KOH ISHII IS MUM ON IDENTI-TY OF NEW ENVOY TO INDO-CHINA

TOKYO, Aug. 12- Information board's Ishii indicated at the press conference that Japan agrees with Thai government's statement of August 10, stressing that no foreign power made demands on Thailand for military bases and expressed the belief that Thailand again reemphasized her neutrality because it continued circulation of unfavorable rumors.

Ishii disclosed that the Japanese envoy to French Indo-China will be of ambassadorial rank and has been already selected, however, refused to give his name.

WASHINGTON , Aug. 12 _ Secretary of State Cordell Hull, referring to last night's Allen and Pearson broadcast, declared at the press conference that there is no basis for the report that the United States offered a plan of settlement involving certain concessions to Japan if Japan withdrew from the Axis.

It was said that the settlement differences that United States and Japan must include are all fundamental questions involved in the present conflict and policies. It added that if the United States took up anything with Japan regarding the general settlement it would be based on all fundamentals of the principles which the United States enunciated over the past few years especially fourteen points laid down in Hull's statement of July 16, 1937. FUEL . . . . . Our most popular and most used fuel has always been coal—mostly bituminous coal. In recent years, oil has replaced coal in many in-stances, such as in a lot of home heating, but coal continues to be the leading single source of fuel.

It is estimated by the New York Trust company, which recently made a study of the consumption of energy in the United States, that of the total energy we consumed in 1937, 45 per cent was derived from bituminous coal, 30.4 per cent from oil, 9.8 per cent from natural gas, 9.3 per cent from water power and 5.6 per cent from anthracite coal.

It is not believed probable that oil will continue to replace the use of coal during the next 10 years at the rate it has done it in the past 10 years. The development of the use of either will be determined by ease of transportation, price and taxes, but in general the use of oil will probably be more or less limited to transportation whereas coal will continue to be the most popu-In home heating the present prob-lem of transporting oil to the East, due to those 50 tankers which we gave to England, is expected to turn the trend back to coal, at least temporarily.

If we look far into the future, the use of various fuels is quite unpre-dictable. It may even not be too far off when we will have learned to get most of our needed energy from the sun.

RESOURCES . . . unlimited

When we hear about the millions of barrels of oil and billions of tons of coal which this nation consumes each year, most of us wonder when the oil wells will be pumped dry and when the last of our mountains of coal will finally be shoveled into the nation's coal bins.

But actually, there isn't much to worry about for a long time to come, if ever.

According to the national resources committee, our present re-serves of these fuels amount to about 3,000,000,000,000 tons of coal and over 15,000,000,000 barrels of oil. In addition, there are plenty of unexplored reserves which, if accessary, would undoubtedly pro-duce additional fuel to fill all of our needs for many years.

It is estimated that the average demands for power in America, when all demands for industry, home heating, transportation and other uses are all grouped together, amount to 40 horse power per hour for every hour of the year.

GAS . . . future Natural gas looks like one of the best bets for the fuel of the future.

In the last few years it has become a major source of fuel in certain sections. Because of a plentiful supply and ease of use it is expected to be given name and more preference.

Natural gas is generally found in the same sections as petroleum. Within range of the gas fields it has been found an economical as well as the most simple fuel to use for heating purposes. It seems probable that pipe lines will eventually be built so that natural gas can be sent distances without great expense and then natural gas will be used in countless industries and homes.

But no matter what fuels become most popular, there are no dangers of fuel shortage in this country. Referring to the energy resources of this country, H. C. Dickinson of the bureau of standards said:

"Solid, liquid and gaseous fuels will almost certainly be available from stored-up supplies for several thousands of years at the present rate of consumption."

OIL . . . Russia

One of the chief reasons the Germans went into Russia was to get oil. Russia is one of the leading producers of oil and has vast fields of it which have not been tapped. But so far as production of oil is concerned, the United States has a big lead over every country in the world.

