IF MAIDENS BUT KNEW.

A good wife runs from her bed one morn.
And thought with nervous dread
Of the piles on piles of clothes to be washed
And the down of mounds to be fed.
"There's the meals to get for the men in the field,
And the children to fix away to school,
And all the milk to be skinned and churned,
And all to be done this day."
It had rained in the night, and all the wood
Was wet as it could be.
There were puddles and pies to bake
And a loaf of cake for tea.
And the day was hot, and her aching head
Throbbled wearily as she said:
"If maidens but knew what good wives know They'd not be in haste to wed."
"Annie, what do you think I told Ned Brown?"
Called the farmer from the well—
And a flush crept up to his bronzed brow
And his eyes half bashfully fell.
"It was this," and coming near he smiled.
"It was this: That you are the best And the dearest wife in town."
The farmer went back to the field,
And the wife, in a silent absent way,
Sang snatches of tender little songs
"He'd not sung in many a day."
And the path in her head was gone, and her Clothes
Were as white as the foam of the sea.
And her better as sweet and golden as it could be.
The night came down.
The good wife smiled to herself as she said:
"Tis so sweet to labor for those we love
It is not strange that maidens will wed!"

SECOND-HAND SCHOOL BOOKS.

What Becomes of Them—They Form the Basis for a School Exchange.
"What becomes of all the second-hand school books?" was asked of a veteran dealer by a reporter.
"That's what people are all the time wondering," he replied. "The general public have the idea that they go where pins, needles, hairpins and such things go, to that is, they disappear somehow or other and no one knows where to. You may be surprised to learn it, but there is a large and increasing trade done in second-hand school books; so much so that we have now a regular school book exchange. You see, boards of school trustees are all the time changing the books their pupils study, unless not allowed to do so by law, which is the case in some states, and in former times, when they made a change, they either sold the discarded books for old paper or burned them. But now they are more economical. They hunt up the school-book exchange and are allowed to trade their discarded books for those they want,
of course paying something for doing so.
Why, through the agency of bookkeepers, school trustees, and others, we keep track of changes of this nature made in any important school throughout the United States.
"I have a book here, indexed, which gives the towns in which a certain publisher's geography is used. To give you an illustration:
As soon as I hear that a school is going to substitute another geography for that one I make a bargain for the discarded ones, and at once writing to the towns where it is still in favor, probably will have the lot sold before they reach here. It is the same way with dealers in a town. When the public schools branch off from a certain book the dealer has no further sale for them, and so he is glad enough to get rid of his stock for me, and I can dispose of them where they are in use. I have on file books from all localities on which are given the names of the school books in use in the vicinity. Of course, I take the books at a discount."
"How much do you get for a second-hand school book?"
"As a rule, about half price. The demand for the regular second-hand ones is now particularly in the farming districts and throughout the south. Take a farmer's boy who has been to school only a few months and has not much spare money, and he will eagerly buy a school book but little worn when he can get it at half its original price. As to the discarded ones, in the south, there seems to be a greater appreciation of the advantages of a more general education, and my agents all report a marked increase in the demand for school books there."—New York Times and Express.

Suicide Among French Children.

There must be error in the New York Sun's statement about the French statistics containing numerous suicides among children for the first time. Suicides among children were common after the first French revolution.
The criminality among children attributed to by the Sun as of serious augury for France simply shows the influence of the Franco-Prussian war. In children insanity shows itself in immorality and crime as a rule. Children born during the siege of Paris died of convulsions, became victims of nervous diseases, unconsciously insane or criminal, so that among the French lower classes "child of the siege" was a synonym for doomed child.
The Sun's statistics simply illustrate this increase of a serious political convulsion, and do not show any French decadence. French statistics, being better collected under the republic than the empire, seem to show decadence, really the result of accuracy; and, as the rigid enemies of the republic have control of most of the French news-gathering, erroneous deductions are the result. J. G.

STREET CLEANING.

The street cleaning order of the Road Supervisor, to which we alluded yesterday, continues to attract attention. Indeed it formed the main topic of conversation yesterday, and in no single instance was the expression of opinion at all in its favor. We have been informed, however, that there is a misapprehension abroad regarding the purpose of this order, but we are not in a position to throw any more certain light upon it.

