PARKER BEATS BRYAN BY SIXTY-SIX

HAWAII SPLIT FOUR FOR PARKER AND TWO FOR BRYAN

Conkling Off Like A Shot From A Gun

Like a shot from a gun, Territorial Treasurer Conkling is off for New York. He arrived in the Mauna Kea at seven o'clock this morning. Five hours later, he was off Diamond Head on board the Tenyo Maru bound for San Francisco, where he will hold a conference with Governor Frear and from thence will proceed to New York to make final preparations toward floating the new $1,500,000 bond issue.

Yesterday morning, the treasurer was at Hilo attending the sessions of the tax appeal court when he received the wireless message from Acting Governor Mott-Smith bidding him to return to Honolulu as soon as possible.

No sooner did the treasurer arrive here early this morning than he hurried immediately out to the Waialae residence of the acting governor where the two officials held a conference regarding Governor Frear's cable asking that Conkling come to San Francisco immediately.

Not Enough Homesteads To Go Round

Drawings for homesteads in the sixth land division will be held tomorrow morning at the office of Land Commissioner Tucker. A list of applicants and the number assigned to each has been posted and everything is in readiness for a day of excitement.

For the past two months—ever since the announcements of the opening of the section was first made by the land commissioner—applications for holdings have come in thick and fast, in such numbers in fact that it has kept the land commissioner and his assistants busy filing them away.

Last Tuesday, the applications were opened and the drawing for assignments took place, showing that there are 150 applications for 99 lots on Oahu, the sixth land division. These lands comprise seventeen lots in the Pahaia district, Waianae; fifty-nine in Luahualae, Waianae; six in the Kuloouou subdivision, Honolulu, and seventeen lots in the Alea tract at Ewa.

It is expected that the greatest rush will be for the Alea tract, which is conceded to be one of the richest pieces of land on Oahu.

Russia May Block Plans Of Hawaii

That the Russian government is inclined to object to the departure of the subjects of the Czar from Manchuria and Siberia for the Hawaiian Islands under the auspices of the Territorial government, is indicated by a letter received this morning by Secretary Kearns from Dr. Victor Clark, who is in Manchuria with a view to arranging for the immigration of Russians to Hawaii.

Dr. Clark wrote from Peking, stating that, after conferences with the American consuls at Dairen and other Russian cities, he had been advised to submit his plans to the American minister at Peking and permit that official to assist in making arrangements.

The Russian government it seems has sent a number of colonists into

BRYAN DRAWS THE SAME LINES AS ROOSEVELT

(Associated Press Cable to the Star.)
 BALTIMORE, June 25.—Judge Alton B. Parker, of New York, was chosen for temporary chairman of the Democratic National Convention, by a vote of 578 to 512, for Bryan. Four votes were cast for Gorman.

Fight a Titter-One.
 The Parker-Bryan fight developed increasing intensity as the convention gathered, and the prospect of Bryan's fight against Parker on the floor of the convention became more certain. A heavy rain was falling as the delegates and the great crowd of visitors gathered in the convention hall. Cardinal Gibbons, in the brilliant scarlet robes of his office, delivered an invocation.

Progressives vs. Conservatives.
 Norman E. Mack called the convention to order at 12:26 p. m. In an eloquent speech Bryan nominated J. W. Kern of Indiana, last Democratic candidate for vice president, for temporary chairman of the convention. Bryan declared in the course of his remarks that the issue was drawn between the conservatives and the progressives.

Kern nominated Bryan, and the latter said he would accept the office if chosen.

Hon. Theodore Bell of California nominated Parker. Representative Fitzgerald of New York followed with an address in support of Parker. There was great disorder during his speech.

Hawaii Vote Divided.
 The Hawaii delegation voted four for Parker and two for Bryan.

Police Are Needed.
 Fitzgerald spoke amid derisive yells from the delegates and wild disorder in the galleries. A squadron of police was finally brought in and marched down the aisle to quell the disturbance, in order that there might be a roll call.

The roll call began at 12:40. Arkansas, Illinois, New York, Georgia, Mississippi, Rhode Island and Vermont were sold for Parker. Other states were divided.

After being escorted to the platform and presented by Norman E. Mack, Chairman Parker began his keynote speech. Crowds began to leave the galleries as he opened and great disorder prevailed, as he sought to proceed with his address.

It was impossible for him to go ahead, and the convention adjourned until eight o'clock this evening, leaving the "keynote speech" of the temporary chairman unfinished.

Parker Attacks Roosevelt.
 In the course of that part of his speech which was delivered Parker described the Chicago convention as a disgraceful brawl, and said that the danger of Roosevelt domination threatened the country. He urged a constitutional provision against a third term in the presidency.

He was pleading for harmony when the disorder necessitated an adjournment.

Big Building Plans For Merchant Street Are Under Consideration

As a result of the offering of the Spreckels property on Merchant street for sale, plans are being discussed for several new building enterprises, which if carried out will make Merchant street a lively business center. The Spreckels property extends from the Stangenwald building nearly to Alakea street, and it is all being negotiated for, by various parties, through W. Shingle, of the Henry Waterhouse Trust company.

Crate & Cooke are considering the erection of an office building at the corner of Merchant and Bishop streets, where the Schuman garage is now. The Guardian Trust company, it is stated, may take the building at present occupied by The Star, as office quarters, while Schuman may take the corner of Bishop and Merchant opposite to the proposed Castle & Cooke building, for his garage and offices.

A large part of the rest of the space between the building and the corner now occupied by H. E. Hendrick may be taken by another substantial building for which negotiations are under way.

Still another big building that may go up on the property being marketed is one for headquarters of various commercial organizations of Honolulu. The Chamber of Commerce, Merchants' Association, Commercial club and possibly some other organizations may combine in the erection of a building for their general headquarters, and it may be on one of the Alakea and Bishop street corners, or in between some of the other buildings already mentioned.

The carrying out of these plans will make Merchant street, between Fort and Alakea, a very important business center.

Dr. Sun To Visit Honolulu

Dr. Sun Yat Sen, first president of the Chinese republic and the most popular man in China, will visit Honolulu within the next few weeks according to a cablegram received by local representatives of the Republic in this city.

Dr. Sun is now at the old home of his family near Hongkong but is planning a visit to the United States and England in the interest of securing recognition of the republic and arranging other affairs of state which have been entrusted to him.

The coming of Dr. Sun to Honolulu will doubtless be made the occasion of the greatest celebration ever arranged by the Chinese of the islands. In addition to being a native son of Honolulu, Dr. Sun has the entire confidence and regard of the Chinese both here and on the mainland. President Yuan Shih-kai, it is said, has neither, although, bending to the wishes of Dr. Sun, in the interest of peace for the nation, the opposition to him has not been made apparent.

MAHUKA SITE VERDICT $72,179

Total award	$71,679.82
Austin Estate, fee	45,114.92
Cummins Estate, fee	8,550.00
Bank of Hawaii, leasehold	8,799.69
C. M. Cooke, Ltd., leasehold	4,453.06
Hawaiian Trust Co., Ltd., leasehold	3,752.24
Hawaiian Trust Co., special damages for moving and so forth	500.00
Total	72,179.82

Seventy-one thousand six hundred seventy-nine dollars and eighty-two cents is the total value placed by the Mahuka site jury upon the property which the government brought suit to condemn to be used as a part of the site for the proposed federal building. To the figure mentioned the jury added five hundred dollars for the Hawaiian Trust Company as a special award for the damages it may sustain through having to remove its fixtures and so forth.

The verdict was reached at 8:30 o'clock last night, but the court having adjourned and the judge being at home, the verdict was placed in a sealed envelope, to be opened only when court convened again this morning. The figures were arrived at in remarkably short time, considering the length of time it took to try the case and the great volume of testimony, most of it of a technical nature, introduced by both the government and the various respondents.

When the verdict was opened and read this morning, all of the attorneys representing the various respondents.

PROTECTION DEMANDED FOR JAPANESE PICTURE BRIDES

That Japanese picture brides are subjected to various indignities from seamen and passengers while en route from Japan to the Hawaiian Islands, is the charge made by various Japanese papers here and resulted this morning in Secretary Matsuzawa of the Japanese Y. M. C. A. appealing to Secretary Larimer of the Y. M. C. A. to ask if he could get into correspondence with Y. M. C. A. officials at ports of entry on the mainland and learn if there was not some way of ending the abuses to which he alleges the Japanese women are subjected.

It appears from the statement of Secretary Matsuzawa that the local Japanese are much stirred up over the situation as it is alleged to exist, and that the local papers of the Japanese are expressing indignation over the treatment which they allege is accorded their countrywomen.

According to Matsuzawa picture brides arriving here have told stories of abuse and have claimed that they have been molested by persons with whom they came in contact on shipboard. They charge that they are forced to submit to indignities and their appeals for protection are scorned.

Secretary Larimer will correspond with association officers in San Francisco and New York to ascertain whether there has been a government investigation of the charges made and whether measures have been devised for the protection of women traveling alone in the steerage.

ARMY PAY TOO SLOW FOR JAP

"This failure of the paymaster to appear this month has enabled me to get rid of a Japanese servant I didn't want," said Captain Johnson, Twenty-fifth Infantry, who is detailed with the national guard, this morning.

"The Japanese heard the news by underground wires just about two minutes after it reached the islands. He wasn't long in looking me up either."

"Excuse," he said, "Army no pay?"

"No pay," I said, "maybe not for six months. You stay work six months then I pay you all."

"Excuse," he said bowing and smiling and blowing; "I think I go look get another job. Excuse" and he was gone in five minutes.

TEMPORARY PROVISION FOR ARMY SUBSISTENCE MADE FROM WASHINGTON

While officers and men of the army in Hawaii may not jingle much money in their pockets for the next few months, due to the failure of Congress to provide funds for the army, they will be able to eat until the paymaster gets on the job again.

Captain Case, commissary officer of the department, has received a cable from the Commissary General at Washington authorizing him to make contracts for subsistence with the proviso that payment will be made when funds are appropriated. Both officers and enlisted men will be permitted to buy subsistence supplies on credit from the commissary stores until paid.

The message to Captain Case reads as follows:

"Case, Commissary, Honolulu?"

"In the absence of an appropriation for subsistence of the army on and after July 1, the authority to procure the same will depend on Sec. 3732 revised statutes as amended under which subsistence for the army not to exceed the necessities of the fiscal year may be procured by contract or purchase, such contracts or purchases to include the provision that payment will be made when funds are appropriated for the purpose. The term subsistence will be construed as including such supplies as are authorized to be procured for the army by the general legislation on the subject or the regulations prescribed pursuant thereto, without reference to the transitory provisions appearing in the annual appropriation acts."

"Commutation of rations on and after July 1 will not be allowed but subsistence will be furnished in kind."

"Sales of subsistence supplies may be made to officers and enlisted men on credit as authorized by law. Where cash is received therefor the same will not be expended but will be deposited to the credit of the proper appropriation when made."

"The continued employment of the civilian employees absolutely necessary to contract for, receive, distribute, care for and account for such subsistence stores as are now on hand, and as may be purchased under authority of Sec. 3732 of the revised statutes as amended, is authorized and may be contracted for, payment to be made when funds are appropriated by Congress."

"SHARPE."

URGE ABANDONMENT OF FURTHER MAHUKA SITE SUITS

The second Mahuka site verdict which was given this morning, makes it all the more certain, say real estate men, that there can be no carrying out of the plan for condemnation of the proposed federal building site under the appropriations made. The property owners, it is said, are fairly satisfied with the verdict, and there will probably be no appeals.

The verdict, however, makes the total already awarded to property

20,000 Navy Yard Men May Lose Their Job

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Beekman Winthrop, acting Secretary of the Navy, has announced that 20,000 employees of the navy yards will be knocked off July first unless Congress in the meantime makes provision for their wages.

JOHNSON VS. LANGFORD.
 SYDNEY, June 25.—Hugh McIntosh, the Australian promoter, has offered Johnson $30,000 to meet Langford.

Later—Johnson has not yet decided whether to accept the offer.

RIOT OF FILIBUSTER SYMPATHIZERS.

LOS ANGELES, June 25.—A riot occurred in and about the Federal building when Makons and others were sentenced to eleven months' imprisonment for violation of Mexican neutrality. A hundred sympathizers with the prisoners attacked the police. Several women were injured.

MOVEMENT TO SAVE REMNANT OF TREES IN PUNCHBOWL PARK

With a view of saving, if possible, the few trees in Punchbowl Park which have not been cut down by Japanese at the instigation of the Kapiolani Estate, J. M. McChesney, chairman of the park commission of the civic federation, and Professor Bryan of the College of Hawaii called on General M. M. Macomb this morning for information concerning the cutting of the trees.

They were informed by the officers at headquarters of the status of affairs, namely, that the Kapiolani Estate under its lease, which expires in August had the right to cut down the trees.

The Japanese who bought the timber for $500, it seems, cut down 46 trees on the military reservation. General Macomb required them to give compensation for these trees by permitting an equal number of the same girth to stand on the land from where they had acquired the right to take timber.

The trees have all been removed from the park in the bowl of the crater, but it is to save the few remaining on the slopes that the civic federation has bestirred itself to action. It is probable that an effort will be made to buy the trees still standing from the contractor who secured the privilege of cutting them, so that the park given to the city by the government may not be a mere waste of land covered with stumps.

