Mediterranean Fruit Fly

Paper on the Subject by a California
Horticulturist.

(By A. W. Tate, Jr.)

Probably the most serious insect pests known to horticulturists at the present time, are three members of the same family. These are the Morelos orange fruit worm, Anastrepha ludens, the melon maggot, Dacus cucurbitae, and the Mediterranean fruit fly, Ceratitis capitata, all members of the family Tryptetidae, the fruit flies. The last is the most dangerous of them all, owing to the fact that it attacks so many different kinds of fruit.

It is supposed that this pest is a native of the countries bordering on the Mediterranean sea. At any rate, one of the first places from which it was reported as a serious menace was from the Azores Islands. It has been established in Bermuda for many years, and more recently in South Africa and Australia. The latest place to become infested is the territory of Hawaii, where it has become well established in the Island of Oahu and also on Kauai. Although it was only officially reported in October 1910, it is more than likely that it was introduced there at least two years previously.

The female of this species is a hairy fly slightly smaller than the common house fly and of a yellowish color, with black and white markings on the rounded thorax. The wings are partly transparent, banded and marked with four yellowish-brown blotches, one at the base, and the other three on the broad part. The abdomen is pointed, of a dull yellow color crossed by two silvery purple bands. Legs yellow and eyes dark purple. The wings are carried in a drooping manner over the sides. It is said to be very active, running about over the fruit and foliage of the tree, and when disturbed flies but a short distance often returning to the same place.

The Mediterranean Fruit Fly is primarily a citrus pest but has changed its habits so that at the present time there is no known fruit which it will not attack. After the orange, the peach is most seriously injured. It is true that up to the present time none have been found by the California quarantine officers in the banana or pineapple coming from Hawaii, due probably to the fact that these fruits shipped green. At any rate both of these fruits are reported as being infested by the New Zealand Department of Agriculture.

The eggs of the fly are laid beneath the skin of the ripening fruit which is punctured for the purpose by the female. The white pointed maggot which hatches from these resembles the maggot of the Blow Fly and is about half an inch in length. The injury caused by the maggot causes the fruit to ripen prematurely and to fall to the ground, the maggot escaping, enters the ground and passes the pupal state from which the adult fly issues. The entire life cycle is about twenty-six to thirty days.

Many methods have been tried to combat the ravages of this pest from covering the entire tree with mosquito netting to enclosing the individual fruits in paper bags, but the only method that gives any promise of success is that devised by the New Zealand and Australian authorities. This consists of applying to the foliage of the trees, by means of a large syringe or injector, a mix-

Details of Tragedy

The Carpathia Arrives in New York,
And Survivors Talk.

(Special to the MAUI NEWS.)

NEW YORK, April 19.—The Carpathia arrived here this morning amid the most intense excitement. Graphic details are given of the terrible experience through which the passengers of the ill-fated Titanic passed during the four hours after she struck the iceberg before going to the bottom. The frantic efforts of the wireless operator to bring assistance, then the assurance flashed from a half a dozen ocean greyhounds, that they were speeding to the rescue. The final moments, when all hope was abandoned of any ship reaching the wreck in time to save those left on board.

The survivors tell of the dense fog which enveloped the ship. They were all gathered in the saloon where a sacred concert had been arranged, and in the midst of these impressive ceremonies, without the least warning came the crash, which sent the Titanic, a mass of scrap iron to the bottom, with her load of priceless human souls.

The captain and first officer were on the bridge, and they knew better than anyone else what it meant when the ship struck. They are said to have both committed suicide standing side by side on the bridge.

As is always the case in a crisis like this heroism and cowardice showed where least expected. Mrs. Isadore Strauss refused to leave her husband's side, and she went down with him. Mr. Astor refused to go into the lifeboat, because he feared he would crowd out some woman or child. As the ship made her last wild plunge into the depths, the band played "Nearer My God to Thee." These are a few of the tales of heroism reported.

A rigid investigation is being made as to why the ship was going at the rate of 21 knots an hour in the dense fog, and why the life-saving facilities were absent.

The roadwork on the new road between Maliko and Pauwela is nearing completion. The contractors expect to have it finished by the first of June.

