HIC JACET ROYALTY.

The ex-Queen began to undo her own plea for restoration as early as January 17th. It will be remembered that she and her cabinet then issued a protest against "the acts of certain persons claiming to have established a Provisional Government," naming the persons afterwards as "S. B. Dole and others," and not including in responsibility for such acts any official of the United States.

Of itself the text of the protest was enough to destroy any claim that Liliuokalani might make upon the United States for restoration; but when to this is added the distinct admission of the Neumann power of attorney that the monarch had yielded her "sovereign authority" to the Provisional Government, and when the reasons given in "justice and equity" to the United States why that power should provide for her did not even hint that American forces had taken a hand in her downfall and thereby put America in equitable debt to her personally, why then, of course, her cause became as pan as the puddle duck that was killed and eaten last year.

If there were apprehensive souls who thought that the Yankee tars might one day come ashore and escort the dubious ex-Majesty of Hawaii back to the Palace which her and her brother's exalted natures had sanctified and which a rabble of lawyers and business men had desecrated with their plebeian presence—if any there were who felt such a thing might be possible, let them rest their souls in peace. When the Royal ensign came down from the towers of Iolani to be spread on the bier of the last independent monarchy left in the Western hemisphere, it fell never to rise again. January 17th was not a date for the passing sickness of the monarchy. It was that of its death by suicide and its burial by popular subscription.

Hic jacet Royalty!

THE PEOPLE NOT IN IT.

The natives of Hawaii who attached themselves to the Royalist cause because they believed the ex-Queen was their friend as well as their leader, now have their eyes opened to her duplicity and selfishness. Doing all they could for her, they have spent time, money and energy in Monarchist politics, and they had a right to feel that the recipient of this loyalty and devotion would return the favor in kind. What must be their chagrin and amazement now to learn that the ex-Queen gave Paul Neumann her power of attorney to sell the Hawaiian nation out, in exchange for money paid to her, and to her family and to her apparent. Knowing that the abdication thus proposed would leave the natives in the power of a foreign government she did not stipulate for a single safeguard to their civil or property rights. For all she cared they might become pariahs in their own land, providing she could have a private bounty to live upon in ease and affluence. It is the mitigation of her offense that the United States would have dealt wisely and justly with the Hawaiians. That fact does not excuse her own indifference to their welfare or her willingness to let every other consideration go while she feathered her own nest.

After this experience with their thrifty and self-centered Alii, it is to be hoped that the devotees of the ex-Queen will turn their backs at once and for good upon the whole institution of Island Royalty and cast about to see whether they cannot, in the changes which are to come, get something for themselves. The time is very opportune. The Annexationists not only stand ready to receive them but to guarantee that, in the mutations of the future, their interests and welfare will be considered. Deserted by their leader and the one in whose cause they toiled with such unselfish patriotism, what better can they now do than to join the American movement and go in for citizenship, equal rights and a return of good times?

Deserted by their leader and the one in whose cause they toiled with such unselfish patriotism, what better can they now do than to join the American movement and go in for citizenship, equal rights and a return of good times?

A CASE OF MISTAKEN IDENTITY.

Somewhat to the STAR's amusement and surprise the allegory printed in yesterday's paper under the melodious caption of "Herr Rothschild von Katzenjammer" has drawn the legal fire of Claus Spreckels. As will be seen in our local columns, Mr. Spreckels feels aggrieved in a criminal way, holding that the record of Katzenjammer's figurative experience was a device intended to be a history of his Hawaiian movements. Naturally, Mr. Spreckels denies that there has been any Katzenjammer conspiracy in his. We are, in fact, disposed to credit the rumor that he denies it with some heat.

The STAR wishes Mr. Spreckels joy in these proceedings—or as much of it as he can derive from a hopeless cause. The romance of "Katzenjammer" had, no doubt a moral lesson; but we submit that it had no historical purpose or significance. It did not purport to be a record of anything which had happened in the Hawaiian Islands, but was a hint as to what might be done by a government which might be assailed, to protect itself from the form an assault might take. Seditious and conspiracy, it was figuratively alleged, could not be set on foot anywhere without bringing a specified punishment. It was the STAR's prayerful hope that some of the ambitious Royalists and Republicans might find, in this innocent and sweet tempered allegory a suggestion as to pitfalls in politics which would warn them in time and serve to keep them out of any that might lie in their future paths of life.

