HONOLULU, TERRITORY OF HAWAII, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1904

PRICE 5 CENTS

BALLOU WANTS REDRESS FROM SAM PARKER

Hatter Has Women
To Testify
Before Grand Jury

Today is "ladies" day with the inquisition.

Pinkerton Detective Charles Hatter was before the Territorial Grand Jury this morning. He was also closeted with Attorney General Lorrin Andrews for a considerable space of time. The sleuth who upset the local Police Department by investigations started by Governor Carter, introduced some dozen women to the head of the Attorney General's Department and this afternoon, at 2 o'clock, they will in turn appear before the seventeen official investigators for examination on numerous interesting points.

High-backed, antique chairs which grace the upper hallway of the Capitol and which once seated Hawaiian royalty, this forenoon accommodated the forms of the individuals referred to. They sat in a long row beneath the paintings of famous Hawaiian monarchs dead and gone and chatted gaily among themselves in relation to the coming ordeal. Fully expecting to be called before the Grand Jury this morning, they were somewhat disappointed when they were informed that they would have to return to give their testimony this afternoon.

When Hatter was not engaged before the inquisition and in the office of the Attorney General he whiled away the time by marching along the line of female witnesses, finding occasion now and then to warn them indirectly against holding converse with casual passers through the halls of the Executive building, fearing perhaps that they might disclose the reason of their appearing to be catechized.

"Why is it that you tarry here?" one of the young women was asked, in effect.

"To tell things for Hatchet," came the ready reply.

"And who is this Hatchet?"

"Don't you know?—He is the detective; the nice, polite man with the gold tooth and the soft walk; he all the time laugh. He's our friend; he brings us here."

"You refer to Mr. Hatter, perhaps?"

"Oh, 'Hatter,' is that his name? I thought maybe it was Hatchet."

There were Porto Ricans, Europeans and Hawaiians in the row; women of all ages. One was a handsome woman of less than thirty-five, wearing a magnificent yellow feather lei around the crown of a Hawaiian straw hat; she was robed in black silk and was somewhat modest in appearance. She is summoned before the Grand Jury on the advice of Hatter to testify in regard to certain city saloons selling liquor from the back doors to women at night-time. It seems that on one or two, if not more, occasions, when lulu in which she was interested were in progress, she had knowledge of the black-door liquor selling to women business.

Another was a girl who clearly showed, in her otherwise pretty features, the effects of the eating of awa. She was also to testify concerning the handing out of back doors of strong drink to members of her sex.

One poor girl was weeping bitterly. Somehow she felt that she was in disgrace to be called before the Grand Jury. The others attempted to comfort her by telling her that all the gentlemen in the Hall of Representatives wanted to know was what she knew about liquor being sold to women. But she would not be comforted. She seemed to feel the curious eyes of attaches of the Capitol who now and then peered from doorways to get a glimpse of the line of waiting women.

The office of the Attorney General was a busy place this morning. Andrews was on the jump between his desk upstairs and the Grand Jury chamber below steps. The crusade against the illicit handling of strong drink, against promiscuous prostitution and against gambling is evidently on in earnest. The first term of court of next year promises to be a well-occupied one. The present Grand Jury will leave a lot of work to be handled next term.

TOEPELMANN CASE
NOW INVESTIGATED

Sheriff Henry Prepares
Very Extensive Report.

POLICE DETERMINED TO CLEAR UP MATTER

High Sheriff Henry is at present preparing a statement containing all the facts pertaining to the arrest and detention of Chemist Toepelemann. Copies of this report will be forwarded to German Consul H. Alex. Iseberg and the newspapers. Besides giving the statements of the officers who made the arrest and handled Toepelemann it will give those of barkeepers in saloons where he was served with liquor on the night of his fearful experience, and also the statements of friends who were with him.

High Sheriff Henry stated today that he had obtained statements from barkeepers which showed that Toepelemann must decidedly have been under the influence of liquor. He is said to have had a bottle of wine in the Union Grill, and stout, beer and absinthe at the Union Saloon and the Hawaiian and Young Hotel bars.

This afternoon the testimony of the different witnesses are being taken. Up to the time of going to press those of Officer Reuter and Turnkey Wright were ready. They are as follows:

Richard P. Reuter: "I am a police officer. I was on duty at Palama at 11:05 p. m. I was at Box 43, sending in my report. After I sent in my report I proceeded towards Palama way, at the junction of King and Beretania. I rested about five minutes and proceeded along to corner of King and Liliha street and stood there. While standing there Officer John Wallace called out to me and asked me to ring for the patrol wagon, as there was a man lying drunk in the road. I rang for the patrol wagon and went to the spot where the man was lying with his face to the ground, lying on the right side. I pulled out my pocket electric light and looked at the man and saw the man had been bleeding from his nose. He was not breathing. We were there with John Wallace about ten minutes before the wagon came up. During this time he was snoring. He appeared to be dead drunk. He was lying about parallel with the road. He was lifted into the wagon by myself, John Wallace and Alfred Kane, gently. He was drunk to the best of my knowledge and belief as the smell of liquor was strong on him. Did not know he was unconscious at the time."

Scott Wright: "Am turnkey at police station, was on duty at police station evening of November 16, 1904, up till 12 o'clock. Was there when Toepelemann was brought in, about 11:45 p. m. Was brought in by A. Kane and one other, to receiving station. He was laid down on the floor and I searched him. He had a watch and chain. Had a hard time getting watch out as a complicated ring was attached to it. Also took out a pair of glasses and other trinkets. When I was searching him he tried to prevent me from doing so by pushing my hand away. After searching I took him below in cell No. 3, where I laid him on a platform and notified my relief, Billy Woods, that there was a paralyzed drunk in cell 3 and needed watching. I asked him to come with me and see before I left, which he did. I felt his pulse and found it normal and Billy Woods felt his head and reported O. K., although at the time he was breathing hard. After examining we came out of cell Woods said: "All right, I will attend to him," and I left for the night."