PREVENTION BETTER THAN CURE

Harbormaster Foster is Making Good Along Waterfront--Tenyo Maru Away Today--Many Passengers Coming And Going--Harbor Notes

Some men are born great, others have greatness thrust upon them and others have nothing but worries. Harbormaster Foster is one of the last named. All day long he has to be right there with the goods, soothing down one man's ruffled feelings and making another come across with the necessary money for demurrage.

Foster in spite of everything is becoming very popular on the waterfront and is doing a great deal toward making the port a popular one too. Visiting captains find they can always obtain the correct information at the harbormaster's office and furthermore when they, through ignorance of port regulations, break some technical rule they are given every chance to make good.

Foster has one motto tacked up on his walls—"Prevention is better than cure." He takes the stand that it is far better to warn a man than to go round and make a noise after something has been done that is contrary to Hoyle.

Orders of the harbor commission are carried out thoroughly under his jurisdiction and he does not make any difference no matter who the man is, Corporations or Japanese all look alike to him. The regulations are there and they must be obeyed or he wants to know the reason why. All the sob argument in the world will not budge him an inch. "My duty is to report the matter to the commissioners and it is up to them to say what is to be done." He is going the right way to make the harbor look well in the eyes of outsiders and incidentally is doing good quiet promotion work.

TENYO MARU AWAY.

To the strains of the latest music from the Hawaiian band the T. K. K. liner Tenyo Maru pulled out for San Francisco at eleven o'clock this morning with a large passenger list of "layovers" from this port.

In spite of the fact that the Tenyo Maru has been lying at the Hackfeld wharf since yesterday afternoon the harbormaster's office was besieged by people all wanting to know where she was lying.

One passenger arrived breathless at the Alakea wharf this morning just ten minutes before the boat pulled out. Five minutes before she went a messenger boy arrived on his bicycle. He broke all records to the Tenyo.

Purser Phillips of the Mauna Kea reports the following sugar waiting shipment on Hawaii: Olan, 13,500; Waiake, 9000; Hawaii Mill, 3700; Hilo Sugar Co., 5400; Onomea, 13,650; Pepeekeo, 4300; Honoumou, 13,500; Hakalau, 10,000; Laupahoehoe, 17,500; Kaula, 9900; Kukulu, 2000; Hamakua Mill, 22,300; Paauhau, 5400; Honokaa, 13,400; Kukuhaele, 7000; Panalua, 5425; Honuaoua, 5059.

FOR OIL TANK.

The ship Falls of Clyde which arrived here last week with 18,000 barrels of fuel oil is not to discharge into the tanks but will be held as a temporary oil tank herself.

She will supply steamers coming into the port and will lie at the Ewa end of the harbor. It is expected that she will remain here until some time in November. All of the crew with the exception of the officers and cook have been paid off.

CREW LEAVE BARK ALLEN.

Because the captain appointed one of the crew to act as second mate, vice Olson arrested on a charge of gross cheat, a number of the sailors on board the bark S. C. Allen threw their baggage over on to the dock just as the vessel was pulling out and followed it themselves.

The bark was towed to the anchorage and then the captain came on shore and with difficulty secured enough men to fill the vacancies.

The Honolulu is at the Railroad wharf. She leaves tomorrow morning for San Francisco.

The Mexican is at the Railroad wharf discharging cargo.

The R. P. Rithet is at the Hackfeld wharf.

The Falls of Clyde is lying at the Hackfeld wharf for the present.

Local Boxing News And Something Of Hope Buster Flynn

Jack Cordell had a busy session yesterday at Fort de Russy. Denny Leary and Kid Baker took him along for the several speedy rounds and at more than one period Cordell and the soldier engaged in a rally in which real fighting figured.

Cordell is now in very shape and with the work yet for him to do will strip a very fit man on Saturday next. Kid Baker who is billed to box six rounds with Moriarty at 130 pounds is now down to weight and good and strong at that.

This afternoon a number of visitors are going out to Cordell's camp and Cordell will again do some strenuous work.

Yamogata, the Japanese boxer, will work at Fort de Russy this afternoon, his sparring partner being Young Layman, a shifty bantam who has figured in several good fights on the mainland.

At McCarthyville. Word came in from Leluhua this morning that Johnny McCarthy boxed four good rounds yesterday, four each with Bauersock and Moriarty. Every member of the trio is in fine shape and will be there with bel's on Saturday.

The advance sale of seats is now proceeding merrily at the store of M. A. Gunst & Co.

George Ingle who was operated on for hernia on Saturday is progressing as well as can be expected and is using every endeavor to get his doctor to allow him to witness the Cordell-McCarthy contest. It is very rough on George to be confined to bed at such an interesting time but he has the satisfaction of knowing that his injury has been thoroughly treated and that it will never bother him again. That is certainly worth spending a couple of weeks in the hospital for, even if a good scrap has to be missed.

Commodore Warren Wood of the South Coast Yacht Club is a guest on the yacht Hawaii.

The Young Hawaiis will play the Kukulis next Sunday afternoon at Kapiolani Park.

T. Gill is the winner of the Roederer golf trophy.

Young Cobbs, 24; Starlight's 0.

D. Anderson and J. Macaulay won the final round in the Private Courts Tennis Association's doubles championship concluded on Sunday.

The first of the yachts is expected to put in an appearance on Saturday morning.

United Chinese, 14; Kukul Athletics, 7.

The Palama Seniors will play a game of indoor baseball with the International's, a Y. M. C. A. organization, on Friday evening in the Y. M. C. A. games hall.

Second Infantry, 6; First Artillery, 5.

Last night at the Y. M. C. A. Axelrod defeated V. Marcellino in the handball tournament, 21-17, and 21-15.

A Neighborhood Tennis Club team defeated an Alea team at Alea on Sunday, winning two sets of doubles out of three.

Alan Lowrey has been elected captain of the Harvard varsity tennis team.

There will be a meeting at 4:30 p. m. today of the sub-committees who have the local Fourth of July sporting program in hand.

Pawaas, 9; Libertys, 0.

The Stars are leaders in the Maui League.

His Career in Ring. Jim Flynn's right name is Andrew Chiariglioni, and we don't blame him for changing it. If he ever crawled through the ropes with that name tagging after him he'd trip over it in the clinches. Flynn's father died while he was yet training on a milk-bottle diet, and his stepfather, an Italian brought the name Chiariglioni into the Flynn family, and pressed it upon the future "white hope."

Flynn, who was born in Brooklyn, December 24, 1879, has had a remarkable ring career. Not because of his great number of victories, but because of his persistence in sticking at the game after being beaten so often and the ability he has shown to upset ring traditions by "coming back" and beating men who once beat him. Jim Flynn started his ring career in 1901 by winning his first three contests by a knockout in four, four and two rounds, respectively. He fought for two years without a reverse, when he lost an eight-round decision to Jack Root. He then went two years more without a reverse, when he went up against Tommy Burns, in Los Angeles and was knocked out in fifteen rounds. After this he had a string of victories knocking out George Gardiner in 18 rounds and Dave Barry in seven. On November 2, 1907, he met Jack Johnson in Frisco, and was knocked out in 11 rounds. A month later he met Bill Squires, the Australian heavyweight, and knocked Squires out in six rounds. He then beat Battling Johnson twice in 10 rounds, whom it took Sam McVey 36 rounds in all to beat decisively. Shows "Come-Back" Ability. Flynn was then knocked out himself by Al Kaufman in nine rounds, and by Sam Langford in one round. Then, just to show that he was not afraid of either man, he fought Langford a ten-round no-decision contest, and then was again knocked out by (Continued on Page Seven)

History of Yachts Now Scurrying to Pacific's Paradise

The competing yachts in the fourth Transpacific race now under way are as follows:

Hawaii of the Hawaii Yacht Club, sailed by Capt. William H. Stroud; Lurline of the San Diego Yacht Club, sailed by Capt. Lew Harris; Nattoss of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club of Victoria, sailed by Capt. G. P. Ashe and the Seafarer of the San Francisco Yacht Club, sailed by her owner, L. A. Norris.

The Hawaii is schooner rigged, designed by Crownshield, of New York. The boat was built in Honolulu and the construction was supervised by Frank Tandy of Los Angeles. The length of the Hawaii is sixty-nine feet, even inches over all with a sixteen foot beam and a ten inch draft, and she is capable of carrying 16,000 square feet of sail. This will be the third race in which the boat has been entered. She has one win to her credit.

The Lurline is schooner rigged and was formerly owned by Spreckels of San Francisco. In 1901 she was bought by Commodore Sinclair and was flagship of the South Coast Yacht Club in 1906 and 1907. She entered the Trans-Pacific race in 1906 and 1908 and won each time. The boat is an old-time clipper schooner with an overall length of eighty-eight feet and beam of about nineteen feet. The Lurline is about thirty years old, but has been overhauled for the coming race with the exception of the standing rigging.

The Kakaakos lead in the Boys' Clubs League senior division and the Kaujuelas are at the top of the pile in the junior brigade.

PARKER AND BRYAN.

The feud between Parker and Bryan dates from 1904 when the Democrats, disheartened by Bryan's two previous defeats, practically abandoned free silver and the like and named Alton B. Parker for President on a "safe and sane" platform.

Bryan did not rally to the support of the nominee of the "gold bugs" as he called Parker and the latter was beaten more severely than Bryan had been in 1900. That is to say he got but 140 electoral votes against Bryan's 155; and counting by the head Parker had, in 1904, a total of 5,077,911 ballots as contrasted with a vote for Bryan, four years earlier, of 6,358,133. That settled the gold bug nominee and restored the popularity and leadership of Bryan.

Now Parker is trying to come back. Bryan insists on the old principles of his faction which have already converted Roosevelt and the Progressives and which, he holds, are equal to this emergency; and the less he sees of Parker the better he is satisfied.

THE BOLT OF 1872.

There have been Republican and Democratic bolts enough in the history of American parties to establish a principle. This principle is that, while a bolt may be large enough to defeat the regular candidate or seriously reduce his vote, it is never large enough to elect the bolter. In the case most nearly parallel to that of Colonel Roosevelt, the bolter was not only beaten but the majority for him was but little short of unanimous.

We refer, of course, to the Greeley bolt of 1872. Horace Greeley had borne the same relation to the Republican party, up to that time, that Benjamin Franklin had to the revolutionary cause of 1776. He was its guide and philosopher; in some respects the Moses of the new dispensation of politics. Everywhere in the Republican organization Greeley spoke with authority, and the agricultural masses hung on his words. Indeed, his paper, the New York Tribune, was the textbook of the dominant party. Wherever the Republican policy, and particularly its leading feature, the protective tariff, sought explanation, the people turned to Greeley and the Tribune to interpret it.

During the first term of President Grant, between 1868 and 1872, Mr. Greeley fell out with him and his policies. So did the more particular leaders of the Republican party of whom Charles Sumner was the forensic chief, the "insurgent" or "progressive" of his time in Congress. Other chiefs of the same clan were Carl Schurz, Theodore Tilton, George W. Julian of Indiana, Chauncey M. Depew, B. Gratz Brown and on to the end of a long and distinguished roster. These men, headed by Horace Greeley and the Tribune, adopting a platform of general amnesty to heal the open wounds of the civil war,—"stretching hands across the bloody chasm"—as the phrase went, met the nomination of Grant for a second term with the most prodigious bolt in American political history. A new party, the Liberal Republican, was organized. It extended to every state, and in each one it got enthusiastic support. Organization was perfected at experienced hands. There was no lack of men and means, of speakers, of newspapers, of appeal to the higher aspirations of the party. At a national convention regularly called and fully manned, Horace Greeley was nominated for President amid scenes of tumultuous enthusiasm.

Our readers will see a certain parallel thus far to the Roosevelt proceedings now and scheduled. When the Progressive party holds its new convention and names Roosevelt for President against the regular nominee of the party, the parallel will be nearly complete with one important exception: the new candidate will not have the support of the Democracy. Horace Greeley had it; for, in 1872, that great national party, with its perfect organization, and millions of votes, did not name any candidate of its own, but endorsed the Greeley ticket and platform. It was as if the Baltimore convention in session should adjourn until the Progressives had put Roosevelt in the field and then ratify him as their own leader. No wonder that the matter seemed settled for Greeley in the early summer of 1872. What chance could Grant possibly have of being elected against such odds? It was bad enough to have his party weakened by a bolt, but what about the bolter getting the full reinforcement of the Democratic party? Was it not time to hoist the white flag and make the best possible terms with the enemy?

But with all these tremendous odds against him, General Grant had the most conclusive majority ever given a nominee of the Republican party before or since. It seemed that he was beaten in June. People were sure of it July. In August his enemies regarded themselves with a prospective division of the spoils. In September there was a sudden call on the new allies to stop feasting on futures and get to work; and before the month ended the alarm bell rang. October began with full presage of a Grant triumph. The bye-elections all went his way. As November approached the Liberal Republicans and Democrats found themselves fighting for their lives; and on election day this unsurpassed victory was registered for the regular Republican nominee in the list of electoral votes:

Ulysses S. Grant, 286
Horace Greeley, 47

Greeley died before the electoral college met. His great new party died with him.

