell it at 20 cents a plate and make money. Why, one time I sold lobster salad, thirty pounds for $2.50. It cost the restaurant keeper 3 cents a plate, and he could sell it for 10 and make money. As a matter of fact, he sold it all before 9 o'clock for 15 cents a plate. Then there's the free lunch saloons. They want sandwiches, pickles, bread, cheese, olives, and ham. They don't pay much, but they'll take all you bring. There's one place down where they give a fried oyster, a sandwich, or something with every drink. That man is one of my best customers."

"After you've sold the restaurants and free lunches, you can always sell out anything left to the Ectellians. They'll buy anything if it's cheap enough. I've sold them melted ice cream of different colors, half eaten Charlotte Russe, chicken bones, and broken cakes. At a street cleaner's restaurant in Marion street last year I sold the leavings from the plates of a big wedding reception for $1. They made about three palisades, and had over fifty different things in them."

"What do you get mostly from parties?"

"First, leavings from plates; then melted ice cream; next sandwiches, and then cake. Occasionally we get Charlotte Russe and candied. In the old days we almost never got salads; but since they've used real and bottled beef in making chicken salad, we got a good deal. On warm nights we collar a good many fried and pickled oysters; on cold nights almost nothing. When they put up cold ham, corn beef, turkey, and venison, people don't eat a quarter of it, and then we come in solid."

"But you see it all depends on the kind of party it is. Literaries are the worst of all; they only have bouillon, coffee, sandwiches, and salad, and there's nothing left over. Musicals are almost as bad. Kettledrums and afternoon nothings are not much good either. The best is a wedding. They send out 1,000 invites and set up for 700, and then about 150 come. Reception to public men are the next best. Then come birthday, christening, and tie-wedding parties. Wakes, too, are sometimes good, and they'll take size them up to know the caterer and get all the points from him."

"Do you ever get any wine?"

"No! The old man of the house always comes down and collars what's left. If he don't, the waiters drink it, and they're always helped out by the servants. I've been in the business ten years, and I never got even a half bottle. That is, I didn't get the empty bottles. They'll pay, though, unless you get more than fifty, and then they bring you in about $100. But I've got to stop, as I'm off now to Washington market for our first customer."

Coralline, a substance now extensively used in manufacture in this country, is made from the fiber of the fern plant, which grows in Mexico and some parts of South America. In general appearance it resembles somewhat the American aspen or century plant, but its leaves are longer and more slender. The leaves are a number of round, tough, elastic fibers. These fibers are separated from the leaves, packed into bales, and shipped to the United States, where they are woven into a tough cloth.

SATURDAY.....NOV. 14, 1885

The Hawaiian nation has now reached a point where the country must be made self-supporting; in other words we must practice what time has taught us, and learn to depend upon ourselves. There are two ways in which nations can become wealthy, either by foreign commerce, or through home production and manufactures. We don't here touch upon the probable results which may follow the opening of the Panama Inter-ocean Canal, and perhaps build up these islands into a great commercial-storing and reshipping depot; we don't speculate, but treat of the facts which surround us claiming our attention.

Whenever a financial crisis is imminent capital always commences seeking new avenues for investment. This fact is best illustrated by the past and present inquiries concerning new industries through our home newspapers. There is no denying the fact that the question of future self-support is causing this investigation and is opening up new fields of labor and colonization schemes. But besides these new developments which are now being operated, we have lapsed industries which have beforetime been made successful here and might be profitably renewed and carried on in connection with new enterprises. Among the new industries compatible with our surroundings might be mentioned fruit-packing and drying, small farming and cattle raising, the manufacture of paper, the production of fibres, the tanning of leathers, and various other minor manufactures. It is, however, to the raw silk industry that we call a special attention. Cotton culture in these islands failed at the American Rebellion, because Hawaii could not compete with the renewed cotton industries of the Southern States, and because of the ravages of the cut-worm. In the South a bale of cotton (five hundred pounds) per acre is the average yield, which, at ten cents per pound, brings in only fifty dollars, hence we were forced to rely upon sugar which yields an average return of almost twice that amount. The silk industry is freed from the disadvantages which surrounded the production of cotton. It will yield a handsome return and will give employment to a large number of our people. The question of freight compared with the price and weight of silk cocoons would almost entirely disappear. The moth of the silk worm lays an enormous number of eggs, which are worth an average of four dollars an ounce. If the silk worm is killed before it changes into a moth, the cocoons are worth from $1.50 to $2, or even more, per pound; but if the chrysalis is allowed to eat its way through the cocoons after development, they are only worth about seventy-five cents per pound.