At the Queen's Hospital Toepelemann is said to have showed a decided improvement since yesterday and some hope of his recovery is now being entertained by the physicians.

Planters, Homesteaders
Cattle And Insects
These Killed Forests

The discussion of forestry by the planters this afternoon was very brief. The treatment of the subject consisted of hearing the report of L. A. Thurston, chairman of the committee, and the reading of two letters, one from Mr. T. S. Kay, the other from E. E. Olding.

Mr. Kay stated in his letter that the forest depletion in the Hawaiian Islands was due to four principal things. First in importance was the stripping of timber lands by planters themselves; second by the homesteaders; third the ravages of cattle and the encroachment of ranchers on the timber land for pastoral purposes; fourth natural decay and insects.

He said there should be a law compelling sugar planters to plant five trees for every one they cut down, and homesteaders should be located nowhere except upon open land. The homesteaders should also be compelled to plant trees. Every public-spirited citizen should also plant trees wherever they could find vacant spots along the ravines and elsewhere. Mr. Kay favored the establishment of an Arbor Day. He referred to an address by Senator Chauncey Depew on forests.

Depew's speech had been given wide publicity in America and had turned the attention of the public to the necessity of conservation of forests.

Mr. Olding's letter touched on the best woods to be planted in Hawaii. He considered ironwood to be the most useful. It is the best for fence posts and can be used to make agricultural implements and vehicles.

He also treated of preservatives for wood.

The Association went into executive session at 2:19 p. m.

Money In Treasury
$700,000 Taxes
To Pay All Warrants

Government servants from the highest salaries to the least remunerated who hold paper against the Territory in the way of registered warrants can get in line the first thing on Monday morning, present their parchment, hold open their bags and go away happy with everything that is coming to them.

All Hawaiian registered warrants are now to be paid. The money is in the Treasury, more than enough to meet the needs of the warrants, and all that remains to be done is to ask and the cash shall be received.

There are eight thousand and odd warrants bearing the promise of the Territory to pay and these warrants amount to nearly a half million dollars. The promise was made that when the November flood of income by taxes was at the full the warrants would be cashed. The good work starts Monday.

Tax Assessor Holt has turned over to the Treasury the money received as it has come in. Altogether, from the first day of the year up to and including the 15th of this month, inclusive, $674,160.49 have been taken in for taxes for the Island of Oahu.

EXECUTION ON CUSTOMS VIOLATION

United States Marshal Hendry has served execution papers in the matter of Wing Sang Co., of which firm a member or partner was found guilty of an infringement of the customs laws and ordered to pay the penalty, refusing which, execution issues, sale to take place a week from today. The firm also has a house in San Francisco and if execution were not had here, it could be had in California on property there. Hundreds of dollars worth of goods are at present in cold storage here and upon this levy will be made. Defendant was charged with attempt to defraud.

The matter of the guardianship of Kahopio and Mahoe, two minor females, concerning whom there is a fight between relatives, is on before Judge De Bolt this afternoon.

prize known as the Hamakua Ditch Co., Ltd., but they acted as attorneys and advisers of deponents and through their advice deponent signed an agreement under which it is claimed by the other party to said agreement that deponent was and still is liable to said other party in the sum of $100,000. That said Kinney and Ballou did not become parties to said agreement, taking good care not to make themselves liable under the same, making deponent solely liable, though they would have benefited jointly with deponent thereunder. That the action of said Kinney and Ballou in now attacking this deponent and working against his interests, if any interest he has in said enterprise (referring to said Hamakua Ditch Co., Ltd.) and in trying to prejudice deponent under said agreement is a gross violation of their professional duties to deponent and, as deponent believes, renders them unfit to practice in the courts of the Territory of Hawaii.

Ballou mentions his long residence in the Islands and his extensive law practice here. He further states that he is the only attorney here by the name Ballou and asks for damages as above stated. The suit arises, as did that of W. A. Kinney, from the litigation arising from the Kohala ditch enterprise.

Return of summons is this afternoon made in City Mill Co. vs. Wo Sing Wai, for foreclosure of mortgage and appointment of receiver, plaintiff alleging that various sums of money have been advanced to defendant for rice planting. The sums advanced are said never to have been repaid.

A score of boys and girls attended the Government dispensary this morning to be treated for trachoma. The disease seems to be mostly confined to the Ewa end of town. Not a single case has been reported from the Kaa-huanu school and very few from Wai-kiki.

The Superintendent of Water Works has a notice in this issue stating that the water will be shut off between the hours of 8 a. m. and 6 p. m. on the Ewa side of Maunakea street as far as the junction of King and Beretania.

Superintendent of Public Instruction A. T. Atkinson is considering what appropriations he shall ask from the Legislature at the next session for school improvements and the general advancement of the cause of education.

Honolulu Iron Works
Secures Big Contract

The Honolulu Iron Works has secured the contract for furnishing the pipe for the Honolulu Gas Company's mains in this city. The contract calls for over fifteen miles of mains and the local firm was successful against mainland bidders. A cablegram from the Construction Co. at San Francisco came this morning announcing the fact.

"I do not know how much longer I shall remain in these Islands," said Pinkerton Detective Charles Hatter this morning; "I have wanted to get away before this, but it seems that I shall have to remain a while yet."