All the five bridges, are completed in Hana, the only one remaining in the district is the one at Kipahulu. The work is being started on the bridges at Keanae. An engine and crusher were sent in this week. The crusher is in compartments of 350 lbs. each. Cullen and Dias will go in next week with a gang of men, and these bridges will be pushed through.

ture of honey and molasses poisoned with arsenate of lead, which may be thinned sufficiently to flow freely by the addition of a little water. This is eaten by the adult fly with disastrous effects. Care should be taken not to get it on the fruit. This method has been reported as being very effective in Australia and South Africa. Of course they are careful to destroy all infected fruit that falls on the ground. These countries have an advantage over Hawaii, however, in that there is very little, if any, wild fruit for a breeding place for the flies.

Countries not yet infested should absolutely prohibit the importation of all fruit from infected territory. In fact, the other islands of Hawaii should quarantine against all fruit from Oahu and Kauai if they wish to remain free from this scourge.

Pleasant Evening

Whipple Memorial Concert Appreciated
By Large Audience.

One of the best arranged and most successfully carried through concerts ever given on Maui, was that of last Saturday evening at the Knights of Pythias hall. The concert was given for the purpose of raising a fund for a memorial window in the Church of the Good Shepherd for the late George W. Whipple, and was under the supervision of Mr. C.D. Lufkin. Himself a finished musician, Mr. Lufkin knew what the people wanted, and succeeded in getting together a program of much merit.

The opening number by Messrs. Chillingworth, Machado and Bal, whetted the appetite of the audience for the good things that were to follow.

The Count Von Zedtwitz brought out in an able manner the beauties of the violin. His playing was a revelation to many present, who never dreamed that such an accomplished artist as Mr. Zedtwitz was among us. His "Serenade Badine" was especially beautiful, the soul of both author and artist showing through the rendition of this number.

Nothing we can say could do Miss Collais full justice. This is the first time she has been heard on Maui, and her rich, clear soprano voice carried the audience by storm. Her easy manner and clear enunciation brought the audience in close touch with the singer, and when she sang "Annie Laurie" by request, she had unmistakably won Maui for all time.

Miss Collais has high ambitions, and it is understood that she is soon to go abroad and study for grand opera.

Mr. Rattray has a pleasing voice. Hardly volume enough for a hall of this size, but full of melody. This was Mr. Rattray's first public appearance since he arrived on Maui, but he must be heard again.

Mrs. Sandsted reading selections were admirable. At times her voice scarcely reached the back of the hall, but her stage manner was almost sufficient to let the audience know what she was saying. Her "Buying Shoes" was so real, one could almost see the shoe clerk hopping about.

Mr. Bruss and Miss Pierce were the accompanists on the piano, and they presided in a most able and acceptable manner.

About $200 were realized from the proceeds of the concert. Miss Collais gave an impromptu concert at Lahaina, shortly before taking the Claudine for Honolulu. The Program:

1. Instrumental Trio—La Tipica March.....Curtis Wm. S. Chillingworth W. E. Bal, J. Machado.

Champions of Hawaii

Wailuku Gymnasium Team Claim That Title by Defeating Honolulu.

All Wailuku turned out Monday evening to see their team win from the Priory girls, and it looked for a time as if all Wailuku were doomed to disappointment. During the first half of the contest the Priory team put it all over the lads. They really made them appear ridiculous. The first half was soon over, and many a sigh of relief went up when the score was announced as only 15 to 7. It seemed to the rooters in the gallery as though the Honolulu team had made twice that number of points.

During the intermission the coaches got hold of the Wailuku players, and they must have talked straight from the shoulder, for when the team came on for the second half there was the glint of battle in their eyes. Their looks did not belie them either. They soon showed that they had found themselves again and set to work in a businesslike manner to overcome the Priory lead. It was hard work, but the girls were willing to work hard, for had it not been intimated to them that some of their friends had backed them with something more substantial than good wishes, and they must win. As they say in racing parlance Wailuku just caught Honolulu at the wire, and when the whistle blew they were going neck and neck. It was here announced that the score was 21 to 21, and the team getting two points first would win. Immediately play was started, a foul was called on Wailuku, giving the Priory a free throw. They missed, and the ball was sent wizzing to the Wailuku forwards, where Hannah Cummings made a quick sure throw for the basket, winning the game and championship.

The Wailuku team all played good ball in the second half, and deserved the hearty support which they received from the gallery. At center Erma Wodehouse seemed omnipresent. Throw after throw of the Priory guards was intercepted by her to be returned to the Wailuku forwards, and by them converted into points. During the game some of the enthusiastic partisans set up a cry of cheat against the officials. This is always regrettable. It is hard to get competent officials to take charge of games of this kind, for this very reason. It is almost invariably the case, however, that those who know least about the game, are the very ones to set up the cry of unfairness. To those who were unbiased it looked as though the games were fairly contested, and fairly judged, and both teams showed the highest degree of sportsmanship throughout. Mrs. W. S. Chillingworth deserves the bulk of the credit for bringing the girls here. She made the arrangements, and with the assistance of friends saw that the Honolulu team were entertained while on Maui.