How can we account for the ability of the Grant Republicans to beat the Liberal Republicans and the Democrats together? There were many factors in the equation; but the chief ones were patriotism and prosperity; while sympathy for the man with his back to the wall as Grant was, had much to do with it. Patriotism then was represented in a fear of Greeley's too great faith in the fair intent of the lately rebellious South; prosperity in the desire to retain the tariff which was building so much and well on the ravages of the war and which Greeley had deserted. The result was precisely what was to have been expected of the American people who have the Yankee habit of looking out for number one. The lessons of it all, in this emergency, are among those which the people who follow the story are able to apply for themselves.

The interest women are showing in the social welfare of Honolulu is a most acceptable sign. Sociological problems interest only small classes of good men, but they touch the heart, arouse the conscience and bring an expression of feeling from good women generally. Here the need of better modes of living among the poor meets a prosperity, a Christianity and a spirit of doing among the women of the more fortunate class, which is equal to it; and if the new impulse does not grow indolent for want of spirited leadership, we shall soon have a better Honolulu.

Governor Johnson of California is a man who is always looking for trouble. When he was running for Governor he fairly pleaded for a chance to "kick" the Southern Pacific. "Kick" was his lightest word. He was the first physical bolter at Chicago. Undoubtedly, as the canvass goes on he will fairly rival Heney in the abundance and the vociferousness of his epithets. There is never any diplomacy about Johnson. He is a bull who always sees the red flag.

It is not likely that Congress will let the present situation, as to the pay of the troops, last long enough to become a serious inconvenience. A hungry and penniless army would make the nation a laughing stock. Meanwhile, so far as the troops on Oahu are concerned, one would suppose that some of our Territorial banking institutions, which are glutted with coin, might find it to advantage to save the situation.

The Colonel changed the subject as usual just in the nick of

CHIGGERS

By WALT MASON.

Because of the chiggers, those blamed little diggers, no more dare I bask in the green woodland nook, no more draw a measure of sweet wholesome pleasure from seeking the groves with a loaf and a book! A man can give battle to serpents that rattle, to all the wild creatures infesting the woods; but chiggers defy him; as soon as they spy him they camp on his frame and deliver the goods. With swatters and beaters he fights off the skeeters, with smudge fires he baffles their cousins and aunts; the chigger bird senses his futile defenses and calmly crawls under the leg of his pants. A man on the lead'll meet polecat or weasel and come out the victor if given a show; the coon and the possum—he's able to boss 'em, he'd whip seven owls if they stood in a row; but ah, what a figure he cuts when the chigger gets into his system, a-drilling for oil; he gets on his knees and his yells bust his weasand, he claws up the grass and bites chunks from the soil. The woods are deserted where erstwhile we flirted with Susan Mirandy and t'other nice maid; the tall poplars wonder why no one sits under—the chiggers have driven the boys from their shade.

LITTLE INTERVIEWS

GEORGE THIELEN—1 bet within $5 of $5000 on Roosevelt.

JOSHUA TUCKER—Land drawing tomorrow. Bad enough but much better than auction. I never sleep well after an auction, but this is different.

ATTORNEY GENERAL LINDSAY—We won't get this Punchbowl work off our hands until the auction which takes place on August 15 and then there will be enough noise and turmoil to awaken the mermaids of the Black Sea.

JACK SCULLY—The Haleiwa race served to stimulate interest in distance running here and I believe that when the weather gets a bit cooler a race over a course eight or ten miles long will draw an immense entry and provide some excellent sport.

JIM QUINN—There's a bull-dog out Kaimuki which makes a practice of annoying automobilists. The brute makes a dash at a passing car, and a body-torn tire is sometimes the result. Animals like that are a menace to the community and ought to be placed under proper supervision.

TREASURER CONKLING—This hurried trip of mine from Hilo and then right off again for Frisco makes me think of that venerable bit of ragtime melody which relates the experiences of the gentleman who walked right in and turned around and walked right out again.

JACK GIBSON—W. W. Wood will be a starter in the pacing event at Kaplani Park on July 4. The old horse is twenty-four years old but is working in wonderful style. Lots of people will be glad of a chance to see the game old veteran in action again, especially as it is apt to be a farewell performance.

KIRK B. PORTER—We shall have to begin work on the annual health report pretty soon, which means quite a good deal of labor as everything done by the department has to be recorded and typed in detail before it is ready for submission. That will not be until some time in September.

WAILUKU WILL CELEBRATE OPENING OF LIGHT STATION

(Special Correspondence of the Star.) WAILUKU, June 24.—The electric wires for the new electric lights in Wailuku are pretty well strung along the streets. Several of the fixtures are already in position. The Island Electric Company is pushing the work just as fast as possible, in order to have the plant in operation by the first of July. It plans a celebration at the power plant, so visitors can see the machinery in operation, and a monster entertainment at the Wailuku Gymnasium, which will be especially decorated for the occasion with colored lights. The dance given at the gymnasium at the time will be in honor of the new enterprise at the suggestion of the Island Electric Light Company.

Basket Ball.
The Alexander House Gymnasium basketball team played the Lahaina basketball team on the Lahaina court last Saturday afternoon. The Lahaina girls won over the Wailuku team by a score of 10 to 7. The result was rather a surprise, for the Lahaina girls had never played a game with another team until their game at Wailuku on Saturday before last, when they were beaten by a score of 25 to 7. The Lahaina game was played out of doors behind the Baldwin House. There was a large crowd of witnesses, who vigorously cheered the home team.

The affair was arranged by Manager Weinheimer and Miss Lucy Adams, who are both interested in having the girls of Lahaina learn to play basket ball. The Gymnasium committee of Wailuku sent the Wailuku team over without any expense to the team itself. Mr. Weinheimer arranged a delicious poi supper at his beach house, and afterward gave a most delightful party and dance in honor of the two teams.

A Gymnasium for Lahaina.
The people of Lahaina want a gymnasium, and they intend to get one, too, just as soon as they can complete arrangements for the building. Athletics in the ancient capital certainly are holding a prominent place in the attention of the citizens.

The office of the Maui Aid Association is being pushed rapidly forward this week. The new building occupies a portion of the William and Mary Alexander Parsonage lot just below the old parsonage. The building will contain both a minister's study and an office for the transaction of the business of the association.

Mrs. H. P. Baldwin returned to Maui on Saturday last. She came back a few days earlier than she had expected.

CONKLING OFF

On account of the delay attendant upon awaiting the governor's return to Honolulu or his awaiting Conklings' arrival in the Honolulu, it was decided that it would be better for the treasurer to take the Japanese steamer and pay the $200 fine for traveling coastwise in a foreign ship rather than lose any time.

At half-past eight, the treasurer was at his own residence packing an extra suit case and an hour later he was at his office cleaning up all routine matter before leaving for San Francisco. It had been decided not to await an answer from the governor in regard to the cable sent by the acting governor yesterday, but instead to send a second notifying him of Conklings' departure in the Tenyo Maru.

The Maru left Hackfeld wharf at eleven o'clock this morning and is due to arrive at San Francisco early Sunday evening, or nearly three days before Governor Frear leaves for Honolulu in the Wilhelmina.

The treasurer expects to go immediately to New York from San Francisco, where he will complete final arrangements for floating the bond issue on September 3. After he has them printed, he will forward them to Honolulu by mail, where they will be signed by the registrar and returned to New York.

There will be no delay experienced in marketing the issue, as the treasurer hustled around and found a market for the entire issue while he was still floating first series of the loan last year. As soon as the bonds are returned from Hawaii and placed in the hands of the purchasers, the treasurer will leave for Honolulu, returning here some time in September.

Although it is expected that the two hundred dollar fine levied by the government for taking passage in a steamer of foreign register will be remitted, the treasurer and the governor decided that it would be worth the two hundred dollars to avoid the delay involved in Conklings' taking the Honolulu for the Coast.

The Honolulu leaves tomorrow morning, but as it is a seven-day boat the Matsun liner would miss connections with the Wilhelmina at San Francisco.

At half past nine—an hour before the treasurer left his office in the Capitol for Hackfeld wharf, the acting governor received an answer to his cable to Governor Frear in regard to instructions.

The governor sent word that he would not wait for Conklings' arrival on the Honolulu but would proceed to Honolulu after leaving written instructions at Oakland for the treasurer to follow. The cablegram sent was as follows: "Conklings better come immediately. Will leave information for him at Oakland where we arrive Friday night, Frear."

Acting Governor Mott-Smith immediately cabled back that Conklings was on board the Tenyo Maru and would see Governor Frear personally. On account of the necessary business to transact before leaving, the treasurer was unable to make any report of the work accomplished by the tax appeal board on Hawaii.

FIGURES SHOW PROSPEROUS ERA IN THE PHILIPPINES

MANILA, May 30.—A well known business man, upon being shown the latest customs figures, talked as follows to the Cablenews-American: Exports for the month of April from the ports of Manila, Iloilo and Cebu show the largest value of any month thus far during the present fiscal year, and this is apparently due to the continued vigor of the copra trade. In fact, the increase in the value of total exports for the fiscal year will most probably be found to be due largely to copra.

During the fiscal year 1911 the total shipments of copra amounted to 115,602 tons, valued at $9,899,457; thus far for the fiscal year 1912 the figures are 141,246 tons, valued at $12,743,761. These figures indicate an increase in the price obtained, from about $85 a ton to approximately $97 a ton, and point to an increase in value of exports of this commodity of several million dollars for the year.

Sugar shows a gain over last year, but not to the same extent as copra. Against a total for the fiscal year 1911 of 149,376 tons, valued at $8,014,360, the present year thus far shows shipments of 165,975 tons, at $9,403,492. The remaining two months of the year, May and June, are usually heavy months for sugar, but reports that come from Iloilo indicate that planters there are meeting disappointment in the matter of rice, as the price offered is just about half of the figure they are demanding. It is probable that the year's final figures may not show up as favorably as might have been expected from the earlier statistics.

Hemp has been comparatively inactive throughout the year and the fiscal year's report will undoubtedly show a falling off compared with 1911. Last year there were exported 165,950 tons valued at $16,141,340; so far this year shipments amount to 127,339 tons, $13,261,087. The average price has however risen from under $100 a ton to over that figure, and it may be that at the end of the year, notwithstanding a decrease in quantity, the value of exports of this product will show a slight increase.

The trade in cigars shows a healthy growth and seems to bear out the theory that the decrease in shipments during 1911 compared with the previous fiscal year was but a natural reaction from the over-stimulated condition that developed upon the passage of the Payne tariff. The fiscal year 1911 yielded an export trade in cigars of $1,700,712, representing 132,217,000 cigars; thus far shipments have aggregated close to 141,000,000, and the value has risen to $2,089,173. Here also is a decided rise in average price, evidencing a material improvement in the quality of cigars shipped.

Total imports thus far are valued at $43,255,650, compared with $42,242,284 for the same period last year. It is possible that the total fiscal year's imports will be slightly above last year's but in this connection it should be taken into consideration that rice imports for ten months of 1912 have exceeded in value those of ten months of the fiscal year 1911, some two million dollars.

Exports totals for ten months are $42,125,506 and $32,260,051, for the fiscal years 1912 and 1911, respectively; and if they continue in the same ratio, the prospects are quite promising for a favorable trade balance for the year, notwithstanding that the import figures include all importations for the army, navy, insular government, and the railways.

THIS JUNE CALENDAR IS CRUEL TO INTERNAL REVENUE TAXPAYERS

A gentle moan which will swell to the volume of a loud wail is destined to fill the air above the city some time next week, according to Collector Cottrill who issued his last warning to tardy internal revenue taxpayers this morning.

"The soft cry of anguish will go up from innumerable corporations and individuals about the city when they hear that they really have to pay their federal taxes," said the federal tax collector this morning, "and next week, when they find that a fifty per cent penalty has been added to their bill, the aforementioned soft cry will swell to a scream, for the government is the original and only soulless corporation when it comes to collecting its taxes.

"For Saturday is the last day of grace. All improvement, internal revenue, special and corporation taxes, ordinarily on the thirtieth of June, must be paid the twenty-ninth, as the thirtieth falls on Sunday.

"The government does not allow any three days of grace but has made the ironclad regulation that when the last day of the fiscal year falls upon a Sunday or a legal holiday, payment is due the close of the business day before."

formance of Aliek Lauder, and those who heard this Scotchman last night agreed that his selections for his closing performances were much more suited for local audiences than his initial offerings. Dottie Harris "put over" a good line of songs and presented a stunning appearance at the first performance in a lavender silk semi-hobble.

All in all the Liberty show is one of the best seen for some time with enough variety to make it well worth the patronage it is receiving.

ATTACKS SAFETY IDEAS FOR SHIPS

LONDON, June 6.—The disaster to the steamer Titanic has done little to change the views of Harold Sanderson, a director of the White Star line, as to the sufficiency of the present equipment of transatlantic steamers for all practical purposes. Mr. Sanderson was recalled by the wreck commission today and disputed the usefulness of additional lifeboats, searchlights and binoculars and larger crews of seamen, but said: "There is a popular cry for binoculars and extra boats and we want to satisfy it."

Deans Risks Unavoidable. "There are," continued Mr. Sanderson, "certain risks coming from the sea which it is impossible to eliminate, just as there are on land."