Ehnt! Katzenjammer! Little did he imagine, poor old thing of vagrant shreds and patches, that his elusive personality would be mistaken for the corporeal substance of Claus Spreckels. Who could have thought it!

EVENTS IN JAPAN.

Late News Received by the City of Peking To-day.

Telegraphic news received in Tokio yesterday from near the scene of Friday's eruption on Azuma-yama states that on Saturday morning there were five cracks visible on the mountain, from which flames were issuing and dense smoke obscured the sky for miles around. Since 7 A.M. the water of the river Sugawa had been turbid. Fortunately, the season for the hot springs had not commenced and there were, therefore, no tourists staying in the neighborhood.

A later telegram states that another eruption had taken place on the mountain and that another crack had been formed from which smoke and flames were issuing.

An official telegram reports that the scene of the first eruption was the scene of a similar catastrophe about 50 years ago. An enormous landslide 300 by 200 ken in extent resulted, but accurate details of the damage cannot yet be ascertained on account of the dense and poisonous fumes emitted. One of the bath houses was buried up to its eaves, and a hut attached to the place had been shifted a distance of about 80 ken. Nothing is yet known of the fate of the people residing on the spot.

Unfortunate Gifu has been experiencing continual shocks of earthquake. Although the accounts published in the various native papers coincide in the main features they nearly all differ in some particulars, and we therefore give the Nippon's version in addition to the above, published in our morning's issue. The place where the eruption took place being somewhat remote, 5 or 6 ri from Fukushima with no means of rapid communication between it and the neighboring villages, it is with difficulty that particulars of the eruption are filtering their way tediously to the Capital, and many inaccuracies will probably be discovered later on.

According to the Nippon's special correspondent no damage has been done to any buildings and no lives have been lost, but the injury to crops and land is expected to be very great, and the river Abukuma upon which many farmers depend, has become so impregnated with the mineral emission from the mountain and choked with ashes that it is feared it will seriously damage the crops. At a distance of two ri from the foot of the volcano, two hot-spring bath houses are situated, and these according to the Nippon report were uninjured, though the above describes the scene on Friday as appalling, a vast canopy of black sulphurous clouds obscuring the sky, and loud rumbling with slight vibration continuing almost incessantly. Writing on Saturday evening he says the subterranean noises had ceased, but the crater was still belching forth flames with great activity, showers of ashes falling for miles round, and blocking the streams.

The Fukushima Shimbu describes the ground as honeycombed with the dents of falling stones, which with numberless sparks were thrown up hundreds of feet at the second eruption with a tremendous noise. The eruption has taken place at Azumafuji, one of the three peaks known respectively as the east, west and central peaks. The crater of this peak is some 400 or 500 yards in circumference and the whole region is highly volcanic, being a link in the same volcanic chain as Bandai san, and sulphur springs and miniature geysers abound in its vicinity. Gifu has experienced a series of slight shocks to the number of eighteen or twenty this month.—Japan Gazette.

On the 13th of April the Archduke of Austria arrived at Garoet, the terminal station of the railway in the Preanger Regency, at 5 P.M., and dined and stayed at the hotel, which had been prepared for him. In the evening he went to see a wayang orang. The program and book of the words had been translated into German, and the Archduke appeared to be much interested in the performance. The morning of the 14th was spent in a trip to and the examination of the Papadayan volcano. A number of photographs of the mountain and the surrounding scenery were taken. In the afternoon there was a display of native products, including basketwork, mats, birds, monkeys, etc., and the Archduke made purchases to the extent of 400 guilders. In the evening he was present at a native dance at the Regent's house. On the morning of the 15th there was some wild pig shooting and the Archduke bagged about twenty of these animals. His Highness used explosive bullets, which came as a surprise to the pigs. An attempt was made to dissuade the Archduke from shooting along the coast in the Bantam district because on account of the puasa nothing had been prepared and beaters were unobtainable. He was not to be denied, and at daylight on the 17th he left the beaten track and to the Bntam jungle. Some of the officials at Garoet received souvenirs from the Archduke, and he expressed his satisfaction with the hotel and catering.—Singapore Free Press.