Referring to chapter 65, Session Laws of 1886, we find certain provisions of law governing the point in question. This is "An Act to prevent the obstruction of the streets of Honolulu, Tahaina, Wailuku, Kahului and Hilo." Section 6 is as follows: "The Road Supervisor shall notify any person who shall have placed, left or deposited any substance or material contrary to the provisions of the first section of this Act, or who shall have hung, suspended, placed, constructed or permitted to grow, any projection or article contrary to the second section of this Act, to remove the same, and the person so notified shall forfeit and pay a penalty of $5 for every twenty-four hours that the same shall remain after such notice shall have been given."

Referring to section 1 we find the following provision: "No person shall place, leave or deposit in any street, lane or alley, or upon any side or cross walk, or upon any public wharf in the city of Honolulu.....any goods, wares, or merchandise, or any substance or material whatever, except as hereinafter permitted." Section 2 has reference to street signs, awnings, etc. Now, it appears that the law requires individual notice to be given by the Road Supervisor to persons placing any material or substance upon public thoroughfares, and we doubt whether the general notice already given by that officer is sufficient. It certainly does not conform to the precise wording of the Act, although it may have been issued under section 15, which reads: "If any person who shall have received the notice provided in section 6 of this Act shall not comply with such notice for the space of twenty-four hours, the Road Supervisor may remove the obstruction at the expense of such person, and such person shall be liable for the cost of such removal in addition to the penalty provided in such section." [quoted above.]

As we read the law, therefore, it is the person who deposits any rubbish or material upon any thoroughfare who is responsible for its removal, and not the owner of the adjacent property as contemplated by the official notification. Of course employers are responsible for the acts of their servants when proceeding under their authority, but it is very easy to imagine a case where rubbish may be dumped opposite a man's premises by day or night without his knowledge or authority, and to hold him responsible in such a case would be doing him an injustice which the law does not contemplate.

But apart from the mere technical point raised above, there is a very important sanitary question, and one to which we invite the attention of the Board of Health. A great many small storekeepers and householders will simply conceal the waste of their kitchens and sweepings if they are compelled to pay for its removal, and in this way filth and uncleanness will accumulate, threatening the health of the community. Thanks to the vigilance of the officers of the Board of Health, and to the purifying influences of the fire and sunshine, a high general average of health has been established, but it will not be possible to maintain it for long if the present method of scavenging be abandoned wholly or in part. This is really the serious side of the whole question. The great fire destroyed the general nuisance of the old Chinese quarter, and thus accomplished more for the sanitation of the city in a few hours than could have been effected by any possible exercise of legal authority. Do not let us therefore take a backward step and create festering nuisances all over the city where none at present exists. It is possible that this is not contemplated by the official notice, but such is its plain reading, and it is so understood by the community.

AN ABATED NUISANCE.

The following appears in the Y. M. C. A. column of the "Friend," which professes to be edited by S. D. Fuller: "A certain local paper takes to itself undue credit for the 'improved footpath' in front of the Y. M. C. A. building. The fact is the improvement was contemplated before any 'suggestion' appeared in that reform advocate." This refers to the well-remembered purification article which appeared in the ADVERTISER and produced such salutary results in the surroundings of the Y. M. C. A. building. Assuming that an improved footpath "was contemplated" before any suggestion to that effect appeared in our paper, would the writer of the foregoing paragraph presume upon the truth so far as to say that the moral purification of the approach to his professional sanctuary was in "contemplation" before our article appeared. Making every allowance for an elasticity of conscience proportioned to his necessities, we hardly think he would go so far; and, not to put too fine a point upon it, we entertain very grave doubts as to the perfect accuracy of the statement quoted above, although published "by authority."

HONOLULU FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Meeting of No. 1 Company.

A meeting of Engine Company No. 1 was held last night, Foreman Robert More presiding. It was reported that out of the money voted by the Government for decoration purposes in connection with the jubilee there was a surplus of $10. The question of assistance to John Pease, a sick member of the company, who had also suffered loss by fire, was mooted, and the Foreman stated that he had already brought the matter before the Chief Engineer.

MEETING OF NO. 2 COMPANY.