The witness emphasized that small boats were carried only for the purpose of transferring persons from ship to ship or from ship to land, and said that if more seamen were carried in order to man additional boats they would have nothing to do until there was a wreck. Searchlights, he declared, would be "worse than useless; they would be a positive source of danger. The worst thing possible for a lookout is the glare of light."

Suites Not in Way of Safety. Asked concerning the space given up for the accommodation of wealthy passengers, Sanderson replied: "If there were anything more that we could do to assure the safety of passengers the millionaires' suites would not stand in the way."

He attributed the greater loss of life among the third class passengers of the Titanic to the fact that the best position for launching the boats happened to be nearest the first and second quarters.

(Continued from Page One.) dents noted exceptions. This, however, may be merely pro forma, to enable them to appeal if, after mature consideration, they consider it worth their while.

The trial of the case took about a month. Much expert testimony was introduced, and the jury had to deal with masses of figures. The case was argued at great length after both sides had rested, and was then submitted to the jury, which, judging from the short time it took to arrive at a verdict, must have brushed aside technicalities and plunged straight through the mass of conflicting testimony to a verdict based largely upon the general opinion arrived at during the course of the lengthy trial.

One more case remains to be tried before the condemnation suits will be all concluded. The next case will involve the fee and leasehold of the property now occupied by E. O. Hall & Son, Ltd.

The full text of the verdict in the case concluded this morning is as follows: Verdict. We, the jury in the above entitled cause, upon the issues framed there-in between the plaintiff, the United States of America, and the respondents, Herbert Austin, Walter Austin and Edith Austin, H. Cushman Carter, trustee, the Bank of Hawaii, Ltd., Charles M. Cooke, Ltd., and the Hawaiian Trust Co., Ltd., find the following verdict:

First: That the fair market value of the land and improvements thereon upon the southeast side of Fort street between King and Merchant streets in Honolulu, the area where of is 3496 square feet as shown upon the map in evidence as Exhibit A, was the sum of $71,679.82, which sum we hereby apportion between and award to the several parties in interest in this trial as follows:

Award No. 2.—To H. Cushman Carter, Walter Austin and Edith Austin, individually and as trustees under the will of James W. Austin, deceased, the sum of $46,114.92 as compensation for their interest in the said land and improvements and rentals accruing to them under the outstanding leases.

Award No. 2.—To H. Cushman Carter, trustee for the Cummins Estate, the sum of $8560 as full compensation for his interest in the said land and improvements and rentals accruing to him under the outstanding leases.

Award No. 3.—To the Bank of Hawaii, Ltd., the sum of $8,799.60 as compensation for its interest as lessee under the lease made by James W. Austin to E. A. Jones, October 1, 1893, and assigned by Jones to the Bank of Hawaii, Ltd., December 27, 1897.

Award No. 4.—To Charles M. Cooke, Ltd., the sum of $4453.06 as compensation for its leasehold interests held under the lease made to it by the Bank of Hawaii, Ltd., January 15, 1909, and the lease made by E. A. Jones to C. M. Cooke, September 1, 1894, assigned by C. M. Cooke to Charles M. Cooke, Ltd.; and the lease made by the Cummins Estate to Charles M. Cooke, September 1, 1894, assigned by C. M. Cooke to Charles M. Cooke, Ltd.

Award No. 5.—To the Hawaiian Trust Co., Ltd., the sum of $3752.24 as compensation for its leasehold interests under the lease made to it by the Bank of Hawaii, Ltd., August 19, 1905, and the lease made to it by Charles M. Cooke, Ltd., August 19, 1905, and the lease made to it by the Austin Estate, April 14, 1910, and the lease made to it by the Cummins Estate, dated August 19, 1905.

Second: We further award to the Hawaiian Trust Co., Ltd., as the amount of damage that will be sustained by it by reason of the taking under these proceedings, being the damage to movable fixtures by way of detachment and removal, the sum of $500.

Cummins, Charles Mahoe and Hattie Mahoe in and to said property.

BONDS HOLD, STOCKS FALLING

Stocks dropped again today, as shown by the records of the stock exchange. But bonds held firm. There were four one thousand dollar sales of Oiaa six per cent bonds, at the same figure as former sales—$97.50. Oiaa stock itself dropped from $7.25 to $7.125, in a couple of sales aggregating 70 shares.

Oahu slumped some more. Yesterday it was $27.25 and between boards there were sales at $27.00. On 'Change a hundred shares went at the same figure, and then the price dropped to $26.875.

Onomea and Hawaiian Pineapple sold in small quantities at the same prices as yesterday, and Hilo R-U. way bonds, which changed hands to the number of 1000, held their former price of $100.75.

AMERICAN POULTRY EXPERT FINDS INCUBATOR OF ANCIENT TIMES SUPERIOR TO OURS

PARIS, June 6.—In a lonely village lying in the midst of dry Egyptian sands chickens are being incubated today just as in biblical times and on a scale and by a method calculated to astonish European and American poultry raisers. Ernest Kellerstraus, a poultry expert of Kansas City, Mo., recently visited one of these Egyptian incubators.

"Of course," he said to the correspondent of the Daily News, "it is known by all chicken fanciers that incubation was carried on in Egypt in ancient times. Personally, however, I did not dream that it was still being carried on by the same archaic method. It was the porter of a hotel in Cairo, who, finding that I was interested in meeting the local egg merchants, suggested that I might find an incubator in some village."

A few days later a man came and informed me that he could conduct me to a village where there was an incubator. So we took a train inland and then after riding on mules for several hours arrived at a village where, sure enough, there was a thriving incubator. The proprietor was a tall, old Arab.

"The incubator, like the house which adjoined it, was built of adobe and shaped like a beehive. I entered it by a small oval door. The place was full of smoke, but I distinguished with the great beehive six objects resembling smaller beehives. There were three on each side. Each of these was raised on a table above the floor and was pierced with a small oval opening. These were the ovens. They were supplied with heat from circular fireplaces beneath, in which straw and chaff were kept smoldering without coming to a blaze. In each oven there were no less than 6000 eggs. There was an open spot in the center where one of the children crawled in to turn the eggs.

Chickens Pop Out of Eggs. "One oven happened to be hatching when I was there and it was a wonderful sight to see the chickens popping out by the dozens. A boy inside was busy clearing away the shells and also gathering up handfuls of chickens when dry and tossing them out on a pile of chaff. I was naturally astonished. The Arab assured me that his ancestors had incubated in this manner as far back as human memory reached. We believe in America that an incubator must have 103 degrees of heat. Here there are no thermometers and the Arab said he gauged the temperature by sticking his hand inside. Using my thermometer I found that the temperature in the various ovens ranged anywhere from 57 to 95 degrees. This upsets our theory.

Says 90 Per Cent Hatch Out. "I asked the Arab what per cent of the eggs hatched out and he immediately asked me the same question. I replied that sometimes it was 30 to 40 per cent and sometimes from 70 to 80 per cent, whereupon the Arab laughed and said that with him it was never less than 90 per cent; otherwise he would starve. He then explained that he hatches for forty neighbors for five months in the year, beginning in January, getting 6000 eggs from each. He is paid $5 for his work by each of his customers. Further, he is allowed to keep all chickens over 4000 hatched, which is the source of his profit. Contrary to our method, the Arab never moistens the eggs."

UNCONSCIOUS DECEIT. "Biggins says he enjoys working." "Yes," replied the suspicious person; "he's one of those people who would rather sit down and talk for the hour about how they enjoy working than work."—Washington Star.

ROTATION IN OFFICE. "I believe in rotation in office," said the dissatisfied citizen. "Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "But so frequently an impression exists that rotation merely means turning things upside down."—Washington Star.

SOCIETY

OVER THE TEACUPS.
Society Editor.
Telephone 2799.

"I can't understand," said Mrs. Brown, with a sigh, "why those Smith boys play at home the way they do. I can't make my Willie stay at home a minute. He plays with all the hoodlums of the neighborhood. I've told him time and time again, he's not to go with that Gallagher boy. But the minute my back's turned, he's with him. I've punished him and everything, but it does no good."

Although Mrs. Brown did not realize it, the Smith home was a home with ideals, and hers was a home without ideals. And that was the root of the matter.

Her Willie looked upon his home as a place simply for food and shelter. It stood to him for nothing else. He came in to eat his meals, and got out again as soon as he could. He remained out at night until his mother's voice resounded through the neighborhood calling him to come to bed. And then he came reluctantly. There was absolutely nothing about that home that attracted him, except food when he was hungry and a bed when he was tired.

This was also to a large extent the attitude of Willie's father. And Mrs. Brown herself as a rule hurried through her household tasks and then went in town shopping, or over to a neighbor's to gossip, or to a gathering of friends for cards.

This is not the only home of its kind in the country. There are many like it, mere shells of board or brick or stone, with some furniture set about, and food on the table. And often, unless there is a Willie to make the mother pause and realize that something is wrong, the inmates of such a home are quite content with it.

But a home needs to be more than food and shelter, if it is to fulfill its highest purpose. Its province is to silently mould character for the better, to furnish the little ones within its walls with ideals that will govern their future life. It must be an inspiration, a comfort, a haven. It must be far more than a roof and furniture and food. And the home that is not this is almost as bad as no home at all. There is much outcry today against the decadence of the home. But there is almost as much need of outcry against the home without ideals.

And it is largely up to the mother to create the influences that shall rule in the home. To be sure, the father should do his share. But we have formed the habit of excusing the American father from home duty, because he is so busy earning the living. So the creation of a home in its fullest sense rests upon the mother. And before she considers furniture, or wallpapers or whether the maid shall wear a uniform, she should deliberately take time and decide what the ideals of her home shall be. She ought to plan what her home is to stand for to her children. She ought to make sure of putting into it charm and cheer and patience and love and thoughtfulness and truth and honor and all those things that are more beautiful and more enduring than mere furniture. For these are the things which take a sure hold upon the spirit, and which bring Willie and his father and the other members of the family to the home with quick and eager, instead of slow and reluctant, feet.

SOCIAL NOTES OF THE DAY.

The ball room of the Moana Hotel was the scene last night of one of the largest social functions of the school year, when the senior class of Oahu College gave their commencement dance. The room was prettily decorated with ferns, flags and college pennants. The senior prom is one of the most important affairs on the social calendar of Oahu College and is anticipated from year to year with delight. The dance last night was a success in every way, and all of the dancers reluctantly left the ball room at twelve o'clock. The patronesses and members of the reception committee were Mrs. R. W. Anderson, President and Mrs. A. F. Griffiths, Miss Martha McClesney, Miss Garnie Rosecrans, Mr. Alexander Anderson and Mr. Randolph Hitchcock. The dance programs were both artistic and unique, some of the captions causing much merriment. ANOTHER HILO HIGH SCHOOL SENSATION
HILO, June 24.—Ezra F. Nichols, manager of the Hilo Mercantile Co., Ltd., shot and wounded Dorsey L. Miller, a teacher of the Hilo High School, last Saturday, following too frequent visits of Miller to the Nichols home. The shooting was one of the biggest sensations since the celebrated Richmond "Kipping" case last year, and Miller as a result is to leave Hilo and the Islands at the next opportunity.

The shooting occurred in the Nichols home. Nichols, finding Miller in the house, pulled a revolver and leveled it at Miller, fired, but at the moment the trigger was pulled, his sister knocked the gun down and the shot lodged in Miller's leg. Had the course of the bullet not been deflected Miller would have been killed. Nichols pulled the trigger the second time but the gun missed fire. Miller's wound is not serious.

The sympathy of the community, generally, is for Mr. Nichols. Jealousy is assigned as the cause of the shooting.

School Principal Poisoned.
HILO, June 24.—Prof. Prescott F. Iernegan, principal of the Hilo High School, is recovering from a case of poisoning, from which he had a narrow escape. He was accidentally poisoned by a headache cure. He was given early medical attention, and is now pronounced out of danger.

AWAY FOR THE FOURTH.

Mau and Hilo are to be the magnets that will draw from Honolulu many of the patriots who wish to celebrate safely and sanely. There are persons here who get away once a year to the other islands because they want a change of scene and climate. Either place offers what will do the most good. Even the Juvenile Bostonians have written friends here of the beautiful attractions of Iao Valley on Maui and so strongly have they been impressed by the view of the mountains that the attractions in Honolulu have faded away.

Eight dollars will pay for a round trip to Maui, leaving here on the night of the third and returning early on the morning of the fifth, Friday. That means all day in Waialuku and vicinity. The Hilo trip will begin Wednesday and end either Saturday or the following Tuesday and the cost of transportation will be twenty dollars.

INVESTIGATION OF CANCER IN PLANTS MAY THROW SOME LIGHT ON HUMAN SCOURGE

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 19.—Secretary Wilson stated today that Bulletin 235, Bureau of Plant Industry, just issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, is a good answer to those who have said that this Department cares nothing for the health of men and women but will at any time send an expert across the continent in a desperate hurry for the sake of a sick pig. The Bulletin is entitled the Structure and Development of Crown Gall and it would have only a botanical interest but for its subtitle: A Plant Cancer. The substance of the bulletin, which is fully illustrated by photographs taken from the microscope, is devoted to showing the various ways in which a common growth on plants is like malignant human tumors. For the most part the illustrations speak for themselves, but a lucid commentary is added, and many striking comparisons are made, which ought to go far toward stimulating additional researches into the cause of cancer in man, considering that in spite of many studies nothing is yet known as to its cause.