Republicans All.

A BATTLE royal was waged in the republican convention last week in Honolulu. Charges and counter charges were hurled from one faction against the other. All day long and far into the night they fought, but the final result was inevitable from the first. The men who have brought these islands to their present high plane in the commercial world, were standing together, and they must win. They were fighting for what they considered best for Hawaii.

Opposed to them were the disgruntled ones. Some of them honest in their convictions, no doubt, but others with no convictions at all. The result is the only one which could possibly benefit Hawaii. Hawaii today is one of the richest commonwealths in the world, but most of her eggs are in one basket, and the men who have nurtured the hen which lays the golden eggs, are the natural custodians of our prosperity. These men are all republicans, believe in republican principles, and should have the support of every well wisher of the commonwealth.

Men like Achi and Coelho, advocate all kinds of drastic movements by the defeated faction, but no doubt wiser heads will govern, and they will all settle down to pull together, in order to guarantee continued prosperity for the islands.

Achi advocates the resignation of Kuhio, but who would be the loser by such a move? Kuhio himself. Kuhio stands high today at home and at Washington, but if he should resign like a peevish child, he would lose that respect which every man has for a fighter. Kuhio is the logical representative of Hawaii at Washington, and no doubt he will return there again after the next election, to help another republican congress and republican president, preserve the present prosperity not only of Hawaii, but of the nation.

From the detailed account in today's issue, of the sinking of the Titanic, the sudden change from the peace and quietude of a sacred concert, in the ship's saloon, to the despair and anguish when death in this frightful form confronted the passengers, must surely have been cause to drive the captain, on whose care these people were, to suicide. Yet through it all, cases of the most noble heroism stand out pre-eminent. To those survivors the memory of these awful hours when they waited between hope and despair only to finally see the ship go down with no one to succour the helpless victims remaining on board, will cast a lasting gloom that time will never efface.

In a recent issue of the Hawaiian Star, we observe that it alluded to itself as the first newspaper in the Territory having had a building constructed especially for the purpose. We beg to enlighten the Star somewhat by saying that the Garden Island has occupied such a building for nearly a year.—Garden Island.

And the MAUI NEWS has occupied a building constructed especially for it, for the past five years.

Noa Aluli (at precinct meeting).—I tell you right now if Kuhio isn't elected I am going to turn Democrat. However, I am out for election on the Republican ticket to the legislature.

Noa was a republican, democrat and home ruler, all in one week during the last campaign.

The Question of the Hour.

(Chicago Record-Herald.)

MET an old man bent and gray,
His teeth were gone, his eyes were dim;
I thought it only right to say
A kindly word or two to him.
"Good sir," quoth I, "the day is fair.
The breeze is mild, the sky is blue.
Though sorrows still is here and there,
I hope that all is well with you."
He paused and turned and looked at me,
And leaned upon his staff and said
In tones of deep anxiety:
"Which do you favor, Taft or Ted?"
I met a man who seemed in haste,
His brow was high, his look was proud;
I saw he had no time to waste,
But, having stopped him in the crowd,
I asked: "Good sir, do you believe
That since the Poles have both been found
The poor will have less cause to grieve
And fewer hardships will abound?"
He paused for a moment then and there
And, chewing at a black cigar,
He answered with an anxious air:
"Are you for Taft or for T. R.?"
I met a pretty suffragette—
There are such suffragettes, indeed—
Her smile I shall not forget,
Ah, she, I trow, was born to lead,
"Fair lady," I remarked when she Had paused to hear, her cheeks aglow,
"Your righteous cause appeals to me;
How does the window smashing go?"
She seemed to have a solemn thought,
Then with a sweet, appealing glance,
She answered: "Do you think we ought To give T. R. another chance?"

The Latest In Sports

What the Wrestlers, Boxers and Base Ball Artists Are Doing.

Here is a story that takes us back to the days when Goldfield made its one big splash in the pugilistic pool, and a fairly good story it is.

Such newspaper men as were in the Nevada mining camp in the days preceding the Gans-Nelson fight will remember the turmoil which arose when Nolan insisted on Gans weighing in ring costume. Nolan did not intend to spring this demand until the day of the contest. Gans was one of the first to hear of it and he sent word to Tex Rickard.