The requisites for silk culture on these islands would be mulberry trees for the feeding of the worms, houses or sheds with shelves for the preservation of the cocoons, and cases for packing. Mulberry trees have already been raised on these islands to a sufficient size for the feeding of silk worms within the space of year. In our climate cheap coverings can be raised for protection, and labor can be procured at a minimum. There could be no better investment for those who are dissatisfied with our depreciated currency and to put some of it into this new industry and receive a return in United States or English gold.

THE LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL

The Ameer's Claim that the Afghans are the Missing Tribes—An Extraordinary Manifesto.

The "Lost Ten Tribes" have given the world a deal of bother in seeking out where they have been hid away all this time and what they have been doing during all the centuries which have elapsed since they were carried into captivity by Shalmanezzer some two millennia and a half ago. The bother about this matter has been even greater and more exciting than ever Junius, the Man in the Iron Mask, or any of the other mysteries which never have been solved and are never likely to be. Another claimant for the succession or the identity has just come in the shape of the Ameer of Afghanistan, who holds it as beyond all reasonable doubt that his countrymen are the real original Ten Tribes—"which nobody can deny." In 1882, his Highness issued a proclamation making known to his people this glorious and ever-to-be-remembered fact.

The Ameer's manifesto is shockingly long. Abdurrahman seeks to make his people fully alive to the grandeur and glory of their position among the nations of the earth, and, therefore very naturally hopes that they "will remove the cotton of negligence from their ears and listen to his speech." He is, at the same time, abundantly reasonable, for he adds: "Should my advice be acceptable to you, act accordingly; if not, consider me as one of your tribesmen, and think my speech preposterous and throw it into the field of forgetfulness."

Like a true genealogist, as he is, the Ameer begins at the beginning, or nearly so. He starts with Jacob, glances at Joseph, and then plunges right into Egypt, that land which has so long been one of surprises, vexations and disappointments.

They had, after the death of Joseph, become "jealous and malicious against each other," and the upshot was that although you are about six lakhs of people you became subordinate to the Copts and the Egyptians, your property was plundered and your male children were massacred by the accursed Pharaoh. Then some of your pious men, having been disgraced beyond measure by the strange nation, awoke from their sleep of negligence, and turned the face of supplication toward their Creator. The arrow of their prayers reached the target of response. Then Moses, may peace be on him, was selected from your nation, and by the strength of his prophecy, intellect and great qualifications he emancipated you from captivity and the slavery of the Copts and the Pharaohs, and selected the Provinces of Egypt and Syria for your abode. Manna and quail were sent to you from the secret blessed table, and all temporal enjoyments were granted to you.

"After that you again forgot the promises of God and for a time, yielding to the tempting of Smari, you worshipped a calf. Another time, while fighting against tyrant nations, you behaved treacherously to your prophet. Again God poured out his anger on you. Manna and quails and other blessings ceased.

"When you started for Syria you were all confused and bewildered in the desert of Tech. The distance was more than two hundred and fifty miles; this small distance you could not accomplish in forty years.

"Moses and Aaron, on account of your thankless behavior, then left you, and were free from your evil hearts and your trouble.

