JAPANESE WATCH NEW LEGISLATION

Oriental Liquor Dealers To Fight To Keep Licenses

BACKMEN AND DOCTORS ARE ALSO INTERESTED

JAPANESE WANT LEGISLATURE TO GIVE THEM SAME PRIVILEGES AS ARE GIVEN TO OTHERS

The local Japanese are watching out carefully for any signs of legislation, to come up before the coming session of the Legislature, which may in any way influence them and their business. The Japanese liquor dealers are particularly vigilant. The proposition made by some of the white liquor dealers that no liquor licenses should be issued to Orientals has thoroughly aroused them and they now propose to call a mass meeting at which they can discuss the matter and devise ways and means to oppose such legislation.

It is a well-known fact that the white liquor dealers are at present working on the framing of a suitable liquor law, and that it has been proposed by some that the Orientals be barred from the holding of liquor licenses. On the other hand, it is extremely doubtful that such a recommendation will be made, or that, if made, will pass the Legislature, as grave doubts have been expressed as to the validity of such a provision. It is fairly safe to suppose that the Legislature, in view of the great importance of the liquor law, will pass no act which it is not absolutely sure will be legally sound.

The Japanese are also getting ready to fight on two old propositions, the back question and the matter of the examination in English of Japanese physicians. Regarding this today's issue of the Hawaiian-Japanese Chronicle speaks as follows:

IMPORTANT QUESTIONS IN THE LEGISLATURE

"Some of the questions that will be brought up in our local Legislature will be very important from our Japanese point of view. They are, first, the liquor law which the white liquor dealers have framed up in opposition to the issuance of licenses to the Japanese and the Chinese; secondly, the

WOULD LIKE WORK ON LEPROSARIUM

Local Contractors Are Going to Bid For Contract

The local contractors are not losing any time in looking into the plans for the leprosarium which will be built on Moakai. There have been six sets of plans sent to this city and four have already been given out by the Collector of Customs, who has the matter in charge.

Six sets of plans were also sent to San Francisco and the contractors of that city will be given a chance to bid on the work against the local men. Through a mistake in the office of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department the bids were called for to be opened at a time when the plans had not been issued and as a result a new call for bids had to be made.

The specifications call for the completion of the building and contract on or before June 1, 1908. The following local firms are already figuring on the contract: Lucas Bros., E. F. Chaplin, John Duggan, and E. J. Lord.

DEMOCRAT SUPPORT BY TAKING STOCK

ALOHA AINA PAPER

It was reported today that the Aloha Aina, the well-known Hawaiian paper, had been purchased by the Democrats, who would start issuing the paper as their organ, in both English and Hawaiian, during the second week of January.

W. A. Kinney stated that the report is to some extent incorrect.

"The Aloha Aina has incorporated," he said, "but the old management still retains the majority of the stock. As far as the paper's being the Democratic organ, it has been straight Democratic for the last three campaigns and there will thus be no change in its policy. It is true that a number of Democrats have taken shares of stock in the company. This was done partly to give the paper official recognition, and also to put it on a better financial standing."

In the meantime the Aloha Aina has the following to say on the subject in this morning's issue:

"There will be changes in the Aloha Aina to be made on Saturday, January 5, and the name will be changed to Hui Aloha Aina Kaupalekana. The officers of the new company will be as follows: Mrs. Nawahi, president; C.

Kilauea Still Active

Kilauea has been keeping up her activity during the week. There have been parties of visitors every night to watch the lava flow at the bottom of the pit. The scene of activity has changed about and one of the small lakes has filled up with lava, to the general level of the crater's floor, where it formed a boiling patch of red. The snow above the crater is visible some miles at night time.

CRAWFORD INDICTED BY GRAND JURY

Court Official Charged With Running Che Fa Game

Willie Crawford was indicted this morning by the Grand Jury on the charge of running a che fa game. This was the only indictment returned by the Grand Jury, which reported to Judge De Bolt at 11 o'clock this morning.

Crawford was in the judiciary building, and as soon as he heard of the action taken by the Grand Jury, he came into court and surrendered himself, without waiting for the issuance of a bench warrant.

He was at once arraigned before the court, Deputy Attorney General Prosser reading the indictment. Crawford asked leave to reserve his plea until Monday morning. This was granted by the Judge. Crawford then asked that he be released on his own recognizance. Prosser opposed this, stating that although Crawford was a court officer, he did not think that any favor should be shown. Judge De Bolt took the same view of the matter, but released Crawford on his own recognizance until 12 o'clock, to give him time to find bondsmen.

Attorney J. A. Magoon was in court, acting in another case. He arose and said that, although he had not been requested by Crawford to represent him, he would ask the court to allow him to do so.

Judge De Bolt stated that he thought it proper at this time to suspend Crawford from his duties as Chinese interpreter in the court, as he did not think it the thing for a man under indictment to continue to act as a court official. He ordered, therefore, that Crawford be suspended until otherwise ordered.

By noon today Crawford had secured a bondsman who was willing to stand good for a thousand dollars to guarantee the defendant's appearance in court when his case is called. A Chinese named Y. Anin went on the bond. Judge Gear has been retained by Crawford as his attorney.

Regarding the indictment, Willie says he has nothing to say other than that it is a piece of spite work. The Grand Jury, he says, is more because he wouldn't testify before it to things he didn't know anything about. Of course, Willie couldn't be expected to know anything about the fa and such things.

PLANS HAVE BEEN MADE WITH CARE

Leprosarium Buildings Are Conveniently Arranged

EVERY PRECAUTION HAS BEEN INCLUDED

GAS AND ICE MACHINES AND SEPARATE ROOM FOR PHOTOGRAPHIC WORK TO BE PART OF EQUIPMENT

The plans for the leprosarium which will be built on Moakai have reached this city and are extremely interesting. They show that a great deal of pains is being taken that every possible convenience shall be placed at the disposal of the doctors, that they may help the unfortunates on Moakai.

The contract will include the erection of the station, which is really composed of three buildings, the building of a road to the new landing and the erection of the landing itself. The buildings are the most interesting feature. The ground on which they are to be located is divided into three compounds—one for the hospital, one for the administration building and one for the officers' quarters. The whole group of buildings will be surrounded by a stone wall about two feet high to keep out cattle. The buildings are located 100 feet above and about 120 feet back from the sea.

The hospital compound will be 480 by 598 feet and will have eight single bedrooms and two wards with eight bedrooms apiece, so that forty patients can be accommodated at one time. In the same building will be a small operating room, a pharmacy, a steam laundry, in which the clothes of the patients will be washed, two steam, eight tub and two shower baths. Another feature which will be a little unusual in the hospital compound, will be an animal house in which animals which have been infected will be kept.

When the attendants leave the hospital compound to go back to their own quarters they will pass through a lavatory, where they will wash and change their clothes and no one will be allowed to leave the hospital compound while on duty.

The administration compound will have an animal pen which will be used for the breeding of such animals as are needed for inoculation, rabbits, guinea pigs and monkeys being used. The light and heat for the station will be supplied by a gasoline plant which will generate gas for these uses. There will be two cottages for the attendants and a dining room, kitchen and laundry. About twenty attendants will be needed for the work which will be done.

An ice machine and small cold storage plant will be installed, as there is at present no ice in the Settlement and that will be necessary in the work to be done.

A feature which will be of great value will be a photograph room, as it will be of great importance to have a complete record of this kind to refer to. Every patient will be photographed at regular intervals and the improvements noted in this way.

In speaking of the work to a Bulletin reporter, Dr. Brinckerhoff said:

"I do not anticipate any difficulty in obtaining all the necessary attendants. I have had letters from men all over the country asking that they be given a chance to take the work. I received a letter from two men in South Africa the other day who have done the same sort of work before but the appropriation for the work where they were ran out and they wish to come here.

"In regard to the salaries to be paid, I expect that they will be a little higher or than those paid in an ordinary hospital, but that is a matter with which I have nothing to do.

"We will endeavor to keep all the buildings completely mosquito proof and there will be lanais around the hospital which will be made as comfortable as possible for the patients. We will take every precaution to see that there is no chance that any of the attendants shall be infected and have looked after this feature particularly in the making up of the plans.

"Officially, I have nothing whatever to do with the building of the station unless I should be consulted in regard to some of the minor details. The plans which I sent to Washington have been followed down to the last detail and I feel that we will have a station which will be a credit to our service."

Think of the Danger

If a will is lost it often means legal complications worse than a contest. If a deed to a piece of property is mislaid and not found when wanted there must be a duplicate made and certified by the proper officials in the land offices. And it all means money lost. In either event the cost is greater by far than the rent of a box in our Safe Deposit vault several times over.

FOR FOUR DOLLARS

we guarantee you security from loss for the period of one year and you will have the use of one of the boxes in our vault that is made of steel and iron and built so strong that it will resist the attacks of burglars even when dynamite is used to effect an entrance.

FOR CORPORATIONS

we have the largest private boxes to be found in any vault in the country. These are made large so that books of record as well as silver plate in large quantities may be easily deposited in one of them. For estates managed by two persons they are most satisfactory for the reason that both officers must be present in order that the safe may be opened.

We have private rooms where papers may be examined at any time during business hours and where there is less danger of interruption than there would be in a private office.

The officers of this Company are always ready to give advice when asked upon any subject with which their experience has made them familiar. The securities offered investors are believed to be gilt edge and such as the courts approve for investment by executors and administrators.

We will be pleased to have you call and inspect the offices and the mammoth vault whether or not you intend to become a patron.

SOCIAL NOTES

A cablegram was received in the city today from Walter Schulze announcing the engagement of Robert Atkinson to Miss Nellie Kitchen. The marriage will take place in January. Miss Kitchen is now in New York City with her sister, Mrs. Schulze.

As briefly given, exclusively, in yesterday's Telegram, John A. Eua, a retired Hawaiian planter, whose vast wealth in the islands and in this country even his family can not accurately estimate, died at the Long Beach hospital at 1 o'clock of internal congestion. Mr. Eua was 61 years of age and lived at Ocean avenue and Elm street with his wife, five pretty daughters and two sons.

Mr. and Mrs. Eua came to this city seven years ago to spend the summer. They were delighted with the climate and established a summer home here. Four years ago Mr. Eua made Long Beach his temporary home, bringing the family over from Hawaii to this beach, and turning over the management of his vast estates and properties to other hands. Mr. Eua owned eight large plantations in Hawaii, a ranch in Downey, Cal., real estate in Long Beach, Los Angeles and San Francisco. He held the position of president of the Inter-Island Steamship Company of Hawaii, a concern capitalized at $2,000,000, operating steamships throughout the islands.

Mr. Eua was born in Hilo, Hawaii, of native parents. He inherited from his father a plantation in Hilo, and in a short time began to accumulate property and friends. He moved to Honolulu, married Mrs. Eua, a native girl of high born parents, and became identified with the shipping and passenger interests there. Here he resided until he retired and came to Long Beach.

The daughters of John Eua—Miss Mabel, Mary, Thelma, Daisy and Anna—all accomplished musicians, are all striking examples of native Hawaiian beauty and are favorites in California society. The boys are Thomas and John Eua, Jr. The family will move back to Honolulu after the funeral of the father, the date for which has not yet been set.—Long Beach Telegram, December 12.