"No; I cannot say that my time spent here has been in the nature of a vacation, although of course I have seen new faces and enjoyed the sensation of new surroundings. But then one in my profession gets used to new faces and surroundings, and there is little in the way of novelty to be met with after one has jumped around for years from one end of the world to the other. He may be in Key West today and in Dawson City next month, or in Honolulu this week and two or three weeks later in a fashionable watering place on the south coast of England."

Devil fish has been added to the list of human foods.

McFadden and Castro are rounding into shape and no matter which of these lads crawls through the ropes a beaten man he will have no excuse to offer as far as condition goes. The men will both weigh in at the club on Saturday noon and each man must tip the beam at 125 pounds, the featherweight limit. Castro is in fine shape and fit to go twenty fast rounds. He quit his job two weeks ago so as to give himself the proper care. "Young" Scott of the San Francisco Club, has had Castro in charge and has made a wonderful improvement in the "Guan Winder."

McFadden has had no trouble in making the weight and thinks this is the easiest country in which to get to weight that he has ever trained in. The Healan Boat Club has been headquarters and by the daily swims he has reached the pink of condition. Dick O'Mara, the expert trainer, feels proud of McFadden's condition and says he has a sure winner. If nothing unforeseen happens the Irish lad will toe the scratch as fit and sound as a race-horse.

Indications are good for a crowded house and the new club feels jubilant at its prospects.

Seats are now on sale at Woods & Sheldon's and going fast.

OPERETTA REHEARSAL

The first altogether rehearsal of the "Mother Goose" operetta was given yesterday afternoon at the Castle Home. It was Miss Martin's first meeting with the regiment of children who will appear before the footlights in this charming play. Before the children were taken in hand by their trainer yesterday they were a juvenile mob in a state of riot, but soon the work of the hour was presented and the tots became as orderly as veterans.

The ladies who originated the idea were greatly pleased with the first rehearsal and look forward to making the Kindergarten benefit one of the most successful shows of the year.

Miss Martin has conducted juvenile plays in all parts of the United States and has been uniformly successful.

The rehearsals this afternoon are as follows: Poppies under the chaperonage of Mrs. Sweeney, Mrs. Moritz, Mrs. Reedford; Sweet Peas under the chaperonage of Mrs. Clark; Grass Blades under chaperonage of Miss Agnes Judd and Miss Ella Wright, at 2 p. m.; Humpty Dumplings with Mrs. Rowland as chaperone at 4 p. m.; The King's Guards with Miss Cross as chaperone at 6:30 p. m.

UTILIZING BY PRODUCTS

FORTUNES GOING TO WASTE;
HOW TO CONSERVE THEM

FEEDING MOLASSES SAVES GOOD HARD MONEY THAT WOULD GO FOR HAY AND BARLEY.

Geo. H. Fairchild, chairman of the Committee on the Utilization of By-Products, read a report before the Planters Association meeting from which the following are extracts:

We consider the by-products upon a plantation to include waste molasses, stable manure, bagasse, press cakes, ashes, cane tops, etc., left in the fields after harvesting, and will consider each in order in this report.

Waste Molasses—This by-product, while still a "waste product" upon some plantations, is rapidly becoming a valuable commodity, and the main point to be considered is "Are we getting the best results from it considered from a financial standpoint." Some plantations are feeding it to their working stock at the rate of from 3 to 15 pounds per day, others are burning it in their furnaces mixed with the bagasse, or by means of the Anderson or other atomizing burner and in some instances it is being applied directly to the soil as a fertilizer. As a feed for mules or stock there is no longer any question about its being a valuable and harmless feed.

Assuming that a 10,000-ton plantation requires 150 head of mules or horses, and that each mule will eat a gallon of molasses a day, then during the year 54,750 gallons of waste molasses will be used as feed.

Ordinarily not less than 25 U. S. gallons of molasses are produced for each ton of sugar made in a well equipped factory, or 250,000 gallons per year from a 10,000-ton factory; of this hardly a fourth would be consumed as feed by the working stock. If it is not practicable to feed all of the molasses (and it is most valuable as a feed as we will show later on), the next best scheme is to burn it in the furnaces, and we believe the best results are obtained when the molasses is finely atomized and combustion takes place before the potash in the molasses can combine with the silica in the trash and form a mass of clinker and glass that will clog the grate bars.

Results at Ewa, McBryde, Maui Agricultural and the Mahee Sugar Co.'s plantations prove that molasses has a fuel value relative to coal in the ratio of about one to four; 250,000 gallons of molasses will weigh about 1,625 tons and its fuel value would be equal to, say, 406 tons of coal, worth say $4,000; after burning the molasses the valuable by-product potash is left. Authorities claim that 35 per cent. of average waste molasses ash is potash; 1,625 tons of molasses will yield 9 per cent. of its weight in ash or, say, 146 tons of ash, and 35 per cent. of this is potash in carbonate form; 51 tons of potash is worth about $100 a ton, or say $5,000.

From the foregoing we find that the waste molasses from a 10,000-ton plantation when burned in the furnaces is worth as fuel and fertilizer about $9,000. Are we getting this from it? We will now consider the value of waste molasses as a food for stock. On the Mahee Sugar Co.'s plantation since the first of this year they have fed their working stock at the rate of from 10 to 15 pounds of molasses per day and have reduced the amount of grain from 16 and 18 pounds to 6 and 8 pounds.

C. C. Kennedy of Waialae reported a saving in feed by the use of a molasses ration amounting to $7,300 per year for 100 mules.

Mud Press Cake.—Every plantation seems to be alive to the benefits of this by-product as a fertilizer. There are different ways of applying it to the land many of which were originated for the purpose of economic handling rather than with a view to obtaining the best results as a fertilizer. The sooner the press cake is applied to and mixed with the soil the better, as then the nitrogen contained is not lost; if this cannot be done then enough super phosphate should be applied the same as with manure to fix the nitrogen.

