AN ABOMINABLE EVIL.

Growth of the Crusade Against Feticide.

It was recently asserted in a discussion that there is documentary proof that Washington said, "Place none but Americans on guard." Please inform me if there is an truth in the assertion.

T. R. E.

When this pretended quotation first appeared in the public prints its genuineness was assailed and it was denounced as a forgery. Professor Sparks, biographer of Washington, was appealed to, and the Professor replied that in all the writings and manuscripts of the illustrious American, he had never met with the words quoted. Attempts were then made to prove that Washington used words of a similar import, and to substantiate the charge a forged order of Washington's was produced.

Following is the genuine order, which is taken from Force's "American Archives":
Cambridge Headquarters, July 7, 1775.

The general has great reason and is greatly displeased with the negligence and inattention of those officers who have placed as sentries at the outposts men with whose character they are not acquainted. He therefore orders, that for the future no man shall be appointed to these important stations who is not a native of this country, or has a wife or family in it to whom he is known to be attached; the order to be considered a standing one, and the officers are to pay obedience to it at their peril.

Parole: Dorchester: countersign, Exeter.

We will consider the circumstances under which the order was issued. Washington had arrived at Cambridge only three days before, and finding the army destitute of discipline and a want of care in the military arrangements, and having reason to believe that there were persons in the camp favorably disposed towards the British, who then occupied Boston, gave certain directions in the selection of sentinels, not against foreigners as such, but against traitors generally.

That Washington entertained the kindest feeling toward foreigners and the most liberal views on the subject of emigration, is apparent from his writings which serve to show his sentiments on emigration:

"The bosom of America is open to receive, not only the opulent and respectable stranger, but the oppressed and persecuted of all nations and of all religions, whom we shall welcome to a participation in all rights and privileges."

Again:

"The Irish volunteers merit the warmest thanks of America for their patriotism; and I hope their countrymen, who have so long struggled for liberty, will be hospitably and cordially received here."—The Monitor.

APPLES.

A Life Restoring Health Preserving Fruit From All Ages.

Apples were at one time underestimated; they were scarcely considered a fruit rare enough or luscious enough for the consideration of the epicure, unless, indeed, they formed a part of some elaborate dessert, compounded and cooked by a skilled housekeeper. Apple jellies, puddings, pies and cakes might do, but plain, raw apples were fit only for school children, vegetarians or the poor. All this is now changed and the apple has come to its own again.

But if its flavor has been at various times lightly esteemed or discredited, at least its wholesomeness has been steadily recognized. Apple-sayings are frequent, both in our own country and in England, all of which testify in favor of the fruit. In the "west cuntry" there are four such: "An apple a day sends the doctor away," is the first and briefest. Then follow, in the order of their vigor, three more:

Apple in the morning,
Doctor's warning.

Roast apple at night
Starved the doctor outright.

Eat an apple going to bed,
Knocked the doctor on the head.

A little less aggressive is one of the Midlands:

Three each day, sev'n days a week—
Ruddy apple, ruddy cheek.

French and German Slang

A writer in the Journal des Debats complains of the process of degradation which is going on in the French language. The peasantry, for instance, frequently speak of the ass, a humble partner in their daily toil, as "the minister" and other words of dignified import are applied to equally humble, if not actually base, uses. The same tendency, however, appears to be showing itself in Germany, where the title "monarch" passes current in modern slang as a designation for tramps and foot pads. The other day a non-commissioned officer in charge of the barracks at Danzig addressed this term to a troublesome private just as a captain happened to be passing. The latter at once reported the incident and the barrack master was brought before the magistrate on a charge of "lese majeste." Evidence was adduced to prove that in East Prussia rascal and monarch were convertible terms, so that the court acquitted the prisoner, although he loses his rank and his pension.—London Chronicle.

Lawyer.—No; I repeat, emphatically, that I do not care to say anything at all about my client's case! It would do no good, and I—absolutely refuse to be interviewed!

Reporter.—Oh! never mind about the interview. I have written that long ago, and here are the proofs of it. I just want you to look through them and give me a good denial of all I've said for the afternoon edition.

The fact that bright stars can be seen with a telescope at high noon sometimes astonishes visitors to an observatory. Even more surprising is the fact that stars can be photographed in broad day. The photographing telescope belonging to one big observatory has pictured the dog-star, Sirius, at midday, and it has been suggested that the photographing of bright stars crossing the meridian of daylight may prove to be a source of increased knowledge to astronomers.