A meeting of Mechanics' Engine Company No. 2 was held last night, Foreman J. F. Morgan presiding. The committee in connection with the jubilee demonstration reported progress. Mr. Henry Smith tabled a motion, which he afterwards withdrew, to the effect that the company discourage the proposition made to divide the $500 voted by the Interisland Steamship Company. It was ultimately resolved that the delegates to the Board meeting be instructed to vote in favor of such a division.

Mr. Smith moved: "That, Whereas it has pleased God to remove by death the late lamented William B. Wright, one of the promoters of Engine Company No. 2, and the first to sign the roster of said company, and whereas it is but fitting that we should at least respect the memory of him who was so faithful a servant of the Honolulu Fire Department in various capacities, and of the interests of this company in particular; therefore, be it resolved that by the demise of the deceased this company has lost an exemplary fireman, the Government a faithful employee, and his widow a kind and devoted husband; and be it resolved that this company condole with the family of the deceased in their bereavement, and pray that the All Wise have them in his keeping; and be it further resolved that these resolutions be spread upon the records of the company and that a copy thereof be forwarded to the widow of the deceased."

Mr. C. J. McCarthy seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

MEETING OF THE HOOK AND LADDER COMPANY.

A meeting of the Protection Hook and Ladder Company No. 1, was held last night, Foreman G. Norton presiding. The only business of public interest consisted in the instructions to the delegates to vote in favor of a division of the $500 already referred to, in preference to placing it to the credit of the sick fund.

Police Court.

BEFORE POLICE JUSTICE BICKERTON.
WEDNESDAY, December 1st.
Keoki forfeited $6 for drunkenness.

Nahora pleaded guilty to disturbing the quiet of the night, also to malicious injury by breaking a door. For the first named offense he was fined $5 and $1 costs; for the latter, $10 and $3 costs.

Annie (w) and Mary (w) were charged with having opium unlawfully in possession, and were remanded until Thursday.

The seventeen Chinese who were charged on the 15th instant with playing the game of "pake-pio," contrary to law, were brought up on remand.

Ab Sun, who led the police to the spot, gave evidence describing the part taken by several defendants. Witness was himself playing with them the Sunday previous to their arrest. They were remanded until Thursday.

"The Friend."

The December number of this publication contains a comprehensive digest of denominational information, both local and foreign, some reflections upon the observance of Thanksgiving Day, a brief paper on the present aspect of the Volcano, by the Rev. E. P. Baker; an extract from the "Annual Survey," read at Des Moines, on the missionary work in these Islands and Micronesia, the usual record of the churches, and other articles, among which is the paper recently read by the Chief Justice on "The present condition of the Hawaiian," which is well worthy of perusal.

The Rev. A. O. Forbes, though his ill health has improved, is still too unwell to attend to the column usually allotted to him. On the whole, the number is a copious one.

Professor L. L. Van Slyke will deliver a lecture in the Bishop Hall of Science at Punahou to-morrow evening. Subject, "The Air. What is it?" The experiments used to illustrate this lecture are among the most interesting and brilliant known to science. Owing to the limited space and to prevent overcrowding, admission to the lecture will be by cards of invitation.

St. Andrew's Cathedral.

The aspect of the new Cathedral building is rapidly undergoing a change. Mr. Robert Lishman, the builder of the chancel, has commenced laying the floors; the stones have been removed from where they have been lying for some time past; a small temporary vestry is to be erected, and the edifice generally rendered fit for use. The work is being pushed forward with all possible dispatch, and it is fully intended to have it so far completed as to admit of holding public worship there on Christmas Day.

The Approaching Fair.

The arrangements for holding the fancy fair at St. Andrew's Priory on Saturday, in aid of the Cathedral building fund, are progressing satisfactorily. Goods are pouring in fast from various quarters, and tickets are selling remarkably well. A separate refreshment table will be provided for Hawaiians, in true native style. It will be under the personal charge of H. R. H. Princess Likelike.

"The Friend" states that the Rev. M. W. Lane, M. D., formerly pastor at Wailuku, Maui, has been engaged for three months to supply the pulpit of Green-street Church, San Francisco.

