

DECISION MAY LET DOWN BARS FOR JAPANESE

If T. Ozawa Gains Citizenship, Case May Be Held to Establish Precedent From Which No Appeal May Be Taken

ORDER TO THAT EFFECT FILED, SAYS BRECKONS

District Attorney McCarn Denies Its Existence, Forbids Search; Judge Dole May Render Opinion Saturday

If Takao Ozawa, the Japanese whose naturalization case will soon be decided by Judge Sanford B. Dole, is admitted to citizenship of the United States, will that decision be subject to appeal or will it set a precedent which will "let down the bars" to all Japanese resident in Hawaii or on the mainland who wish to become citizens?

An order from the attorney-general's office which would make Judge Dole's decision final, is on file in the district attorney's office—at least so maintains former District Attorney R. W. Breckons, who says the order was received during his term of office. The present district attorney, Jeff McCarn, claims, however, that no such order exists in his files, to which, however, he denies newspaper access.

Attorney Breckons said today that about two years ago, during his incumbency, there was received by his office a circular letter from the attorney-general's department in Washington, D. C., which was to the effect that, owing to a decision, or decisions, of circuit courts of appeals, in which it was held that the decision of a judge in a naturalization case was not appealable, and in which opinions the department of justice acquiesced, district attorneys were instructed to no longer take appeals in behalf of the United States in naturalization cases. No decision to contrary.

"As far as I know, there have since been no decisions to the contrary," said Attorney Breckons. "Unless these instructions have been changed, the local district attorney's office will be working contrary to instructions if it takes an appeal in the Ozawa case, pending, or pending, Ozawa is admitted to citizenship. But I do not know whether these instructions have been changed or not."

District Attorney McCarn declared today that there is no such circular letter on file in his office. A representative of the Star-Bulletin was denied permission to search for the letter.

UNLESS TOW LINE BREAKS ENGINES WILL NOT START

F Submarines Will Be Inhabited By Full Crews All the Way to San Francisco

Only in case a tow line parts or some other emergency makes necessary the placing of the boats under their own power, will the F-1, F-2 and F-3 start their engines on their voyage to San Francisco next week.

This was made plain today by Capt. Sumner E. W. Kittelle of the U. S. cruiser Maryland. Capt. Kittelle has charge of towing the three F class submarines to Mare Island navy yard from this port, and said the F-1, F-2 and F-3 would be towed all the way, including the first leg of the voyage, from here to Hilo.

"If it should become necessary, the submarines will start their engines and move under their own power," said Capt. Kittelle this morning, "but except for an emergency, the boats will be towed all the way."

The submarine's crews and officers will live on board the submarines, in the same manner that the K flotilla's men did on the voyage of the K-3, K-4, K-7 and K-8 here under their own power.

In preparation for the journey, the three F boats have been overhauled thoroughly, cleaned up, bunks and cots renovated and provisions arranged for, although the groceries and food supplies for each submarine will not be put on board until the day of sailing, which will probably not be before Thursday, owing to the roughness of the sea being ordered to make a detour to Laysan Island.

Cooking on the F boats will be done by means of electric stoves, power to heat which will be furnished from the batteries of the vessels. Each ship will have a full crew of 22 men, including officers. Whether a stop will be made at Hilo to permit the Maryland's crew to see the volcano depends on the smoothness of the ocean when the Maryland, Nanshan, Iroquois and the three submarines reach there.

WARNER'S PITT TEAM WINS FROM PENN SQUAD

[Associated Press by Federal Wireless] PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 23.—Pittsburg University added one more step to the championship of the football world when they defeated the Penn team today on Franklin Field. Pitt showed a strong attack, and used many of the former Carlisle players taught them by their coach, Glen Warner. The visitors crossed the Penn line twice, while the locals scored one touchdown on fast plays through the line. Score: Pittsburg 14, Penn, 7.

YALE FOOTBALL TEAM LOSES AGAIN TO W-J

[Associated Press by Federal Wireless] NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 23.—Last year the Washington and Jefferson football team defeated Yale by a score of 13 to 7. This year Coach Fowlwell's team added three more points and made the score 16 to 7, with the Elis on the short end. Both teams showed a new attack. Hinky had the open formation play working today, and Yale crossed the goal line. The charge of the Washington and Jefferson backs proved too strong, and the visitors played consistently throughout.