Aim at the Drake

And you are bound to hit some of the ducks. This is precisely the same with

Wampole's Tasteless Preparation

OF Cod Liver Oil.

It aims to cure Consumption, Hits the Mark, too, and it most effectually breaks up Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness and all Throat and Lung troubles that cause this disease.

It is natural logic to conclude that if WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION OF COD LIVER OIL has power to prevent Consumption, it surely is able to cure these lesser emergencies.

This vigor-making, fat producing preparation is Absolutely Tasteless, in so far as Cod Liver Oil is concerned. All you notice is a delightful flavor of Wild Cherry and Anise.

But the purest Norwegian Cod Liver Oil is there all the same. It is a great blood enricher. Best of all it is a natural food that in its stomachic effects, actually assists its own assimilation.

In Pulmonary or Bronchial troubles it is unequalled. No one doubts the value of Cod Liver Oil, but not every one is able to take it.

WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION

removes the nauseous objection and actually makes Cod Liver Oil palatable.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

A Typical Scene in the San Francisco Barracks.

"We will now hear from the newest soldier of the Salvation Army—our convert of last night."

This announcement from a female Captain of the San Francisco Salvationists brought slowly to his feet on the platform the convert. I have seen many men hanged, but never beheld on the scaffold or off it, a figure so deplaved, so sinister. He seemed to be still in his twenties. His shoulders were sloping and narrow, his hands hung straight by his sides. The convict crop of his hair, which came down in a peak over his forehead to within an inch of his eyebrows, helped to give conspicuousness to the great ears that stuck out like flaps from his head. His eyes were mere slits, his nose hooked, swollen and of a leprous white, and his stubby little mustache, growing close up under it, italicized the scowling sneer of the evil and degraded face. The manner of the brute accorded with his appearance, and the hideous story that came from his lips in calm even tones, as emotionless as if he had been a machine wound up for the occasion, was true. You could not doubt that any more than you could help thinking of penitentiaries and hangings when you looked at him. The stamp, the odor of the jail were upon the slinking savage creature—a lump of human offal spewed out by White-chapel.

Captain Drace held the middle of the stage and smiled and smiled, guitar in hand, as she spoke. But nobody else smiled. There were none to share the captain's pride and pleasure at the exhibition of her prize convert.

"My friends," said the gallows-bird, his eyes answering habit and giving furtive glances right and left, "I am glad to be here with you to-night. I have given myself to the Lord. Halle-lujah."

It was said awkwardly and he did not raise his voice at "hallelujah." He had not yet caught the patter of the Salvation Army, to which absolute want must have driven him.

"Yes, my friends, I am saved. I am a stranger in your town, for I only landed here on the first of May, but most of you know about me, for all that. You remember the excitement about the boy murderer in London in '83. I" (here he collectedly and with a religiously subdued pride touched his vest with his finger) "am that boy murderer. The papers was full of me. It was all about three shillings that belonged to me father. You see, he asked me for them, but I had spent them for drink. He started in to strike me, and I struck him. I was taken to jail" (with the low criminal's foxy instinct he dodged confession by words of the actual murder), "where they kept me for a fortnight, and then I was brought before Judge Tavistock for my hearing, and I was remanded again for another fortnight. Then I was brought to trial in the Old Bailey for murder, and the jury brought me in guilty. I was only 15 at the time, you see, so they thought it was best not to hang me, and I was sentenced to prison for fourteen years. I served five of 'em, and was pardoned."

