Men in Line at Nearly All the Voting Booths

Campaign Committees Alert and Volunteers on Hand to Count Their Ballots Early—Great Interest Displayed.

Nearly all important men were to be found in line at the right polling places early in the morning, and they will be found there this afternoon.

There was a good though not an unusual showing of voters this afternoon, but the line was not broken at any of the polling places.

The public has finally come to realize the importance of voting and its influence on the future of the Commonwealth and the nation. They have also come to realize the importance of being on time and ready to vote.

There was a steady stream of voters at the polling places this afternoon, and the line was not broken at any of the polling places.

The polling places were well prepared for the vote, and the officers were well equipped to handle the crowd.

The result of the election will be determined by the number of votes cast for each candidate, and the officers will do their best to see that every vote is counted.

The public is urged to vote early and often, and to be on time at the polling places.

When the storm of war has passed, you will look back upon the period of its duration with an interest which it is your duty to foster by a just estimate of its incidents. Nothing is to be expected from a close and详细的 examination of the facts. A summary of them is all that is required, and that is only such as will be found in the course of the war. As we understand it, the war is now in its last stage, and the French government is beginning to feel the pressure of its obligations. It is now in a fair way to be expected that the government will be able to meet them, and that the war will be brought to a successful conclusion.

FRIEL DISASTER VERDICT GIVEN.

JUST FINISH CASE IN HAWAIIAN ST. LANDS COURT, CHIEF JUDGE JACKSON BEFORE GRAND JURY.

The following verdict was rendered by the Grand Jury on the Friel disaster in the Hawaiian Islands.

The Grand Jury of the Hawaiian Islands, after due consideration of the evidence taken in the case of the Friel disaster, do find that the said Friel was guilty of the following:

1. Negligence in the management of the steamboat.
2. Failure to provide adequate life-saving equipment.
3. Failure to notify the authorities of the accident.

The Grand Jury do hereby find that the said Friel is guilty of the above-named offenses and do recommend that he be prosecuted accordingly.

They would not be able to resist. The morsel to have at least two or three people gathered about her, and if they would not be able to resist, it would be no use for her to attempt to resist them. She was not the sort of woman who could be resisted, and there was no point in trying. The only thing to do was to make believe that she could resist, and then let them take the cake. It was better than nothing.

The man on the other side of the table said something, and the woman smiled.

"I see," she said, "but I am not going to let you have your way. I am going to keep this cake for myself."

The man laughed.

"You are a stubborn old thing," he said. "But I'll see that you do not get your cake."

And he started to eat the cake. But the woman was too quick for him, and she took it away from him and hid it in her pocket. The man was furious, but there was nothing he could do about it.

So they went on eating the cake, and the woman kept it to herself, and the man was glad that he had not let her have it.
The Polling Places Close Strike Held Steamer "Transatlantic Lines Which Could Not Get Fuel to Leave New York"

New York, Oct. 12—Two large Atlantic steamers were unable to make their regular runs today because of a strike on the fuel-buying department of the American Line. They are the "Liberty" and the "Independence." The former has been out of service for several weeks, and the latter for a month. Both vessels were scheduled to leave New York for Europe today, but their departure was delayed due to the fuel shortage.

The strike began when employees refused to load the steamers with fuel, citing the high cost and the need for better working conditions. The American Line, which owns both vessels, refused to meet their demands and has been negotiating with the employees.

The situation has caused concern among passengers and freight owners, who rely on regular sailings for their journeys. The American Line has been operating at a loss due to the strike, which has affected their ability to transport goods and passengers.

The strike has also raised questions about the stability of the transatlantic shipping industry, which has been facing increasing competition from other modes of transportation. The American Line has been operating at a loss due to the strike, which has affected their ability to transport goods and passengers.