MICHIGAN ELEVEN IS BADLY SNOWED UNDER

[Associated Press by Federal Wireless] ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 23.—A hunky bunch of "Aggies" marched down to Perry Field this afternoon to tackle Yale's warriors in the first real game of the Michigan season. The hulky bunch marched down to the field and they also marched down the field, and when the game was over the men of Yost had received one of the worst defeats in history. Time and again Macklin's men would charge the Michigan line that was able to hold Harvard last year, and made gains. Even Maubetsch, the All-American star, failed to stop the well-oiled Aggie machine. The final score was Michigan Aggies 24, Michigan 0.

CORNELL DOWNS FAST BUNCH FROM HARVARD

[Associated Press by Federal Wireless] CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 23.—Cornell defeated Harvard at football for the first time in history this afternoon on Soldiers' Field when the Cornellians timed their attack upon Harvard's crew and romped down the field for a score. The Crimson aggregation lost the power of last year in the offense, and Sharpe's men from Ithaca threw back the plunges of the Cambridge backs at every opportunity. Captain Barrett of Cornell, the fast quarterback of last season, planned a successful campaign, and when the whistle blew for the end of the fourth quarter the score stood: Cornell 10, Harvard 0. This is the first defeat for Harvard this year.

MAJOR CONKLIN STRUCK BY AUTO; BADLY INJURED

Major Arthur S. Conklin of the general staff was struck by an automobile which got beyond control of the driver, shortly after 7 o'clock last night on the main road, just west of Moanalua park, and is now in the Fort Shafter hospital with a broken collar bone and many bruises and contusions. The machine which struck Major Conklin was driven by a civilian whose name is not yet known, and there were six soldiers in it as passengers.

Major Conklin and Capt. Mettler had started out to take some observations, and on account of the wet road drove their auto to one side and were putting chains on when the machine which struck the major came around the turn.

Capt. Mettler said the auto was not going more than 20 miles an hour, but the road was so wet the machine was entirely beyond control, and the occupants were yelling and trying to get out. Capt. Mettler got away from the machine, but Major Conklin could not dodge it and was struck. He was thrown 30 feet and was partly unconscious for a time.

The driver of the machine which struck Major Conklin came back and gave his number. No effort has yet been made to ascertain his name, as he was entirely exonerated from blame by Captain Mettler.

MILITARY OFFICIALS IN RUSS CAPITAL GROWING OPTIMISTIC

Believe German Drive Has Spent Its Force—Individual Successes Claimed to Have Narrowed Teuton Campaign Materially—Battling in Galicia

[Associated Press Service by Federal Wireless] PETROGRAD, Russia, Oct. 23.—Military officials regard the situation on the entire front of 675 miles, extending from the Baltic sea to the Galician district, as favorable to the success of the Russian arms, and declare the developments of the last few days show that the German drive has spent its force. The Germans have been checked all along the line and their sphere of action is being constantly narrowed by individual successes of the Russians which force the Germans to abandon parts of their campaign. Eastward the Russians are gaining in many places, notably around Postavy. This town has been taken and the Germans driven westward through Duka. The Russians are still on the offensive at Baranovichi. The successes against the Austrians in Galicia are being followed up at Novalexinetz.

Association Formed in Hilo to Promote American Ideals in Younger Generation

[Special Star-Bulletin Wireless] JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 22.—The All-National Guard team of 16 members selected from the best shots in the militia today won the united service match, defeating the Army, Navy and Marine Corps teams. Sgt. Thomas J. K. Evans of the National Guard of Hawaii, shot with the winning team.

When Sgt. Evans, who shot with the National Guard team, and who previously won the title of champion rifle shot of the United States, comes back to Honolulu about November 9, he will be given one of the greatest receptions any homescomer ever received in the city. Preliminary plans are being made now by the guardsmen, and before the team which went from here to Jacksonville returns everything will be ready for a big time. Aside from the decision that a dance at night will end the festivities of the day of the team's arrival, no positive plans have been made.

Sgt. Evans is a member of Co. A, 1st Infantry, National Guard of Hawaii. He enlisted February 27, 1905, and has been interested in target shooting since the first days of his service. He went to the mainland in 1908, 1909, 1910, 1913 and this year, as a member of the rifle team. He holds the regimental medal and will bring back with him a trophy, a gold medal, and the title of champion rifle shot of the United States. Sgt. Evans is employed in the office of the territorial surveyor.