While the parricide coolly reeled off this naked narrative of his monstrous and unnatural crime, Captain Drace stood smiling. But the other girl, whom the fiend could have touched had he stretched forth his red hand, buried her face in her palms. The audience, loafers, drunkards, thieves and outcasts though they were, sat appalled in frozen silence. Captain Drace was manifestly unaware of the effect produced by the fearsome tale, but most of her comrades on the platform hung their heads. The murderer himself did not yet perceive how his confession had been received. He had paused, and the strained silence was suddenly broken with the words, not loud, but fierce:

"You had ought to be hanged!" They came from Mr. Nolan, who was leaning forward on his front bench, glaring with his blackened eye upon the parricide.

The instant change that came over the beast astonished the Army. With fist extended and head on side, his eyes menaced murder as he retorted: "Well, I served me time for it!"

He would have added more to this plenary exoneration for the slaughter of his parent had not Captain Drace, her smiles all gone and her comely face rather pale, interposed with a gentle gesture, and told the roused lamb to go on with his story. So, with an evil glance at the subdued Nolan, (to whom the bed had again come uppermost) and mollified by a sense of triumph, the murderer proceeded:

"Well, I served me five years, as I was saying when that gent put in, and then me mother, who had got me pardoned, came to the prison for me in a coach and pair. She took me home, and on the way she made me promise I'd let the drink alone and she'd give me a pound a week for doin' of it. But I did drink, and one day I goes home with the gin in me, and me mother and me had some words and I knecks her about. With that I goes off and drinks more. Next day I goes home and there's me brother and sister a cryin'."

"What's the matter of you?" says I. "You know," says they, still a-cryin'.

"No, I don't," says I; "I ain't done nothin'."

"Yes, you have," says they. "What have I done?" says I. "Go up to your mother's room an' see," says they.

"So I goes up to me mother's room, an' there I see a sight such as I never see. She was a-layin' on the bed, an' both her eyes was black an' her nose broke. Then I comes down stairs an' I leaves the house, an' I ain't never seen or heard from her since."

Something came over the brute. The staring eyes of the horrified faces before him penetrated even his insensibility. He saw in them, bloated and low as

Are we to be, or not to be, a part of the Great Republic, seems to be the burning question of the day, and one we had rather leave to wiser heads than ours to solve; and while great statesmen are wrestling with this momentous question, we want to have a little "pov-20070" with you on some other subjects, that concern you as well as ourselves.

Has it not occurred to you that you've been wearing that old hat long enough! In these progressive times if you intend to be "in it," you've got to keep pace with fashion. No matter how otherwise well dressed you may be, unless your hat is the correct thing you bear a shabby appearance.

We have already laid in a stock of the Latest Hats of the coming Spring and Summer styles, in hard felts, soft felts and straws, and including a line of the celebrated "Fedora" Hats, at present all the rage in the United States. There is therefore, no necessity for you to hang on any longer to that old Tile that bears such a strong resemblance to the hat "your father wore."

Believing that business will be better in the near future, we have not hesitated to keep our stock full in all lines. Take collars for instance: We have almost everything you could wish for. If you wear a standing collar, just come in and take a look at our "Narenta" or "Ardonia;" or if you prefer a turn down collar, try the "Winnipeg" or "Goswell;" we have have lots of others, and can't fail to suit you. Cuffs in abundance, links or otherwise.

Neckwear in profusion, scarfs, windsors, 4-in-hands, and a special lot of "Boys' Bows;" suspenders in great variety, leather and woven ends, good strong, serviceable goods.

We might go on indefinitely, but space is valuable, and to enumerate everything we carry would fill a pretty fair sized book. If there is anything you want in the men's line, just drop in and see us, and if we can't suit you, we don't believe any one can.