All plans are complete for the Christmas season dance to be held at the Haleiwa hotel next week Saturday evening. Kaula's orchestra has been secured for the event which will be a pleasant one as all affairs at Haleiwa are. A good number of local people with their families will spend the holiday season at the popular suburban hotel.

The tennis court at the Seaside is one of the many successful innovations by the management. On pleasant days the settees are lined with spectators and among those devoted to the sport can often be seen Mr. and Mrs. Harry Macfarlane, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dutton, Mr. C. W. C. Deering and many others.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Church gave a most enjoyable picnic at Waikele on Tuesday. The party went up in a trolley and after a most enjoyable lunch an informal dance was had.

The names of the ladies who are to receive in Maunaloa Valley on the first and third Mondays only are Mrs. T. F. Eckart, Mrs. Miss Edith F. Mist, Mrs. Lewton-Hahn, Mrs. Allen Bottomley, Mrs. G. Gallek, Mrs. Frank Atherton and Mrs. C. Montague Cooke.

The Misses Pounds are the guests of the C. Montague Cooke for a month. The young ladies are on a tour of the world.

Dr. Fitzgerald is not only popular in his profession but is in much demand socially. He is living at Virtue Villa.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Love expect to return to Honolulu the first of the year.

On Monday evening the Seaside Hotel gave one of their popular hops.

The Alexander & Baldwin calendar is a perpetual boon to the public.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Wilcox and Mr. George Wilcox are in town.

Mr. Albert Judd arrived from Manila this week.

THE POOR REMEMBERED

The Salvation Army people are busy preparing for Christmas, as they are going to relieve every poor family they can find, and bring Christmas cheer into homes which would otherwise be neglected. The friends of the Army are sending them donations of cash and goods for this purpose, and with Santa Claus on the corner of Hotel and Fort streets it is hoped that the contributions will be sufficient to carry out the relief work planned by the officers of the Army. Anyone desiring to help with this work, write to Adjutant Bambery, or phone Blue 2831.

A concert will be given by the Hawaiian band this evening, from 7 to 10, at the Catholic Mission at Fort street and Beretania avenue.

that would give enough money to properly pay the teachers. Be this as it may, the land for additional schoolhouses is needed and no amount of argument can disprove the condition which cannot be met on theory. The

THE LATEST LAND FRAUD INVESTIGATION.

Of big grafters there seems no end since the various departments of the Government have set out so vigorously on the war-path.

Brief mention has been made in these columns of the charges made against Senator Warren of Wyoming of complicity in the great land frauds perpetrated by the Union Pacific Railway in Utah and Wyoming. That Warren and his colleague, Senator Clark, will become seriously involved is by no means clear. But there is a wealth of damaging evidence and confession as regards the Union Pacific.

This has been brought out by the preliminary hearing held by the Interstate Commerce Commission sitting in Denver. Special Agent Meyendorf of the Interior Department stated under oath that after he had unearthed land frauds he was warned by Senator Warren that he had incurred the enmity of the Union Pacific, and Warren also urged him to cease his investigation and leave the State for fear of bringing about the defeat of Senator Clark.
He also testified that he was instructed by George F. Pollock, in charge of the Interior Department special agents, to destroy affidavits against the Union Pacific and that evidence was suppressed in the Land Office under Commissioner W. A. Richardson of Wyoming.

The evidence against the Senators and the Land Commissioner is the apparently unconfessed assertion of one man. The record of the railroad for great land steals is established by the confession of D. O. Clark, superintendent for the Union Pacific's main subsidiary coal company.

It is said with confidence that the exposures of this preliminary hearing led the President to order the temporary withdrawal of coal lands from pub-

JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT

Was Alarmingly Afflicted With La Grippe.
Cured by Pe-ru-na.

The Grip Is Properly Termed Epidemic Catarrh.

As Pe-ru-na Relieves Every Form of Catarrh, It Has Probably Relieved More Cases of Grip Than Any Other Remedy

HON. W. H. PARSONS,
925 H. St., N. W.,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Fear of Grip Makes People Nervous.

There is no remedy in the world that meets the conditions produced by the grip better than Peru-na.

Peru-na strengthens as it renovates, soothes while it stimulates, heals as it expurgates.

It reaches the source of all diseases of the mucous membranes by its action on the vaso-motor system of nerves.

After-Effects of the Grip.

Every person who has had la grippe during the last year should take a course of Peru-na.

The grip has produced catarrhal inflammation of the whole mucous membrane, and good health is impossible until these are restored to a normal condition. This Peru-na will do.

A great many remedies have been suggested for this condition from time to time, but Peru-na is the only remedy that has gained great popularity in these cases.

It has seldom failed to give satisfaction during forty years' experience and still occupies the unique position of being the leading and most generally used remedy for the after-effects of la grippe.

For special directions everyone should read "The Life of Life," a copy of which surrounds each bottle. Peru-na is for sale by the following druggists and will be sold at the retail trade in Honolulu, Hawaii: Benson, Smith & Co., Hobron Drug Co., Honolulu, Hawaii.

lie entry and recommend in his message that the Government should hereafter retain all its coal lands.

Through testimony offered before the Interstate Commerce Commission it was shown that employees of the Union Pacific Company had hired large numbers of men in Denver to sign declaratory statements which were filed on thousands of acres in Sweetwater county in Wyoming, each man also signing at the same time a relinquishment of claim in blank.

These men, according to their own statement on the stand, had never been on the land, they were never sworn as the law requires, although the oaths, duly attested, appear of record, and many were not aware of the nature of the papers they signed. They were paid $3 or $4 each for their part in this transaction. These declaratory statements were filed at the land office in Wyoming and their effect was to keep other claimants off the land until prospectors for the railroad company should be able to make thorough examination and determine which pieces were valuable for coal and consequently worth taking up.

Testimony was given to show that the quarter sections found to contain coal were later entered by other employees of the road, who paid the government price, $20 an acre, with money furnished by the Union Pacific upon the understanding that they were to transfer the land to an agent of the company, a proceeding which is contrary to law. In nearly every case the dummy purchaser received $200 to give the transaction the appearance of a bona fide sale.

One of the men who made cash entry upon a quarter section upon which a declaration and a relinquishment signed in Denver had previously been filed was Cyrus Beard, now one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of Wyoming, then a local attorney for the railroad company.

On the witness stand before the Commission Judge Beard declared that he did not know what he had done was illegal.

Judge Beard borrowed the money, about $2,200, to pay the Government fee, from George Black, superintendent of the Union Pacific Coal Company, which is owned by the railroad
The Superior Coal Company, another

W. H. Parsons is Ex-State Senator and Ex-Special Judge of the Supreme Court of Texas, and was also Brigadier-General in Confederate Army. In a recent letter from 925 H street, N. W., Washington, D. C., this prominent gentleman says:

"Upon the recommendation of personal friends and many strong testimonials as to the efficacy of Peru-na in the treatment of the numerous symptoms of the grippe with which I have been afflicted for four months past, I have been induced to undergo a treatment with this justly celebrated formula. I feel a decided change for the better after using it only one week.

"It is especially good in toning up the stomach and has had a decided effect upon my appetite. I therefore feel much encouraged that I am on the road to complete restoration.

"My numerous friends in Texas, where I have had the honor to command a brigade of her Veteran Cavalry in a four years' war, may accept this voluntary testimonial to the merits of Peru-na as a sense of obligation on my part for its wonderful efficacy."—W. H. Parsons.

No Time Like the Present.

If you are suffering from the after-effects of la grippe—if you have become discouraged in your attempts to cure yourself with other treatments, take a bottle of Peru-na now.

A bottle of Peru-na taken during the beginning of the disease is worth more than a dozen bottles after the trouble has become deep-seated.

La Grippe Affected Lungs.

Mrs. Olive Cushman, Fonda, Ia., writes:

"Two years ago I was taken very sick with la grippe. It started on my lungs.
Our home physician did all he could for me, but it did me but little good. I then wrote to Dr. Hartman and he prescribed for me. I followed his advice and my cure is permanent, I am sure.

I have a good appetite, sleep well and enjoy life. I am so happy to be well once more. 'A friend in need is a friend indeed,' and such a friend has Peru-na been to me."

Pe-ru-na, a Good Medicine for La Grippe.

Mrs. Louise Eastman, Lancaster,
Wis., writes:

"I am all right. I do not think I need any more treatment. I am able to do my own work which I could not do at the time I wrote you. My cough is gone, my appetite is good, I sleep good, and my bowels are all right. I think Peru-na is a good medicine for the grip."

subsidiary of the Union Pacific, now controls the property.

After Judge Beard gained possession from the Government Black, as his agent, sold the land to Vice President Clark, to whom nearly all the other purchasers deeded their land, Black having previously furnished each one the purchase price, $3,200, as he did to Judge Beard.

Like the others, Judge Beard received $200 advance over the purchase price, but unlike many of the witnesses who were heard, he insisted that there had been no understanding about the sale of the land when he bought it and that he had acted in his individual capacity.

Vice President Clark admitted on the stand that through him the railroad company furnished the money to men who bought the land and that they understood they were obtaining it from the Government for the purpose of conveying it to the coal company.

The detail of this gigantic fraud involving millions of property and the illegal action of the railway of discriminating against such independent persons as sought to work mines in the district is probably the repetition of what has been going on in many parts of the West for many years. It was what gave Oregon the "land science" irregularities—so common that the people had come to think of them as not right but still not very wrong.

The vigor with which all these matters are being ferreted out shows the earnestness of the Administration in getting the people back to the grounds of common honesty. The methods of these fraud-operators can also be made instructive to Hawaii, as they indicate wherein the present land laws of the mainland have fallen short in protection against land-grabbers, and thereby furnish suggestions for our own.

The tug Navigator, which is on its way from New York to San Francisco, in tow of the new Matson steamer Porter, will take her place as the queen of the tugs in that harbor when she arrives. She is of 231 tons displacement and has engines of 1,000 horsepower.
Her length is 144 feet. When she arrives in San Francisco the Relief, a tug, even more powerful than the Pearson, may be sent to this port.

A LITTLE BOY'S LETTER TO SANTA

"Dear old Santa, will you please bring some things to me? And listen, Santa, I should like to have a Christmas tree,

"And green, with candles gay
And on every bough;
Whip tinsel balls and candy fruit—
But, Santa, you know how "To fix up things for little folks,

So I'll not say a thing,
But be so very, very glad To get whatever you bring.

"Though I do hope you'll not forget
A rocky-horse and ball;
And, let me think!—Oh, Santa,
Bring slater a wax doll!

"And bring new skates for both of us;
A drum for me to beat,
And a basketful of goodies
For sis and me to eat.

SANTA CLAUS' VISIT TO LITTLE BOY AT SEA

Since that illustrious birth, over thirteen hundred years ago, children of all civilized lands have waited with eager anticipation the yearly visit of their patron saint, dear old Santa Claus. He never fails to come. He always shows up on time, but his time-keeping is so arranged that a small amount of disappointment enters in with the expected joy for he always comes in the night.

I remember when I was a small boy, I frequently got mixed up on the identity of George Washington, Santa Claus and Henry Ward Beecher. I would get them confusedly out of place at times, but as I grew older, and Santa Claus began to give me the go-by, I sort of lost faith in the old whiskered fellow. But I was not left without hope, for as my faith in old Santa faded through his forgetfulness of me and my line of stockings, a new faith was given me which I honestly hope will have no cause for diminishing, even if I live to be a thousand years old.