"They say they're going to make me weigh with my fighting things on and I can't show 133 pounds that way," complained Gans. "It will take me all my time to make the weight the other way. If Nolan is to dictate I will have to allow at least a couple of pounds for fighting trunks and shoes and this means I will have to pull myself down to 131 pounds. Mr. Rickard, I can't do it."

Tex spoke to Nolan and Nolan was determined.

"Where is the precedent for anything like that?" asked Rickard.

"The rules, sir, the rules," whispered smiling Nolan. "That's the way they weigh for all championship fights. Fitzsimmons did it for Dempsey at New Orleans. Everybody has to do it."

Nolan won out and the meeting dispersed, the news being given out that Gans would have to do 133 in fighting rig even if it became necessary for him to have a leg or an arm amputated. And the worst of it was the articles called for three weighings at intervals on the day of the fight. This also was Nolan's stipulation. He held that if each man showed once or twice beforehand he could make the weight there would be no disappointment when the crowd gathered around the ring.

Gans set to work to devise a ring costume that would be of gossamer lightness. His trunks were of some form of cobwebby silk and weighed barely a half pound. It was said that he fashioned a pair of ring shoes from brown paper stuck together with glue. Maybe that was an exaggeration.

Here's where the real story begins. It seems that Nelson had almost an equally hard time of it with Gans in making the weight. The Battler had to dry out as he never dried before, and the thirst, which he dared not assuage, was prodigious. Nolan's consolation to him was, "Well, you may be a bit feverish, but Gans will be twenty times worse."

The prospect didn't appease Nelson altogether. Through abstinence from cooling fluids, his tongue became as dry as a parrot's. If he dozed off on the eve of the fight he dreamed of cascades of ice water just as men do who are dying of thirst on the desert.

He was all right for the first weighing next day and so was Gans. The second time at scale, too, went off without a hitch.

But when Nelson returned to camp to await the final weighing he fell from grace. Temptation placed in his way a cupful of apple sauce, a thing of which the durable one was inordinately fond. He threw discretion to the winds. As the cooling stuff slid across his parched palate he forgot Nolan, Gans and every one else. He was desperate and he took a chance.

"And if there's anything in the world that will put on weight in a hurry it's apple sauce," remarked Nolan when telling the story.

Came the ringside weighing and naturally enough Gans was the one who was watched. Suspicion was directed towards him, for he was supposed to be the one who had the hard time getting there.

"Nelson first," said the man at the machine, and Nelson stepped on. The lever clicked and Nolan pulled the Dane away quickly.

"Here, come back here. We did not see that," urged some one of Gans' bunch, but Nelson had weighed in. So the master of the scales declared, but the chances are no one outside of Nolan knew whether the lever had trembled or leaped.

Then Gans stood on the platform while everybody crowded and craned, and a mighty cheer went up when it was announced that Joe had passed the ordeal safely.

And Battling Nelson was the one who was over weight.

Lahaina Lines

The ice company held its annual meeting last Saturday evening. Mr. L. Weinzeimer was elected a director.

A very heavy surf was running at Lahaina Tuesday evening. Several boats were swamped. One boat in which were two lady passengers and the freight clerk of the Claudine, fared the worst. Everyone got a thorough soaking, and one of the crew was washed overboard. He was picked up by the boat following, in a thoroughly exhausted condition and sent back to the ship.

The Japanese who was so terribly cut by a fellow countryman recently will in all probability recover. This was hardly thought possible at first, as he was almost cut in two.

This town can now boast of two comets, not in the starry heavens, but in Lahaina waters. Comet 2 is a fine new fishing boat, which was launched with appropriate ceremonies on Tuesday afternoon.

The visiting Priory girls were generously entertained at the Lahaina Hotel, immediately after their arrival from Wailuku, on Tuesday. Their memorial concert was subsequently given at Lahaina hall. Later in the evening they sailed for Honolulu, Bishop Restarick accompanying them.

A SAD MISTAKE.

Rectifying It Didn't Soothe the Victim's Lacerated Feelings.

A young man who had long been prominent in athletics at the University of Chicago decided that the girl upon whom he had been calling for the last three years might possibly care to see some show, extended the invitation, and the young woman condescended to accept.

After the theater he asked the girl whether she cared to accompany him to a little supper, and to his surprise she accepted the invitation. They adjourned to a nearby restaurant, where the "little supper" began to creep up until the young man wondered nervously whether his limited capital would stand the strain. He noted, with a sigh of relief, that the bill amounted to only $5.80.