The personal observation of one of your committee is to the effect that where the press cake is applied to fallow fields and plowed in at the rate of from 2 to 4 tons per acre the growth of cane is much better both in color and size of stalk. Upon a small piece of land that was used as a dumping station for the subsequent distribution of the press cake for one season only and amounting to about one acre, when plowed and planted had cane at four months further advanced than cane on land not so treated had at six months, and at the present time the difference in growth and color is as marked as is the cane upon virgin and over-cropped land. The presence of the lime and organic matter is mainly responsible for this result.

The last waste products to be considered are the cane tops, dry leaves, etc., left behind the harvesting gangs. The green cane tops are fed to the stock and supply the proper amount of bulk, for a well balanced ration, especially where molasses is fed, but the dry leaves and dead cane must be burned off for fear of injurious insects which we find always increase when we fail to burn off the fields after

THE PEACE TALK.

Reports from the diplomatic centers are very misleading if the future of the war in the Orient does not depend more upon Port Arthur than the operations about Mukden.

The recent personal representations of Japan to Russia demonstrate that the smaller but very vigorous combatant wants to end the war. There is every reason why it should. The moral and physical advantage is entirely on the side of Japan today, though it has forced no surrenders and Russia is still in Manchuria. Also, a long drawn fight is Japan's fear and Russia's hope. Japan is not in condition to sustain a long and expensive campaign, but its men ever so brave or its loans floated as easily as a cork on the waters. The prestige of having brought Russia to time, and established itself in Korea would be quite sufficient at this time to satisfy its aggressive spirit.

On the other hand the situation is very satisfactory to the Powers, interested in the Orient, whose position will be strengthened by the humbling of Russia and a not too positive victory for Japan. Much as they may be astonished in the future development and aggressiveness of Japan, these Powers do not intend to allow the little country to gain too strong or an independent position. Great Britain wants Japan as a working ally, not an active competitor, and according to all accounts the United States is also being wheeled into the mess to assist in pulling European chestnuts from the fire.

It is a significant fact that an atmosphere of peace is being created by President Roosevelt's call for a conference at The Hague. Peace talk is an interesting, commendable and highly elevating love feast at any time, yet when European potentates are asking Roosevelt to do so many things they don't dare to do themselves for fear of getting into trouble. It would appear that at least the enemies of Russia are planning the peace conference with the idea of having the machinery ready for action when Port Arthur falls.

Russia naturally is protesting against any possibility of peace by intervention or other means that is not Russian-made. But what could Russia do against a combination that included its old enemy England, when French and German friendship is not strong enough to lead them to fight? Russia can't deny Europe any more than Japan could deny Russia, France and Germany. It seems improbable that an excuse for intervention will arise unless Port Arthur is forced to succumb, hence the fate of the Russian cause rests with the men under the brave Stoessel, whose condition an American Consul says is critical, and who, a German officer says, can hold out for months longer.

What the onlooking nations seek is a severe check to Russian power and half a victory for Japan.

PLANTERS GO INTO EXECUTIVE SESSION

The Planters' Association this afternoon devoted a short time to the consideration and study of forestry. A report was read by L. A. Thurston.

After this the Association went into executive session to consider questions pertaining to labor. Tonight the planters will attend a banquet at the Alexander Young hotel. Tomorrow a visit will be made to the experiment station in the forenoon. Interesting microscopical exhibitions have been arranged, showing the managers some of the working methods of cane pests and their antidotes. As the guests of the trustees the visiting plantation managers will partake of luncheon at the German Fair on the law at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Isenberg.

Science Aids Nature On Big Scale In Growing Sugar Cane

The science side of cultivating cane received the attention of the planters at today's session. Present at the session this morning and taking part in the proceedings were the representatives from the Experiment Station maintained by the sugar planters of Hawaii. Territorial Entomology was also represented. Among the scientists present were C. F. Eckart, Alexander Crow, Prof. Kotinsky, G. W. Kirkaldy, F. W. Terry, Otto H. Swezey, E. G. Clark and others. The contribution of these scientists to the art of raising cane is shown to be important by the lavish expenditure being made by the planters in sustaining the experiment station where their work is done. The scientific side of raising cane is the most difficult, is still a most interesting phase of the industry.

The time of the session this morning was principally taken up by the reading of the report of the experiment station committee, by Mr. Eckart, a document of seventy pages. When this had been read only a short time for discussion remained.

Mr. Eckart was asked if there were any new varieties of cane, which promised improvement over present ones. He stated that the varieties known as Molir's White and Demarara No. 117 gave great promise. He believed they might prove excellent successors to Jose Bamboe. Molir's White is a cane derived from the Big Ribbon variety, by experiments by John T. Molir of Onomua. He sent samples to the experiment station and Mr. Eckart is pleased with the results promised. The entomological department had many questions directed at it by the plantation managers.

Mr. Fairchild wanted to know if there could not be found more enemies of the aphid. He said since the disappearance of the lantern berry the mynah bird had taken to feeding on the red lady bugs and the aphid was consequently getting a long lead. He also said the parasite that preys on the lady bug is doing deadlier work than usual.

Alexander Crow said in reply, that he knew of aphid enemies on the Coast, which he expected to find here and that he would see to it that extensive importations of these were made. He reported that the cultivation of lady bugs was going on apace from new species sent by Professor Koehle from Australia.

In defense of the mynah bird, Manager Adams of Kahuku said the bird was eating Japanese beetles over there. Manager Olding said this bird had almost exterminated the army worm in Kohala.