Old Santa Claus uses many and varied vehicles in his wonderful trip about the world. In most parts of Europe and America he uses long-limbed, fleet-looking deer as a power to draw his sleigh. In India a massive elephant, takes the place of the deer. Far up in the North, where little children wear fur clothing and play all their games on ice and snow, old Santa goes dancing along behind a long string of dogs, and in the more thickly settled districts of the United States he has been known to make use of an automobile. No matter what kind or sort of motive power he uses it must be of the speedy class, for in the one night he must pass over the whole world. A few years ago I had the pleasure of becoming acquainted with a new mode of traveling he employs at times; one that I had never dreamed of before, and can safely say that very few of my young friends would ever dream of him going about with all his toys and dolls as I shall now tell you about.

On the twenty-first day of December, a few years ago, the good ship Planter (Capt. Dow), spread her white wings for a flight from San Francisco to these islands. I was a passenger on her and my companion was Capt. Dow's little six-year-old son, Harold. While sitting at the noon meal on December twenty-fourth, little Harold glanced up at his father and asked: "Is tomorrow Christmas, papa?" "Yes, my son," replied the captain, "tomorrow is Christmas." Silence for a few moments, then "Santa Claus won't see us till we get into Honolulu, will he, papa?" "Oh, yes," replied his father, "He will come here to the ship some time tonight. Little Harold was silent and thoughtful for some time. "But how will he get out here, papa? His deer will get drowned, and all the toys will get wet." "No. He will come all right," returned Capt. Dow. "He has got a big ship just like this one that he goes sailing all over the ocean in, looking for good little boys and girls who are out at sea with their fathers and mothers. I will put a light in the rigging tonight so he will be sure and see us. He may come in sight before dark. Better keep a good lookout for him."

Strange as it may seem, a big fluted ship came out of the West a little before sundown. Harold was the first to see her, and with an exclamation of joy he ran to his father with the information and query as to the identity of the stranger, and if it could, by any means, be Santa Claus' ship, to which his father replied that he thought it was Santa Claus' ship, but that it would be dark before he could catch up with them. Harold could not be comforted until a light was got ready and hung in the rigging, then he stationed himself flat on the deck with his little face pressed against two stanchions, never once removing his eyes from the strange ship. The dusk of evening came creeping on slowly until I myself could not discern our neighbor off to the westward in the darkness. After waiting some little time for him to give up his vigil, I went over to him and leaning over the rail looked into his face. He was sound asleep. I carried him to the cabin and placed him in his bunk. The next morning, bright and early, he was on deck with toys and sweets galore.

Of course we told him how good old Santa Claus' ship came alongside in the night, and, after inquiring about his conduct during the year, left him all the pretty things that he found in the morning. Bless his faith.

LAW CASE COMES UP NEXT MONDAY

The hearing of all the proceedings in the Laland land case will come up before Judge De Holt at 10 o'clock on Monday. This includes the motions filed by the Attorney General for the Governor and Land Commissioner Prati to dissolve the injunction and temporary restraining order, and of Prati's demurrer to the petition in equity.

The Attorney General's office is ready to proceed with the matter, and hopes to have it taken up and concluded as quickly as possible. Attorney General Prati and Deputy Attorney General Fred. Milverton, who are handling the case for the Territory, state that they have every confidence that they will win out and that the injunction will be dissolved. The whole proceedings on the part of McCutcheon is characterized as an attempt to obstruct, without any good reason, the exchange of the lands.

Legal Notices.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII.

Whereas, A libel was filed in the District Court of the United States for the Territory of Hawaii on the 17th day of December, A. D. 1906, by Chas. May J. Gundersen, H. Halvorsen and H. C. de Vinco, libellants, versus the ship W. F. Babcock, her tackle, apparel, furniture, engines, boilers, machinery, loads, appurtenances, cargo and freight money, and against all persons intervening for their interests therein, libellee, in a cause of damages, civil and maritime, to recover the sum of $20,000, as by said libel, reference being hereby made thereto, will more fully and at large appear.

Now, Therefore, in pursuance of the constitution and under the seal of the court to me directed and delivered, I do hereby give public notice to all persons claiming the said ship W. F. Babcock, her tackle, apparel, furniture, engines, boilers, machinery, boats, appurtenances, cargo and freight money, etc., or in any manner interested therein, that they be and appear before the said District Court, to be held in the City of Honolulu, on Friday, the 28th day of December, A. D. 1906, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, provided the same shall be a day of jurisdiction; otherwise on the next day of jurisdiction thereafter, there and then to interpose their claims and make their allegations in that behalf, otherwise default and condemnation will be ordered.

Dated the 17th day of December, A. D. 1906.

E. R. HENDRY,
U. S. Marshal.
Geo. D. Gear and J. J. Dime, proctors for libellants.

DAVID CROWELL DEAD AT WAILUKU

David Crowell, jailer at Wailuku jail, died yesterday of Bright's disease. High Sheriff Henry received a wireless to that effect this morning.

Crowell has for many years been one of the jailers at Wailuku, and the High Sheriff speaks in the warmest tones of his faithfulness and the respect and affection in which he was held by all who knew him. Crowell had been sick for some time, and spent a considerable time in the hospital at Wailuku. Recently he left the hospital, his condition being much better, and his death comes as a surprise to those who thought that he was improving.

The deceased leaves a wife and one child. He was about 50 years of age.

Mr. E. A. Rowland has received a cablegram announcing the death of his father, at Metuchen, New Jersey.

BIG LUMBER SHED

ON FORT STREET

RUINED BY WIND

The high wind which prevailed this morning, played considerable havoc in Allen & Robinson's lumber yard, on the corner of Fort and Allen streets, just above the Oceanic wharf. A large shed, which ran from the Fort street boundary back some forty feet, collapsed utterly at about 6 o'clock. It went down with a big crash, but luckily no one was injured. The damage can not be considered as being very great, although the shed was quite a large one, as the timber of which it was composed, was old and rotten. Later in the day some tall piles of 2x3 and 2x4 lumber toppled over, but no damage was done.

The damage that was done by the falling of the shed will fall on the United States Government, to whom it, as well as the land it stood on, belongs. The lumber which was stored in the shed also belonged to the Federal Government. This land was formerly leased by Allen & Robinson from the Territory, but when this lease expired the Federal Government took up the land and has been holding it ever since, although the lumber firm has obtained permission to store its lumber on such parts of it as are not used by the government.

MADAME PELE'S AWE-INSPIRING VISIT TO KAU

Reverend Father Celestine N. Ruault, who celebrated his golden jubilee as Catholic missionary in the District of Kau on June 24, 25 and 26 this year, has furnished the following data regarding the memorable visit of Madame Pele to the district in 1868. The story is of the terrible experiences of himself and his parishioners during the awful days succeeding the eruptions is as follows:

"It may be of interest to many readers of this narrative to preface this page of Hawaiian history by a few explanatory paragraphs.

"Madam Pele is the Hawaiian goddess of all volcanic fires; she is the 'Creatress' of the Hawaiian Isles; she is feared and respected by many even to this day by natives of the 'old stock.' She started in on her wonderful work of creation in the northwestern end of this group and in time made one island after the other appear above the surface of the sea. After having extinguished all her fires, she moved her court to the spot now occupied by the largest island of our group—Hawaii. Here she has been holding forth from time immemorial, and now she is (occasionally) in full swing in the most southern portion of this, the last and largest one in the group, right on the confines of our dear Kau district. The volcano in which this 'Dreaded Deity' reigns supreme is called in Hawaiian, 'Lāna Pele o Kilauea.'

"In reading these reminiscences one is forcibly reminded of these soul-stirring words in Shakespeare:

"Oh, that I am forbidden to tell the secrets of my prison-house!"

"I could a tale unfold, whose slightest word would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood, make thy eyes, like stars, start from their spheres, thy knotted and combined locks to part, and each particular hair to stand on end, like quills upon the fretful porcupine; but this eternal blazon must not be to ears of flesh and blood."

"Those continual volumes of smoke and steam; the intermittent, undulating, jerking, wave-like and thumping earthquakes; the dreadful shower of cinders and ashes; the sudden lava and mud-flows and the yawning fissures and terrible splits in the crust of mother earth—all this will more than aid our imagination to understand the more readily the nervous excitement of the people that passed through this dreadful crucible.

Pele Wakes
"On March 28th, 1868 (Saturday)," he says, "I was at Moaula, having arrived there the previous day from Hilea, my home or central mission chapel. I then went out, as I always do, among my parishioners, notifying them of my arrival and incidentally telling them when services would be held at the local chapel."

"While on this spiritual errand, some natives drew my attention to something quite unusual. 'Rev. Father, do you know or see anything strange?' they asked. 'Just look at this.' Then they picked up, to the right and left, handfuls of what is known as Pele's Hair. These are bunches of dark brown, thread-like filaments formed in a very mysterious manner, from molten lava, exceedingly brittle and easily rubbed into a vitreous powder. They are frequently found near the crater, within a radius of a few miles, but on this particular occasion, they had rained through the atmosphere to a distance of fully thirty miles.

"Proceeding on my way, I took notice, on divers occasions that Madame Pele was seemingly quite busy in cooking her dread concoction. There was primal face evidence everywhere that something was doing. While chatting here and there to my people, who had gathered on their different stoops and verandas, I was no less voluble, overtaken by a most violent earthquake. It was so violent that my mule, unaccustomed to such rough handling, wanted to lie down, with me on her back. I saw our natives' houses rocking like ships. Then there arose a pitiful wail and lamentation among the people, 'Oh, what a terrible quaking. Oh, how dreadful this is. We never witnessed anything similar to this in our whole lives.'

"Yet, this was only the beginning of our evils. The people were hardly over their first fright, when we noticed, toward the sea, a dense cloud of black smoke, spreading in the atmosphere. After such a vicious quake we naturally thought that there would be an eruption or opening outlet—that a new crater would be formed down that way; we took it to be a good omen—Hawaiian fashion, that as soon as Madame Pele would take a sea-bath she'd cool off and get over her anger. But our happy omen took another turn—it disappeared at its inception. In a few minutes the dark cloud had entirely vanished. We soon saw to our utter dismay that there was no eruption at the sea-shore, as we had supposed, but the violent quake had shaken down a big hill and consequently raised that voluminous cloud of dust.

"Excited by these unusual experiences, I became very anxious to learn the fate of my little chapel at the village I was sojourning in. It was built of stone and I thought perhaps in total ruins. I therefore concluded to discontinue my visits to the parishioners and to go immediately and do a little reconnoitering near the premises of my chapel. I made post haste to get on an elevation of commanding view. Thanks be to God, my chapel was still standing. Hurrying to the spot I was delighted to find that it had not been seriously damaged.

