Much has been accomplished in rehabilitation by the regularity of field trips to the atolls under this command. Much remains to be done but the program will gather impetus as the various phases of native economy are coordinated. For example, re-establishment of copra production, requiring drying sheds or ovens as well as warehouses, will be stimulated by the availability of a more varied stock of trade goods. The effect on morale of this and the idea of the permanency of the Americans, which will be enhanced by the regularity of scheduled transportation, will contribute much to a rapid return to normalcy.