If you should want a pair of nice shoes, let us try a hand at fitting you. Did it ever occur to you

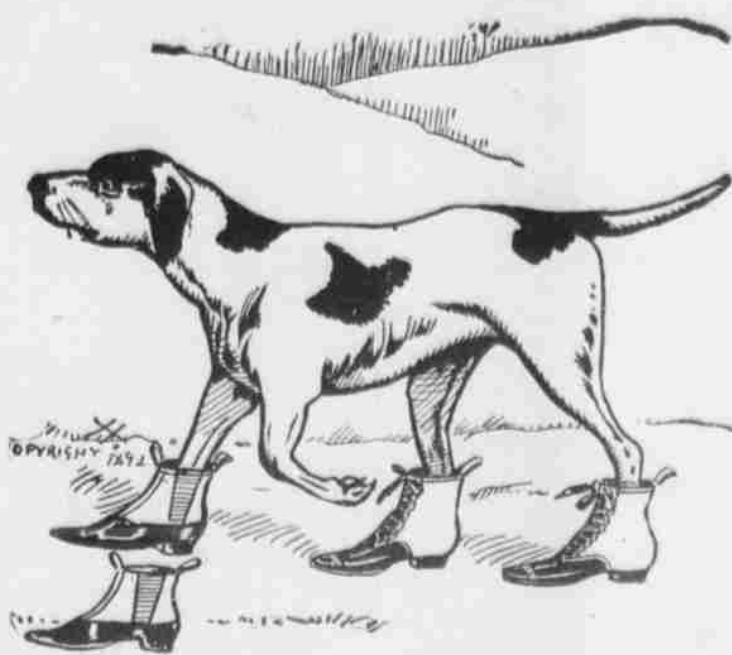

How much a man is like his shoes; For instance, both a soul may lose. Both have been tanned; Both are made tight by Cobblers; Both get left and right; Both need a mate to be complete; And both are made to go on feet.

They both need healing; oft are sold, And both in time will turn to mould. With shoes the last is first; with men The first shall be the last; and when The shoes wear out, they're mended new; When men wear out, they're men dead too.

They both are trod upon, and both Will tread on others nothing loth. Both have their ties, and both incline When polished, in the world to shine; And both peg out. Now would you choose To be a man, or be his shoes.

the men might be, fear and loathing, and humanity's hatred of and impulse to crush a snake. The squalid figure shrunk back just a little and his eyes roved from door to window. The rat was looking for a hole.

Had any one risen and cried, "Lynch him!" the convert would have been translated there and then.

He began again, but faltered. Up to the day before, he stammered out, he had walked the streets banging his head, thinking everybody knew he had been in prison, but now he held his head up, thanks to these good ladies, and he hoped God Almighty would give them long life and prosperity.

Then he sank cowering to his seat, scowled about him apprehensively, dared meet none of the hundred staring eyes, and sought relief from their aversion and hostility by letting his face fall into his handkerchief on the back of a chair. There were no halloo-lujahs. It was too ghastly. The red-faced boy did give the bass drum one thump, but hadn't the heart for another.

Captain Drake smiled again, however, touched her guitar and relaxed the general tension with a softly-sung little hymn, to the effect that all things work together for good to them that love the Lord.

"Yes, my dear friends," she said sweetly, "the greatest sinner may come to Jesus and receive pardon. Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be washed white as wool. Our dear brother who has just spoken told me all this some days ago, and he has repented and is saved. Drink is a terrible thing. I really believe that men do not know what they are doing when they are drunk. Now, while we sing 'There's a Light in the Valley for Me,' let all who desire to join us in a Christian life come forward and kneel at this mourners' bench and we will pray the Lord to give you salvation."

The drums, the fife, the horns, the tambourines and the fiddles struck up, the voices of the Army soared, the fat boy pounded the bass drum and the giant negro sang of the light in the valley with a vehemence that dominated the uproar.

LIVED ON HIS MOCCASINS.

Terrible Experience of a Prospector in an Alaska Winter.

Charles Otterson, who is registered at the Commercial Hotel from Alaska, has passed through an experience which no ordinary man could have outlived. Hunger and exposure to the frightful winter of the Northwest have worn him away in flesh, and in the lines of his face there are still traces of suffering, but he is already thinking of returning to Sitka.