He reached nonchalantly into his pocket for his "roll," but was horrified to find he had neglected to change his money from his school garb to his evening clothes. Frantically he searched every pocket, and at last he was relieved to feel the crinkle of a bill. Intensely relieved, he drew it forth only to find it was only a five dollar note, placed in there at some period of affluence and later forgotten. He was still 80 cents "shy." He resolved to brave it out, however, and told the waiter to bring the head waiter. To this lordly individual he explained the circumstances and suggested that he leave his name and address and be sent a bill for the entire amount.

As he was putting the pad containing the name and address into his pocket the head waiter noticed a diamond ring on the young man's finger and suggested it be left as security. The young man was about to do this when the young woman, who had been quietly enjoying his dilemma, came to the rescue and asked that she be permitted to loan the young man enough money to pay the bill. Next day every one at the school seemed to have heard the story, and every place he went the young man was asked about $5.80. In desperation he fled to his room and on his table lay a letter from the restaurant at which he had met his Waterloo. It took him some time to muster up courage to open it, and one may imagine his feelings on reading the following:

"My Dear Sir: We regret to state that in making out your check last night an error was made in charging you $5.80 instead of $4.80. We are enclosing the dollar overcharge and trust you will pardon the error and continue to favor us with your patronage."—Chicago News.

The Foundling

She Did Not Tell All
She Knew of Her
Parentage

By OLIVER D. ARKWRIGHT

I had been brought up in the dread of making a mess of my life. Mother had lectured me time and again on the subject, and I had thoroughly appreciated
the undesirable results of marrying out of and especially beneath my class.
Mother did not insist on my marrying
a rich girl, but she deprecated my marrying one whose station in life was different from mine. My father agreed with her.

A day or two after the Clarkes moved into the place next ours from my window I saw Alice in the garden in the rear. Whether she would have attracted others or not on sight I don't know. She certainly produced a profound effect on me. She was fourteen years old, but had completed her growth—tall and willowy and graceful in her postures and movements. Her eyes were her main feature, bespeaking something impressive, though one who looked upon her for the first time would not know what it was.

It was early spring, and the girl had evidently gone out into the yard to locate a flower garden for the coming season. She inspected what beds there were and looked about with a view to locate more, laying out one by putting two sticks in the ground with a string between them.

How I should have liked to join her,
take a spade and dig for her! But I knew my mother would see me, and this would cause a commotion. I never liked duplicity, but I never liked painful interviews either. I restrained myself for the time, but I knew that I would not be able to keep away from the girl next door. Had I known then that she was a foundling it would have increased my alarm at having her so near me, but it would have made no other difference. I should have been engulfed all the same.

It was evident the same evening that my mother had caught sight of the danger in the garden. That she and

"I SAW HER GO OUT TO THE FLOWER GARDEN."

my father had had some words about the matter and that they knew more than I did about Alice Clarke is evident from the fact that they conversed
on the subject of heredity, the disgrace attached to unknown parentage, and especially the stigma of being born out of wedlock.

I confess I was much shocked. I would have been crushed to learn these things about myself and felt a deal of pity for the poor girl who was obliged to bear them. And that was the most dangerous feature of the whole affair. She became an object of compassion.

If I had been of a combative nature
I should have made the acquaintance of Alice Clarke and quarreled with my father and mother. As it was, I fell into the channel marked out for persons of amiable disposition. I met Alice without letting them know anything about it—that is, I met her when they were away from home. The beds in the garden had been dug up for her,
and one morning when the sun was shining warm I saw Alice go out with seed packages to plant. I took occasion to go out to the barn for something I didn't want. There was a low hedge between the two places;
therefore no obstruction intervened between her and me. I did not screw up my courage to speak to her till I returned from the barn; then I said:

"Aren't you putting in your crop rather early?"
She was bending over the work, and when I spoke rose and faced me. It seemed that she looked right through me.

"Why, no," was her reply. "I don't think we'll have another frost. Do you?"

"You can't be sure, but if we do and your plants have come up they can be covered to keep them from being nipped."

I chatted with her about what she was putting in and on various subjects,
but did not cross the hedge—not then.
I was not hurrying on to forbidden ground. I was drifting there.

A month passed, during which no one in my home knew that I had any acquaintance with the foundling. When the secret came out it was in this wise:
On a frosty morning the plants next door were seen to have been covered for their protection from the cold. I knew by the demeanor of my father and mother, at the breakfast table that something was wrong. When my father finished his breakfast and had scanned his paper he went out, leaving me alone with my mother.