Prepared for Death

"Under ordinary circumstances, I generally get back to my chapel at night, after I get through with visiting all my people. On the following morning I was in the habit of hearing confessions, baptize, etc. On this extraordinary occasion, owing to circumstances and the imminent danger of death, I invited those of my flock, who in their distress came to the chapel to find protection, to prepare at once, by a good confession for anything Almighty God may have in store for them. This invitation needed no repetition, for penitents came flocking to the holy tribunal of penance. While thus employed, hearing the confessions of these good people, filled with anguish and perturbation, another violent shock occurred. Some of the more panic-stricken rushed for the church doors, not trusting to the safety of the walls. Confessor and penitent alone remain in church. Then came the second and even a third shock. These things are quickly printed and hastily read, but, oh, merciful God, what consternation and cold sweat these vicious shocks caused us. It seemed to us that there was an immense hole underneath the crust of the earth in which there was every now and then a furious surging of what seemed to be liquid fire, much could be heard and terror only increased by putting one's ear to the ground. Such an infernal hissing, bubbling and furious raging. Oh, merciful God—how insignificant man appeared then. Then we seemed to realize how dependent we were on the Supreme Being. Then we seemed to comprehend the enormity of our daily transgressions. We were at the mercy of the Creator. We smote our sinful breasts with compunction of heart much as St. Peter of old did, in his fragile bark in an infuriated sea, 'Lord, save us or we perish.' I have seriously studied up those shocks and why shouldn't I? We were almost getting accustomed to them. I am sure I am not exaggerating when I say that we felt more than 1500 of Madame Pele's heavy thumps. People in our neighboring district—Kona—felt some of our shocks, but we of Kau, we were in for it. We felt the thumpings in their full vigor—Madam Pele's kitchen was below our very feet. It seemed to me that the intensity of this shock varied according to the size of the boulders hurled against the top of these subterranean holes. The force and frequency of these shocks naturally decreased after the crust had finally given way after resisting a fierce cannonade of at least 100 violent bumps per day. Every stone wall in Kau was down; frame and thatched houses were demolished; crockery and glassware were all in atoms. Men and animals lay smitten on the ground. The motions of the earth during a quake of any length, are very interesting to think of now after the danger is all over. Such acrobatic maneuvering must be seen and felt to be understood.

"The earth's crust moved, at its inception, from north to south, then from east to west, then up and down, then a circular motion followed—all this happened in less time than it takes to tell, hardly 15 seconds. Men groping on their bellies spreading out their full width, in vain holding on to grass and shrubs trying to steady themselves; trees and shrubs crashing against and whipping each other in furious fashion. After all this is over an ominous silence follows.

"The destruction of Babel or of Jerusalem could hardly have equalled this. It is now almost 40 years (No. 1906) since Almighty God gave me the grace to pass through this trying ordeal, but all the incidents connected therewith are as fresh in my old memory (I am 74) as if they had occurred but yesterday. How grateful I am now in my fast waning days, that Almighty God gave me the necessary presence of mind, the courage and health to guide my poor flock in its sore time of trial—to pray, intercede and weep with them. Deo Gratias for all this. I beg the indulgence of my kind readers for this little deviation from my chapel, where I left myself with my penitents.

"During these shocks while I was in the confessional I remember distinctly that I tried, instinctively, to ward off if possible the falling debris or ruins of my church. I did so by covering my head and neck with my hands. It is quite natural for a man to do so, but should the worst have happened, had I for instance been buried with my penitent in the falling ruins, what a glorious death it would have been, to have died in the fulfilment of an arduous sacerdotal duty. But apparently I was not booked as yet to leave this sad vale of tears. I was destined to see the whole show. Steam at Kahuku

"The following night passed quietly. The next morning some of my people came to Holy Mass from Hilea. They told me that their church had been badly shaken and that the crucifix and the candles had been thrown on the floor. They also told me that in the neighborhood of Kahuku a hole had burst open out of which great quantities of steam escaped. After our service was over, I repaired at once to Hilea and found things exactly as the natives had described to me.

"The next day (March 30th), I very much longed to see my other three chapels, all stone buildings and as such more exposed to be ruined by earthquakes.

"It did not take me long to get to Honuapo (my next station) and there I saw my beautiful church, built on a solid bed of lava, still standing in its glory. Almighty God spared this edifice for a short time longer, evidently to give me a chance to prepare my local flock for their passage to eternity. They all assembled and a great number of them made a contrite confession and the next morning received Holy Communion, which for many among them was their Holy Viaticum, for in a few days later they were swept into eternity by a huge tidal wave. After having finished my ministrations here I headed for my next chapel in the village of Naohulehu; as already stated this chapel was also made of stone. Although it was quite small (just 30 feet long) there is quite an interesting history attached to it. Intolerance

"In the beginning when the local place of worship was but a grass hut the Catholics of the place made arrangements with those of another village (Naalehu) to have Catholics of both places to join hands in building a chapel at Waiohinu (a village between the two above mentioned ones) equidistant between the two villages. All were well pleased with the project but there was to be a big hitch somewhere. The first thing to be procured was a site for the would-be chapel. On inquiry a very suitable site was found and could be had for $300.00. But unfortunately before the bargain was struck, the Protestant minister of Waiohinu got wind of it and that Catholics were the willing buyers, whose ultimate intention was to erect thereon a Papist house, where Mariolatry, idolatry and many other things could be practiced. Of course that settled the question right there and then. He opposed the sale and prevailed on the intending seller not to part with his property. Bigotry ran so high in Waiohinu, and so strong the feeling and prejudice, that in all Waiohinu not a piece of land could be had for a Catholic chapel. Therefore this little stone chapel at Naohulehu was built. It was a big job we had on hand. The sea-shore was far away but we had to go there to get coral to make it into lime and to pack it on our backs to this village over paths fit only for goats. Then sand and stone had to be procured at the same place and over the same path, water had to be carried in buckets and gourds; all this had to be done before the regular work of erecting the chapel could be proceeded with. Our architect-in-chief was one of the mission brothers, one Bro. Charles (may God rest his soul) with the aid of some good natives that volunteered, and so the work was happily completed. Later on they fenced in the church-lot with some dry stone, about four or five feet high, but in less than a year this was leveled to the ground by an earthquake.

"Therefore, arriving at this chapel, I was delighted to see that it had not suffered any damage. My next and last chapel was inspected with not so much happiness, for the walls had cracks two inches wide. In some places. This chapel had been erected under hardships, similar to those mentioned in connection with the previous chapel described.

"Having finished the entire inspection of all my chapels in Kau and seen to the spiritual wants of all my people, I resolved to stay for some time, especially since there was some painting being done at the time. While here at Kamooa I found the shocks just as strong, if not stronger, than in the previous places visited. That these shocks were subterranean I had no doubt, but whether they were infernal or not, I will leave to my patient readers. Be it as it may our nerves were entirely unstrung by this time, especially so at night. They are actually dreadful then, when fast asleep you are rudely awakened by a mighty shaking and made to think that your last hour had arrived. In your terror you try to make the best act of contrition you ever made. This prayerful drama of compunction is repeated five or six times during the night—that is, every time a severe shock occurs. Your terror increases and your prayer is all the more fervent when at night you hear that frightful unearthly roar, when you feel the earth heaving and swelling and when you hear the crash of the neighboring walls tumbling in the dead silence of the night. During the day-time one has always more confidence.

Bottomless Pit

"Being only a short distance from the place where, on the first day of this visitation, such a great amount of steam issued forth from out of the earth, I resolved to investigate this new creation. I found indeed a hole about 18 feet in diameter and of what appeared to me of such an immense depth; for on dropping a good-sized rock into it I could not hear any kind of thud, I therefore concluded that it was a 'break of nature.' At length came what may be called a 'red letter' day of 1868.

"Early next morning a small vessel from Honolulu was in sight. I hastened to pen a few lines to our headquarters at the capital city, giving them a full detail of Madame Pele's transactions here in Kau. In winding up I told them that I thought the Old Lady had done her best, and that all was now over. Alas! man often proposes but God disposes, and so it was in this case. The Almighty Stage-manager informed us shortly afterwards that that was only intended to have been the first act in this awful drama. That letter of mine had hardly got aboard when lo and behold! there comes such a terrific shock which for violence and impetuosity must be considered No. 1. All other shocks were mere trifles compared to this one. For once I could not stay in my house; hurrying outside, I found that I could not stand; I was fast getting into my second childhood. I therefore tried my baby tricks and tried to crawl on all fours and that would hardly succeed.

"While in this baby position and holding on tight to old mother earth, I saw the sad spectacle of my dear chapel giving way to the impetuous wrenchings of the earthquake. Happily, for all concerned, this catastrophe was cut short, at least for the present, or we could not have lived.

Calm After Quake

"After this there reigned a great calm and this seemed to add to our terror in this already too sinister situation. No noise of any kind, no wind, no sign of life, nor action of any kind was noticeable. Turning toward the mountain I saw numberless columns of smoke rushing out of ever so many crevices on the mountain-side. Perhaps this was an indication of our salvation. The pressure of the subterranean steam ought naturally to abate, as soon as it finds a vent in the surface.

"Shortly after this the members of my chapel arrived, shedding tears over the ruins of their dear chapel. What could we do but pray and adore Almighty God in this terrible visitation? We retired into the priest's house, said our beads piously; then I addressed them with a few remarks in harmony with the situation, after which they went home.

Tidal Wave

"They had hardly reached home when the news arrived that a tidal wave had wiped Honuapo from the face of the earth, killing many people. I hastily saddled my mule and got en route for Honuapo. It may be, thought I, that somebody is in need of me. On my way thither I met several natives that had escaped from Honuapo in good time. They told me that it was useless for me to go, for there was no village there any more, and that seventeen natives had been carried out to sea by a tidal wave and were drowned. They likewise told me that the church did not exist any longer. I nevertheless kept on my way, feeling rather sad about my beautiful chapel, which after having withstood the ravages of the earthquakes had finally become the prey of a tidal wave. On all sides I saw nothing but havoc on my way to Honuapo. Oh, how sad and heavy at heart one feels among so much desolation! On the way I passed Waiohinu; there I saw the Protestant church down in ruins. I passed a man with a bundle under his arm—possibly all he possessed in this world. To this man I tried to speak, but for the world I could not get a syllable out of him. Possibly he lost his speech in the fright. At the next village, Naalehu, I was again told the news of the Honuapo disaster—that all houses, churches and 17 lives were lost. The people at this place invited me to stay over night with them, but seeing that it was a beautiful moonlight night, I thanked them for their kindness but proceeded on my way. Finally I arrived and found nothing but indescribable ruins. The ocean had indeed entered and flooded all Honuapo and wrecked everything from it, even the layer of soil on the lava. Everything was completely gone—all but a few solitary heaps of stones where once stood a flourishing settlement of natives.

"What was I to do now? I started calling out at the top of my voice—perhaps there was still a living creature to whom I could speak. At length I had the satisfaction of seeing one living being, but this was not a native of Honuapo; he came from Hilea and was seeking his wife. But alas, she was among the tidal wave victims.