Mr. Terry of the experiment station asked that planters send them in specimens of birds for study preserved in alcohol.

Mr. Forbes of Hamakua said the mynah bird was fond of cane borers.

Mr. Fairchild asked if anything was being done to find an enemy to the borer. He said in the long cold springs on Kauai, the plantations had paid 5 cents per ounce for these borers. Portuguese children had grown wealthy in catching them.

Mr. Renton of Ewa said the mole cricket was growing into a serious pest on Ewa. It works into the cane from wet spots and irrigation ditches. He had heard that a bat was to be introduced that would exterminate the cricket.

Fairchild said there were no crickets on Kauai. He had seen one, his first one, this morning on the sidewalk in front of E. O. Hall & Sons. He hoped they would not ship it to Kauai in freight sold up that way.

Mr. Adams said Honolulu is full of mole crickets. In Kahuku during a flood last year the kids rounded up 55,000 of them.

Mr. Terry of the experiment station thought he had discovered the cane borer's weak spot. He had found, where cane had been cut and exposed to the sun, the borers in the stalks invariably died. Mr. Adams had found the same thing to be true in seed cane.

Fairchild said the borer would live through a cane fire.

Renton said he had found live cane borers in cane that had laid on the field a month.

Mr. Kotinsky, the entomologist said, had not been on the Islands long enough to speak authoritatively on matters generally, but he was a great believer in cooperation. There were many leaf hoppers and many borers in the Islands. Plantation men who are not experts in the insect world may think a certain insect is beneficial or that it is a pest. In all such cases a specimen should be sent to the experiment station. The station has a great lack of specimens. The force is not large enough to permit experiment of free men to do much work in the field hunting specimens. He said the entomologists and pathologists can be helped a great deal if planters and agriculturists generally will send them specimen insects.

Mr. Kirkaldy said so far as he knew there was no enemy in sight for the mole cricket.

Mr. Eckart said he had heard that nitrate of soda used in the irrigation water in proper quantity might drive them out.

Mr. Renton said he had applied nitrate of soda to a certain field for two months without causing the crickets any trouble. It had shown no cessation of activity.

Mr. Kirkaldy said that aphid eating beetles were numerous, and he believed two specimens received from Australia would do especially good service. They are in color like the cane stalk itself and therefore the mynah birds would have difficulty in finding them.

Manager Adams in reply to a question said that the cane borer was less in evidence in short rattoons than in long rattoons or plant cane.

Mr. Swezey said the reverse was true on Maui.

Tax Assessor Holt turned two hundred thousand dollars in gold, greenbacks and checks over to the Territorial Treasurer early this afternoon.

SHORT STORY FOR EVENING HOURS

MR. WILBERFORCE'S DAY'S WORK.

As a young lady of not altogether unpleasing appearance (runs Ada's diary for a certain summer's day not many years ago), I suppose I have had the average experience of matrimonial proposals; but I trust, for the credit of the other sex, for whom I entertain a very proper respect, that in one detail my adventures have been unique.

The case of Mr. Wilberforce, who proposed to me today, is the detail to which I refer.

Mr. Wilberforce has been a member of our holiday party in Devonshire for the past week. It appears he is a friend of papa's in the city. Papa ran against him quite unexpectedly at Okehampton in the course of our Dartmoor tour, and, finding he was taking a solitary holiday on very much the same lines as our party—which until then consisted entirely of our own family, and comprised mamma, papa, my eldest sister Joan and my younger sister Mabel—he invited Mr. Wilberforce to join us. This Mr. Wilberforce readily agreed to do, and so for the past week he has been made one of us.

He is some way past the middle age, but well set-up, and, though bald on the top, with a clean-shaven face, rather a fine looking man. He is grave and courteous in his manner, but entertaining in his conversation, and exceedingly anxious to make himself agreeable. Papa told us soon after he was introduced to us that he had recently become a widower.

Since yesterday we have been staying at Drewsteignton, and this morning, after breakfast, I set out alone for Fingle Bridge, where I intended spending the time before luncheon with a new novel.

I anticipated a quiet and delightful time; but alas! no sooner had I chosen my seat on a rock that pushed over the noisy stream than Mr. Wilberforce sauntered slowly on to the bridge and leaned over the parapet. He did not appear to observe me at first.

Fearing that the situation might become embarrassing, I ostentatiously shifted my position. He started, and I thought he colored. Then, lifting his hat, with a gentle smile, he came down to me.

"Fate," he said, simply, seating himself by my side.

"What about fate, Mr. Wilberforce?" said I, surprised, for he seemed to be in a most unusual mood.

"It must be fate," he went on, poking in the river with his walking stick. "The morning and the scene," I remarked, "both favor soliloquy; and I returned to my novel.

"A romantic morning and a romantic scene," he said, raising his eyes earnestly to the great wooded hill that swept upward from the opposite bank. He was silent for a few minutes. Then he turned his head toward me and asked me: "Do you not find the contemplation of a scene like this—a splendid scene, full of the highest majesty of nature—fill you with discontent? Doesn't it make you restless? Doesn't it give you a sensation of deep-seated dissatisfaction?"

"No," I replied. "Such a scene as this gives me the fullest content. It blots out everything distasteful in my recollection of the past, and fills me with hope as to the future."

"That seems to me the truest definition of happiness that I have heard," said he, slowly. "Youth is the secret of it. A scene like this gives happiness to youth, and disquiet to a man like me, whose youth is over."

"When the heart is young—" I quoted, smiling.

"Ah, it's poor comfort when the heart is old," he replied, but laughed and rallied somewhat from his fit of pessimism. "I'm not boring you, I hope, Miss Ada? You came here to have a quiet read, no doubt, and here I am intruding the morose reflections of middle age upon you!"