Sgt. Evans and the other members of the team, with the exception of Capt. Laurence W. Redington, assistant to the adjutant-general, will all return on the Matsonia, reaching Honolulu, November 9. Capt. Redington will return one week later.

JOYRIDING SOLDIER CAUGHT WORKING ON VESSEL IN HARBOR

E. McCarthy, the soldier who escaped from jail after being arrested for stealing Probation Officer Anderson's automobile, was again arrested today, while working on a lumber boat on which it is thought he intended to sail for the mainland. It was also found that a photo which the police have used in trying to locate him is a picture of one of his friends.

McCarthy and three companions were cornered after taking Anderson's auto and all got away but McCarthy. He escaped from jail next day and his companions were later arrested by the military authorities.

ITALIANS JOIN FRENCH AND BRITISH IN BOMBARDMENT OF BULGARIAN COAST—REPORTED SERBIANS AGAIN SHIFT CAPITAL BECAUSE OF TEUTON PROGRESS—LONDON HOPES RIGA WILL BE SAVED

[Associated Press Service by Federal Wireless] UDINE, Italy, Oct. 23.—Encouraged by their success in stopping the repeated blows directed against them by Austria and in the progress they have made in mountain warfare, the Italians are making a general attack along the whole front.

Through the line that stretches through mountain pass and deep valley from Switzerland to the Adriatic sea the Italian commanders have sent their men forward in a strong offensive.

Heretofore the efforts of the generals have been mainly to secure Italy against invasion. This attempt is considered to have been accomplished and it is believed that the Austrians cannot undertake an invasion along any point of the irregular line.

The Italo-Austrian war is now entering the second phase, that of a concerted offensive. The total losses since the war began are only 45,000 killed, wounded and prisoners missing from the Italian ranks, while the Austrians have lost 100,000. The Italian loss is the lowest in percentage, compared to the forces engaged, of any of the belligerents.

CHINESE DIFFER IN OPINIONS ON LATEST REVOLT

Consul Says "Bubble Cannot Last Long;" Gen. Wudan Says "Will Win"

Reports of impending revolution in interior China are received with varying comment by Chinese in Honolulu. The Chinese consul, Mr. Tsung-ang Woo-huan, declares the uprising is a bubble that will soon break.

Gen. Wudan, one of Dr. Sun Yat Sen's former generals, says the revolution will win.

"All heroes become a bore," said Chinese Consul Tsung-ang Woo-huan today, discussing the late reports of the new revolution in China.

"The Chinese people have become mighty tired of Sun Yat Sen. If you want to have any opinion borne out, go to some of the prominent Chinese merchants of Honolulu," he continued.

"Mention the word 'revolution' to them, and they will shake their heads. They have had enough of revolution—and of Sun Yat Sen. They want peace and a chance to work. This report of a revolution is probably just another such rumor as the young hot-heads of the revolutionary party have repeatedly spread during the last six months."

Why are they complaining now? From generals all over the republic of China have come in asking for the reestablishment of the empire, and now that the government is about to submit the question to the vote of the people, the revolutionary forces rise to protest. They are afraid to leave it to a vote of the people.

"The plan of the government is to have representatives elected in every district in China by November 15 and let these men vote for republic or empire."

No One Knows Result. This would be about 3000 intelligent men voting and by the result of their voting the government would abide. No one knows now what the vote would be.

No one has the least idea what the vast masses of China's 400,000,000 are thinking on any question. All that the government knows is that complaints about the inefficiency of the republic have come in from many prominent people, particularly from the military classes.

What the result will be no one can say. Perhaps when they vote for the empire they will try to get Yuan Shih-kai to accept the throne. But I do not think that he will accept the empire. He might even flee from the country. When he took the oath four years ago he vowed to sustain the republic.

This is merely an uprising to disturb the peaceful election of the delegates who should vote on the fate of their country. It is a bubble that cannot float for long. The republican party in China is as small, in proportion, as it is among the Chinese in Hawaii. Young hot-heads compose it."

Gen. Wudan's comment is quite different. Patriots Sure of Victory Now, Declares Wudan.

"This time the Chinese revolution is bound to be a success," comments Col. Gen. D. J. Wudan of Honolulu, a former general under Sun Yat Sen, when discussing the new uprising in China, announced in another column of the Star-Bulletin today.