"Nothing could be done at Honuapo, although I have had the satisfaction of seeing for myself the damage done. So I went on towards Hilea. But I could not go very far, owing to the road being made impassable by the action of a furious sea. I therefore was obliged to take a path on the mountain-side. All at once I was aroused from my reverie by another violent shock, fully as strong as any of the foregoing ones. The bushes along my path actually whipped my mule into a frenzy, he making a break for the top of the hill. It was my good fortune that I was up the hill; had I been headed down-hill, there is no telling what would have happened, but as it was I soon got control of the frantic beast. After this little incident on my way to Hilea, wherever I found human habitations I invariably found the natives stretched out on the lawns to sleep, no more trusting to the safety of their houses. Arriving at Hilea my central mission, I found several natives camping on our premises. The chapel had shifted a little and my house had lost some of its underpinning and in consequence was quite shaky. The following morning I was happy to be able to say mass and since my people did not trust the chapel any more than their own houses I went outside on the lawn under a spreading 'kukui' tree to hear their confessions. I never got over thinking about my Honuapo chapel; I always had a special predilection for it, while it yet stood. And as I might be as useful just as well at one place as at another, I thought I'd go re-locate at Honuapo. I got there without mishap and found the place quite deserted. Just one person I found there who had come for the same purpose as I had. We were a pair of relic hunters. All the others had gone to a place of shelter among their friends. On the chapel-site there was not the slightest mark of its former presence, but we recognized some of the stones having mortar still attached to it, we knew that it was a stone of our chapel. We found two relics—only two. One was in the shape of an Hawaiian prayer-book, and the chapel bell, which had been carried to and from the waves and finally landed on the sandy shore. That bell did good service before and it is doing service at present after its watery experience in the tidal waves almost 40 years ago."

"We also found the corpse of one whom I recognized as one of my former friends, whom I had baptised not long ago. It was not an easy job to bury him, being but two of us, and that without tools and worse still, no soil in which to dig a grave, the wave having taken every bit of soil from the solid lava. Fortunately we found a ready-made grave for him—a deep fissure in the lava, caused by the action of the earthquakes. Into this hole we put him tenderly, and as we had no soil we put the next best over his mortal remains—stones which were plentiful, and after having prayed the 'De Profundis' for him and all the faithful departed of my recent flock, I left this sad place and went home to Hilea again.

Kahuna Arrives

"I had not got there any too soon, for my natives were very much perturbed by the prophecy of one of the native Kahunas (sovereigns) that an awful eruption would take place in this vicinity. Our natives found it very hard not to believe him. I used by best endeavors to quiet them and I think I partially succeeded. This night we passed tranquilly. The following morning I had the good fortune to again celebrate Holy Mass and after that to hear confessions, but, of course, outside on the lawn under the kukui tree. Many people passed our mission, I was sorry for not having invited them in, for I was told that they put up at an old kahuna's (sorcerer's). This great kahuna or high priest was a heathen high priest of King Kamehameha. Although this great kahuna was also a Catholic, I nevertheless feared that under the circumstances he might not be willing to resist temptation and return to their old heathenish, superstitious practices. But I was rejoiced later on to find out that I had no reason to fear, for they did nothing more there that night than say their Catholic prayers. The next day I was informed that my chapel at Moaula had been demolished, not one stone being left on the other. I also learned that the tidal wave had visited all along the coast and had done more or less damage everywhere, destroying property and killing many people.

"The people told me that there was quite near Moaula a mud flow, covering a number of houses together with about 30 people. Only one person escaped and that was a sick woman, whose confession I had heard last Saturday (the first day of the earthquake). Almighty God evidently had pity on her, for He divided the flow above her house and had it to meet again below her house, thereby forming a complete oasis for her personal benefit. The Sunday we passed quietly. The natives did not come as plentifully as usual. They had evidently scattered about the different parts of the district on account of the disaster. Others were kept home by fear.

Ashes Fall

The following night after the people had said their night-prayers, they all went to sleep, as usual, outside of their houses. I remained in my house and went to bed. At about midnight I awakened somehow or other, on finding my mouth and nostrils filled with some kind of sticky material. My house had recently been whitewashed. I was therefore inclined to attribute this to the strong lime smell. While I was thus busy cogitating within myself about this infamous taste in my mouth, a native enters my room quite unannounced and requesting me to come outside and watch a very queer phenomenon. Following him out I saw that a floury kind of stuff had been falling which was plainly visible in the bright moonlight. One was able to write and trace figures in it. I thought to myself: 'Well we are having experiences with volcanoes and no one can tell what is yet in store for us, this might possibly become a second Vesuvius raining forth ashes to such an extent as to completely cover us up—dwellings and all—why not?'

Behold my intellectual panorama—Vesuvius and Kilauea, Pompeii and Hilea. Are we going to have the same fate? I philosophized, thought and cogitated; I thought out plans and strained my thinking powers to devise a remedy, if at all possible. In this state of mind I was wondering about seeking an elevation which would give me a glance of the top of the mountain. I might possibly be able to discover whether there was imminent danger. The people of their own accord had started in to say their beads. While I was on my errand reconnoitering I noticed a woman whose mind became unbalanced out of fright. She upbraided me for not praying. I told her that I was continually praying and at the same time trying to find some means of escape, for all of them. If possible, I met still another one that was out of her mind, but fortunately she was asleep, otherwise she would have formed a plan on my way to the elevation I was seeking. I frequently wrote on the rocks covered with this wonderful ashes. When I got to the top I had sought out, I saw indication of very clear and bright weather. I thereupon went home reassured that there was no proximate danger. I therefore retraced my steps and got home with my mind at ease, and finding my good people all asleep on the lawn encircling the chapel I thought I'd do likewise.

Strange Noises

"The next morning on arising, looking towards the sea, I saw a strangely dark, heavy cloud such as I had never seen before. I immediately thought this to be a cloud of ashes, the same as the one that had been raining over us last night. After my mass, and after having confessed a few more of my parishioners, under my spreading kukui tree all of us were startled by a strange noise coming from the bowels of the earth, accompanied by a moderate tremor, much like one would experience on the top of a tunnel when a heavy train is rushing through. This lasted for fully half an hour. There was quite an old native man on our premises at the time; he was badly frightened—in fact he was trembling in every limb, he could hardly speak, but what he did manage to utter was, 'Of all my many experiences with earthquakes (and I have felt many a one) I have never experienced anything similar to this. As I did not think it right to stay long at one place during this affliction, and wishing to give all my parishioners an equal allotment of my time, for I took notice that this awe-inspiring drama had a very beneficial effect on my people for the Almighty spoke to them from the top of the mountain, even as He did to the Israelites of old, with a voice not accompanied by thunder and lightning but with a voice far more terrible. Oh how many contrite confessions, how many returns to God of real hard cases? So many genuine acts of contrition! So many prayers, and ejaculations! They all learned a very good lesson. 'The fear of the Lord, is the beginning of wisdom.' Death menacing them from below, from above, from the sea, no safety anywhere, it was therefore wise on their parts to prepare for the worst.

"I was now at a place, between Hilea and Naalehu. I found traces of volcanic ashes. There were quite a number of Catholics at this place, and while I was hearing confessions many more came. It was natural for them to seek me. I could see that they wished me to remain with them. This night it did not need much coaxing to get me to stay, for it was fast growing dark and I had found out how foolhardy it was to travel at night, there being daily more and more crevices and yawning chasms created by the action of the earthquakes. One might pass into eternity before one was aware that he fell into a chasm. I therefore stayed with these people. They started the beads all of their own accord, in two sections, one a section turned vis-a-vis to the other one. After we were through, I happened to look towards the top of the mountain and there I saw a very lurid light reflected on the clouds. That was the start of an eruption of our volcano. I wondered very much that the section of our people that had their faces turned towards the mountain, did not take notice of that and sound the alarm. They actually showed no signs of emotion whatever. But they later on told me that the dreadful sight caused them so much consternation that they felt paralyzed all over and could not speak. The younger ones in our camp got on their horses and hastened to take in the sight, but I concluded to wait for new developments. I soon noticed in what direction the lava flows would come down. My Kamooa Catholics had the sad assurance that their village would most certainly be visited by this fiery fiend. They told me later on when I got there, that they hastily picked up their belongings which they could carry to a place of safety. They saw that they had no time to lose, for this lava stream flowed almost as fast as water. In fact, in a couple of hours, the flow had reached their houses and destroyed them. While this flow was prosecuting the evil tenor of its ways, frightful reports, compared to which the 101 cannon-shot reports which I heard at Paris in 1856 when the Imperial Prince was born were as mere snaps of one's fingers, were heard in countless numbers. This noise was a perfect enigma to us. Some of the solons in our camp thought the reports were caused by the imprisoned steam forcing its way through the upper, cooled-off crust of the flow. Be that as it may, the reports finally stopped and I thought I would now go and investigate "the cause and effect" as far as it would be advisable for inquisitive man.

"In order to get there I had to pass Waiohinu. I found that village completely deserted, not a living soul, not even a dog or cat could be met with. All had camped out on a neighboring hill. I went up on the hill to see them; there they were sheep without a pastor. Their (Protestant) pastor had chosen to be on the safe side of this fiery question. He lost his presence of mind quite early in the mix-up and on the third day he lost even his 'presence of body', for he boarded a schooner bound for the capital city. This pastor was a white man. There was likewise a native minister here in my district and he scooted to Hilo, some 90 miles away from here.

Values Fall
"I am very much interested in Waiohinu, for in the beginning it was next to impossible to get a foothold there owing to my Reverend friend's antagonism, but we were victorious in the end. A few days after the disaster that piece of land for which we offered $300 spot cash was sold to another party for $250, and that on credit. Thereupon one of our Catholics, a relative of the seller, went to him and expostulated with him for his way of treating the Catholics and at the same time asking him whether the 200 Catholic dollars of ready money were not as good as the 250 Protestant dollars on credit. He acknowledged his mistake and answered, 'Oh, never mind; I have still another piece for sale and you can have it for $100. That brave Protestant friend of mine had not yet got back from the capital city; in fact he did not come back for a couple of months. By the time he got back we were already in peaceful possession of that piece of land, a chapel and school dedicated to the Sacred Heart now ornaments it. And now at the present writing, the school has grown to such dimensions that we are obliged to put up a new and much more spacious school-house.

"But to return to my narrative: I was in quest of the Waiohinu people who had fled to a hill. From the top of this hill the mouth of the crater could be plainly seen. It was not vomiting forth any more lava, but was emitting voluminous clouds of smoke. I missed the terrible sight of a volcano in action, which is particularly grand during the darkness of night, but there was still another in store for us, although less imposing. The lava-flow had set fire to the Kamooa plains, where grass was very abundant.

MADAME PELE'S VISIT TO KAU

pent. This grassy plain on fire was a grand sight. Our local chapel, partly destroyed by the earthquake, could not be reached by this fire, for it was surrounded by a great stone wall; although this had been almost leveled to the ground it was nevertheless a barrier to the flames.

Narrow Escapes

"Now I will relate to my readers some remarkable escapes similar to the one related about the mud-flow at Moaula. There was quite an old native living some eight or ten miles from the mouth of the crater. When he saw that the flow was making a bee-line for his domicile, he hastily took what he considered the most precious of his household—his better half (his wife), who was very feeble and stone-blind in the bargain—and carried her to a place of safety. But alas! the flow was too fast for him; he was cut short by the flow, he could not proceed. He hurried back in the opposite direction. And alas! poor man, here, too, he found another molten, red-hot stream cutting him and his precious charge out of all chances of escape. Poor man, what was he to do now? Weary of limb and sick at heart, he returned to his miserable shack and there resigned to what was coming, he patiently awaited his fate, viz.: to be cremated alive. But Almighty God had pity on him and spared him and his charge. Just a few yards above his hut the flow divided and encircled his shack and united again several feet below it. Thus a circle of about fifty yards in diameter formed an oasis to protect this worthy old couple. Minor streams from the main flow actually encroached a little on this oasis, and the couple was rather uncomfortably warm for the time being, but their hut and its inmates passed this trying ordeal unscathed.