"About ten months ago," said he, "I first took it into my head to go to Alaska. My object was to prospect in the hills for gold. I had followed mining for a good many years in Colorado and Nevada, but some way or other I never had been able to strike it right. When I left there I had about $300 in cash with me, and when I reached Sitka I made numerous inquiries and finally concluded to try my luck in the mountains back of the Fish river, about 100 miles from the coast. This determined upon I bought a few cooking utensils, a prospector's outfit and a quantity of provisions sufficient, as I calculated, to last me about six months.

"Making my way up the river in a small boat which makes occasional trips, I bought a small donkey, and packing my things on it struck into the interior. The country is exceedingly rough, and I found it necessary at last to establish a camp. Here I cached a great part of my provisions, and would make extended trips among the mountains. I expected to spend the winter in a cabin I had built, but in December a lot of wandering natives made a descent one day on my camp while I was absent and stole nearly everything I had. The donkey in the meantime had died and I found myself in the heart of a wild country with about enough provisions left to last me a week.

"I saw that my only chance was to make at once for the settlements, and I struck out in the direction of the river. The second night a howling storm came on. I lost my way, and in spite of my heavy clothing came very nearly freezing to death.

"I wandered about for nearly three days, living on raw bacon, and that in limited quantities, as I was doing all I could to nurse my little store, knowing that when it was gone starvation would stare me in the face.

"At the end of ten days my last particle of food had disappeared, and I was so weak from cold and exposure that I could hardly stand on my feet. I knew that I must keep on, and an extra pair of moccasins I had were eaten. They lasted for three meals, and I tell you they were about as good, it seemed to me, as anything I had ever eaten.

"All this time I could make but a few miles a day, I was so weak and benumbed with the cold, and just about the time I was preparing to die it seemed to me I came in sight of the river. Here I crawled in among the rocks and rested, and then struggled on. A few miles farther on I came upon an Esquimau village, and here I was taken care of by the natives. They were very kind to me, and at last two of them agreed to take me to Sitka.

"When I reached the latter place I was still weak and suffering greatly from the exposure I had undergone, but I regained my strength rapidly, and a little more than a month ago was able to start for San Francisco. I am confident that there is a great deal of gold in the country I was in, and I mean to go there again as soon as I can make arrangements to do so."

ARREST OF THE EDITOR.

CLAUS SPRECKELS AFTER THE "STAR."

He Claims That He Was Referred to as Herr Rothschild Von Katzenjammer.

To-day at noon one of the police captains, with a broad smile on his good-looking face, mounted the stairway of the STAR office and handed the managing editor a written paper.

The bail for this sort of thing is $500," said the Deputy.

"I had hoped," said Mr. Smith, "to be released on my own recognizance."

"Well," said the Deputy, "as no request was made for bail in this case I expect you can be let off."

"Come around at nine o'clock Tuesday morning,"

Then the STAR editor returned to his office and seeing a large number on his desk, intended for the paper, carefully took it up with tongs and dropped it in the alley way.

WHAT ABOUT THE FOURTH? Some Rather Pertinent Suggestions from a Correspondent.

EDITOR STAR:—At the outset please make it known that I am only an ordinary youthful and somewhat inexperienced American tourist; a stranger in the strange land, who is not here for a purpose of getting in a little filthy lucre in the shape of Kalakaua's dollars but rather for the purpose of rest and recreation after two years of exceptionally arduous toil, manual and otherwise, such being the case what few impressions I have formed on the present situation in Hawaii, political, social or otherwise, can not be of much interest to the public generally and hence they will not be ventilated. I even abstain from comment on the peculiar state of affairs now existing in the Anglican Church of Hawaii, the scandal of which, if kept up, must soon permeate every quarter of the globe, and which already attracts the attention of the merest stranger.

My object in addressing this communication to you is one principally of inquiry, and the burden of my subject is, "What are the people of Honolulu going to do about the Fourth of July?"

This may seem a somewhat queer and rather impertinent question from a stranger, but it must be taken into consideration that he is naturally ignorant of Hawaii's customs in relation to previous Fourth of July celebrations, etc.; that he is an American and is not ashamed of it; that so far he has not been compelled to call upon the American Minister for police protection, and lastly, that if any celebration of the Fourth of July is held in Honolulu this year he wants to participate in it.