BEFORE JUDD, C. J.
In the estate of J. M. Daigle, deceased. Admeasurement of dower. Mr. W. A. Whitmore for the administrator, Messrs. Kinney & Peterson for the widow. The report of the Master is objected to by counsel for the widow on the ground that on the computation made the rate of interest (7 per cent) is too low, and the expectancy of life (30 years) too short. His Honor expressed the opinion that the rate of interest was about right. The statistics of business in this country show that we are exporting considerably beyond our imports and thus bringing surplus capital here which seeks investment. Through small loans can now be effected at 10 and perhaps 12 per cent per annum upon real estate security, they are generally made with the expectation that the mortgage will be foreclosed. If our commercial prosperity continue the rate of interest must fall lower and lower, and for the extended period he much doubted whether more than 7 per cent would be realized. The expectancy of the life of the widow, who is but 18 years of age, was, in his opinion, too short at 30 years. The expectancy of life at 18 is, according to the "combined experience tables of mortality," 42.88 years; 40 years would be about right in this country. A fresh computation having been made, His Honor confirmed the report as amended, and awarded the widow the sum of $475 05 as the present worth of her dower in the estate.

Jules Tavernier's Volcano.

Jules Tavernier, the artist, is now at work putting up his panorama of the Volcano. On the floor above Gonssalves' store, on Queen street, he has arranged his canvas in a large circle. Walking in through a small opening one reaches a small platform in the center, and then looking about, one seems to be in the very midst of the Volcano. Anyone who has ever seen Mr. Tavernier's Volcano pictures will form some faint idea of the mastery with this painter can depict living fire. But of the effect of this panorama the only thing that can be said is that it is startling. On all sides rises the old walls of Kilauea; on the left, seemingly in the distance, is the Volcano House, with the long stretch of broken lava growing more rugged and fierier as it apparently nears the spectator. The effect of the early dawn is weird and unearthly in contrast to the fiery lava of the foreground.

Further on to the right is a break in distant hills, showing a charming view of the open sea, blue and peaceful, with a few flecks of white sails on its unruffled surface. On to the right is a magnificent display of the eruption of Halemauua—a molten glow of living fire. Further to the right is Mauna Loa, tipped with a delicate glow from the rising sun. Further on still is white-capped Maunakea; thence going on till it meets again the Volcano House, making an unbroken view of the whole effect of the crater, seen from the very verge of Halemauua.

Words fail to describe such a scene. Mr. Tavernier hopes to have it completed and open to the public by the end of the week. The whole effect will be made more realistic by the introduction of real lava in the foreground.

This panorama is modelled after the celebrated ones of the battles of Solferino and Waterloo, and is wonderfully striking, notwithstanding the difficulties the artist has had to contend with, in the matter of building, lighting, etc.

The first experience Mr. Tavernier had of this kind of work was in Europe, when he was engaged as an assistant to paint on the celebrated "Battle of Solferino" by Col. Zungoli.

THE TURN OF THE TIDE.

The harbor lights are dim with smoke which hangs about the water's edge. And write the simple fisherfolk: In lurid mist as they go by. Along the shore the wind blows free. Keen twirls kisses the waves to us. Far out; steer thither, watch me! The tender stars come out on high.

The sky is deepening overhead: The sails pass loose; the wind has died; The water laps the shore; the tide is ebbing. Faint ripples plash against the side; And shimmer with unearthly light; The harbor lamps are out of sight; We drift into a starless night: Together on the ebbing tide.

How still—how strange—the tide is slack, We idly roam—we drift no more. What swell is this that sweeps us back To where the gathering breakers roar? About the pole, unlighted land? Can any be left to us? Safe in the morning haze in hand Upon the steep and rock-bound shore.

CHEAP TRAVELING IN EUROPE.

How to Enjoy a Six Weeks' Trip Abroad.

Cost of the Journey.

I wish in this letter to give some ideas for those who wish to travel cheaply. A European trip need not be much more expensive than you wish to make it, and one can see a great deal for $200 and have a most enjoyable six weeks' trip abroad. Let him take one of the cheaper lines and decide that his expenses shall not be more than this. He can put down his ocean voyage at twenty days and its cost at $100. He then has twenty days left to do some parts of Europe and nearly $10 a day for expenses. By going to London he can find excursion tickets at greatly reduced rates over almost any route he wishes to go. These tickets are limited to thirty or sixty days, and in them one may easily go to Holland and Belgium and down the Rhine, with a short trip through Switzerland and over to Paris and back to London on less than $10 per day.