"Now before winding up my already too long narrative, may I be allowed to venture an opinion and try to explain that mysterious noise, that subterranean rush accompanied by the tremor that almost caused an old native to collapse.

"I had since learned that that subterranean noise of thirty minutes' duration took place simultaneously with the fast sinking molten lava in the crater. It sunk completely out of sight in the bottom of the crater. Then followed that mad subterranean rush or underground flow. There was no more fire, no more smoke in Kilaeua's crater. Old Madame Pele traveled within the bowels of mother earth to Kahuku, a distance of sixty miles, and there she started the racket, causing an eruption and vomiting forth that quantity of red-hot lava that flowed down to my old native that carried or tried to carry his wife to a place of safety. That was the flow that set the plains afire. So we were right after all, when we said that that noise sounded like the noise caused by a fast train running through a tunnel. We were indeed on a tunnel that time. The fast running train was the immense quantity of molten lava rushing underground from one place to another. It therefore took Madame Pele exactly thirty minutes to rush her train to Kahuku—sixty miles underground.

King Gave Aid

"The terrible news of the Kau disaster traveled fast; the little schooner that carried the Protestant minister to Honolulu hastened to spread the news far and wide. Our fright was at last over, for Madame had now reached the sea and was enjoying her sea-bath; she has apparently cooled off and does not trouble us any more. Of course, we feel shocked yet every now and then. Windows rattle and high lamps occasionally stagger, but they don't mean anything serious. And even if they did, where will you go to, to run away from Almighty God? It might be a case of 'out of the frying pan, into the fire'. We therefore try to make the best of it.

"When His Majesty the King heard of our troubles, he at once chartered a schooner and had it loaded with clothes, food, lumber and provisions of all kinds. His Lordship, Bishop Maigret, immediately took passage for Kau, to study up our situation and administer relief as far as he was able. He told me to pull down all that remained of my Kamama chapel, I therefore had three chapels and one priest's house to rebuild. The King had sent his Minister to distribute the relief funds, and incidentally I may mention that I was chosen a member of the relief committee. This committee was only discharged after several months—or until the natives had an other crop coming.

"In winding up, I return sincere thanks to our good Lord for the strength and courage with which He blessed me during this affliction. I am satisfied that I tried to do my duty. Deo Gratias!"

Warm, Debilitating Weather

Many people, after a long spell of oppressive heat, suffer from lassitude, loss of spirits, and a general "run down" feeling.

They need a course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, a medicine which has revived and restored to active life and health thousands of such sufferers. A lady who recently returned to England from South Africa writes concerning this "wonderful medicine":

"While in Cape Town the past summer I suffered greatly from the long-continued heat. I was completely worn out; my blood seemed to become as thin as water, and I lost all energy and interest in life. My friends recommended and a course of this wonderful medicine restored my health and spirits. My husband suffered in the same way as I did, and he also was greatly benefited from the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."

There are many imitation Sarsaparillas. Be sure you get "AYER'S."

Another Dance

Think now about spending the year-end pleasantly. The last dance at HALEIWA was such a success that the management has decided to repeat it on the 29th of this month. Dr. and Mrs. Bruce McV. Mackall have taken the house on Beretania street formerly occupied by Dr. May. Mrs. Mackall has begun giving instructions in voice culture and will receive a limited number of pupils.

The hop last Saturday evening at the Moana hotel was one of the gayest affairs of the season. Preceding the dance Mr. Pappin, of Kaula and New York, gave a dinner for Mr. and Mrs. George Fairchild, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Macfarlane, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dutton, Mr. and Mrs. Major and Mrs. Russell. Everybody joined in the dance, which lasted until a late hour. The pretty frocks, brilliant music, and the visiting strangers added to the spectacular effect of the occasion.

A charming tea was given at the British Consulate on Wednesday by Mrs. Raymond de B. Layard in honor of Miss Lucy O'Meara, who sailed for India this week, to be married to a prominent English officer. Miss O'Meara is a great favorite here and has made hosts of friends during her residence with her sister, Mrs. Lewton-Brain, and she carries the best wishes of all. The tables on Wednesday were arranged on the lunal, and during the afternoon an excellent musical program was listened to. Among those who sang or played were Mrs. Tenney Peck, Mrs. Alexander Lindsay, Mrs. Rodolf Slattery, Miss Elva Schaefer, and the Misses Soper. Among those present were Mrs. W. L. Stanley, Mrs. Lewton-Brain, Mrs. F. H. Humphris, Mrs. Basil Combs, Mrs. C. W. C. Deering, Mrs. E. M. Watson, Mrs. Slattery, Mrs. Clive Davies, Mrs. Bettelmyer, Mrs. Montague Cooke, Mrs. Balloulyne, Mrs. Miss, Mrs. George Macfarlane, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. Lindsay, Mrs. Soper, Mrs. Hawes, Misses McGowan, Jordan (2), Soper (2).

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Focke are being warmly welcomed. Mrs. Focke is looking unusually well and is in the best of health and spirits. Mrs. Paul Neumann is expected very shortly.

Among the dinners of the week given for Miss Lucy O'Meara was the beautiful one of Mr. and Mrs. Clive Davies at Craigside on Tuesday evening. Hundreds of violets reposed upon a cloth of green satin, and the lights, softly shaded, made a charming effect. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Lewton-

Brain, Mr. and Mrs. H. Focke, Bishop and Mrs. Restarick, Mr. and Mrs. James Wilder, Mr. and Mrs. H. von Holt, Messrs. Anderson, Cockburn, Jamieson and Derby.

Mr. J. C. Field, who has gone to the Volcano for the holidays, is quite enjoying the novel experience. Mrs. Field, who was unable to take the trip on account of ill health, is an unusually interesting woman. She has written several books, two plays, and edited a magazine for a number of years in the East. Possessing a strong personality and great charm of manner she is a valuable addition to Honolulu society.

Mr. and Mrs. Layard's delightful dinner on Monday night was particularly enjoyable. Roses formed the motif for the table decorations and among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dutton, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Macfarlane, Mr. and Mrs. James Wilder, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Brinckerhoff.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Stanley entertained at dinner on Wednesday evening for Miss Lucy O'Meara most agreeably. Roses not only decorated the table but the dining room as well. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Raymond de B. Layard, Mr. and Mrs. Lewton-Brain and Mr. McKinnon.

Word has been received that Mr. J. Dyer, who, with Mrs. Dyer, sailed for Victoria not long since, that the former is greatly improved in health. Mr. and Mrs. Dyer will probably remain away for six months.

Quite a novel entertainment was given by Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Scott on Wednesday evening at Waikiki. Invitations were issued for a progressive conversation party, and much speculation was indulged in regarding the affair, and many were quite dreading the event for fear their gray matter might be overtaxed. On Wednesday evening Chinese lanterns made a pathway for the guests, who were received by the host and hostess at the door. The little bungalow was literally transformed into a bower of greens, and the electric globes and lamps were shrouded in pink, casting a most becoming light over the room, and putting everybody in good humor. Mr. Scott's artistic taste had full swing, and the lunal and dining room were beautifully gotten up. Large bowls of pink carnations were on the tables, and scores of greens were effectively placed. When all the guests had assembled the hostess handed each one cards with penicils attached and the following subjects written on them: 1. Second sight and premonitions. 2. Restaurants and good dishes. 3. Flirtations and affairs. 4. Operas and plays. 5. People, places and hotels. 6. Books and authors. She then told the men to make engagements for each conversation, which would last only fifteen minutes, and a little bell would give the signal for changing partners. Tete-a-tetes and only two chairs together were placed in the corners of the living-room, dining-room and lunal, and in the grounds were scattered settees and chairs. Cozy corners seemed to spring out of the walls, and, judging by the noise, the conversational ability of the guests was most eloquent. Smoking was allowed all over the house, and a good punch with plenty of Scotch and soda kept the tongues wagging. When number six came, supper was served and very delicious it was, consisting of salads, sandwiches, leeks, cakes and coffee. Then the hostess asked each guest to vote for the most popular partner of either sex and this was done by writing the names on slips of paper and depositing them in a jar. After counting it was found that Mrs. F. H. Humphris received the most votes, and Dr. Humphris was the most popular man. A handsomely embroidered sandal wood fan was given Mrs. Humphris and the Doctor received a carved ivory shoe horn in a box. When the last good bye was said everybody declared that it had been a very interesting evening and a delightful change from the omnibus bridge.

The christening of the infant daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Smith occurred at St. Augustine's on Sunday. The Godmother was Mrs. Smith's sister, Miss Harvey, and Captain Carter was godfather. The little one was named Lydia Tae, and a reception held at the house gave the guests an opportunity of drinking the baby's health.

Captain and Mrs. Slattery expect to sail for their new station in the transport calling about January 1st.

Mrs. Edward Stoiber is building a mausoleum for her late husband in Denver, Colorado. She will remain there until it is completed and then will return to Europe. Her brother, Mr. Harrison, and his friend, Mr. David Buntion, who arrived in the Alameda, are guests of some weeks at the popular Moana hotel. They have letters to several friends of Mrs. Stoiber.

There will be quite an innovation on January 2nd and a portion of Kapiolani Park at the hours of 4:30 until 6 will be converted into a Lunette, for everybody is expected to walk or drive at that time every day, and it will be inaugurated by about one hundred from society's ranks on January 2nd. This is an excellent idea, for one can easily get into the habit of seeing one's friends at that hour, and this is probably the only place in the world where there is not a regular promenade. In time a cafe will be established and future generations will rise up and bless the promoters of this pleasant idea. So be on hand on January second and greet your friends, and encourage this excellent idea.

Invitations will be out next week for the opening of the Hotel Baths on Hotel street next to the Alexander Young Hotel. The Baths will open with an aquatic exhibition given by the Hawaiian Swimming Club. Music will be furnished by a quintet club.

The Baths are making special arrangements to accommodate the ladies and every Tuesday and Friday mornings the natatorium will be turned over to them and children exclusively and at this time they can indulge in swimming, bowling, physical culture, or Turkish baths. Arrangements can also be made by private parties to engage the tank.

Those baths are sure to become quite a social feature in Honolulu life.

The children of Central Union Sunday school had a glorious time at the Christmas entertainment in the school-room last night. There were three hundred and fifty children present and an audience estimated at two hundred. The program included several hymns by the pupils and a prayer, followed by an address on loyalty by Rev. Mr. Turner, who spoke in place of Dr. Sylvester, who remained away on account of the bad weather. The closing number was the doll scene from "The Toy Shop" and it was capitally rendered. Mr. Hastings sang in this and the entire net was well received. Mr. Turner apologized for the failure of some of the dolls to appear and added that they were evidently afraid of getting their feet wet. At the close of the first number on the program, candy, generally and a number of presents were distributed.

Mr. E. Krueger, manager of Hackfeld's store in Lahaina, gave a farewell bachelor dinner at the Moana Hotel on Thursday evening in the private dining room. The table was ornamented by a large star picked out in small flowers, and carnations were arranged in vases at each end of the table. It was a very jolly dinner and speeches and toasts much enhanced the affair. Mr. Berger and his band of talented musicians gave a concert under the hau tree of the lawn, and they played the national German hymn in honor of the dinner, and, during one performance, Mr. Paul Isenberg joined the musicians and gave a solo in fine style. Among the guests were Messrs. Klump, Rodiek, Pfoeten, Isenberg, Schultz and many others.