"Shensi and Kan-Suh provinces," he continued, "formed as the northwest provinces, are almost due west of Peking. They have 72,000,000 population, and the people there are practically a unit against Yuan Shih-kai. Other provinces in the east and south will soon join the movement, which was started in the interior because Shensi and Kan-Suh are mountainous regions, easily defended. They are amply provisioned and have a three months' supply of munitions. Before that is exhausted coast provinces will have joined the movement."

"Sun Yat Sen was for a time discredited in southern China, but now it is remembered that as long ago as 1912 he warned the nation that Yuan would attempt the very course he is now trying to pursue, and the Chinese people are again turning to Sun Yat Sen as their leader."

DECISION MAY LET DOWN BARS TO JAPANESE

ter with the aid of one of the stenographers. Commenting on this action by Mr. McCarn, Attorney Breckons smiled and remarked:

"It is a public matter. It is a circular letter and there is no secrecy about it. All opinions of the attorney general's department are as much public as are land transfers."

District Attorney McCarn, however, has entirely different views in the matter.

McCarn Would Bar Japanese. "This office claims that a Japanese is not subject to naturalization," said Mr. McCarn. "It is not a matter of the jurisdiction of the court. It is not a question for the court, but a question for the Japanese. The Japanese has not right to be naturalized, as I understand it."

The district attorney added that an appeal might properly be taken to the admission of a Japanese, and that the decision admitting the Japanese might be reversed. One of the grounds for appeal, said Mr. McCarn, might be that the petitioner is a Japanese, and a Japanese is not subject to naturalization.

The decision of a judge in admitting a Japanese is not absolutely binding," the district attorney continued. "The next decision admitting a Japanese might be appealed to on several grounds. Such a decision might be a precedent for allowing other Japanese to become citizens, but it would not be binding."

Federal Judge Charles F. Clemons said today that he knew of no such circular letter from the attorney general as is referred to by Attorney Breckons.

"Matter of Policy?" "If there was such a letter, the instructions might have been only a matter of policy, and appeals in exceptional cases might have been considered," said the judge.

A federal official said today that the court here has no jurisdiction except where the petitioners for naturalization are free white persons or persons of African descent or nativity, which is a summary of the naturalization law limitations.

In case Ozawa is admitted, it was stated, the certificate probably could be declared void by the ninth circuit court of appeals in San Francisco on the ground of the lack of jurisdiction by the local federal court.

Van Dyne on naturalization, referring to the Japanese, says: Summary By Van Dyne.

"In the case of Re Saito, 42 Fed. 126, the United States circuit court of Massachusetts held that a native of Japan (of the Mongolian race) is not included within the term 'white persons' in Re Stat. Sec. 2163 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, 1235), and hence is not entitled to naturalization."

In Re Yamashita (Wash.) a native of Japan applied for admission, as an attorney, in the courts of the state of Washington, those laws preclude the admission of any person who is not a citizen of the United States. Yamashita had obtained from the superior court of Pierce county, Washington, an order admitting him to citizenship. It was held that the judgment upon the fact showed that Yamashita was of the Japanese race; that the Japanese are not entitled to become citizens of the United States; that, as the court was without authority to pronounce the judgment, its determination was void, and must be disregarded. It was decided that he could not be admitted.

"It was claimed in the recent controversy caused by the exclusion of Japanese from San Francisco schools, that the Japanese are not Mongolians. But as it does not appear to be claimed that they belong to either the Caucasian or African race it is not seen that they are placed in any better position under our statute."

Was Refused by Murphy. When Ozawa first presented his application for naturalization, he was refused by Federal Clerk A. E. Murphy who then wrote Washington for instructions. Mr. Murphy was advised from Washington to accept the application, as the matter of naturalization was entirely in the hands of the court.

A brief filed by J. Wesley Thompson, former assistant district attorney, contained a number of reasons why Ozawa should not be admitted. The principal ground was the naturalization law itself.

Judge Dole now has Ozawa's application under advisement. The matter may be given a hearing next Saturday morning.

Turkey has consented to the emigration to the United States of all Armenians who will become naturalized American citizens.

FINDS HAWAII IDEAL FOR BOY SCOUT GROWTH

Capt. J. Van Beuren Mitchell, Chief of Staff, Says Movement Should Be Famous

That the Boy Scout movement in Hawaii is capable of infinite expansion, and that the islands offer ideal opportunities for the training of the scouts, is the opinion expressed by Capt. J. Van Beuren Mitchell, chief of staff to Daniel C. Beard, National Scout Commissioner, who is staying at the Courtyard Hotel, having arrived recently from New York.