Curiously enough, in all the years of cancer research and out of all the effort put forth to discover the cause of this mysterious disease, it has never occurred to investigators that there might be an analogous disease of plants which would throw light on its origin.

The Laboratory of Plant Pathology, Bureau of Plant Industry, has been giving a good deal of attention in recent years to the subject of tumors in plants. These tumors range in size from a half inch or less in diameter to a half foot or more. The name commonly applied to them is crown gall, but they grow on various parts of the plant. They occur on fruit trees, berry bushes, rose bushes, ornamental trees, etc., and are very common throughout the entire United States and also in the Old World.

As is well known, cancer in human beings and animals is able to spread through the system and cause an outbreak of the disease in parts previously healthy and often at considerable distance from the original tumor. Removal of a cancer is successful in checking the disease only when the operation is performed before the disease is well established and has spread its fibers far beyond the affected part. That habit of insidiously creeping along the various channels of the body, from diseased to healthy parts, makes cancer hard to eradicate. Up to the present day no absolute proof of the cause of cancer has been given. Many other diseases of mankind are known to be caused by specific organisms that can be isolated and studied, but the cause of cancer has continued to elude the search of hundreds of careful scientists. Many thoroughly trained investigators are giving every thought and energy toward solving this great problem and without doubt it will be solved.

Some of the facts brought to light by the Department studies are these: Crown galls consist of an overgrowth of the plant tissues themselves, and in general appearance are not unlike cancers, and which like the latter are destructive to the individuals harboring them. Like breast cancers, these growths send out roots into the deeper sound tissues and upon these roots secondary tumors develop, so that, when excisions are attempted, if any portion remains a new growth develops exactly as in cancer; also the secondary tumors developed from the stems or roots have the structure of the mother tumor. For example, when a primary tumor has developed on a stem the roots of this tumor often enter the leaves and there develop secondary tumors which are not distorted leaves but have the structure of stems; the tumor then destroys the leaf, developing as a morbid perishable stem. Other likenesses are pointed out.

What makes the matter so interesting is the discovery made in the Department that these plant cancers are due to a microorganism which has been cultivated pure and with which they can be produced at will. The bacteria have been isolated both from the primary and from secondary tumors. The organism occurs inside the cell and under its stimulus the mechanism of abnormal growth is accomplished. By these experiments, which number hundreds, a searchlight has been thrown, it would seem, on the whole cancer problem, for if there is a specific organism causing a disease in plants which closely parallels cancer in its inception and manner of development (and the bulletin seems to prove that indisputably) then there is every reason to think that cancer in men and animals must also be due to some parasitic organism, upon the discovery of which a remedy may be conditioned. The many difficulties encountered in determining the cause of this plant disease should at least interest students of human tumors to reconsider the possibility of their parasitic origin.

CHICAGO'S BEAUTY SQUAD IN THE ANTI-HATPIN WAR

(Chicago Daily News.) "There was a man in our town And he was wondrous wise, And he got caught in a bargain rush And scratched out both his eyes.

And when he found his eyes were out With all his might and main, He jumped into a motor bus And scratched them in again."

Mother Goose, slightly revised and brought down to date, fits Chicago like a glove—that is the opinion of William Luthardt, secretary to Chief of Police McWeeny and originator of the "beauty squad," organized to enforce the famous snicker-snee ordinance proposed originally by the late Alderman Herman Bauer. Luthardt strolled today like Diogenes through the loop looking, not for an honest man, but for a law-abiding woman. The streets were veritable bramble bushes, bristling with four, five and six inch spikes, flashed naked in the bright sunshine, from many women's hats.

"I never thought much of Kipling," said Luthardt, "but the female of the species on the east side of State street is certainly deadlier than the male. Madison and State is really Chicago's death corner."

Few Conform to the Law.

Luthardt, accompanied by a reporter for the Daily News, set forth at ten o'clock, the hour at which the shopping district begins, to get into full swing. His purpose was to see to what extent the Bauer law is being disregarded and to establish the present average length of hatpin, extending beyond the crown of the hat. One pin was seen protruding recklessly six dangerous inches. The average was at least three inches. The Bauer law establishes one inch as the maximum a hat pin may protrude beyond the crown. Few hats conform to the law.

"Look there," said Luthardt, calling attention to a well dressed woman, who stepped from a limousine and tripped toward the revolving door of a department store. "She is wearing two pins, both of them sticking out at least five inches. She is a menace to mankind. There, what did I tell you?"

The woman in question collided with a young man, also bent on going through the revolving door, and the result was a painful gouge on his cheek, just below the right eye. The woman sped on without regard for her victim.

Should Have License Tags.

"They ought to wear numbers," said Luthardt. "They are just as bad as automobiles, and exceeding the one inch limit is just as bad as exceeding the speed limit. Our 'beauty squad' will soon set things to rights, though. We shall arm our 'lady patrolmen' with wire clippers and stars. Those who defy the law will have the choice of arrest or amputation of the hat pin. And the women will do it, too. Our office has been bombarded with requests by members of the deadly sex who are anxious to stamp out this pest."

Chief McWeeny last night received a device from a young inventor, whose desire is to benefit humanity by curbing the hatpin nuisance. It is a small decorated cap, which can be placed on the point of the pin. It is easily placed in position and will not slip off unless subjected to a strong yank.

"Objection has been made to the cork, the wad of chewing gum or the small new potato," said Chief McWeeny, "because none of them is artistic or beautiful—and then, potatoes are high. This device should solve the difficulty. It is small, easily adjusted and, besides that, is a thing of beauty. I shall propose the inventor for the Nobel prize."

The wise girl doesn't get married until she can afford it.

LIQUOR LICENSES BEING PASSED ON

Action on special privilege and protested cases has been postponed until Friday by the liquor license board which has been in session for the past week.

Yesterday the petition of Joseph Madeiros of Waiakoa for a wholesale license was protested on the ground that he is alleged to have sold liquor to blind pigs, and in return Madeiros accused his accusers of playing politics and of trying to allow someone else to acquire his retail license.

The board decides that only one license, wholesale or retail, shall be operated in Waiakoa, but three want licenses this year. Madeiros, who holds the present license, claims that his rival applicants are trying to get him out and he has retained Lorrin Andrews to fight for his interests.

No Special Privileges.

Applications for special privileges were unfavorably reported at the meeting yesterday and it is believed that all are going to be refused. Among the applicants are the Union Grill, the Alexander Young Hotel and the Moana Hotel.

Licenses not protested and granted at the meeting yesterday afternoon are John Gonsalves, Mint saloon; M. G. Silva, Kamehameha saloon; Wing Wo Tai, wholesale; Alfred Ross and others, wholesale; Macfarlane & Co., wholesale; Seattle Brewing & Malting Co., wholesale; Gus Cordes, River Rhine saloon; F. P. Johnson, Honolulu; James Thompson, Imperial saloon; E. S. Cunha, Union saloon; Bertha F. Kiemme, saloon; Louis Warren, Encore saloon; H. Hackfeld & Co., wholesale, conditionally; Isaac Cockett, Cockett saloon; Gonsalves & Co., wholesale, conditionally; the Seaside hotel, no Sunday privileges; Dias & Dias, wholesale (previously retail), Waipahu, conditionally.

WHEN THE BOMB EXPLODED.

Here is the story of a Russian anarchist outrage in the words of one who was nearly killed in the explosion. While staying at Cannes, H. Jones Thaddeus, author of "Recollections of a Court Painter," met the Grand Duchess Elene of Russia, who gave him an account of the recent attempt upon the life of the czar. The czar was a few minutes late in his arrival in the dining room, and for this reason the explosion was premature. After describing the event, the grand duchess told Mr. Thaddeus: "When the echoes of the explosion died away a dead silence succeeded, which, united with the darkness prevailing, so dense as almost to be felt, conducted to render our helpless position still more painful and unendurable. We dared not move. There was no escape from the peril which surrounded us. Presently out of the darkness came the clear, calm voice of the czar, 'My children, let us pray!' The sound of his voice, while reassuring us as to his safety so far, relieved the awful strain on our nerves and brought comfort to our hearts.

"We sank to our knees, sobbing. How long we remained so I really do not know. It seemed an eternity of anguish before the guards appeared with candles, little expecting to find us alive. Some of us were nearly demented when the welcome relief arrived and our feelings were not calmed as we then contemplated the awful nature of the destruction we had escaped.

"A few feet in front of the czar was a black chasm where so short a time before had been the brilliantly lit dining room filled with servants. Not a trace of it or of them remained!"

BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA NOT TO PARADE

The leaders of the Boy Scouts of America do not wish the scouts to participate in street parades or demonstrations of other organizations. James E. West, Chief Scout Executive of the organization has sent out a bulletin to the scoutmasters pointing out that it is unwise for the boys to participate in such demonstrations. He writes:

"Parades by Boy Scouts, for show or self-glory, should not be encouraged. Even in connection with patriotic celebrations such as Decoration Day and the Fourth of July, it might be more helpful to have troops of scouts organize to render practical service by furnishing the marchers with water, or having the Scouts organize for First Aid work rather than to march in the parade itself. The Scouts of old rarely made a show of themselves. If you try some such plan in connection with the local celebration on Decoration Day this year, you will find that it will make a favorable impression upon the community."

Sam in eight rounds. Flynn then went against Al Kaufman again, and showed his "come-back" stuff in Kansas City on May 5, 1911, when he knocked his former conqueror out in ten rounds. Closely following this victory over Kaufmann, Flynn handed out the sleeping potion to four more opponents and then handed Carl Morris an awful lacing in ten rounds in New York.

There is no denying Jim Flynn's courage and confidence. He is afraid of no man alive. The confidence with which he has gone up against good men who were much heavier and bigger than he is, and the way he has taken the gaff and come back for more and frequently reversed former decisions, is guarantee enough for his courage. Flynn possesses sturdiness and a stout heart, and, in spite of the great handicap in size and weight and the vaunted cleverness of the black champion, he has an inherent belief that he can beat Johnson down and bring out the "yellow streak" that experts say exists but which no man has ever been able to penetrate to.

But whether Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, steps into the championship next July or not, there is one thing certain; he will fight as long as he has a foot to stand on, and if defeated, he will still remain the "barrier champion" over whom future "white hopes" must scramble to reach the entrance to the championship class.

SKIN TROUBLES GROW WORSE.

Eczema, Psoriasis, and other skin troubles are caused by myriads of germs at work in the skin. Unless these germs are promptly destroyed they rapidly multiply, knowing their way deep into the sensitive tissue. This is what causes that awful itch, and what seemed a mere rash may grow worse and develop into a loathsome and torturing skin disease with its years and years of misery.

Don't take any chances! Destroy the germs at the beginning of the trouble with that soothing and cleansing wash, the D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema.

We have had experience with many remedies for skin trouble but have never—never seen such remarkable cures as those from D. D. D. Prescription. Instant relief from the very first application.

If you have skin trouble of any kind, investigate the merits of D. D. D. We know that D. D. D. will help you. Benson Smith & Co.

SOCIAL SURVEY WORK ORGANIZED

A movement that it was decided to call the Social Survey was started last night, at a meeting held at the home of Mrs. George R. Carter which was attended by fifteen persons interested in charitable work.

Miss Ida M. Pope, principal of Kamehameha school for girls, opened the meeting with remarks explaining its purpose and called on George W. Smith to act as chairman and Judge W. L. Whitney, as secretary. Mr. Smith on taking the chair said the work to be done was a vast one. With the increase of immigration and of tenement evils, it was the duty of the community to do something for the submerged classes. He then announced the following executive committee and chairman of subcommittees, the chairman to select their colleagues:

George W. Smith, chairman; Judge W. L. Whitney, secretary; E. Faxon Bishop, Dr. W. C. Hobdy, Miss Ida Pope, Mrs. W. F. Dillingham, J. R. Galt, George R. Carter, Miss Louise Galt, Attorney General Alexander Lindsay.

All present at the meeting were asked to serve on a special citizens' committee to cooperate with the survey directors in making the campaign. James A. Rath, superintendent of Palama Settlement, and Miss Frances Blascoer, a sociologist from New York, are the directors.

Addresses were delivered by Mr. Rath and Miss Blascoer, followed by remarks from Bishop Liberty, F. W. McFarlane, E. F. Bishop, Dr. D. Scudder, J. R. Galt and Miss F. Lawrence.

FEARED TO FIRE ON OLD GLORY; HOW COL. ARRASMITH BLUFFED THE CHINESE

MANILA, MAY 29.—A dry military report soundly snoring somewhere in army headquarters at Manila tells of one of the exciting events in the present occupation of the Pekin-Tientsin Railway and adjacent territory by the 13,000 European, American and Japanese troops stationed there because of the strained present situation. It is the report of Lieutenant Colonel James M. Arrasmith, 15th U. S. Infantry, which tells how war between China and the United States was averted by a hair's breadth on March 3.

Things broke loose with a bang when Yuan Shih-kai's own troops began to loot and burn in the capital city of Pekin on the night of March 1. The American and all other foreign troops stationed at Tientsin 80 miles south were on the qui vive but they were not called upon. Tuesday passed off quietly. Night came on with Tientsin as quiet as usual. But at 9:30 looting and firing began in the native city of Tientsin, and an hour later the American forces were galvanized into action by the receipt of a rush telegram from Minister Calhoun in Pekin, calling for 200 American troops fully equipped. The wire said "Urgent."