"You wandered in the desert of perversion until you ceased committing vicious acts, and turned the face of refuge towards the threshold of the Creator. Then God selected Yusha Bin Noon (Joshua) from among you, by whose prayers, and blessings, and acceptance of your repentance you were released from the desert of bewilderment, and by the strength of your arms the tyrant nations were made contemptible and miserable.

"You then, by reason of your thanksgiving to God comfortably enjoyed the gardens and buildings of the Province of Syria. After a long time you again were conquered by negligence of duty to God, and became idolaters, and did not remember to preserve unity. Then God being wrathful made a tyrant nation rule over you; they plundered most of your property, and killed the rebellious people of your nation, and you, on account of your malice against each other would not in any way defend yourselves against your enemy."

This state of things could only be remedied by repentance. They, accordingly, it seems, did repent and selected Tarloot (Saul) as their Ameer with encouraging results. Finally, however, corruption got in, and this was the upshot:

"Your learned men (Olm) became degraded, the seeds of jealousy and malice began to sprout in the ground of your hearts, you forgot the blessings of God, and would not listen to your learned men; nor would you take example by your own experiences; you did not respect your chiefs, and did not wipe the dirt from off the mirror of your hearts by the polish of friendship; therefore again the storm of the anger of God confronted you in the image of Bukht-n-Nasir (Nebuchadnezzar); all your property and treasure which you had stored up were plundered by his troops, your men and women were made captives, and taken to Babylon, which is now call Bagdad. He destroyed Baitul Makud, the sacred house, Jerusalem, and drove you from the gardens of Syria, and for a length of time you were captives to the tyrant until he departed to the desert of hell. Then you, leaving the countries of Arabia, came to the hills of Ghour and settled yourselves there.

"You were in that country when the mercy of God supported you, and through Kais and the good acts of Khalid-bin-Walid you were ennobled by being converted to Islam."

For long time they were pretty badly off, even though religiously they were alright. At last Ahmed Shah Abdali put everything in order and freed them from "obedience to strangers." After this the Ameer must himself tell what took place:

"Through his prosperous luck and suitable deeds on your part, you slumbered in the cradle of safety. You took possession of the Provinces of India, the borders of Turkistan, and some parts of Persia, and brought to your own country all the riches of those places, and with it you built new cities and good houses. You continued in the enjoyment of the blessings of God until you again forgot to submit your thanks to God and again became jealous and malicious to each other, and much bloodshed and fighting took place among you. When this ungrateful conduct of yours toward the bounty of God exceeded the utmost limit, the sea of the anger of God began to rise and he sent the British nation from a corner of this world to twist your ears and they inflicted on you all sorts of punishment until smoke rose up from your race and your lamentation and clamors reached the sky. Eventually your prayers were accepted by God; after much opposition and fighting you got released from the hands of such a powerful enemy and twisted the wrist of that brave nation by the force of your daylight prayers and your midnight sighs."

Well, after those Ten Tribes had had their own "ears twisted" and had twisted their own Anglo-Saxon brothers "wrist," they had, it seems, a good time of it under the Ameer's grandfather, of blessed memory. Then they were again punished through the instrumentality of that "bad man," Shere Ali. But he was put down and punished, and the Ameer's father got to his own again. On the death of that gentleman, however, sore troubles again came to these chosen Ten Tribes in the shape of earthquakes, cholera and floods.—Toro to Globe.

LOCAL NEWS.

The Likie arrived this morning at 3:30 from Maui.

The James I. Dowsett arrived this morning at four o'clock, from Molokai.

There will be eight buoys used in the regatta. Three new tanks and five barrels.

The steamer Mokolii arrived last night about half-past nine from Molokai.

The appearance of the city front is being decidedly improved by a liberal supply of paint.

The sloop Lena, the property of Messrs. Purdy and Rothwell, will be entered for the races.

A person interested in boating suggests that a number of holokus be presented to some of our rowing clubs.

Friends of temperance are requested to come and invite others to the Gospel Temperance meeting this evening at the Bethel.

The judge's stand for the regatta is finished and is now lying at the foot of Alakea street ready to be towed out into position.

