ALEXANDER YOUNG BUILDING FOR A FEDERAL BUILDING

It is rumored that Alexander Young, who lately left for the West Coast in a state of mental and physical strain, has made up his mind to dissolve his partnership with the late Chinese Consul. If this is the case, it will be a matter of some interest.

James L. F. Peterson objects to being called "Chinese Consul." He says the late Consul was not a member of the profession, and that he did not possess the necessary qualifications to fill the post. His objection is considered valid.

Yang’s signatures are being held up by the Chinese Consul’s claim, which is now in a state of uncertainty.

Our RURAL FREE DELIVERY

Be Strong

The rising increase in the revenues of the Postoffice Department shows clearly the prosperity of our people and the increasing activity of the business of the country.

The receipts of the Postoffice Department for the fiscal year ending June 30th last amounted to $141,803,282, an increase of $301,830,897 over the preceding year, the largest increase known in the history of the postal service. The magnitude of this increase will be largely due to the fact that the entire postal system for the year 1895 amounted to $131,951,469.

Rural free-delivery service is no longer in the experimental stage; it has become a fixed policy. The results following its induction have fully justified the confidence placed by the large appropriations made for its establishment and extension. The average rate of increase in the postal revenues in the rural districts of the country is about 2 per cent. We are now able, by actual results, to show that where rural free-delivery service has been established to such an extent as to enable us to make comparisons the rate increase has been increased by at least 10 per cent.

On November 1, 1899, 16,691 rural free-delivery routes had been established, embracing about one-third of the territory of the United States available for rural free-delivery service. There are now existing under the authority of the department letters and applications for the establishment of 10,640 additional rural routes. This shows conclusively what the establishment of the service has been not merely of additional value, but that the practical benefits to be derived from it are sufficiently great to warrant its further extension.

This is to be hoped that the Congress will make liberal appropriations for the continuation of the service already established and for its further extension.

CIVILIZATION AND WARFARE

From the President's Message.

A convention with Great Britain has been concluded, which will be at once line before the Senate for ratification, providing for reciprocal trade arrangements between the United States and Great Britain on substantially the basis of the convention formerly negotiated by the Secretary of State, Mr. Blaine. I believe reciprocal trade relations will be greatly to the advantage of both countries. As civilization grows warfare becomes less and less the normal condition of foreign relations. In the course of a century there has been a marked diminution of wars between civilized powers; wars with uncivilized powers are largely matters of international police, essential for the welfare of the world. Wherever possible arbitration or some other means of settling disputes in ways of war or in disputes between civilized nations, as yet, although the world has not progressed sufficiently as a whole to make it possible, or even desirable, to avoid involvement in every case.
The progress of the international tribunal which sits at The Hague is an example of good reason from which great consequences may be expected. Let it be the better, the safer, less dangerous, more permanent, to involve such a permanent tribunal than to create special arbitrators for a given occasion.

It is a matter of sincere congratulation to our country that the United States and Mexico have agreed to use the good office of The Hague court. This was done last week with mutual satisfaction; the case of a claim by us and our sister republic is it is especially to be hoped that this first case will be followed as a precedent for others, in which not only the United States but foreign nations may take advantage of the machinery already established at The Hague.

SOME OCEAN GOING TRAMPS

ITALIAN WATER WHOSE WIFE WENT TO BAHAMA, AND WANTED TO WORKS THE STEAMSHIP LINE.

The whole community of New York was excited last week when a tramp trying to emigrate to Italy was caught by the United States immigration officers, for having left the United States without tickets. The tramp, a man of about 50, was working on the steamship "City of New York," which sailed from New York with the Italian steamship
"St. Anthony," to leave for Italy.

The tramp, who is well known to the public, is a man of the highest character, and was one of the most popular "Jump Starts" in the United States. The United States immigration officers, who had been watching the man for some time, caught him as he was trying to elude them, and he was taken to the United States immigration office and questioned.

service of the United States immigration officers, and that he will be glad to have the tramp sent to Italy immediately.