In the remarkable time of an hour and a half Lieutenant Colonel Arrasmith, commanding the Fifteenth Infantry in China at that time, had 259 men aboard a special train, fully equipped with 130,000 rounds of ammunition, ten days rations, machine guns and mules, horses, tents and two wagons. Then a delay ensued, as word was brought in that a large Chinese force had gathered at Fengtai, seven miles below Pekin, to oppose the passage of the American forces, and Colonel Arrasmith decided to wait so as to reach the disputed point at daylight.

At 2:50 a. m. the command moved out for the relief of Pekin. Portions of Tientsin were already in flames. The city was in charge of the British and Russian troops principally. As our boys steamed from the station the sky was fiercely aglow behind them. Ahead was darkness and grim uncertainty.

Reaching Fengtai at dawn the small American force found 3500 Chinese troops under General Chang opposing their advance. Deployed along the track were 150 men of the British Somersets, but they had no intention of going into action. The Chinese were thrown on both sides of the tracks, and above the troop train less than 100 yards in advance were six deadly machine guns on a bridge. L. Sampson, Commanding machine gun platoon; 2nd Lieut. David H. one Arrasmith had his orders to get the estimated cost of the plants will be $750,000 each.

The announcement also states that options have been obtained upon similar sites at San Francisco and Honolulu and that it is planned to construct a plant in the Philippine Islands, which will communicate with the one at Honolulu. The company would thus be enabled to send messages from London to the Philippines by way of the United States, relaying the messages by land wires from the Jersey coast to San Francisco. The plants at San Francisco and Honolulu will be erected immediately, the announcement adds.

WIRELESS FROM LONDON TO PHILIPPINES VIA HONOLULU

NEW YORK, June 6.—Twin wireless stations to communicate directly with London will be built along the New Jersey coast within a year, according to an announcement made today by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America. The first station, the announcement says, will be erected within nine months near Belmar, N. J., on a site of 550 acres purchased today. The second station will be at Tons River or Barnegat and will be tuned to a key different from the first, so that messages to either station may be received and sent simultaneously without interference. The distance is 3100 miles, and

WITH THE DEMOCRATS IN BALTIMORE

Exterior and interior of Fifth regiment armory, Baltimore, scene of Democratic national convention.

By CHARLES N. LURIE.
Far more than the Republican convention at Chicago the Democratic assemblage at Baltimore will be a gathering of the clans. With voice and musical instruments the adherents of "favorite sons" in every section of the United States will sound the praises of their respective candidates. There has been no such sharp division between two leading aspirants as there has been in the Republican gathering, with two or at most three other men mentioned for the top of the ticket.

Democrats have been called upon to divide their admiration among several men, of varying degrees of strength, of course, but all possessing the quality of possibility. To the mind of the unbiased spectator, if such there be, the race for the Democratic nomination, at any rate up to within a few days of the assembling of the delegates, has been one in which any one of several contestants had a chance. Let us take up the claims of these men. To avoid giving offense to any adherent of any one of them we will take them in alphabetical order. No man or his follower can object to the precedence granted by the fact that one's name begins with B rather than with W. So we'll start with Governor Simon E. Baldwin of Connecticut, a man of learning and experience, whose claims to the Democratic nomination, it was reported, would be presented by State Senator Archibald McNeil of Bridgeport, Conn., twenty-seven years old and probably the youngest man ever named as likely to set forth the fame of an aspirant for the presidency. Wherever legal luminaries gather Governor Baldwin is known as a man of light and leading in the law. Until his elevation to the executive chair of Connecticut in 1910 he was chief justice of the state supreme court of errors. He is the oldest of the men mentioned prominently. Governor Baldwin was born in 1840. The turn of the alphabetical wheel brings us around now to William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska. Nothing need be said here of Mr. Bryan's record, brought out in sharp distinctness in his three former candidacies for the presidency. Until a short time before the opening of the convention he had not said that he would decline the nomination this year, but he had done nothing to further the desires of his friends and had, in fact, withdrawn his name in several places in which he had been mentioned. But he was and is a power in the party on which he has made so great an impression. John Burke, governor of North Dakota, is next in order. His principal claim to recognition is a good record (in the minds of his followers, of course) as governor of North Dakota and an endorsement as the "favorite son" of his state. But few before the convention days believed that he had a chance for the first place on the ticket. The letter C now draws near, and with it comes Champ Clark, speaker of the house of representatives and a leading candidate for the Democratic nomination ever since talk began of 1912. He has been gathering delegates for months. Christened James Beauchamp Clark, he soon dropped the James and the first syllable of the Beauchamp, and Champ Clark he will remain to the end of the chapter. Speaker Clark's activities have been almost entirely legislative, and he ranks as one of the best parliamentarians and legislators of the time. He is a bluff, hearty Missourian, possessing the confidence of the majority members of the present house of representatives, which is controlled by his party. His campaign has been managed by former Senator Fred T. Dubois of Idaho. Among Speaker Clark's most earnest support has been William R. Hearst.

G stands for Gaynor, William J. by name, mayor of New York and a man of wide fame. Outside of the Empire state few know of the years spent by Gaynor on the supreme court bench of his state. He made a reputation in his early manhood for fighting graft and corruption. Now he stands out in New York and elsewhere as the occupant of the mayor's chair of the country's biggest city. He quotes Epictetus and the country smiles, and he denounces evil conditions in city life and the country listens with attention. To little children seeking redress for some of the grievous ills which oppress the youngsters of crowded streets he is sweet as summer. To those who seek him for unearned favors he is gruff as Boreas. Some folks call him a cantankerous old man, but he is only sixty and is able to do much good work yet. Governor Harmon of Ohio. Harmon of Ohio has loomed up several times as a presidential possibility, especially this year, in spite of the open antagonism of William Jennings Bryan and others. To his credit stand two victories in gubernatorial elections of Ohio, the "mother of Republican presidents." He is a lawyer of wide learning and served the nation as attorney general in the last Cleveland cabinet. His opponents allege that his corporation affiliations and his age, sixty-six, should have barred him from consideration, but his friends counter-balance these accusations with his unquestioned personal honesty, his firmness and his capacity for work. Now come we to Governor Thomas R. Marshall of Indiana, another of the numerous "favorite sons" in the Democratic race. Indiana Democrats like him and made no bones of saying so in their state convention. He is a man of engaging personality, a lawyer by training, like all of the Democratic possibilities, and two years on the good side of sixty. He never held office before his election as governor of his state in 1908. Two men remain, Underwood and Wilson. The former is the youngest of the nine who are under consideration. He was fifty years old on May 6. His talents have shone before the public as a legislator, for he has been a member of the house of representatives from the Ninth Alabama district for seventeen years. He is a quiet, silent worker, with a reputation for industry earned in committee service. His party members thought so well of him that when they came into control of the house of representatives they made him chairman of the most important committee, that on ways and means. "The Scholar in Politics." Governor Woodrow Wilson has been recently the leading example of "the scholar in politics"—very much in politics, in fact. Democratic leaders throughout the country have been desirous of hearing what the Democratic governor of New Jersey and former president of Princeton university has had to say on the questions of the time. He has obligingly responded by accepting as many of the invitations as he could. He is a lawyer, lecturer and historian and probably knows as much about politics from the theoretical viewpoint as any other man in America. In recent years he has also picked up a good deal of information about the practical side of the political game. Most of the work of preparing for the big Democratic convention in the Baltimore, with its 1992 delegates, a like number of alternates and 15,000 or more spectators, has devolved on Norman E. Mack of New York, chairman of the Democratic national committee, and on the committee's secretary, Urey Woodson of Kentucky. The sergeant-at-arms, on whom rests the burden of doing most of the actual work of making the arrangements for the convention, is John I. Martin of St. Louis, who has held a similar post in every national convention since that of 1896, which nominated Bryan the first time. Bigger Than the Chicago Coliseum. The Democratic convention hall is bigger than the Chicago coliseum, selected for the gathering place of the Republicans. It will probably hold 20,000 persons when the temporary chairman and permanent chairman sound the keynotes of the campaign. The structure is built of granite and is surmounted by a vaulted roof which rises 106 feet above the main floor. It differs from the coliseum in having two balconies instead of one, and its acoustic properties are said to be better than those of the Chicago hall. There are twenty-one company rooms grouped in suits and arranged so as to make admirable meeting places for committees, etc. The armory is situated in the northern part of the city, within easy walking distance of the Baltimore and Ohio and Pennsylvania stations. It is not in the business section of the city, but can be reached from there by a short street car ride.

Two-Thirds Rule at Baltimore. Unlike the Republican rule, which requires a majority vote for the selection of a candidate to run for president, the Democrats believe that a two-thirds vote is better. There will be 1992 delegates at the convention, so that Clark, Wilson, Harmon, Underwood, Bryan or some one else must get 728 votes before he can be named as the standard bearer of his party. There has been considerable opposition to the work of this rule, as well as to the large number of delegates, and it was predicted not long ago that determined efforts would be made to have the convention adopt the plan of letting a majority of the delegates name the candidate. Representative Burleson of Texas is sponsor for one plan that has been proposed. If his views prevail there will be hereafter one delegate from each congressional district, but a district represented in the house of representatives by a Democrat will be entitled to an additional delegate. If a state is represented in the senate by two Democratic senators it shall have four delegates at large to the convention. If by one Republican and one Democrat, it shall have three at large, and if represented by two Republicans, only two delegates at large. The representation for a territory will be the same as for a state at large.

oments with equanimity. The explanation given is simple. It is claimed that when he shied his hat into the ring "big business" was assured that Roosevelt would not be dangerous, and that "big business" had nothing to fear from him. As he told Harriman, he is "a practical man." Here that sort of thing and intend to have course in the celebrated Tennessee Coal and Iron deal, when, through the compact with the United States Steel Corporation, he checked the panic of 1907, has often been cited as evidence of his practicality. But beyond that, "big business" was to a that the colonel has in view, if he is elected President of the United States, a scheme for the commercial agrandizement of this country upon a scale to give it the commercial dominion of the earth. He promises through the rehabilitation of the merchant marine, by the aid of the Panama canal, by discriminatory legislation which he will hammer out of Congress, and by every means within his resourceful power, to give to American manufacturers and producers the advantage over Germany and England in South America. He would make the western hemisphere tributary to the American shop and farm, and would then dispute with the powers of the earth for the commerce of the orient. The appeal to the politicians is based upon the one claim so often set forth, namely, that "Roosevelt is certain to be elected if nominated, and Taft may not be."

TOKIO AUDIENCES APPRECIATE DRAMA IN TWO LANGUAGES

TOKIO, Japan, April 25.—The April program of the Imperial theater, Tokio, is an active one, and has been drawing crowds during the month. It consists of four plays and a "flower ballet," which run from 5 o'clock in the afternoon, with the usual recess between the plays and shorter intervals between the acts and scenes, until after 10 o'clock at night. The first play is a Japanese melodrama of the old style, in two acts, comprising three scenes, and being historical, it gives a good idea of the manners and customs, costumes, etc., of the early feudal period in Japan. One a Problem Play. The second play, called "Hah" ("Mother") is, on the contrary, a problem play a modern melodrama of the present day, and depicts in two sensational acts a common social problem arising out of the question of the proper relations between the wife and advancing girl who is the mistress of the husband. And it was most decidedly encouraging to find that the audience appreciated the moral significance of the final triumph of virtue. As the third play or middle performance is the piece de resistance of the evening and calls for special notice and attention, we pass that by for the time being. The fourth performance is a comedy of one act, adopted from Moliere's "Sganarelle, ou Cocu Imaginaire," or "The Imaginary Cuckold." This is modern and very interesting and amusing, or a kind of "comedy of errors" or misunderstandings. The fifth and last performance is a "flower ballet," which I did not stay to see and which is reported to show a lack of training and is therefore not so successful. Two Languages Used. As I have said, the central play was the most significant, because it marked a decided innovation in the fact that two foreigners took part in the play and two languages, Japanese and English, were used as occasion demanded. And this meant that a Japanese young lady used both Japanese and English. I am not sure whether that particular play was the chief attraction, but it would seem so. For, while the upper galleries were not so much occupied, the first and second class sections were crowded. In some places the aisles were filled with chairs. The play is called "Anjin," or "Pilot," and is based on the experiences of Will Adams, an Englishman, a major pilot for a fleet of Dutch trading vessels that visited Japan in the seventeenth century. As the

ing incoming delegates systematically drumming into them the aluring prospect of this stupendous achievement. Col. Sellers in his palmyest day was no more eloquent than these exhorters as they painted to the awe-stricken delegates from the great Mississippi valley the golden possibilities of the scheme. It was Senator Lorimer's plan upon a gigantic scale—the same device he used in winning the support of men in Illinois to his senatorial candidacy without regard to party, as Roosevelt hopes to win them in this convention without regard to faction. Not a one was the development of this undertaking, the proper supplement to the construction of the Panama canal, credit for which Roosevelt takes unto himself, to benefit the states along the river, but also to furnish an outlet for the wheat and corn belt farther removed. Support by Big Interests. This move of the colonel's dovetails exactly with the representations he held out to the "big interests" of Wall street. Many men have wondered during the skyrocket progress of his campaign why Roosevelt was able to obtain financial support from big business, in view of his radicalism; wondered why Wall street does not take fright at the possibility of his nomination and send down prices of securities, instead of which the speculators are marking time and awaiting devel-