At a meeting of the Boy Scouts of Hawaii at the evening, Capt. Mitchell will outline to them briefly the opportunities which they have in these islands, and tell them something of the big things which are being done now on the mainland.

"With such a climate as this of Hawaii," said Capt. Mitchell when interviewed this morning, "with an air that invites you outdoors in all weathers and seasons, with all varieties of plains for drilling, and of mountains and hills for camping, signaling and hiking, there is no reason why the Boy Scouts of Hawaii should not soon be famous."

Rapid Growth in States. Capt. Mitchell then gave some startling statistics, emphasizing the rapid growth of the movement in the states. Incorporated on Washington's Birthday, 1911, and increasing by leaps and bounds until today there are a quarter of a million boys enlisted who have paid in their annual dues of 25 cents, the movement has taken the American youth by storm.

"Directed play is what I call it," said Mitchell, "the Buffalo Bill enthusiasm which thrills every youngster at a certain age, the spirit of the back yard and broken windows, the laughing mischief which delights in the forbidden, these are the forces which the Boy Scout movement picks up and turns into profitable channels. The master secret of success with boys is the realization that they love to learn if learning is given the right aspect. Instead of offering a crown of laurel, if they had a crowd of Indian feathers before their eyes I'll wager that they could be made enthusiastic over Greek. Also, they like substantial things, though of course if they can't find them they will have to content themselves with fairy tales."

"One reason they fall into the Boy Scout movement is because it takes on a certain dignity through having attached to it such names as Woodrow Wilson, Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft as honorary presidents. Collin J. King is the actual president, and James West the chief executive. Learn Laws First Thing.

The first thing the prospective scout must learn is to learn the laws: (1) To be trustworthy, (2) loyal, (3) helpful, (4) friendly, (5) courteous, (6) kind, (7) obedient, (8) cheerful, (9) thrifty, (10) brave, (11) clean, (12) reverent. These are things which every boy can appreciate. And then he takes the oath to do his duty to God, his country, and to obey the scout law; to help other people at all times; to keep himself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight. Once with these things learned he is eligible to become a scoutmaster at the age of 12. Usually after about a year he becomes a second class scout.

"As a second class scout he must be able to apply the first principles of first aid and bandaging, elementary signaling, with half a mile in 15 minutes, learn 10 points of the compass, and deposit in the bank $1. As a first class scout he must be able to swim 50 yards, send 10 letters a minute signaling, take a 14 mile hike, know advanced first aid, know 10 species of trees, and tell another scout trained by himself. At the age of 18 he is eligible to become an assistant scoutmaster.

"All of these things have a manifold practical value. To learn these things teaches a boy to take care of himself under all circumstances, and gives him a strong feeling of self reliance and sufficiency. As a first class scout he can take up a merit badge which he wears on his arm after he has shown a certain proficiency in one of 55 branches, which include everything from bookkeeping to farming.

"He has a handbook which is full of a thousand important details mixed with the things that a boy delights in."

YANKED SOLDIER RIGHT IN FRONT OF MOTORCYCLE

Dave Crampton, private in Co. G, 1st Infantry, was badly bruised and Ah Sam sustained a broken arm Thursday night when a motorcycle on which Sam and A. Franco, employee of the Mutual Telephone Company, were riding, ran into Crampton on the Belt road near the railroad crossing at Ala.

Policeman Charles Hissaka, who investigated the case, absolved Ah Sam from blame. Crampton and five other soldiers were walking along the road when the motorcycle came up and all but Crampton went to the right of the road. He went to the left and the motorcycle was about to pass between him and his companions when one of them reached out and jerked Crampton over, throwing him in front of the motorcycle. Crampton was taken to the maneuvers camp hospital at Red Hill.

AUGUSTUS E. MURPHY REPORTED AS BEING MUCH BETTER TODAY such as how to follow a trail and distinguish certain sorts of tracks.

"It is worth remembering that Baden-Powell, the originator of the movement in England, founded his system on the idea of the North American Indian. And that is what all successful Boy Scout work amounts to. It is simply to teach the boys practical things while appealing to their imaginations. Their characters are built at the very time when they are at play. You can't talk to youngsters of first principles, but if you establish an honest spirit of rivalry in play among them, you can make them strong, clean, cheerful fellows who learn how to obey and how to command, and can at will become a cor in the machine, or its directing intelligence. A boy who can do this will make the sort of a citizen who counts, and for the ruling force of his moral life he has a principle memorized which is almost as terse and effective as the Persian law to ride, shoot and tell the truth.