The circus will present an excellent programme to-night. Next Tuesday they intend to strike tent and take a trip among the Islands.

Trouble is brewing owing to some misunderstanding. Stoke oarsman of the Junior crew of the Myrtle has refused to act in that position.

While practising yesterday morning, King of the circus did some excellent turning on horse back and Harris over-did himself at high jumping.

The rain is a most valuable visitor to this poor abused community. It wets everything so thoroughly that the police are compelled to seek for shelter.

Services will be held Sunday morning and evening at the Fort-street church. The subject for the evening sermon will be "Was He a Coward." All are invited.

The Chinese who were arrested last Sunday night for holding an unlawful meeting, were fined ten dollars a piece and imprisoned for forty-eight hours. Two of the prisoners have appeal to the Supreme Court.

The closing act of the circus this evening will be a pantomime, entitled, the Imp of the Magic Barrel, for which an entire new wardrobe has been made. If you wish to have a good, hearty, side-splitting laugh, go and hear it.

The Rev. Mr. Forbes will occupy the pulpit of the Bethel Union Church to-morrow morning. His subject will be "The Incarnation." The evening services will be led by Mr. S. D. Fuller, secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

Last night at about half-past seven Waikiki was visited with a genuine tropical downpour. General agent Miller states that it was so thick that the lantern was of no use, causing him to run his horse up against a fence.

The Eclipse boys are wide awake. They have had a raft built and attached to their boat-house, and new flooring laid. The boat gate is built on the same principles as the Myrtles; when open forming a platform out to the raft.

The International Work of the Young Men's Christian Association will be presented at the regular Sunday service of the Y. M. C. A., at 6:30 p. m., by General-Secretary S. D. Fuller. A collection will also be taken for the benefit of the International Committee.

A Chinaman who was riding a horse in Honolulu slipped and fell to the ground and as he caught in the pack saddle, he was riding the way dragged by the horse until he was dead; this horse in running started a team of four horses which got frightened and ran away throwing the driver from the cart and hurting him considerably and breaking the cart somewhat.

The attention of the police has been called several times to the nuisance existing on the corner of King and Maunakea streets. The cartmen who use the corner as a stand, blockade the sidewalk with their hay, themselves making matters worse by lying across the walk. The distance from the station house is but about half a block, but evidently it would be overwork for a policeman to be sent that distance.

Ah, now, ye sarnling nations across the seas, know you now that to brag of daring actions, gallant defenders and noble martyrs no longer belongs to you alone. Lend us your ears and write down on your tablets of memory the fact that that small and isolated Kingdom known as the Sandwich Islands can boast of daring heroes and others of illustrious fame with as much right as you. To give proof to our assertions know you that on the thirteenth day of November 1886 one of our rising youths, nobly and unselfishly swam a long distance to rescue a poor weather-beaten and moss-covered object that was seen drifting out towards sea. In other words a boat broke its moorings and drifting past the first buoy, a young man swam out and brought it back to the Eclipse house where it belonged.

The Boating Association within the last week passed a resolution barring out all boats, other than members, in a number of the races. Notwithstanding that fact the Kapiolani (Fenians) Club, which withdrew from the Association at the same time as the Myrtles, and who have remained firm since, made application and were allowed to enter the list of contestants in a race that is advertised to be open only to boats of the Association. Public opinion says that the Kapiolani men will win. If so, with the above ruling in existence and they come in first the question is asked, "will their claim to the prize be indisputable?" There could be no question as to their right.

Although some of the newspaper in Honolulu would have been pleased to have published anything whatever pertaining to the coming regatta, as they considered it a public matter in which all the people were more or less interested, the Committee, appointed by the Association, for reasons probably best known to themselves, concluded to give one paper a decided advantage over its contemporaries by furnishing them with the necessary information. Not only this but they paid the newspaper for publishing the matter. The members of the Committee deserve generous commendation for their economical way in which the limited amount subscribed was used; also the many way in which all personal grudge and individual prejudices were overcome.