He was very still for the next half hour. He had removed himself a few yards to a place where the river bank was carpeted with soft grass; there he lay at full length, with his benevolent river. I, too, submitted myself to its fascination.

At the end of the half hour Mr. Wilberforce rose with a sigh and seated himself once more by my side.

"Yes," he said, "it must have been fate."

"Do explain!" I cried.

"I had been thinking about you, Ada, and that was why I walked down here to look at the river."

"It seems an odd reason," I said.

"It would to a woman, perhaps," he replied; "but any man would understand. Let a man's mind be occupied with thoughts of a particular woman, a good woman, and if there is a river anywhere near, he will always prefer to do his thinking about her by the side of it. He seeks the holy atmosphere for his holiest thoughts, and there is something strangely holy about the sound of a river beneath an open sky in the silence of the woods and hills."

I knew that I had gone white; his words, his manner, his eyes, were eloquent of a meaning that I could not mistake. I looked away in agitation at the rolling woods.

He saw that I had understood and gulped nervously.

"I won't believe," he went on, placing a hand on mine, "that fate so led me to you only to take you away forever. Hear my confession, Ada. I love you, and I've come here to tell you so and ask you to marry me."

"You—surprise me very much, Mr. Wilberforce," I said. "I never suspected for one moment that you thought of me like that."

Mr. Wilberforce interrupted me eagerly.

"I know you didn't," he said, "and I don't expect you to give an immediate answer to a proposal you were totally unprepared for. I am here just to plead my case, and I shall come up for judgment later on."

"No," I said, earnestly. "I beg of you to say no more! I am very sorry, but I can only say no."

Pardon, dear girl," he replied, gently. "You must at least hear me out. Such case as I have, let me state it. The weak point I know is my age. You will say I am old enough to be your father. Well, that may be, and yet I may not be too old to be your very good husband. If you would try to consider me in that relationship—I could insure your comfort—"

"I have no doubt of that, Mr. Wilberforce," I said. "Believe me, I am not underestimating the value and the honor of your offer, but marriage without love, however advantageous in other respects—"

"On my side, my dear, the love would be great, and sincere, and unchanging," said he; and I could not but be touched by the evident fervor with which he spoke. "And I believe you would learn to love me in return. Let me—may I?—point out that the love of a man like myself, who has passed the first erratic passion of his green youth, has great advantages of steadiness over the more, perhaps, ardent infatuation of a man in the twenties. Love often plays a cheating game with young men, and women are dragged into the swindle; but with men like me there can be no chance of any such fatal mistake."

"I do not doubt it," I said, gently; "but there can be no love on my side. I beg you to take that answer as final."

He sighed heavily and a look of despair came into his eyes. For a minute he watched me in silence, and then he held out his hand.

"Very well, Ada," said he. "Will you forgive me?"

I shook his hand and smiled. "It is your forgiveness I must ask. I am afraid I have caused you pain."

"Oh, no matter." He rose and reached for his hat, which he had left upon the grass. "I may of course, rely upon your silence? Thank you—thank you! God bless you!" He walked slowly to the bridge, lifted his hat with a grave smile and took the road toward the village.

For half an hour I sat beside the river reflecting upon the events of the morning. I can honestly say that I have never refused a man with more genuine compassion.

By and by I picked up my neglected book and walked slowly back to Drewsteignton. On reaching the churchyard at the top of the hill I was surprised to find Joan, my oldest sister, seated on a low stone-covered grave, thoughtfully plucking at the grass. I have always taken a peculiar delight in making confidences, and the invitation of the present situation proved too much for me. I waved my book at her, opened the little gate of the churchyard and joined her on the tombstone Joan was always my favorite sister.

"An adventure to report, my dear!" I said.

"Adventures in Drewsteignton!" exclaimed Joan, gazing round at the dreary scene.

"A piquant adventure, too."

"What—a man?" Joan looked comically horror-stricken.

I nodded, then burst out laughing. "A man with a proposal, you old dear!"

"Ada! Who?"

"Mr. Wilberforce—Father Wilberforce!"

Joan gave quite a shriek of amazement. "He proposed to you this morning?"

"An hour ago, at Fingle Bridge. Isn't it funny? But really, dear, it was a beautiful proposal—he was so touching. A man like that proposes so much more sensibly than these young whippersnappers! Says what he's got to say without any stumbling and haw-hawing. No hysterics, no—"

"But you didn't accept him, darling? Surely you couldn't accept him?" cried Joan, agitatedly.

"Oh, no!"

"Thank goodness!"

"Well, as to that," I retorted, plucked, side of it. He seeks the holy atmosphere for his holiest thoughts, and there is something strangely holy about the sound of a river beneath an open sky in the silence of the woods and hills."

"You—surprise me very much, Mr. Wilberforce," I said. "I never suspected for one moment that you thought of me like that."

Mr. Wilberforce interrupted me eagerly.

"It was not an offer to be ashamed of getting. I think it was a great honor to be asked by a man of so much greater experience than myself. It confirms one or two opinions that I am vain enough to entertain about myself! It's a great score to me!"

"If you think so much of him, dear, why didn't you accept him?"

"Ah, that's a different thing!"

"An hour ago, you say?"

"Yes, down by Fingle Bridge."

"Well, then, he must have gone direct from me to you," said Joan.

"Oh, has he been with you this morning, then?"

"He proposed to me two hours ago, dear. I've been sitting here ever since I refused him."

Joan quizzed at me solemnly under her picture hat, then burst into a suffraging fit of laughter.