ROOSEVELT PLANS DEPEND ON AID OF "BIG INTERESTS"

CHICAGO, June 11.—The three-term showers are beginning to come to town in large numbers, but so far they have not attempted any unusual demonstrations. Tomorrow is the day originally set for a mass meeting, a street parade and other doings. The general drift of talk is that any amount of "bluff and bluster" on the part of the supporters of the third term will prove ineffective. There has been so much talk by the Roosevelt people about what they intended to do that anything they might do would be discounted in advance. Arguments of Roosevelt Men. Underneath the troubled surface of the political situation here there runs a deep current of constant agitation by the Roosevelt supporters in behalf of his nomination on three distinct grounds. These appeals may be said to be directed to the politicians, the financial interests and the agricultural and commercial interests as represented among the delegates. Col. Roosevelt figuratively is taking these men upon a high mountain and showing them dominion of the earth. Treating first with his latest move, his appeal to the delegates from the Mississippi valley and adjacent territory by his promise to advocate a deep waterway from the lakes to the gulf, utilizing the machinery and staff of the Panama canal plant, I found yesterday that Roosevelt men were believing incoming delegates systematically drumming into them the aluring prospect of this stupendous achievement. Col. Sellers in his palmyest day was no more eloquent than these exhorters as they painted to the awe-stricken delegates from the great Mississippi valley the golden possibilities of the scheme. It was Senator Lorimer's plan upon a gigantic scale—the same device he used in winning the support of men in Illinois to his senatorial candidacy without regard to party, as Roosevelt hopes to win them in this convention without regard to faction. Not a one was the development of this undertaking, the proper supplement to the construction of the Panama canal, credit for which Roosevelt takes unto himself, to benefit the states along the river, but also to furnish an outlet for the wheat and corn belt farther removed. ## JUDGE PARKER IS CHOSEN FOR TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN

BALTIMORE, June 25.—Judge Allen H. Parker was chosen by the Democratic national committee last night for temporary chairman of the convention.

Reports are revived that Bryan intends to offer himself as the dark horse if Clark or Wilson fail to get the two-third vote of the convention. They have even gone so far as to declare that Bryan is seriously considering a ticket of which he shall be the head and Woodrow Wilson shall be the running mate. It is almost certain that if Bryan finds it necessary to fight for the temporary chairmanship personally he will be elected.

The determination of the national committee to name Parker to the chairmanship called forth unrestrained denunciations from Ohio James, congressman from Kentucky, who declared that the action was "raw politics." James declared that if no other candidate who really represents the progressive elements of the party can be found "Bryan will himself come forward."

There has been much talk of a coalition between the Wilson and Clark delegations, and Bryan's friends are urging his nomination as a measure designed to offset such a move.

The national committee yesterday seated the Sullivan delegates from Illinois, thereby amting the Hearst contingent.

Gilbert Waller, the national committeeman from Hawaii, cast his vote for Judge Parker in the chairmanship squabble.

General Cablegrams.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Carl Hamilton, one of the United States Army Aviation Corps' instructors, was fatally injured in an accident to his aeroplane here yesterday afternoon. He was crushed under the machine, which fell from a considerable height.

QUEBEC, Canada, June 25.—Flames which ravaged the little town of Chateaufort last night drove more than one thousand people out of their homes and destroyed 125 buildings, almost all the structures in the place. The property damage was comparatively heavy.

PORTLAND, Oregon, June 25.—A captain of police and four of the city's detectives were arrested last night and held on a charge of having accepted bribes. Formal indictments have been issued against the officers.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Refined sugar dropped ten cents on the market here yesterday afternoon.

KANSAS MAN CONFIDENT OF THE ELECTION OF TAFT

WASHINGTON, June 25.—"President Taft is not only going to be nominated at Chicago, but he is going to be elected in November," declared Representative Anthony of Kansas at the White House today. Mr. Anthony had conferred with the President, found him tuned up for the fray at Chicago next week, and firm in his confidence that it will result in victory for him.

"The industriously circulated view that Roosevelt is the only man than can be elected by the republicans is for a purpose," went on Mr. Anthony. "The solid, substantial men of this country are behind the President. I do not mean the big interests of Wall street, but I do mean the business man and manufacturer of moderate rating and desirous of a continuation of sane, responsible government."

"It is admitted that this class of men did not take part in the burrahs of primaries and elections. All the primary election figures indicate that less than 50 per cent of the registered republican vote was polled. What about the other 50 per cent, the men who were not influenced by the noise and shouts to go to the polls? How will they vote in November?"

"President Taft stands mighty well with thinking democrats, and the Baltimore national convention must put up a first-class man to poll the full party vote. If the democratic nominee is too radical and regarded as unsafe by good men of his party he will lose more votes than he will gain from radical republicans who may be dissatisfied with the nomination of Taft. In the event there is a bolt at Chicago and a division of the radical vote President Taft is practically sure of election in November."

CARDINAL FARLEY APPROVES BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

His Eminence, Cardinal Farley, approves the Boy Scouts of America and the forming of boy scout troops in parishes of the Roman Catholic Church. These troops will be known as the Catholic Boy Scouts of America and will be under the direct supervision of a priest or a Catholic layman.

After a careful investigation of the principles of the Boy Scout Movement and after receiving reports from Roman Catholics throughout the country who have been actively interested in the Boy Scout work for more than a year, Cardinal Farley became convinced that the ideals and the activities of the Scout Movement can be utilized in a most effective manner in developing boys. His emphatic announcement in favor of the movement already has given incentive to the formation of troops of boy scouts in Catholic churches throughout the country.

Though hitherto some Catholic priests have been opposed to the movement and have discouraged Catholic boys from joining they gradually have come to see that the great principles of the Boy Scouts organization are non-sectarian; that boys of all creeds can take up new activities and apply them in accordance with the teachings of their own church. They also have come to see that there is no effort to keep from authority in the organization men who are Catholics, but that the aim is to get behind the movement men of all creeds and all professions.

The Cardinal's ideas of the Scout Movement are expressed by Monsignor Hayes, Secretary to the Cardinal, who says: "It is correct that the Cardinal has approved of the formation of divisions of the Boy Scouts within the parishes of his diocese so long as the movement is under proper Catholic auspices. That is the whole thing. Victor F. Ridder, son of Herman Ridder, has been much interested in the movement and has explained to His Eminence, who had no objection to it so long as it is conducted under proper auspices. If these boys are going camping in the woods we think we should have something to say about it, and that their church should follow them. The movement is a very big one.

The approval of the Cardinal was secured on a condition he requested, which the New York council assented to, viz: that there be a Catholic Division of the Boy Scouts and that all parish branches within his jurisdiction prefix the title Catholic Division before their official designation. Thus the branch or troop in course of formation within the Cathedral parish is to be known as Cathedral Troop, Catholic Division of the Boy Scouts of America. Each troop or branch is to be under the immediate direction of the pastor or someone designated by them who shall be informed of the progress of the movement and be consulted from time to time.

Many prominent Catholics throughout the country are thoroughly in sympathy with the Scout Movement. Monsignor Thomas J. Shahan, D.D., President of the Catholic University of Washington and the Rt. Rev. Geo. A. Dougherty, Vice-Rector of that institution, have expressed themselves to James E. West, Chief Scout Executive of the Boy Scouts of America, as in thorough sympathy with the Boy Scout Movement. Festus J. Wade, a banker and Judge Daniel G. Taylor, both of St. Louis, Mo., are enthusiastic supporters of the Scout Movement. In Washington, in Tulsa, Okla., in Kearney, N. J., in St. Louis and in many other cities there are troops of Catholic Boy Scouts.

Among the Catholics on the various local councils throughout the country are the following:
Rev. J. B. Cantillon, Priest, Napa, California; Judge William H. Delacy, Washington, D. C.; Judge J. L. O'Mealy, Adrian, Mich.; Dr. V. H. Stiekney, Physician, Dickinson, N. D.; Rev. J. S. Dignam, Priest, Dickinson, N. D.; Thomas N. Cullinan, Lawyer, Bridgeport, Conn.; Hon. Enrique Acosta, Mayor, Rio Piedras, Porto Rico; Patrick A. Duane, Mayor, Waltham, Mass.; Patrick McGowan, Board of Education, New York; Rev. John T. Kelliber, Priest, Brockton, Mass.; Hon. F. P. McQuillen, Alderman, Jackson, Mich.; Rev. Joseph Carey, Priest, Austin, Tex.; A. J. Clarity, Juvenile Court Judge, Leona, Ill.; John J. Kreutzer, Mayor, Peru, Ind.; William Byron, Lawyer, Concord, Mass.; Thomas M. Brennan, Boston; Dr. David D. Scamnell, Boston and William Morrow, City Attorney, Scotts Bluff, Neb.

LATEST TYPES OF STREET CAR ARE BUILT FOR SAFETY

NEW YORK'S NEW "STAIRLESS CAR"

New York likes its newest type of street car, so the surface traction company in Manhattan has ordered 150 of them. Next fall will see the Manhattan portion of the city riding in the "stairless car," which is entered from the side and has no end entrances.

At first, in the manner of New York with innovations, the big town was disposed to make light of the new car, calling it names, but after a little experimentation and experience, it has decided that the car is a good thing.

Among the other names applied to the vehicle was "hobble skirt" car. Therein may be read an explanation of the favor with which women have received it, for, no matter how tight or narrow are the skirts which women wear, they can enter or leave this car with ease and safety.

The floor of the car is ten inches above the pavement and hangs down between the trucks. The car has a look of compactness and strength, for the ends are rounded, and there is nothing to suggest a protruding step or handrail. "It makes you think of a little battleship," said one observer. In building the car its designer, J. S. Doyle, superintendent of car equipment of the Manhattan surface lines, had in mind primarily the matter of accident prevention.

To make a car that would be safe to board or alight from was his aim. So a car was built with side doors which cannot be opened until the car stops. The car cannot start until the door closes. There is no step for boys and men in a hurry to jump upon or for women to fall from. When the car stops the conductor, who has a seat in the middle behind a little desk, presses a button with his foot and a pneumatic arrangement opens the door. Then the motorist, if the track is clear, sets his controller in the first notch for going ahead.

The conductor, when the passengers are off and on, closes the door by releasing the button, and the instant the door closes the controller is thrown back to the stop position. If the way is not clear the motorist does not throw his controller in, but the closing of the doors flashes a light before him, and he goes ahead.

Provisions are made for the satisfactory lighting, heating and ventilation of the car. The seats are arranged comfortably in pairs and are all cross seats, with the exception of those in the two ends, which are semicircular in arrangement. When the car was offered to some prominent women for inspection they promptly nicknamed it the "box-car" on account of these seats. There is provision for standees, but no straps. The place of the straps is taken by posts.

Chicago has recently adopted a car which it knows as the "rear side car." Its particularly new feature, as viewed from the outside, is the absence of the rear platform and the closed door with disappearing steps on the front platform. The rear platform has been converted into a sort of observation compartment, with seats. There is a door in the rear, to be used only in case of emergency.

New York and Boston, with other cities, have been greatly interested of late in the matter of safety provision for the passengers in public conveyances. Not long ago a woman dancer sued the Interborough Rapid Transit company of New York, which operates the subway. She was injured by falling between a train and a platform at the Fourteenth street station. There are open spaces between the station platform and the trains as they stop at this station. The company asserted that it had done all it could do to eliminate the danger by stationing men on the platform to warn passengers to "Watch your step!" They cry this out continually whenever passengers alight from or enter cars. The court held that this was a sufficient precaution and refused damages to the complainant. In commenting on the case, the presiding justice asserted that the point raised was very important and its decision would probably create a precedent of moment in disposing of similar accident cases which might arise in the future.

In Boston the supreme court of Massachusetts decided a few weeks ago that women are not obliged to lift their skirts in alighting from cars unless they choose to do so. They have every right, furthermore, the learned court declared, to wear skirts of whatever length they wished.

Miranda R. Martin of Brockton was getting off a car when her skirt caught on a sand plunger which projected from the front platform. She was flung to the street and sued the company, getting a verdict of $1000 damages. The company appealed from the decision, alleging that the woman had been negligent in failing to lift her long skirt high enough to clear the plunger.

In affirming the judgment, the supreme court held that the company's position was untenable. The woman had been told by an authorized employee to leave by the front door, and the company, it was held, should have cautioned her about the presence of the plunger.

ROOSEVELT PLANS

With these means and arguments are the Roosevelt men working upon the individual delegate as he arrives, bringing influence to bear upon him from financial interests in his own home, directed from the metropolitan delegation.

Facing a Desperate Situation.

It is a desperate situation with the Roosevelt men now, and they are seeking to win in other directions what they are being denied in the contests before the national committee. The effect upon the Roosevelt cause of yesterday's decision in the Indiana case is admitted to be damaging for the reason that the outcome in those cases undermines confidence in all the other Roosevelt contests.

The conviction has been growing upon the national committee from the first that the contests are flimsy in the main, and that most of them should not have been brought. The committee feels it should have been spared the arduous task of sitting for two weeks through arguments that have no foundation in fact.