In Uncle Sam's country, in every little township, village or hamlet, in every city, large or small—even in Chicago, which now counts itself as second to none in the universe, and has almost forgotten there was once a place called New York—the sound of preparation for a proper celebration of the anniversary of the independence of the greatest nation on earth is heard; in every village, school children are practicing patriotic odes under patriotic teachers, and saving up their nickels and dimes for the purpose of investing in fireworks and otherwise properly celebrating, according to their youthful understanding, their national birthday.

Among older people—citizens of the great republic—who all have a voice in its affairs, national and otherwise, the same patriotic spirit, dominant to a certain extent during the balance of the year, unless called forth by some epic sode like that with Chili, comes to the surface, and the old vied with the young in doing honor to the natal day of the nation which fosters and protects them, and under the folds of whose stars and stripes they were ushered into existence.

That this is eminently fit and proper there can be no doubt, and no one in this city can dispute it. Such being the case, what do the Americans in Honolulu propose to do about it?

In all sincerity, Mr. Editor, I ask if it is not true that nine-tenths of the wealth and nearly all of the brains, intelligence and mechanical skill of this nation has not appealed to the United States for annexation, or, failing that, for protection? Is it not true that there exists in Honolulu an Annexation Club with a membership of 6000 and over? Is it not true that the American flag floats in almost every direction at the least spice-laden breath wafted over this "Paradise of the Pacific"; that it hangs alike from stores, offices and private residences, and that that fact alone must be taken as an indication of the sympathies and wishes of its owners?

Is it not true that almost every other man one meets wears a button displaying the American colors? Is it not also a fact, and has it not already been made patent to the whole world, that as a nation Hawaii is thoroughly American and will never be otherwise? Has not royalty in these Islands been effectually stamped out of

BANISHED BY THE EMPEROR.

Lieutenant Fedor Von Rauch an Exile by Imperial Mandate.

NEW YORK, May 21.—A recent episode in the Imperial family of Germany gave rise to apprehensions for the mental soundness of the ruler.

With many admirable qualities, the Emperor William is undoubtedly a creature of intense and erratic impulses, and of violent passions. Upon occasions his friends have been filled with grave forebodings concerning his ability to control his own violent temper.

The Emperor is naturally of a jealous and imperious disposition. It was the influence of these traits that led to the banishment from Berlin of Baron Fedor von Rauch, a handsome Lieutenant and Adjutant of the Second Battalion of the Eleventh Brunswick regiment of Uhlans, the crack dragon corps of the Imperial Guard.

The entire scandal has been successfully suppressed in Germany. Upon his banishment Von Rauch came to this city. The Emperor, influenced by trivial incidents, accused the Baron of harboring too deep an admiration for the Empress, whose character is as pure and noble as any lady's of the European courts. Owing not less to his personal qualities than to the prestige of his rank and lineage, Baron Von Rauch had been favored with the friendship of the present ruler of Germany long before the latter became Emperor. The Baron was received in the Imperial family on the footing of a trusted friend and favorite companion.

In his profession he is said to have evinced such decided military talent that he was promoted about a year ago to the adjutancy of his regiment, not yet having completed his twenty-sixth year. The fact that no man of his age ever before held the adjutancy of a regiment in the army may indicate the value of such distinguished recognition of his ability. The Baron's future seemed on all sides a brilliant one.

One day in September, 1891, Baron Fedor von Rauch said good-bye to his mess comrades and sailed for New York, an exile from Court, from family, from society and the fatherland. His departure naturally created much surprise. Gradually, however, it became whispered that Von Rauch had been banished after a scene that came near resulting in a tragedy. This was prevented, it is now understood, by the timely intervention of Count Walderssee and the elder Baron Von Rauch. It is told in Berlin Court circles that Baron Fedor had been making an afternoon call at the Palace, as usual, bringing with him the notes of a new musical composition of his own. While Von Rauch was chatting about music with the family the Emperor left them to attend a meeting of the Council in another part of the Palace. Von Rauch and several other persons remained in the Empress's apartment.