TOPICS OF THE DAY.

There are numerous complaints over the poor lighting of the public streets and roads. The thoroughfares are every night in Egyptian darkness and with the numerous tramps and dilapidated strangers around town it is hardly safe for pedestrians to be abroad after dark.

The Executive doesn't realize evidently that Honolulu is growing. The great men censure and growl at the Customs officers but they do nothing to increase the present ridiculous small force at the disposition of the Bureau. A few nights ago there were eight foreign steamers and 28 merchant vessels in port. To guard against smuggling, the Port Surveyor had 20 guards and 3 district inspectors. What can be expected under the circumstances?

It is with amazement that we read in the report of the Advertiser on the proceedings of the Board of Health, that two physicians on that Board state without equivocation that the quantity of salicylic acid used in catsup and beer to fortify them against fermentation in this climate, is deleterious to health of consumers, and then unblushingly license the use of such articles for three months in order to save importers from loss of dollars. What can be said of the ethics of professional men who weigh health against dollars? We have all along held that laymen, with one competent physician as an adviser, will form the best Board of Health. If dangerous the articles condemned should be destroyed, if not dangerous to health the importers should not be annoyed.

It was understood that the managers of the Kapiolani Maternity Home were to meet on Monday last and that the people who take an interest in the welfare of the institution would be informed of the reasons why the present able matron has been forced to resign and her position given to a wahine haole. Several days have passed but so far no explanation has been given and the friends of the Home are still in the dark as to the "wherefore" of the resignation of Mrs. Clark, the present matron. Very many "stories" are told which can only prove injurious to Kapiolani's beneficent establishment, and it is about time that the directresses take steps to contradict the "stories" publicly. The community is unable to judge of the merits of the case if the managers of great trusts adopt star-chamber methods.

We always understood that Attorney-General Cooper was one of the enthusiastic opponents to the sale of opium in any shape or form and that he fought the opium license law tooth and nail. His department is daily asking for severe penalties against the poor Chinese who are found with a pinch of opium in possession and the fines for the violation of the opium laws make an important item in our revenues. The confiscated opium now on hand amounts to over 3000 tins and Mr. Cooper comes boldly forward and says to the Board of Health, "What a pity to throw such valuable stuff in to the sea; let us sell it to our brethren in California or our heathen friends in China. If the "professional" gang buys the dope, ships it apparently out of the country and re-imports it we can catch the "bags" and sell the opium over and over again. How lofty the sentiments and policy of the Dole regime really are. Mr. Cooper might make a bargain with San Francisco to the effect that we ship all the confiscated opium to that city and that California send all her 1-pers to Hawaii. Both steps would be worthy of our owl-like, wise Board of Health.

A SPOOK SEEING.

Chorus Girl in the Lyric Co.

"You can't exactly call me a 'Spiritualist' said Katherine Govilich of the big Boston Lyric Opera company to a Chicago Herald reporter, "because I do not give any particular faith much attention, but when I see things with my own eyes, no one can scoff or talk me out of it. It is very well to pooh-pooh a lot of beliefs that don't meet your own views, yet I would not care if all the theorists in Christendom ridiculed my story, seeing is believing. I have had some very remarkable experiences yet do not pretend to explain them.

I was sitting in the dressing room of a theatre with six other members of the Boston Lyric Opera company one night after an opera performance last July. The dressing room was cheerfully lighted, for there was a terrible rain and wind storm outside and we had decided to stay in the theatre until the storm abated. It was the night of the awful tornado at New Richmond, Wis. We were then playing in Minneapolis about forty miles from the place where the storm struck the hardest.

There was a young woman with us who had but recently married a railroad man whose run was on the Wisconsin road, one of the lines that ran through the fated village of New Richmond. We all noticed her as she sat there silently looking into space, a vacant stare in her beautiful eyes. Each one seemed to know where the woman's thoughts were and there was a sympathetic hush in the conversation. Presently in the midst of it all, and above the mighty roar of wind we all heard a voice call the woman by named: "Hattie! Hattie!"

The voice was weak and guttural as if calling from some distance; it seemed just outside the theatre. The woman sprang to her feet and fled out into the rain. We all followed.

Her young husband was never seen alive after that night, in fact he was killed in the cyclone at about the same hour we heard his cry.