That the colonel, as I have intimated before, must have been misinformed about many of these contests seems clear in view of his strenuous insistence that these very Indiana contests, which every one of his men on the committee voted against, were thrown out unanimously.

Nothing Heard About Platforms.

It is a remarkable thing and the subject of comment that in all this turmoil nothing is heard of platforms or policies. Four years ago everybody was all worked up over the tariff plank in the platform and from the way they pulled and hauled over it, one would have thought the fate of the great republican party was at stake. Some people since have thought it was, at that. I have heard the word tariff mentioned since I struck town.

The La Follette people are sitting up at nights watching the strong box in which those price-ers thirty-six votes repose and are drawing up a La Follette platform to be submitted as a minority report. The La Follette men are going right down the line with their candidate presenting a name for temporary chairman and all a show of their own in one ring under the big tent while Taft and Roosevelt are doing the ground and lofty tumbling and the other stunts for which they are billed.

Launching a Life Boat

The hardest lessons are those to be learned from bitter experience but it is just such experience that has been responsible for almost every notable development in human progress. The recent appalling disaster to the ill-fated steamer Titanic was a drama with manifold morals but the one lesson which stood out above all others was the need for more lifeboats and for a force of men trained in the launching and navigation of such craft.

It is pretty well ensured that the men and women who in future go down to the sea in ships will at least have all the protection that can be afforded by an adequate number of boats and similar emergency craft. But the problem of just what is the best type of boat and to what extent our existing models may be improved is one that for some time to come is likely to enlist the attention of not only designers and inventors and manufacturers but the general public as well. Already those government officials at Washington which have jurisdiction in such matters are being flooded with ideas and suggestions and drawings and specifications for "first aid" boats and rafts and the like.

This sudden turn of affairs that has focused public attention and American inventive genius upon ships' boats comes as a complete surprise in many quarters and nowhere more so than in practical shipping circles. For a large share of the shipping world had come to look upon such boats as if not obsolete, at least commonplace or even superfluous. Of course, all steamers have carried a certain complement of boats and life rafts—they had to according to governmental regulations—but with the disclosure of the miracles of wireless telegraphy most masters and owners half believed that the sea had been robbed of its last terror while the general public was still further lulled to a sense of security by the consoling fiction of the "unsinkable ship."

The tragic object lesson that has brought home the need of an ample number of boats has also borne a message regarding the relative qualifications of some of the different types of boats in use. Happily for those in the Titanic's boats the sea was calm when they took to the small boats, but a realization of what such a situation might mean in mid-ocean if the waves were tossing high makes it imperative that every lifeboat shall be seaworthy in the highest degree.

It is whispered that vessel owners had grown careless on this score—just as they had become indifferent regarding the number of boats provided—and that a considerable proportion of the so-called lifeboats carried on oceanic liners are (or were up to the time the Titanic sank) not actually lifeboats at all, merely open boats without the special construction or equipment needed to adapt them to emergency service.

There are three general classes of boats allowed and authorized by the United States governmental regulations heretofore in force. These are wooden lifeboats, metal lifeboats and collapsible boats, in addition, of course, to life rafts. Only recently Uncle Sam's requirements regarding lifeboats have been greatly stiffened.—the new regulations are to go into effect on July 1, next,—with a view to securing greater efficiency and seaworthiness in such craft, but it is likely that further radical revisions of the laws will now be necessary on this score. For one thing, the chronicle of the Titanic disaster (if careful and expert investigation bears out the reports of survivors) would seem to give a black eye to the collapsible boat as a haven of refuge in an oceanic disaster. Under the regulations heretofore in force it has been permissible for a steamer to provide one-third of her required boatage in the form of these collapsible boats. Of course owners have liked them because they do not take up anything like as much room as other boats, to say nothing of a saving in cost. Indeed on some of the big trans-Atlantic liners the custom has been to stack the collapsible boats on top of one another just as camp stools are piled on the deck of an excursion steamer.

As between metal and wooden lifeboats it is a matter of individual opinion or expert judgment with two verdicts. Each type has its good points and each has its enthusiastic advocates not only among the general public who are swayed by ordinary everyday opinions but also among the experts who have technical knowledge. In the U. S. Navy the profference in signing for metal boats—and the Navy officers are entitled to some consideration in their judgment for they have long been away ahead of the merchant marine in that they have provided on each of Uncle Sam's warships ample boats to take off every man in the event of a disaster. On the other hand the U. S. Life Saving Service, admittedly the finest life-saving service in the world, and extensive users of life boats prefer the wooden boats. So, too, have most of the leading steamship companies up to this time. Nor can this favoritism for wooden boats on the part of the leading steamship companies be charged to economy for a first-class wooden lifeboat of the largest size costs from $400 to $550, whereas a good metal boat may be obtained at prices ranging from $225 to $400 each. It is claimed for the metal boats that they will not break or collapse; that they do not suffer deterioration from the ravages of wood-boring insects; and that they can be indefinitely stored on deck without danger that the seams will open and render the boat leaky. On the other hand it is asserted that a wooden lifeboat may be far more readily repaired after a minor accident than a metal boat may be.

Although there has been criticism of late regarding some of the lifeboats to be found on passenger-carrying steamers it would be a great mistake for any reader to get the impression that vessel owners have been allowed to provide these boats in accordance with any bit and miss policy or in conformity with their own individual ideas. In the United States all lifeboats must be built and installed in accordance with rules and regulations laid down by the Steamboat-Inspection Service, a very important branch of our national government. All builders of lifeboats are obliged to furnish the Supervising Inspector-General with drawings and specifications showing and explaining the construction of the craft they are turning out and the characteristics of the material used. In addition to the general requirement that all lifeboats shall be substantially built Uncle Sam goes so far as to prescribe the kind of material that may be used. For example, one thickness of metal is prescribed for metal lifeboats less than 20 feet in length; another weight is demanded for boats 20 to 24 feet in length; and a third and yet heavier grade is exacted in the case of boats longer than 24 feet.

There is a hard and fast rule that every lifeboat shall be theoretically unsinkable—if we may use that word after the Titanic disaster. To this end it is required that all lifeboats shall have air-tight tanks of sufficient capacity to float the boats when they are full of water and when loaded to the limit of their capacity. The government officials are required to test these tanks when the boat is installed and at least once a year afterward. The government formula also stipulates that each lifeboat must carry at least two life preservers, a full complement of oars, two spare oars, a steering oar, a bathhook, an ax and a bucket. In the case of the lifeboats provided for use on the larger ocean-going vessels the equipment must also include a mast and sail with necessary rigging, a boat compass, a lantern and illuminating oil, etc.

Very important from the standpoint of the shipwrecked passengers in a lifeboat—and yet seldom thought of in advance by the layman—is the supply of food which a wise official forethought prescribes shall be carried on every lifeboat. Of course, this supply must be kept in storage in the boat itself, for in most instances there would be neither time nor opportunity to procure food supplies when imperiled mariners take refuge in one of these small craft. The standard food supply exacted consists of a breaker of fresh water of at least fifteen gallons capacity and one sealed tin containing 25 pounds of hard bread, but if a ship captain prefers he may stock each of his lifeboats with thirty rations or fifteen pounds of the U. S. Army Emergency ration, the best form of concentrated food, as a substitute for the twenty-five pounds of hard bread above mentioned.

One of the great problems in connection with the use of lifeboats on big passenger steamers—and naturally the problem has become more complicated as the ocean liners have grown in size and in height—is found in the necessity that passengers get into the lifeboats on the deck level, a distance, in the case of the Titanic of say fifty or sixty feet above the water. Naturally many of the more timid passengers are nervous over such a condition particularly because in days gone by there have been horrible blunders and whole boatloads of people have been precipitated into the sea through carelessness in lowering the boats or mistakes that caused one end only of a boat to be lowered with the result that all her passengers were tossed into the water. Modern mechanical devices that make the launching motion more automatic have tended to lessen such dangers but there remains to be solved the problem of embarking passengers at a lower level.

Another advance of recent years in the lifeboat field is found in the improvement in the facilities for launching lifeboats. The U. S. governmental regulations require that all lifeboats shall be fitted with such davits and gears as will enable the boats to be safely launched in less than two minutes from the time the clearing away of the boat is begun. It is stipulated that on vessels carrying passengers all lifeboats must, if practicable, be carried under substantial davits or cranes which, of course, would enable them to be lowered direct into the water. However, if it is not practicable to thus carry all lifeboats it is permissible to stow the remainder near at hand and Uncle Sam's experts say that such is the perfection of modern launching apparatus that in the case of a disaster such as that which befell the Titanic it would have been a simple matter to have put all the passengers and crew into boats even were there no more boats swinging from davits than was actually the case, if the additional boats had been stored on chocks back against the deck houses. This would seem to dispose of the contention of some steamship officials that it is not feasible to carry nor successfully launch enough boats to take care of a large ship's company. It is required that all boats under davits be capable of being simultaneously launched and whereas some delay would of course ensue in lowering the second division of boats there would be ample time for carrying out such a plan if people aboard a ship had any warning of impending disaster.

Recent events will presumably do much to still further perfect lifeboat design and principles of construction but this industry has developed at no slow pace during the more than a century that has intervened since a London coachmaker first conceived the idea of a lifeboat. Not only has the twentieth century form of lifeboat been rendered virtually unsinkable through the introduction of the air-tight tanks above mentioned but it may be, through ingenious mechanism, rendered self-righting and self-bailing—that is it will automatically return to its normal position if by any chance capsized and will mechanically free itself of the water which has been shipped in the overturning or as the result of waves breaking over the craft.

Another revolutionary development in the lifeboat field was in contemplation even before the Titanic tragedy spurred the officials to study of the whole broad subject. This is the proposal which has been up for some time past to authorize the use of motor-driven lifeboats on ocean steamers. The Life Saving Service has for some time past been using lifeboats and surfboats equipped with gasoline engines and has upward of 150 of these power boats that are giving splendid satisfaction, but the government has hesitated to allow the use of such boats on big ships—partially because of some fear on the part of the public regarding possible danger from the gasoline. Now, however, it is proposed to sanction the motor-driven lifeboats and in the case of a disaster in mid-ocean, the power provided would enable the shipwrecked party to set out for shore or for a part of the ocean lanes where there would be a sure chance of encountering passing vessels.

GOLF, TENNIS, BATHING.

Nothing is more invigorating than a game of tennis or golf and nothing more refreshing at the close than a dip in the ocean where the beach is free from coral like that at Haleiwa. Visitors pronounce it the best in the islands and the management of the Haleiwa Hotel are confident that the judgment passed by tourists is correct. At a cost of six dollars and fifty cents one may journey to Haleiwa on the limited Saturday afternoon and return by the same fast train Sunday night and that covers all expenses at the hotel and for transportation. It is a cheap trip and many persons are taking advantage of the low rate.

DANGER PERIOD OF WOMANS' LIFE FROM 45 to 50

Interesting Experience of Two Women—Their Statements Worth Reading.

Asheville, N.C.—"I suffered for years with female trouble while going through the Change of Life. I tried a local physician for a couple of years without any substantial benefit. Finally after repeated suggestions to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I quit my physician and commenced using it with the happiest results. I am today practically a well woman and anxious to contribute my mite towards inducing others to try your great medicine, as I am fully persuaded that it will cure the ailments from which I suffered if given a fair chance.

"If you think this letter will contribute anything towards further introducing your medicines to afflicted women who are passing through this trying period, it is with great pleasure I consent to its publication."—Mrs. JULIA A. MOORE, 17 East St., Asheville, N. C.

The Case of Mrs. Kirlin. Circleville, Ohio.—"I can truthfully say that I never had anything do me so much good during Change of Life as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. "Before I had taken one half a bottle of it I began to feel better, and I have continued taking it. My health is better than it has been for several years. If all women would take it they would escape untold pain and misery at this time of life."—Mrs. ALICE KIRLIN, 358 W. Mill St., Circleville, Ohio.

The Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. At such times women may rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

price for permission given the English to erect a factory Adams was held captive in Japan and never allowed to return to England.

The play contains two acts, with five scenes and is quite interesting and instructive. It is scarcely worth while to enter into any serious or lengthy discussion of the play. Suffice it to say that the part of the Sister Mary in England by Miss Ruse is very well done; that the part of Will Adams is not so well done, and that the young Japanese lady, who is compelled to use English, does quite well. The important point to notice and emphasize in connection with this play is not so much the degree of histrionic ability, which will of course improve with practice, but the fact that it is possible to put a bilingual play on the boards in Tokio and to draw appreciative crowds.

Appreciated by Japanese. Of course, it should not be inferred from the last remark that all of the large audience could understand English. A few country people who did not know how even to sit properly on chairs could find nothing but fun in Will's English. But almost all seemed to understand and appreciate the acting, especially the scene in which Will's sister Mary appears. The moment the vision scene was disclosed, the audience was hushed. All understood the situation and followed Mary's acting with the closest attention. After the receipt of a letter from her brother she gets back to the spinning wheel and tries to sing, but her voice falls and she breaks down and falls on the shaft of the wheel. It was done naturally and effectively, and all Japanese readily expressed their appreciation. Human nature is much the same all over the world.

After all, the sign language of realistic, natural acting is the universal language. ERNEST W. CLEMENT.