Yesterday morning at about half-past eleven o'clock, while Jack Cousins was practising some new and difficult feats on the back of a horse, he met with a very painful accident. The trick consisted in turning a somersault on the bare back of the horse while going at full speed. He had turned six or seven when he made too great a leap and in coming down missed the horse falling very heavily to the ground with his leg under him, dislocating the knee-cap. When Cousins struck the ground his leg snapped so loud as to impress those present that it was broken, but fortunately the results were not so serious. It is sincerely hoped that he will be around in a few days—as sound or ever. Cusco seeing a suspicious looking bottle on the table in the sick man's room was not long in consulting its contents. The sweet smile of satisfaction that lit up his features plainly showed that he was not afraid of medicine.

They say that there's millions in the rain; that the Mechanics crew has been treated unfairly; that the after-glow is the result of the retail saloons; that the coming regatta will not be a success unless the general row is stopped this morning; that the Post Office Club is to be re-organized; that the oil poured into the troubled waters last night on Hotel street didn't stop the rain; that several prominent society ladies in Honolulu are engaged in smuggling opium; that the Honolulu juniors are busted and will not enter the race; that the best of men sometimes go to extremes; that the Hotel street young man is to fight a wordy duel soon; that the men who talk the most about politics are the men who know the least; that there will be startling developments in boating circles after the coming regatta; that the next church fair in Honolulu will be a great success; that the best of poi is made by a few clean Chinamen; that the notice of the new Hawaiian Dictionary, to be published by the Advertiser was copied by the S. F. Chronicle from a Honolulu newspaper; that one of the Honolulu newspapers never found this fact out; that the somewhat funny political situation of Hawaii will have a funny ending; that the rain last night was a bonanza for the hackmen; and that all the words to be found in Webster's dictionary would not suffice to retail Honolulu gossip.

NEWSPAPER WRITERS.

Contributors to the Magazine—Writers for the Daily Press—Fame.

(Louisville Courier Journal.)

After all the best mechanics are not amateurs, but those who make it the business of their lives. Most of the best writers in the country are engaged in practical newspaper work, as little recognized as this fact may be. Writing is their profession, and they do it better in almost every case than amateurs. A large number of the magazine writers of to-day are professional men, scientific men, soldiers, travelers and explorers. The subject matter of their articles makes them valuable, not the manner in which it is presented. Many and many an interesting sketch or profound essay is written in an awkward and ungraceful way, which no good city editor would allow one of his reporters to use. Columns are read through, and the gist found tucked away in a few lines at the end. No wonder Dean Swift said that books were like jobbers—you must look for the best meat in their tails and lay the bodies untasted back in the dish.

The economy of space restricts the sphere of newspaper writers. A good journalist knows that anything more than a column, or a column and a half at the outside, is seldom read through. He writes to be read, and restricts himself accordingly. A practical writer learns to condense volumes in a paragraph. "A good reporter would put the story of Jean Valjean in a column and a half and would make his escape from the gallery; the sensational incident," said an editor, one of the best local writers Louisville has ever had, not long ago. And no sketches as short as these will give a man reputation unless exceptionally brilliant.

There are exceptions to this rule, as there are to all others, but these do not prove the reverse to be true. The reading public are not critics, and these things pass unnoticed. Many a brilliant writer is toiling on unknown, while men with not half his brains are becoming famous. The man who writes a column of paragraphs every day does infinitely more work, and usually does it better and brighter than the author who writes a mediocre novel once in two or three years. Yet it is rare, indeed, that his achievement gets outside of the office where he toils for his daily bread. Fame does not come to the man who composes the fifth estate except now and then, and then, the few instances only making duller and more prosaic the lives of the neglected. A brilliant article is copied extensively and widely read without ever attracting attention to the writer. It may be talked about in the office, but that is all.

FACTS CONCERNING OPALS.

Cause of Their Luster—Susceptibility to Injury—Various Dangers.