The ball at the Moana Hotel on New Year's eve will be given in the dining-room, and neither time, money or taste will be spared to make it a brilliant success. Invitations will be issued next week, and everybody is anticipating the event. Many dinners have been already arranged, and one of the popular guests at the Moana is giving a supper in the private dining room at eleven-thirty. These balls, which only occur on New Year's eve, have become justly celebrated and management of the Moana will make this one as brilliant a success as those of the preceding years.

The dinner which Mr. Clarence Macfarlane gave at the Seaside Hotel on Friday evening for the Commodore and officers of the Hawaiian Yacht Club was a complete success in every sense of the word. The round table had as a central ornament a wheel and anchor and malle was strung from point to point. This was a very effective centerpiece. The menus were souvenirs of the occasion and on their dainty covers "La Paloma" occupied a central position and the yacht's colors made a gay showing. The cup won by La Paloma was also a feature of the decorations. A large dance was given after dinner at which the friends and relatives of the popular yachtsmen were present. It was a brilliant affair and went off well. The frocks of the fair guests were veritable creations in many cases, and everybody remarked upon Mrs. Clarence Macfarlane's appearance, for she was looking remarkably well. The dance lasted until a late hour and the guests will long remember the eventful evening.

Christmas dinners and Christmas trees are being discussed by everybody. The little ones will surely have a good time this year for the trees are unusually large and ought to be loaded well with good things. Do not forget the children at the leper station and send everything you can to them. Mr. Usbourne, at St. Clement's Rectory, will gladly take charge of the gifts and send them to cheer and gladden the children's hearts.

Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Paton were arrivals at the Moana in the Alameda. They are very well and favorably known in Honolulu, where they have spent many winters, and have entered largely into the social life.

Mr. Harold Castle is spending a few weeks with his parents at Kailua. His adventures in mountain climbing have made him quite famous.

Mrs. Gerrit Wilder is slowly recovering at Miss Johnson's Sanatorium from her painful illness. She will not return to her home until after the holidays.

Mr. Carl Hedemann arrived from Maui this morning for the holidays.

The Messrs. Harrison—travelled and cultured Englishmen, are at the Moana hotel for a few weeks. They have been touring the Orient.

The Hawaiian Hotel was the center of much gaiety on Friday evening. A delicious dinner was served, and the Kail Glee Club rendered their music most brilliantly.

Mrs. Porter Boyd expects to sail for the Coast a few days after Christmas. She will spend a short time in Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. Woods and family, who are stopping at the Moana hotel, may take a house and remain for several months.

There was an initiation of "The Minutes" on Tuesday evening at the residence of Mr. Frank Damon. Refreshments were served and the evening was delightfully spent.

Miss Cristobel Layard is having a supper and dance at the Consulate this evening.

Miss Adelaide Hoare, the late British Consul's daughter, is in New Zealand with Mrs. Kiteat.

Miss Gladys Graham is certainly a remarkably travelled little girl, for she has been around Cape Horn many times, but on this last trip her parents decided to send her to Panahou, and she is with a delightful family at Waikiki.

Mr. Philip Thompson, who spent last winter here, has come again and will remain for some time.

Captain Josselyn has again returned to Honolulu after a long sea voyage. He is spending much time at Mrs. McDonald's at Waikiki, and spins just as interesting a yarn as ever.

Miss Jennie Jones from Waiholu is spending the holidays in town.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Lauka have returned to Honolulu after a very enjoyable visit in Kona.

Mr. W. H. Cornwell and wife are in Honolulu for the holidays.

Judge Highton, who is ill at the Queen's Hospital is better, but Mrs. Highton, so they say, has been cabled for.

Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Clarke have gone to Hilo to spend the holidays with their daughter, Mrs. Baiding.

The public is cordially invited.

CAR MEN GET TREAT

Among the prettiest of Christmas gifts, this year is the one presented to the Honolulu Street Railway Benefit Association by Mrs. Stangen-wald of Nuuanu avenue, comprising 14 standard volumes from the best authors—beautifully bound—which are to be used in the library of the club-house of the association.

Mrs. Stangenwald is a great favorite with the men of the Rapid Transit and this year she has exceeded her usual goodness to them in this kind of gift.

BAND DOINGS

The band will play this afternoon at Aala Park and tomorrow afternoon at Makee Island, Waikiki. There will be no Monday evening concert at Emma square. On Christmas day, Tuesday the band will play at the football game.

ENTERTAINING AT PALM

This will be a gala night at The Palm Parlor on Hotel street. Ellis Brothers' Quartet Club will play there during dinner and through the evening. When this quartet club plays there is no reason to doubt the sweetness of the music that will be furnished. The Palm is replete with Christmas ornaments and a visit there will take you back to the pleasures of childhood. If you haven't bought your decorations for the holidays you should get them from The Palm tonight. You will find a list of what they have in their advertisement. Quality and lowness of price can be relied on.

COLD KILLS THE GERM.

Lieut. Perry Says There Are No Bad Heads in the Arctic Region. The people who come back from Kniklaa testify to the fact that no native bad heads are there. The evidence is that the cold climate kills the germs that eat the hair off of the root. Lieut. Perry, who went to the Arctic Regions, gives the main evidence. Newton, Herpelle has the same effect as the cold climate. It kills the germ that eats the hair off of the roots, and the hair grows again. Herpelle is the first hair remedy both upon the principle of destroying the germ that eats the hair off. Its phenomenal sale demonstrates the correctness of the scalp germ theory. Sold by leading druggists. Send for a sample to The Herpelle Co., Detroit, Mich. Hollister Drug Co., special agents.

Y. M. C. A. ATHLETIC ADVANCE

The Y. M. C. A. athletic committee are busily planning for the future. Indoor basketball teams are being organized and a leaders' gymnasium class is being arranged. The Association intends to have a track team next season and the necessary outfit has already been ordered. The polo show will be open until 10 p. m. today. The first day's attendance was satisfactory but the rain yesterday kept many away.

GUN CLUB NOTES

The Hawaiian Gun Club will move from their old premises at Mauna Kea to the new site.

The traps will be erected on a piece of land on the Waikiki side of the rifle range at Kakaia owned by the Bishop Estate. The shooting will be in a downward direction with the birds thrown into a clearing open sky, thereby ensuring a fine light.

The club will hold its first big shoot on February 22. This will be a semi-annual open shoot, and practice for it will commence on February 1.

The county budget for the next year, adopted by the Board of Supervisors last Saturday, shows a decrease of $100,000 over the estimated regular expenses of $32,500,000. This is about $100,000 less than was transferred to the road fund during the past period. The estimated general expenses total about the same as this year, while the estimated receipts are about $10,000 less.

SHORT STORY FOR EVENING HOURS

A DAY WITH CINDER GLAWS

The last candle had sputtered to its death on the dismantled Christmas tree, and the janitor had turned off the lights in the disordered vestry that still seemed to ring with the shrill voices of children. A figure in a red, fur-trimmed coat and a most remarkable growth of snowy beard hurried across the lawn to the parsonage and disappeared under the portico of the study door. It was the Rev. John Elderson in his disguise as Santa Claus, tired, but jubilant over the success of his annual merrymaking for the mission youngsters. "Once a year," he was in the habit of declaring, "I become a really big man," referring to the proportions that he was wont to assume on Christmas eve, when he acted as the children's patron saint. Now, as he loosened the thick coat, one could see that physically he was a veritable "little minister," but those who called him so with familiar yet respectful fondness, knew best of all how the broad mind and big heart more than made up whatever might be lacking in bodily stature.

He did not stop to remove the Santa Claus wrappings, but threw himself wearily into the arm chair before the grate, where a few coals were still glowing.

"Santa Claus is somewhat stiff in the joints from his night's work," he said to himself, as he stretched out towards the fire.

The quiet of the little room, with its rows of familiar books smiling at him like old friends, seemed very comfortable and soothing after the evening's tumult.

This restful stillness must have lasted for some time—John Elderson himself could never tell exactly how long—when he gradually became aware that something had fallen from the grate and was rattling about on the hearth.

Naturally enough the minister looked in the direction of the noise and there on a pile of books near the fire sat an urchin, pushing a bit of coal back and forth with the copper toes of his boots. Some way the boy seemed to know what was passing in the minister's mind, for he said at once:

"No, sir, I'm not one of the mission boys." Then he laughed a mischievous laugh that quite glorified his face in spite of the freckles and upturned nose.

"Indeed," said John Elderson. "I thought I knew every boy in town, and I'm sure your face is very familiar. Who are you, and what can I do for you?"

The boy laughed again; then, with a sudden seriousness, he answered: "You've done a lot for me already. Don't you really know who I am? Why, I'm The Little Chap You Used to Be."

He said this slowly, with his clear gaze fixed on the minister's face. John Elderson took the boy's hand in his, and for a moment their eyes met. Then the minister said huskily:

"So you are—the Little Chap, the same Little Chap. I can't tell you how good it is to find you again."

The child's face lighted up at the welcome, and he said, something in so low a tone that John Elderson could not catch the words, but they seemed to be in the nature of an invitation, for the minister felt the grip of the rough little hand tighten on his own, and then with a strange and sudden power something seemed to close over his heart as well, with a strength he did not even wish to resist. The walls of the study faded and fell away, and he was floating out into space, with the Little Chap for his only guide and companion.

Miles of farms and sleeping factories and luminous cities flew past, and the dim outline of a sandy coast appeared, and vanished as they sped on, with the ocean beneath them dazzling in the icy moonlight. Now they neared the land again, but this time the shore was wild and rocky and darkly wooded; on they went over the white hills and rivers and great pine forests. Soon they were circling nearer the earth where the woods and snow fields of northern Aroostook stretching far about them, and here and there a group of farm buildings along the banks of a nearby river. Then a trifling road led them quite to the door of a rambling, red-painted farmhouse. "Ah, Little Chap! How well you know the way!" said John Elderson, speaking for the first time. But to his surprise he received no answer, and for an instant he felt strangely alone. Then suddenly there was warmth and light, and he found himself in the familiar living room, with the great logs burning in the big fireplace. And there, too, was the Little Chap, the eldest of a lively group of youngsters. It was evident to the minister that they could not see him, though he could see them all—the rough and tumble brothers with the Little Chap at the head, and the two sisters, the one next himself aspiring to little womanly airs when she could resist the delights of being a tomboy, and the other the baby of the family. The mother had her on her lap—such a mite of a mother, with light and laughter in her blue eyes in spite of the tired lines about her mouth.

There was a jingle of bells outside, and in strode neighbor Francois, his dancing eyes and ruddy cheeks just showing above his great tip of.

"Merri! Merri! Merri! Merri! Merri!" he shouted as he came toward the fire, where he was at once the center of a boisterous group. "No, no Noel stories dese night. Haf I not you tale dem tounan times?"

"Are your stories really true, Francois?" asked the little sister breathlessly.

"True? Ah, you doubt dem? Know den, Francois tell nothing but of true, Ole Cinder Claws—if you pad poys an girls you fin' out he verra true. An' de cattle at meednight—" Francois crossed himself and shook his head so solemnly that the children were quite awed, and their mother laughed at their big, round eyes.