The mother of one of the chorus girls in the Boston Lyrics is far above the average in mental ability and before her marriage was a teacher in a young ladies school near Boston. Of her three children, two were boys. One died when six or seven years of age, the younger boy and girl survived. This girl and the dead boy had been extremely devoted to each other. Yet, after the death of the boy his sister never seemed to miss him and does not to this day, and when alone in her dressing-room of the theatres where the company plays, members of the opera company often hear the chorus girl laughing in childish glee. Several times when questioned she has answered that her little brother is again with her. Once when passing the dressing room the costume woman of the Boston Lyrics was about to throw a big pile of costumes on the floor, when the girl screamed out.

"Don't! Don't! you'll hurt my little brother. Don't you see him playing there on the floor?"

There is no question but what the chorus girl is mentally all night and has a talent for music almost amounting to genius and possesses one of the best dispositions and voices in the entire chorus.

Country Rest.

It seems to me I'd like to go Where bells don't ring, nor whistles blow,
Nor clocks don't strike nor gongs don't sound,
And I'd have stillness all around—Not real still stillness, but just the trees'
Low whisperings, or the hum of bees,
Or brooks faint babbling over stones in strangely, softly tangled tones.

Or may be a cricket or katydid,
Or the songs of birds in the hedges hid,
Or just some sweet sounds as these
To fill a tired heart with ease

If 'twere'n't for sight and sound and smell
I'd like a city pretty well;
But when it comes to getting rest,
I like the country lots the best.

Sometimes it seems to me I must Just quit the city's din and dust,
And get out where the sky is blue—
And, say, how does it seem to you?
—Eugene Field.

A Respite Granted

Judge Perry this morning granted a respite in the case of Ihara, the Japanese murderer who was sentenced to be hanged next week, until the 13th of November. Attorneys Robertson & Wilder appeared for Ihara, and their reason for asking for respite is that the Supreme Court has not yet rendered a final decision in the case.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH

Pigs, Poppy Juice and Salicylic Acid.

President Cooper presided over the meeting of the Board of Health yesterday afternoon.

Lawyers Cathcart and Davidson addressed the Board on behalf of Chinese pig raisers with a view of obtaining a modification of the pig raising prohibitive order.

After discussion on motion the clerk was authorized to procure suitable blanks on which all applications for permits to keep hogs within the 4-mile limit must be made. These will be filed by the clerk in the order of their reception upon the payment of a fee of $2. They will then be handed to the agent of the board for the particular district, who will examine the conditions existing at the place and report to the board his opinion as to whether hogs should be kept in the place or not. The board reserves the right to reject, modify or approve the reports of the agents at regular meetings.

Representatives of the leading grocery firm then had their innings in regard to the recent order of the board forbidding the sale of catsup containing salicylic acid.

Finally it was decided to amend the order to allow the dealers until January 1st to dispose of their present stocks, after which time only "pure" goods are to be sold.

President Cooper informed the Board that there was a large quantity of confiscated opium on hand at the Custom House which should be disposed of. He advocated its sale on condition that it be removed from the country. Agent Reynolds favored the idea in order to assist some of the shortened appropriations. Eventually Collector General Sackable was appointed an agent of the Board of Health to take charge of the "dope" and the manner of its disposal was left for future consideration.

A Surprise Party.

The never-sleeping Deputy-Marshal felt like taking a ride to Waikiki last night and visiting his favorite resorts enjoying the moonlight or the darkness and the little "goings on." At one place he felt sure that people were imbibing fermented grape juice known as champagne and without announcing his presence he took in a pastoral scene of some aristocratic gentlemen and sportive ladies enjoying themselves. What was a puzzle to the inexperienced Deputy-Marshal was that the gentlemen were married men and the ladies had not yet passed through the narrow path which leads to the priest. After enjoying the scenery he made his appearance and his visit was not appreciated by the festive gang of whom some of the fair sex were wise enough to leave abruptly without waiting for a formal introduction. The visit resulted in the arrest of mine host who will have a hearing in the District Court to-morrow morning.

A Slick Fellow.

One of the professional "masters of ceremonies" had an experience a few days ago which made him tired of life. A well dressed fellow called on him and told him that he wanted an alright good old time, immaterial of expenses. He had only a $50 bill in his clothes and he proposed to blow it in to properly celebrated his last night in Honolulu.

The master of ceremonies pocketed the bill and summoned the priestesses of Bacchus and Venus. Let the curtain drop here. Next morning the master-of-ceremonies entered a store where he generally deals dropped the $50 bill on the counter and asked for change. The storekeeper picked up the bill looked sympathetic while his eyes were laughing and said "why, man, it is a confederate bill not worth one bean."