In 1939, figures of the United States bureau of mines show that the United States produced 61 per cent of total world production of oil. Russia was second, but produced only 10.3 per cent of the total and Rumania, which is world-famous for its rich oil fields, produced only 1.7 per cent. Venezuela was third, producing 10 per cent. producing 10 per cent of the total.

These are production figures and do not give a clear picture of the capacity of the world's oil fields. But they do indicate the comparative output possible with the equip ment which each country used be fore the war broke out and show that by any measure the United States has a big lead over all.

Although there are 13 states in the United States which produce considerable oil, by far the greatest production is in Texas which, in 1939, produced 38 per cent of our annual supply. Other states which are known for their oil producing capacity are California, which produced 18 per cent of the supply duced 18 per cent of the supply, Oklahoma, 13 per cent, Illinois, a per cent and Louisiana, 8 per cent. The other states which produced the remaining 15 per cent of our oil supply are: New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky, Kansas, Wyoming and Arkansas.

SPEN FORESTS SERVE DEFENSE

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn. (UP) __ Minnesota's vast aspen forests are being utilized in national defense industry with construction of a "pilot plant" for the commercial production of alpha cellulose, basic raw material for the manufacture of munitions, rayon, celluloid, plastics and similar products.

Construction of the plant, sponsored by the Northwest Research Foundation, follows seven years of scientific research at the University of Minnesota in the utilization of aspen wood, great tracts of which lie in northern Minnesota.

R. H. M. Robinson, president of the paper company, predicts that within a few months "manufacture of alpha cellulose on a small scale will begin and present plans call for the production of approximately 500 pounds of the cellulose pulp a day." The plant is being built on a "test" scale and if the venture proves satisfactory, plans will be made for largescale operations.

PRODUCT WIDELY USED

Alpha cellulose is a vital raw material used in everything from photographic film, rayon yarn, lacquers and plastics to the manufacture of high explosives. It is one of the major raw materials of the chemical industry.

Research scientists estimate that the raw material can be produced from the aspen forests in sufficient quantities to supply the entire world.

The Minnesota aspen forests constitute a vast and as yet untapped natural resource. The trees are so thick and grow so fast that the present supply is more than enough to meet the present world demand.

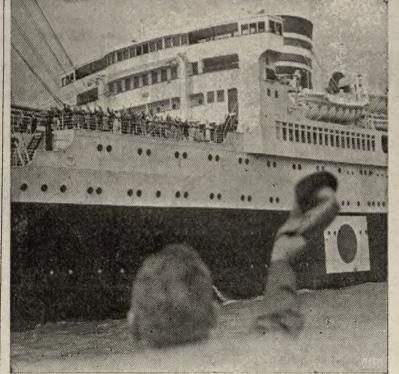

The Northwest Research Foundation, an organization of civic-minded men started in 1933 to develop Minnesota's natural resources, entered into an agreement with the Minnesota and Ontario Paper company for the alpha cellulose plant because of the company's proximity to the source of supply of the aspen wood, and because machinery used at the plant in the production of paper is readily adapted to the production of cellulose pulp.

PROCESS TO BE TESTED

The expanding demand under the national defense projor chemical companies in the process developed at the university laboratories and which will be "tested" commercially in the new plant here.

BEAN FARMERS APPEAL TO U.S.

DENVER (UP) _ The rapid decline of the time-honored bean as the major item on the menu of the modern army is growing headache to the hundreds of Colorado farmers who in "I'll Wait for You," novel dramade their living raising pinto beans.

With 1,410,000 bags of good beans in storage for lack of at the Hilo theater. market, the farmers have launched a campaign to increase army and navy purchases of the product.

The Colorado legislature joined the campaign by sending to both the War and Navy Departments a solemnly-worded memorial urging the army and navy to "increase your purchases of pinto beans grown in the United States so that the consumption can be increased to the benefit of American farmers who depend on this cash crop for their living."

Legislators who sponsored the memorial said army dietigram for alpha cellulose has attracted the interest of the ma- cians and vitamin-conscious army and navy cooks largely were responsible for decline of the pinto bean market. They said removal of the beans as a standby on the menus of the armed forces had reached the crisis stage.