As for me, I sat petrified for a clear sixty seconds. "The brute!" I gasped at length.

"It was a beautiful proposal," gurgled Joan.

"The beast!"

"Such an honor, too!"—this in a kind of yell. I rose hastily and shook her, or I believe she would have had hysterics on the spot.

"Now, in all your experience," I began, "did you ever fear of—"

There came a shout from the churchyard gate. We turned and saw young Mabel. "Lunch!" she cried; then opened the gate and came running down the path.

"Come on, do!" said she. "We're all waiting. It's past 1. But, I say!" She plucked a blade of grass and bound it round her engagement finger in the form of a ring. "Look!"

"What do you mean, kid?"

"I'm engaged! Been engaged for half an hour!"

"Mr. Wilberforce?" we both shouted in unison.

"Why, how ever did you guess?"

Recried Mabel, staring in evident discomfiture.

My wife's diary for that date finishes abruptly here, but I may add that Mr. Wilberforce really makes Mabel a very excellent husband, and as a brother-in-law I have no fault to find with him.—Horace Thorogood, in the Free Lance.

Books, Bookish People and Things

Carl Schurz, who is so often on the wrong side of a question from sheer disposition to oppose, does show his true sense of patriotism occasionally in such excellent articles as "Can the South Solve the Negro Problem?"

This contribution, made first for Mr. Schurz's Magazine, is of real value. Mr. Schurz has had a long, eventful life in American politics. He has held some of the most responsible positions and been entrusted with heavy state burdens, and while he lacks the equipoise and stable judgment we demand in a President, Supreme Judge or a Secretary of State, his temperament being too impressionable and passionate, he can deduce valuable conclusions from his rich experiences and knowledge of men and their doings.

Mr. Schurz is just to the negro. He treats him as a man and brother. He remembers the disadvantages under which the American negro has worked, he recognizes rare ability and character as possible in the race, and he condemns severely the methods of some Southern politicians. At the same time, he acknowledges that the best men of the South condemn these methods as much as he does.

"Impressions Quarterly": annual subscription 50 cents (15 cents a number); Paul Elder & Co., San Francisco. Charles Keeler has continued his "Simple Home" papers, "Society" in September number being followed by "Service and Labor." Every home lover should read them.

What is better for a man than a few copies of "Puck," now edited by our good friend John Kendrick Bangs! In connection with your steady, necessary work, or your heavy reading, or your resting hours, take a pinch of Puck Weekly, $5 a year; $2.50 for six months; $1.25 for three months. Puck's Library, issued monthly, $1 a year. Keppler & Schwarzman, Puck building, New York.

Later on we shall give our readers a list of the proposed issues up to 1906, with other information of interest to lovers of good literature.

One of the best features about these books is their careful editing. In Mrs. Trollope's book, for instance, we have the story of the work. The notes on the text are at the end of the book where they ought to be, and do not annoy the reader with their importunity as some do at the foot of the page; they are all relevant and of real help. As an example, the note on "New Harmony" tells us that it was a town in Posey County, Indiana, settled by a German community of religious socialists, called Harmonists. Such information is not obtainable even in the Century Dictionary.

Phrases in foreign languages are translated in full, and the whole is supplemented by a list of books on America by Europeans with name of author and date of publication.

Trench's "Study of Words" has a sketch of his life, a most excellent "Reading" list of books on the language, with author and date of issue, "Notes on the Text," and a full index.

National Documents are "State papers so arranged as to illustrate the growth of our country from 1606 to the present day." These texts from state papers "are derived from the most trustworthy sources," and appeal to any good American citizen. Republican or Democrat. Among some of the titles are: "First Charter of Virginia 1606," "The Mayflower Compact 1620," "Declaration of Independence," "Treaty with Great Britain 1783," "Emancipation Proclamation 1863," "Lincoln's Second Inaugural Address 1865," "Treaty with Mexico 1848" and "Canal Treaty 1901." There are well arranged index, contents and notes on the texts.

Charles Egbert Craddock (Miss Muriel) has a new book that will be out in the latter part of this month. It is entitled — as yet, but is said to resemble the book that gave the author her reputation, "The Prophet of the Great Smoky Mountain."

Mr. Laurence Housman, author of "An Englishwoman's Love Letters," has written "Sabrina Warham," a novel issued by the MacMillan Company.

Dr. William De Witt Hyde, President of Bowdoin College, whose books are not only always readable but helpful, offers another book to his friends, "From Epicurus to Christ: A Study in the Principles of Personality."

"Rob and His Friends," never old though ancient enough, appears under the imprint of the J. B. Lippincott Company, illustrated by Herman Simon and Edmund H. Garrett.

A new short history of the World by Charles Morris, by the same publishers as "Rob and His Friends," has just been issued. It is "within" the comprehension of young readers, and so will appeal to a large circle of readers.

"El Cautivo de Dona Mencía," by Don Juan Valera, is a book for Spanish students. It contains numerous English notes on the text by R. J. de la Cortina, a well known teacher of Spanish. Paper, 35 cents; cloth, 50 cents; W. R. Jenkins, New York.

The publishers of so many popular books, J. B. Lippincott & Co., have issued Lawrence Barrett's last book, "Never-Never Land." It was the author's intention to dramatize the work and put it on the stage, but his plans were frustrated by death.

"The Manual of Forensic Quotations," compiled by Leon Mead and F. Newell Gilbert, has gone into another edition. There is an introduction by Hon. John W. Griggs, with many good illustrations of famous orators.

Dr. Mitchell's new book "New Samaria," published by the J. B. Lippincott Co., contains two stories. The second story is called the "most charming story Dr. Mitchell has ever written," which is saying a good deal.