And again we let the curtain drop so we cannot hear the echo of profanity in many languages. The "sick" fellow had a good time and has gone.

CECIL RHODES.

Stories Which Illustrate the Character of the Cape Colossus.

Seen from afar—in foreign countries—Mr. Cecil Rhodes appears as the most important figure in the British Empire. He is much widely known by repute to Americans than the Premier.
Englishmen know him as the giant who redeemed a wilderness and created an empire. Mr.
Rhodes is 46, and though his days have been comparatively few, he has accomplished stupendous things. Gen. Gordon was a great admirer of Mr. Rhodes. Gordon once told him of the offer of a roomful of gold which had been made to him by the Chinese Government, after he had subdued the Tai-Ping rebellion. "What did you do?" asked Mr. Rhodes. "Refused it, of course," was the reply.
"What would you have done?" "I would have taken it," said Mr.
Rhodes, "and as many more room-fuls as they would give me. It is no use for us to have big ideas if we have not got the money to carry them out." And therein lies the keynote of Mr. Rhodes's success. He is a man of large ideas, and, what is more,

HAS THE GENIUS

for getting every penny he needs.
As he himself said, in one of his public speeches, "If you have an idea, make it the paramount object in life. Probably it will succeed, and with its success many things deemed valuable may come." It is men with such beliefs who form the backbone of nations and extend empires. Like many men with half his genius, Mr. Rhodes is not without his little peculiarities. For instance, he is by no means a 'ladies' man.' He thinks that matrimony interferes with business, and will not, it is said, tolerate a married man in his employ. Some time ago one of his secretaries entered the matrimonial state, and Mr. Rhodes at once gave him marching orders.
As a solace, though for this extreme step he sent his departing secretary

A CHEQUE FOR £5,060.

Another of his whims is to bury himself away in a small hut, or summer-house, which he possesses in a secluded corner of his garden, leaving the splendours of his mansion to his guests. This hermit kind of existence he often continues for day on end, more especially when he has some great scheme on hand which requires concentrated thought. At such times he even sleeps and eats in his hut. A further fad of his, which he has largely outgrown, is to be careless in the matter of dress. In the old days at Kimberley he occasionally used to have a dozen suits sent out to him from England. They would be on show for several days at his rooms. Then a friend would probably stroll in and admire a certain suit, and end by receiving it as a present. The like operation would be repeated by other chums until finally Mr. Rhodes would be felt as shabby and as badly in need of new clothes as ever.

JUDGES BY APPEARANCE.

Mr. Rhodes is, notwithstanding his stern exterior, a man of heart.
He also possesses, like so many other born leaders of men, the great gift of being able to sum up a man in a couple of minutes.
A glance at an individual enables him to decide the kind of person he has to deal with. This is illustrated in the case of a friend who wrote asking him to do something for a youngster who was anxious to seek his fortune at the Cape. Thus did Rhodes reply:
"Send me his photograph, and I'll let you know by return whether I can do anything for him or not." The Uncrowned King of the Cape is now and again absent-minded.
A curious instance of his forgetfulness was seen some time back at an entertainment at Cape Town. As he entered the hall he took off his overcoat, and in doing so removed his dress-coat as well—but he was quite oblivious of the fact. The mirth of the people near him and the cheers of the gallery had no effect on him. It was not until a friend pointed out what had happened that he discovered that he was in his shirt-sleeves.

Cock Fighting.

Although Paris has taken so kindly to cock fighting, and a Parisian has called a native bird that fled from its English opponent by the distinguished name of the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, it is hardly to be expected that cock fights will be equal in interest to those in vogue south of the Pyrenees.

In Spain you see the best contests and the best fighting cocks in Europe, for great care is taken in the selection and training of the birds. They are English, almost without exception; and just as some men are known for the excellence of their fighting bulls, others are known to fame by their fine game birds. When two well trained fighting cocks meet, there is never a question of running away; they fight to death. I have even seen the victor fall dead over the dead body of his opponent while attempting to express his dearly-bought triumph in a crow.

Sunday mornings in Spain are devoted to cock fighting, and to the majority of the low dens in which the sport takes place women are not admitted. The removal of the neck-feathers and of nearly all but the primary feathers of the wings gives the birds a strange appearance, made yet more strange by the removal of the comb.

Beyond a doubt, cock fighting is as cruel and revolting a pastime as ever served for excuse to make a few bets, and its legalized introduction into Paris will give Dr.
Max Nordau ample justification for another diatribe.—Sketch.