"Henry," she said impressively, "I am very much alarmed."

"At what, mother?" I asked.

"I fear that you have formed an acquaintance, possibly an intimacy, with the girl next door."

While I consider deception as a necessity I never could get down to a deliberate lie. I said nothing.

"Last night," mother continued, "being wakeful, I arose and sat by the window. In the darkness I saw something white moving from our place to the one next door. That white thing this morning covers the young growth planted by the girl there."

The secret was put. I had been caught red handed.

"I—I thought there would be a frost,
and I wished to save the plants."

"Did you think of those in our own garden?"

I maintained a confessional silence.

That was all so far as words were concerned, but the next week I was packed off to school. I found opportunity to meet Alice and tell her what had happened. She made no comment
—did not reproach me or my mother.
But in a way in keeping with her youth she suffered—that was evident.
When we parted I bent to give her a goodbye kiss, but she quietly prevented
me.

My parents sent me from school to college and continued to keep me away from home during vacations till I had finished my education. There was no communication between Alice Clarke
and myself during this time, but I did not forget her, though I tried to do so. I had a number of mild flirtations with different young girls in my student days, but they made no impression on me. After my graduation no objection was made to my going home.

I wondered at this and feared that something had happened to remove Alice Clarke from the place. But since she had not been referred to between my mother and myself after I had been sent away to separate me from her I did not like to ask. I tried to convince myself that I would be satisfied to find the danger removed, but the girl had left a tender spot in my heart which would not be healed. As soon as I reached home—the last of June—I kept an eye out next door. I did not see Alice, and the blinds of her room were closed. But I saw that the Clarkes were still living there. I was astonished at the sinking I felt in my heart. I could refrain no longer from asking my mother what had become of my young love.

"There is a story to tell," she said,
"and I will give it to you as it occurred under my observation. One morning about a year ago a carriage with liveried servants drove up to the Clarkes, and a lady alighted and went into the house. An hour after she and Alice came out, hand in hand. The lady said goodbye very feelingly, but came again the next day, taking the girl with her when she went away.
Since then Alice has come often to see the Clarkes, but always in the lady's carriage and handsomely dressed."

"And you have not learned the reason for all this?" I asked wonderingly.
"Yes, Mrs. Clarke and I have often spoken from the windows or from the grounds, and she told me, but only the bare facts. The lady is Alice's mother.
She is of the blue blood—if there is such—of America. In her youth she eloped, was married, and her father disowned her. Her husband became an invalid, starvation stared the couple in the face, and when Alice was born there seemed nothing to do but place her in a foundling home. But the mother knew where the child had been taken and, since she was well cared for and poverty prevented, did not claim her. When the grandfather died and left a large fortune it was found that he had relented and left his daughter her share of his property.
She immediately claimed Alice, or Beatrice, which is her real name—Beatrice Farnsworth—and took her home
with her."

One morning I saw a carriage drive
up, and Alice, richly dressed, alighted and went inside. I watched for her to appear again and presently saw her go out to the flower garden where I had first seen her. I joined her, and the delight that sprang into her face on seeing me brought me an equal happiness.

"There is no need now," I said, "for us to meet clandestinely."

"Nor was there ever. I knew that I was the child of luxury from my baby clothes that I found."

"And you didn't tell me?"

"No; I never dreamed that I would be restored to the sphere in which I was born."

My mother saw us talking in the garden, but there was a great difference in her action in the matter from what it would have been had the young lady remained a foundling. Indeed, mother seemed very curious to learn whether our past affair was to be continued.
I was unable to satisfy her at once, for I did not know. I could answer for myself alone. However, a very short time elapsed before I was able to announce my engagement.

The Scrap Book

Feared For His Complexion.
A Scotchman landed in Canada not long ago. The very first morning he walked abroad he met a coal black negro. It happened that the negro had been born in the highland district of Scotland

and had spent the greater part of his life there. Naturally he had a burr
on his tongue.

"Hey, mannie,"
said the pink Scotchman, "can ye
no tell me wher
I'll find the kirk?"

The darky took him by the arm
and led him to the corner. "Go right
up to you wee hoose and turn to ye're richt and
gang up the hill," said he.

The fresh importation from Scotland looked at the black man in horror. "And ar ye from Scotland,
mon?" he asked.

"Richt ye ar ye," said the darky.

"Aberdeen's ma name."