But Francois' solemnity did not last long. He was in a hurry to do his errand and he off.

"Pierre de Baptiste," he said to the mother, "he lufe you here some mules jing of heem, 'n he ask me would I take him up for it, heh?"

So the jig was delivered, and Francois went on his way, leaving the youngsters gazing from the windows and talking in subdued voices of his strange tales.

"Francois says they are true," they persisted, and their mother only smiled and said, "Francois thinks they are true." Then she added in the voice they associated with Sunday, "Here is the only true Christmas story." And in that same voice she read it to them as she had so many times from the Book with the thick leather covers, while they listened with their eyes bigger and rounder than ever.

When the reading was over the children trooped off to bed, the Little Chap bringing up the rear of the procession with John Elderson close beside him.

"There's no stocking-hanging or any such frivolity here tonight, is there Little Chap?" said the minister. "I forgot—you can't hear a word I say, and you wouldn't understand me if you did. I was only wondering what you'd think if you ever saw a crowd of modern youngsters on Christmas eve. Between you and me, though, I've often longed for your quiet version of the night before Christmas. The holiday rush never troubles you much in this corner of the world, does it?"

While he was speaking they had reached the attic chamber, where the Little Chap hurried out of his home-spin clothes, his teeth chattering, and snuggled down under the patchwork quilts. His eyes were wide open, staring hard through the chinks in the sloping roof at the frosty stars overhead. And soon the minister discovered that though what he might say was heard by no one but himself, he nevertheless could read every thought in the boy's mind.

"I wouldn't say so to mother, but somehow it seems as if the story in the Bible is almost as strange as what Francois tells. I wonder how she knows which is the true one."

"Oh, Little Chap," said the minister, "you're foreordained for a heresy trial! You've begun asking Pilate's question early, and you'll grow gray before you find the answer."

"I hope it isn't wicked to think such things. If it is, old Cinder Claws will get me. Francois says he comes down the chimney after bad boys on Christmas eve. His eyes are like two sparks, and his long claws are all black with the chimney soot. Oh-h, Old Cinder Claws, don't come for me tonight. I never meant to be bad—honest, I never, and I won't fight Joe Sinclair again—not unless he dares me to, anyway, and I don't b'lieve he will, 'cause I flied him so yesterday. Please, Old Cinder Claws, let me off this time."

And as the hobgoblin became more and more vivid to his childish fancy, the Little Chap drew the bedclothes tightly over his head in an agony of terror.

"Well, well," cried John Elderson, "I'd almost forgotten that bad half-bour with Old Cinder Claws. Christmas eve does have its troubles, doesn't it? It's wicked that that old demon should be your Santa Claus. Never mind—one of these days you'll find yourself grown up, with a small daughter on your knee, and, remembering these early terrors of Cinder Claws, you'll take pains to tell her that there is no such person. And then, what will be your surprise to have your well meant assurance met with a wall of disappointment over her shattered dreams of Santa Claus, who (strange as it may seem), you have never before discovered to be quite another personage from the hobgoblin of your youthful Christmases? And what would you say to see yourself, years hence, in full regalia, a gray beard, with a pack on his back, playing old Santa for the edification of a crowd of frolicking youngsters? So, we live and learn—Old Cinder Claws is only a bad dream, after all, Little Chap."

After a while the boy's fears subsided so that he dared uncover his head and look up again at the stars still shining upon him through the crevices, and, though he did not understand why, some way their quiet light brought with it a sense of safety. He drew a long breath. "I guess he's gone," he said himself. "Perhaps he wasn't looking for me after all. I wonder what time it is. I wonder if it's nearly 12 o'clock. Francois says that when it comes midnight on Christmas eve all the cows kneel down in their stalls. I'd like to see them do it, but I tried last year to keep awake and I couldn't."

It was so still for a few moments that John Elderson began to think the boy had really dropped off to sleep, but pretty soon there was a whisper: "It must be 'most midnight. I wish I could see them, just once."

Evidently he had come to some sort of a decision in the matter, for in a moment he crept out of bed and dressed as quickly and quietly as possible. Then he took one of the patchwork quilts and wrapping it closely about him crept down stairs and out to the big barn, where the cows were stalled.

"See here, sir," John Elderson wanted to say, as he followed on, "if you had gone through the living room you'd have seen your mother just covering over the embers for the night, and then you'd have known I wasn't so late after all. What's more, she would have seen you and sent you back to bed, you young rascal. However, you'll reap your reward when she puts the cold mixture on in the big kettle tomorrow and doses you for the cold you're sure to have."

The dozen cows stirred in surprise at such an unusual interruption of their slumbers, and they looked round somewhat uneasily as a figure in a gay patchwork toga climbed to the hay-mow whence there was an unbroken view of their stalls.

"Burrow into the hay and keep warm Little Chap," said the minister, quite now, there, you can watch whatever goes on down there among the cattle. What would Francois say if he could see you now? But no—I'm the only soul alive who knows where you are or what you're doing, and the only one who understands what it all means. This trying to keep awake is the hardest work you ever did, isn't it? There, you're nodding already. Well, the barn can't be much colder than your attic chamber, and your nest in the hay is warm enough, so that you can sleep safely. You ought to get in a good two-hour nap and then there'll be time to spare before midnight."

The boy was already asleep, and the minister watched him as he lay there so small yet sturdy, and sleeping as only a tired child can.

"Sometime, Little Chap," said John Elderson with a sigh, "you'll be willing to exchange the softest couch in the world for this bed of yours out here on the hay-mow, if only it can bring with it such healthful sleep."

So the hours slipped by. The stars that had bade the boy good night wheeled slowly down into the west, and new ones took their turn at watching over him. Midnight came and went, but he did not waken to see whether the cattle knelt as the legend claimed they did. It was only when they grew restless in anticipation of their breakfast that the Little Chap roused up and looked about him. It came back to him slowly why he was there, and he had to struggle to keep back his tears of disappointment. He watered and fed the cows as usual, but with his solemn eyes looking into theirs as if he expected to find there the answer to his puzzle.

He trudged back to the house in rather a dejected mood, but breakfast on Christmas morning was too exciting for anyone to brood much over their own troubles. At each plate stood a fearfully and wonderfully made doughnut man with currant eyes, and there was also a parcel, wrapped and tied to lend a charm of mystery, containing a pair of new red mittens. The delight with which these gifts were hailed would have been a revelation to the mission children, and John Elderson made some striking comparisons as he watched the scene.

"Bless me!" he said. "When have I seen children's eyes dance as yours do here this morning? Oh, Little Chap, I wish I could take you and all the rest back with me to purify the fountain of our Christmas joy. You don't know how much we need you with your happy ignorance of all that makes his blessed time a season of burden bearing. Will you come with me? Say

Dear Sirs:—About two years ago a very fine, well bred mare I own got what seemed to be a bad sprain of the off fore fetlock, which made her very lame; I blistered her and let her run out for about four months, when I took her up she was better but still lame and got worse when worked. I then tried another kind of blister with about the same results.

Last Spring I bought a bottle of your Save-the-Horse from your agent in this city. After treating the mare with this for about two weeks I gave her some slow driving; she improved very much, and by the time I had used up the bottle I was able to drive her twenty or thirty miles without any apparent bad effects. She now goes sound; I also with the same bottle removed two wind galls from her hind legs.

Hoping that this will be of some benefit to you, I am, your truly,

SPORTS

SOCKER GAME THIS AFTERNOON

Of the Association football games this afternoon, between the Punahou and the Infantry, and the Males and the Diamond Heads, the latter probably will be the best. The Heads have the advantage of such kamaaina forwards as Woo and Fiddes, who is, however, saving himself in the games, as he is no longer as sprightly as of yore, while the Males boast full backs Jimmy McGill and Bob Anderson, the sturdy defense which more than anything else was responsible for the Males gaining the championship last year.

While the Punahous have a better team than the Soldiers, containing more experienced players, the Soldiers have by their earnest efforts on the field gained many friends among the enthusiasts who watch the games. The military men are picking up rapidly and do not make a bad showing at all. Their one fault is the lack of team work, especially when near the opponents' goal. They have a habit when within some little distance, of shooting blindly ahead instead of passing, the ball thus falling an easy prey to the opposing goalkeeper and backs. This error has probably cost them several games.

Following are the teams:
Infantry—Goal, Thompson; backs, Dougherty, von Hofen; half backs, Ewing, Kolb, Moon; forwards, Van Vleet, Gittings, Jury, Swift, Castiday.
Punahou—Goal, Lo On; backs, Macdonald, R. Catton; half backs, Prangwell, Davis, Foss; forwards, Mon Yin, Dodge, Macaulay, Grott, J. H. Catton.
Diamond Heads—Goal, Chilton; backs, Grune, J. Clark; half backs, E. Desha, Gleason, J. Anderson; forwards, Fiddes, Hickman, Woo, Fernandez, Williams.

Males—Goal, J. J. Belser; backs, J. C. McGill, R. Anderson; half backs, Kellett, Center, R. Chillingworth; forwards, Freeth, Gray, Jamieson, E. Bailey, E. Kea.

BATHS OPEN SATURDAY NEXT

On Saturday evening, December 29th, the Hotel Baths, which have been under construction for the last six months, will throw open their doors to the public. The Baths will open with an aquatic exhibition under the auspices of the Hawaiian Swimming Club and entrance can be had by invitation only.

This will be the first entertainment of its kind ever given in this country. Indoor swimming is a novelty here, although in the States every city of any size has its natatorium.

The Hotel Baths are as well equipped as many in the leading cities of the States. Besides containing a huge swimming pool 75x45 feet, graduating in depth from 2 to 10 feet, these baths are equipped with up-to-date Turkish Baths, which are well appointed in every respect. As good a bath can be secured in this department as can be had any place in the country. Those who appreciate the value of these baths in a tropical country will patronize them freely. This branch of the business will be open all night and sleeping apartments can be had if desired. The steam and massage rooms are all fitted with marble slabs and everything up to date.

Bowling alleys are being installed and this old and popular sport will be given the proper attention and put where it belongs. On the mainland bowling is more popular than ever and shall prove so here.

Prof. R. A. Woods, who has conducted a physical culture school here for the last few years, has been chosen to act as manager of the Baths, and he will also continue to impart his knowledge of physical culture to all in need of health.

The Hotel Baths are going to devote special attention to the ladies and children and have set aside Tuesday and Friday mornings for their special time. They will have the entire use of the building and will be instructed in swimming, bowling and physical culture.

RACING AT WAIALUA

Horse-racing will be the feature of the day at Waialua on New Year's. A number of the men there have good horses and have prepared a program which will be unusually interesting. Several match races have been arranged already and others are in prospect.

Some of the best horses in this section are owned by Japanese and they are ready to bet their last cent on their favorites, so it is a cinch that there will be plenty of excitement. Louie Warren is also out for every prize offered.

TO GOLF AT HALEIWA

The Haleiwa Golf Club will give a tournament on Christmas Day, for which two handsome prizes will be offered. A large number of local people expect to spend the holiday at Haleiwa and for this reason a large entry list is looked forward to.

Another tournament given by the Haleiwa Hotel will take place on December 30. A number of the local players have signified their intention of taking part.