Mrs. James Farley Cox's interesting "Home Thoughts" will be issued in book form shortly. Many Western States have adopted the two original volumes bearing the same title as text-books in their schools.

FIELD FOR INVENTOR LABOR SAVING MACHINERY NEEDED IN CANE FIELDS

IMPORTANT SUBJECT HANDLED BEFORE PLANTERS' ASSOCIATION BY MANAGER JAS. A. LOW.

The report of James A. Low, chairman of the Committee on Labor Saving Devices, read at the Planters' meeting yesterday, contained a voluminous amount of important matter, and the suggestions made were discussed at length, being continued into today.

The report made the following general comment: The duties of the committee as appointed take consideration of all apparatus and machines which may be labor saving devices, yet the writer does not understand that it is within the province of this committee to recommend the outlay of money on all devices coming under such a title, but to the contrary on only such apparatus as cane loaders and cane cutters, or such other labor saving machines as would be of a marked benefit to the industry generally.

There will be many, one, two, three, yes, as high as five men labor saving devices exhibited to a Labor Saving Device Committee for its consideration, but it would not be good business for the association to expend money on all such small apparatus. While for machines of a nature of cane loaders and cutters, in cases where exhibition models appear practical or feasible, it certainly would be a good business speculation as it is possible for machines of this nature to be built which will largely cut the labor occupied on such work and be a great benefit to the plantations as a whole. The fact is, if a committee was to take up all small matters, their whole time would be occupied.

Therefore where patentees who present practical mechanical ideas in the form of well devised plans, showing all details and mechanism, or better still exhibition models, and where such plans or models showing originality would appeal to a committee of plantation managers made up from the several islands which represent every manner of work to be performed, the Association could afford to assist in finances in the building of a working machine. From the nature of the applications made to this committee it would appear that the public not the impression that your committee was ready to advance money on ideas so as to assist those who conceived of some scheme to develop a patent on the same.

The subject of labor saving devices is one which is constantly before the planter, not only first in the doing away with hand labor or liberating it from one branch of the work to another, but second by cheapening of process, third a reduction of time of performance of work, and fourth by apparatus which automatically records and checks up records. Under the latter three objects we are constantly introducing machinery and apparatus which are of a nature labor saving devices, but principally in the factory end of our work. What is most needed is apparatus and machines which will cut out large percentages of our hand labor, in our fields and at those classes of work where Oriental labor only will work and that reluctantly, thereby bringing up the standard of labor.

This can be done upon the advent of successful cane loaders and cane cutters for field work. The class of labor performing this work will become better paid and more varied. It is said that "Labor Saving appliances have proved the elevation of the laborer by broadening him intellectually, making his work lighter and blinding him more closely to his occupation." The experience of the past year has fully impressed the planters with the necessity of apparatus for the performing of field labor. There are few of us but what realize the necessity for machinery which will reduce the laborious harvest work done by hand labor under our tropical suns during a summer season as we have just experienced.

With successful harvesting machinery there would be no wilting or fagging of men in the harvest field, the work would not have to be done by contract or stint, the supervision and control would be more satisfactory, and the factory supply would be assured, throughout the whole season. While your committee has felt the importance of its work especially as to field devices, a regrets to report, as will be seen hereafter, little or no progress.

Do you notice that we cater to all the successful receptions, parties, banquets, etc. Elite Ice Cream Parlors, Telephone 182 Main.

Chinaman Faces Serious Charge

You Yau, alias Ah You, a Chinese, appeared in the Police Court this morning charged with lascivious conduct. The defendant and three other Chinamen were caught with three Chinese girls, aged approximately 12, 10 and 5 years, at a room on Beretania street between Maunakea and River streets. Ah You was found under such suspicious circumstances that he was charged with lascivious conduct, while there was not sufficient evidence to hold the other men. The case was continued until tomorrow. Chas. F. Chillingworth appeared for the defendant. Mau Yau and Jos. Spencer were charged with disobedience to their parents. The former was discharged while the latter was sent to the Reform School for six months.

The following cases were continued: Egechi and H. C. Mossman, charged with embezzlement; Leong Chee, charged with assault with intent to murder; Mrs. Chun Hee, charged with assault with a weapon; Pong York, charged with rape; Lolohi and Malle Lolohi, charged with larceny; Daniel Carrias, charged with selling liquor without a license; and Fujl, charged with gambling.

Russia Sticks To Its Torpedo Story

St. Petersburg, Nov. 6.—The Associated press has not obtained official confirmation of the sensational report that an intercepted dispatch from the Japanese Minister at The Hague would be produced in the court of inquiry in the recent North Sea affair to prove the existence of a plot to destroy the Russian Baltic fleet. There is said to be good ground for believing the report to be true, and that there are many indications that the Russian Government has been long in possession of strong evidence of a Japanese plan to intercept all of Admiral Rojestvensky's war ships.

This explains the willingness of Russia to submit the case to international arbitration. She would scarcely have proposed this course unless convinced that she had a strong case. It also develops that Emperor Nicholas, during an audience with British Ambassador Hardinge last Sunday, declared in the most positive terms that there were Japanese torpedo boats in the North Sea. Apparently Denmark was impressed by the same belief. The Russian Empress Dowager, who was then in Copenhagen, naturally did not fail to communicate to her father the communication received by her from St. Petersburg. This would account for the extraordinary precautions adopted by the Danish Government in detaching war ships to escort the Baltic sea fleet through Danish waters.

Another remarkable story is current in well-informed circles to the effect that two balloons were seen hovering over the Skagerack while the Russian fleet entered the North sea. These were said to have been manned by Japanese with the object of watching the Russians and possibly dropping explosives.