"And hoo lang have ye been here?"

"About twa year," said the darky.

"Lord save us and keep us!" said the new arrival. "Whaur can I get the best for Edinbro?"—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Let Go!
"Hold fast!" That splendid motto has many battles won.
When linked with noble purpose to earn
the world's "well done,"
But one of equal import for all shrewd men to know
Is when to quit and have the grit to then
and there "let go."

Have you lost your coln of vantage, have
you slipped into a rut,
It's no disgrace to change your base before the wires are cut.
It bespeaks the wily general to outwit a stubborn foe.

Don't stand your ground when you have found 'twill pay you to let go.
—Dr. W. A. Blackwell.

jurists were in the library. Justice Harlan, with Kentucky hospitality, said to his guest:

"I have a little
Scotch over there on the shelf if you would care
to partake."

Senator Thur-
man replied: "I think I would like about a thimbleful."

"He poured out more than a thimbleful," said Justice Harlan, "and was in the act of raising the glass to his lips when Mrs. Thurman from the hall called out with great earnestness:

"Put it down, Allen, put it down!"

"Whereupon Judge Thurman replied
with great gentleness and seriousness,
'I was about to do that when you spoke, mamma,' and deliberately swallowed the potion."—New York Sun.

A Pleasant Evening.
They were seeking to impress the visitor. "If you really wish to get an idea of the toughness of New York toughs," announced one, "you should by all means attend the annual ball given by the Gorilla club. It is absolutely the toughest stunt that is pulled off anywhere. If you don't get action there for your money you won't get it anywhere."

"Do you mean that fights are common at that ball?" inquired the man to be impressed. "Am I to understand that shootings?"

He got no further. One of the others leaned forward, solemnly took hold of his sleeve and remarked: "Fights? Shootings? Why, every single person that starts to go into the Gorilla club hall is stopped outside and searched for concealed weapons, and if he hasn't any—they give him some!"

His Plunge on a Steer.
Samuel G. Blythe of Washington, in company with several other gentlemen, recently acquired a considerable acreage of wild western land, the idea being to hold it for investment. The other parties were all men of such wide interests that a few thousand acres, one way or the other, to any of them seemed a mere bagatelle. Mr.
Blythe, not having their wide experience of slithering money around the country, regarded it more portentously.

Six months or so after the purchase
was made, one of the largest operators wrote him that it was the consensus of opinion that it was a pity to allow the land to eat its head off in taxes while they were waiting for results, and had decided to stock it with cattle and have it turning in an income. They were arranging, he said, for about 10-000 steers, and would apportion 1,000 of them to Mr. Blythe. Mr. Blythe rushed to the telegraph office and wired him: "How much does a steer cost?"

The answer came back in a few hours:
"Average price of steer about $22," whereupon Mr. Blythe telegraphed back: "Buy me one steer and call him Clarence."—Everybody's.

Hard Time Dance.

The Catholic Ladies Aid Society will give a "Hard Time Dance" at the Town Hall for the benefit of the Building Fund of St. Antony's school for girls.

One is not supposed to be toggled up in one's best; on the contrary, the more seedy one looks, the nearer he is to acquiring one of the prizes which will be awarded that night.

Rumor has it that the prizes are masterpieces of modern thought and 14-karat ring for one, a gold-enruffed briar pipe for another, etc. Look out for the etc.

The cause is a good one. There remains quite a debt on the modern school building. The society is doing all it can to discharge this debt.

The doors will open at 7:30 p. m., and dancing will begin at 8:00 p. m. Tickets may be obtained of the members of the Aid Society, or of J. Machado, at the Pioneer Store. Though it is Leap year, the gentlemen will pay the admission fee of 7 cents, while the ladies will be admitted free.

The Paia Orpheum.

The Paia Orpheum is now equipped with fine scenery, and vaudeville attractions will be able to do themselves justice when showing in this house. Cuning the great magician is coming tonight, and will also show Monday evening. Cuning has broken out of jail so often they have given up trying to lock him up. He jumped off the dock in Honolulu handcuffed and came to the surface waving the handcuffs at the crowd. See his wonderful act.

Locals

The new vault which has been under construction by the Kahului Store is completed.

Bishop Restarick preached a powerful sermon last Sunday morning on Christian unity. A number of persons were confirmed at this service.

Dr. Carey came over from Lahaina Sunday evening, and will remain in Wailuku for several weeks.

The greater part of the machinery for the new electric light plant arrived this week on the Missouriian.