London and Paris he can spend the time left, after taking out the days necessary for this trip, and at the end of the time he will come back to the United States, having caught up the expenses of the journey, and having left a broader and better mind to enjoy his future life.

In the first place one ought to lay out his trip before he starts, deciding how much time he will spend in the city and how much in the country. Three days in Holland, two days in Belgium, two days on the Rhine and three days in Switzerland will enable him to see a great deal, and if to this he adds three days for Paris he has yet seven or eight days for London. By economy he can make his money last longer than his six weeks, and for a few dollars more he can take in a slice of Ireland and Scotland. The guide to Europe which he can buy will give him the prices at the various hotels, and he will find that he can get good board for $2 a day if he understands how to do it. One of these guides lies before me, and I take from it the cost of several European tours.

Here is one man who spent seven weeks abroad visiting England, Scotland, Belgium, the Rhine, Switzerland and France for $178, and counting in the cost of his ocean passage. He traveled second and third class, and stopped at good second-class hotels, such as you may find in Europe, but not in America. Another traveler spent eight weeks in England, France and Switzerland for $178, and counting in the cost of his ocean passage. SERGT. LONG'S SHOT.

A BEAR KILLED WHICH SAVED THE GREELY PARTY FROM STARVING.

Weakened Men Excited by the News That Bruin Was in Their Neighborhood—A Long Chase Over the Ice—Killing the Brute.

Sergt. Francis Long, of Brooklyn, a survivor of the Greely Arctic expedition, tells the following story, which has hitherto been scarcely more than mentioned in the accounts of Starvation camp. He says: "The day before we came to our last round of rations I had discovered the tracks of a bear. I had followed them about until I was exhausted trying to meet the bear, but had utterly failed. This day a light snow fell in the morning, just enough to obscure the trail, but still I hunted. I gave it up late in the afternoon and returned to the camp. Brain-eri had gone to the shrimping ground and was still absent when I laid by my gun. Suddenly he appeared, running down Cemetery ridge as fast as his poor weak legs would bring him. We all started up and waited his coming in the most painful excitement. When he reached the camp he fell to the ground all out of breath. The men crawled to his assistance and two of them raised his head in their arms. He gasped and looked at us wildly.

"Brain-eri," exclaimed the lieutenant, "what is it?"

"Bear!" was all he could answer, in a choking whisper.

"Where, man, where?" I cried, reaching for my gun, all trembling and quivering with hope and fear.

"There!" he said, faintly, pointing towards the ridge; he followed after me; he's coming."

"How can I tell the terrible excitement that prevailed? The men were in a perfect frenzy. Brain-eri had made them worse than unreasonable. Some of them could think of nothing but cursing poor Brain-eri for not killing the bear, and were with difficulty restrained from falling upon him to wreak vengeance. He did not take his gun with him. Nobody ever did who went shrimping, and they cursed and raved at that and burst into tears at last.

"I was the weakest man in the party—were for starting out at once for an all night hunt over the snow fields and icebergs. No man would follow me. They couldn't have gone beyond the top of the ridge without breaking down, to say nothing of carrying a gun and firing accurately. I haven't used his authority and I am not going to do so now. The last plan of the hunt was arranged. It was really only a few minutes, but it seemed an hour. Jan, the Eskimau, and I started up the ridge to meet the bear if he should continue towards us.

"Hardly had we got a rod from the camp when a long white nose appeared over an ice-covered peak at the top of the hills. The men on a shout and I think it unnerved me, but I was a long range shot, nearly 200 yards, and the target was small. I raised my gun, and, taking quick aim, fired. The ball missed, but it did not go wide of its mark. The bear started. He then fired at us, but I was so close that I gave the Eskimau a chance at him and turned tail and I. I heard the howls and groans of disappointment and rage behind me. I believe that some of those poor half-bred men would have shot at me in anger if they had had their guns at hand.

"Jan," I said loudly, "take the course to the left and go round the ridge and keep well to the left so as to get the wind in your face. I will go in the same way on the east."

"The faithful Eskimau understood the plan at once, and set out without a word. I was the last to start, and I was not a long time to get to the top of the ridge. I was really only a few minutes, but it seemed an hour. Jan, the Eskimau, and I started up the ridge to meet the bear if he should continue towards us.