When the Emperor returned, about an hour afterward, it is said that he discovered the Empress and the young Lieutenant alone, conversing in low tones and apparently so absorbed that they did not notice the Emperor's approach till startled by the first outbreak of his wrath. The scream of the Empress brought Count Walderssee and the young man's father hastily from an adjoining apartment just in time to save their young kinsman from personal violence, perhaps death, at the hands of his infuriated sovereign. So enraged was William that those old friends had the greatest difficulty in quieting him.

At first he swore that the young Baron should not leave the palace alive. He even demanded that swords should be brought and a duel fought then and there. When at last persuaded that such action would be disastrous not only to himself and his family but to the nation, he consented to allow young Rauch to depart.

"Go," the Emperor is alleged to have exclaimed as his former friend retired, "go from this house and from Germany forever. Your life is protected by the curse of a crown which denies me the poor rights enjoyed by every other husband in Germany, even to the lowest."

The young Baron came to New York last September accompanied by Director Ballin of the Hamburg-American Packet Company. He was at once placed at a desk in the New York office of the company, under Mr. Carl Schurz, the American manager. There he was known simply as Mr. Von Rauch, and nominally served as a clerk. With the exception of a short trip to Boston, he remained in New York.

During the entire time of his stay in this country it is suspected that he was more or less under the surveillance of agents or representatives of the German Empire. The Baron returned to Germany as suddenly as he came, on April 2d last, sailing on the Normannia. During the recent illness of the elder Baron Von Rauch, preceding his recent death, which was undoubtedly hastened by the misfortune which his son's indiscretion brought upon himself and upon the Imperial family, Countess Walderssee is said to have used all her influence to secure the Emperor's permission for the return of the son to his dying father's bedside. Even after the old Baron's death the Emperor could be induced only to allow Baron Fedor to return to his native land for a period long enough to assume possession of his inheritance, and insisted that his stay in Germany should not exceed a fortnight. This condition, in fact, was exactly complied with. The Baron retained his apartments while away, taking with him only sufficient baggage for the journey, and returned to New York within six weeks of the day of his departure.

They Have Come!

Those Razor Strops you have been waiting for several weeks, are here. Anti-Rattlers.—We have a new kind which you can put on to the shafts of your buggy, without breaking four fingers and a thumb. They prevent two things—rattling and swearing.

Try the new Keystone Egg Beater, if you want a beater that will do quick, clean work.

Hose,—1/2-in. to 2-in., 3 and 4-ply plain or wired, just received; cheap and good quality; also carbolized. We have a large stock of "Hubbuck's," "Pioneer," and cheaper brands of White Leads and Zinc. Also, Oil, Turpentine, and all painters' supplies, and you will do well to see our Stock and get our Prices before you paint your house.

American Flags,—6 to 18 feet long, came by the last steamer to us. They are a fine lot, sewed bunting.

Fire Arms and Ammunition.—A new lot of Sporting and Target Rifles, Colt's new Navy, Smith and Wesson, and cheaper Revolvers, came last week and can now be seen. We carry the most complete assortment of Cartridges in town, from 22 to 50 cal., and always have plenty of them.

Leather.—We have received within the past sixty days, by steamer and sail, 66 Rolls of Leather, containing 9088 lbs., and 5347 ft; also, 3 bales containing 142 doz. sheep skins, so it looks as if we meant to keep our Stock of Leather up, although by getting it in large lots, we are able to keep the prices down.

Salt.—We are headquarters for Hawaiian Salt, as we make it. That the quality is good, and Price Low, is easily shown by the large quantity we sell every week.

Blight Compound.—Five gallons will make 65 gallons of wash. You spray your Lime and Orange Trees with this wash, and the Blight will do the rest, die and drop off the trees. We have the compound at our store, or can give you an order on the Gov't. Nursery for it, but don't forget to bring a 5-gallon can to put it in. We sell spraying outfits.