The mineralogist and geologists have offered many clever theories to account for the splendor of the opal, but no one has completely satisfied everybody, and perhaps never will. It is conjectured that it is due either to the presence of water in the composition or to the disintegration of the lamina or layers of the stone, but even this is not certainly known. The Turks believe that the gem is of celestial origin, and thus escape all difficulties at once. The ancient opal mines have never been discovered, but there were no doubt deposits of the precious stone in Arabia, Syria and perhaps other parts of Asia from which the ancients obtained their gems.

Central America and Mexico abound in opal-bearing districts, which are much more abundant than might be supposed; but perhaps the finest opals of the present day are obtained in Hungary. The first opal is found in the greatest perfection in the porphyritic rocks near Zimapan, in Mexico; but while this variety is the most beautiful of all opals, it is also the most sensitive, and is frequently ruined beyond hope of repair by damp or exposure, or even by a sudden change in the weather. There is probably no gem, however, which is more subject to injury than the opal. Exposure to the light injures it very materially, though there is not one thing strange about this, the fact being true also of amethyst, the garnet, and of almost all other precious colored stones.

As stated, the finest opals are now found in Hungary. When first extracted from their native matrix, the gems are soft, friable, tender and easily broken. The first thing to be done is to expose them to the air and light for a few days, until they have become hard, and then their colors begin to appear. At the same time the change takes place in the gem, it becomes also reduced in size from the evaporation of the quarry water contained in its veins. Great care must be exercised in drying the stone, or it will split and crack in a thousand directions, and become utterly worthless. It is also liable to another calamity, if exposed to a high temperature—that is, of losing its luster, and when this once happens, the stone is absolutely worthless.

Utilizing the Owl.

(Scientific American.) It is well known that crows, buzzards, ravens, and other similar birds attack all owls, even the largest, in the day time, as they are well aware that the bright daylight blinds owls to such an extent that it is impossible for them to defend themselves, and for this reason the hunterman uses a chained owl for attacking crows and other birds that he wishes to destroy. The owl is chained on an upright post or rod provided with a crotch or platform on which the bird can sit. This post or rod is fixed to a rope or chain passing over suitable pulleys and extending to a hut, so that by pulling the rope or chain the support or platform on which the owl rests can be moved up or down, thus causing the owl to move about, flap his wings, and create a commotion to attract the other birds. A short distance from this post a low shanty or hut is erected, the side toward the post, on which the owl is chained, being provided with small openings, through which the hunterman can throw stones at the owl. The hut should be erected at the base of a large tree, as many birds of prey prefer to take a short rest before attacking their enemy, the owl.

A short time after the owl has been chained, it is surrounded by a flying mob that begins to bother and pester it, the large birds being very bold and audacious in their attacks. The hunter in the shanty or hut can take good aim, and kill a large number of birds in a very short time, for it seems that the killing of some of the birds does not disturb the rest, and those dispatched by the hunter are immediately replaced by others.

Stuck Fast in the Tar. (Chicago Tribune.)

A Washington pedestrian reports a curious incident of the effect of warm weather upon the asphalt pavement. It was 12:30 o'clock when a sparrow flew down to catch a grasshopper. The grasshopper didn't move, for the good reason that the feet were stuck fast, and before the sparrow was through eating the morsel it was in a like condition. Its mate flew down to rescue the better half. It, too, upon resting its feet in the tar was stuck fast. If sparrows were like men all the feathered tribe in that town would have flown away without leaving the pitiful cries of their kindred. But they didn't, but one by one they flew down to the rescue, and one by one their feet stuck fast in the tar, until by 3:10 o'clock the reporter counted seventeen sparrows stuck fast in the concrete.

Curious Coincidence.

(Boston Transcript.) Article—Hullo, Charlie! Did you see that little bit of mine that I sold to Conchard? Charlie—Little bit! Hullo! very good, Conchard thinks he was a little bit when he bought it. Curious coincidence, isn't it?