A. A. Wilson went through to Hilo Saturday. Mrs. Wilson leaves Hilo for the coast on the Wilhelmina.

E. C. Meilor, lately bookkeeper at the Haiku Cannery has resigned. He has accepted a position with the Kahului R. R. Co.

Mr. C. D. Lufkin, will leave Monday on the Kilauea for Honolulu. He leaves Honolulu for the mainland on the Wilhelmina.

The new billiard room connected with the Maui Hotel is completed, and two pool tables are installed. A billiard table will be installed later.

Atkinson, Breckons and Coelho, what a trio to draw to—made a hurried trip to Maui last week. They turned around and hurried right back again.

Enos Vincent, who bought the strip of land between the road and the beach at Lower Paia, proposes to have it surveyed and cut up in building lots.

Ben Guerrero and Joe Machado, manager and clerk respectively in the Pioneer Store, have sent in their resignations, to take effect May 1st.

The crew of the Puunene Athletic Club took the new boat the "Harriet B" over the course last Sunday. Quite a crowd was on hand, and the crew will have a much better training ground this year than last.

A boat was swamped at Megregor's last Friday night. As the boat came to the wharf it became caught under one of the planks. The next wave caught it, and almost turned it over. One of the sailors were thrown overboard.

Three horses came in on the Claudine last week from Honolulu, and are now quartered at Spreckels Park, Kahului. More will soon come in from both Honolulu and Hilo, and altogether the training season will soon be in full swing.

The luau to be given by the Camp One baseball club at their new grounds today is going to be a hummer. If the Camp One boys can play ball in the same hustling style, as the officers of the club have in arranging this luau, they will be some class.

John A. Palmer, of the Courtland Hotel, Honolulu, has been in town this week. He was on his way to Hilo. Mr. Palmer has recently leased the Hau Tree Hotel, and is having it thoroughly renovated. This will now be an ideal place for families who wish to spend the summer near the beach in Honolulu.

McClanahan, Leon Tobriner, P. W. Bell, Theo. Baumann and J. K. Cullen, Honolulu.

Filipino Commissioner.

Senor Joaquin Balmori, was on Maui this week. He came to the islands for the express purpose of looking into the condition of the Filipino laborers here. He is accompanied by Mr. B. Carbonell. Mr. W. H. Babbitt, of the Planters Association is with the two Filipino gentlemen on their tour of the islands.

Mr. Balmori, seemed pleased with the conditions here on Maui, and in a conversation said that it appeared that his countrymen were being well taken care of. Mr. Balmori agreed that the first Filipinos who came to the islands were a poor lot, and said they had been gathered off the streets of Manila, and other towns, but that the latest arrivals were altogether different, coming from the rural districts, and would prove good citizens. The commissioner is a man of wide experience, and has a wonderful grasp of conditions as they exist both here and in the Orient. He says his countrymen at home feel they are capable of self government, and are almost a unit for complete independence.

Serious Accident

Hawaiian Boy Run Over, and May Loose Life as Result.

A very serious accident occurred last Sunday just below the Maui Soda Works. A boy by the name of Joe Pau, who has been working for Dan Carey, started out for Kahului in company with others for a bicycle ride. The boy was only learning to ride, and was not keeping a very straight course. Ned Nicholas came along with his Packard, and the boy became nervous at the approach of the car, and swerved right over in front of it. The thing was done so quickly, the auto driver was powerless to avert an accident. The boy was really under the car before he realized what was happening. The wheels of the heavy Packard passed directly over the boy's abdomen. When he was taken to the hospital life was apparently almost extinct. For 36 hours the doctor was unable to get a pulse, and it seemed impossible he could live. Thursday morning, however, he showed improvement, and the doctor now says that unless some unforeseen complication sets in, the boy will recover.

Another accident of a very similar nature to the above, only not nearly so serious, happened on the road to Paia. Sam Weller was on his way to church at Paia and as he turned out of Kahului he noticed a Japanese on a bicycle ahead of him talking to some others in a carriage. He blew his horn. The team moved to the side of the road, but the rider kept to the middle. As soon as Mr. Weller got close enough, he called to the Jap to get out of the way, and the latter literally fell under the car. The Jap acknowledges he was to blame, but thinks Mr. Weller should pension him just the same. Sam can not see it that way, but has promised him a new bicycle.

The wonder is that there are not more accidents of this nature, for as every driver of an auto knows, the Japanese are extremely careless, and if it were not for the extreme vigilance of driver's accident such as these would happen daily.