"The value of the Boy Scout system is now being admitted by the most advanced boys' schools throughout the eastern section of the states. Culver Military Academy, one of the foremost, has adopted our system throughout and incorporated our laws."

SAY JAPANESE MUST BE GOOD U. S. CITIZENS

take up arms for Uncle Sam. This declaration, briefly given in a wireless despatch to the Star-Bulletin early this week, is enlarged upon in news items received by mail from Hilo today. The Hilo Tribune says: "Something akin to a sensation was created at the meeting of the Japanese-American Citizens' Association last Sunday morning in the Japanese theater on Richardson street when Rev. Sakabe of Honouliuli declared that in case of a war between the United States and Japan it would be the duty of all Japanese-American citizens to take up arms for this country, even though they had to fight their own brothers."

"The statement seemed to meet the approval of all those present, excepting one Japanese who was slightly intoxicated. He hissed the statement and was promptly put out of the hall by the other Japanese.

"Rev. Sakabe amplified his statement by reminding his hearers that Japanese born in this country were Americans and not Japanese. "Arakawa, president of the association, called the meeting together and explained the purpose of the organization. Hisagawa was a speaker who urged that all present work for the growth of the organization.

"Attorney C. C. Carlsmith, who was the only white speaker, had the following to say in part: "This association is the first of its kind here in Hawaii or elsewhere. In California such a movement is not possible at the present time because of the opposition of the white men. Difficulties have arisen in that state which will be only partially settled for some years to come. On the island of Oahu there seems to be some opposition to such a movement and this opposition is led by Japanese who fear to see their young men become attached to another nation. In Hilo there is no feeling except that of utmost good will towards those who are entitled by birth to rights as American citizens."

"It will depend upon his organization to demonstrate whether young men of Japanese parents can be good citizens of the United States. If they make good, they will perform a service to Japan by hastening the time when intelligent Japanese subjects may be admitted to rights of naturalization on a par with other aliens; and they can perform a wonderful service in solving questions of politics and government here in Hawaii.

"Your position as members of this club is not going to be an easy one. The old Japanese people are going to make it hard for you to be American citizens. Many Americans are going to call you Japs and give the word a touch of scorn, which you do not deserve. You are going to be constantly between the upper and nether stories. "Time can only tell whether you have the character to stand it. You will not go to Japan to earn a living there, for the conditions are too hard. You cannot hope to enter into competition with other citizens on the mainland. You will undoubtedly remain in Hawaii, and most be citizens of this territory. As such you have each a big task laid out before you. I do not doubt you are going to perform well the task."

The objects of the new association are enlarged upon at greater length in a letter which President Arakawa has written to F. K. Makino, publisher of the Hawaii Hoel. In this letter Arakawa says: "Probably you are already informed that an association made up of Hawaiian-born Japanese only has been inaugurated here in Hilo with the island of Hawaii as its working field for the time being, and I am quite certain that you will be one of the advocates of this association. It is the first of its kind here in Hawaii or elsewhere. It will depend upon this organization to demonstrate whether young men of Japanese parents can be good citizens of the United States. If they make good they will perform a service to Japan by hastening the time when intelligent Japanese subjects may be admitted to rights of naturalization.

"Up to the present time the ideals and the aims of the majority of the Hawaiian born Japanese were narrow. This association will enable them to become citizens, true and complete members of the republic. We are seeking to bring men into the unity which we call America, and are not satisfied with mere similarity of language or religion, but in spirit.

"The principal objects of this association, 'The American-Japanese Citizens' Association of Hawaii,' is to create good understanding of the American people, to promote good fellowship among the American citizens of Japanese parentage residing in this territory, to encourage all members in the pursuit of their ideals, and to that end to work out problems peculiar to its members; to foster among its members a spirit of support and of loyalty to the American flag and constitution, and in every way to make its members conscious of their duties and obligations to themselves, to the community and to the nation.

"I am sure you will no doubt approve our move."

IN TWO MINUTES JURY DECLARES PAIR INNOCENT

Scully and Chilton Acquitted of Conspiracy Charge After Nine Day Trial

After deliberating for two minutes a trial jury in Circuit Judge Ashford's court brought the Scully-Chilton conspiracy case to a sudden end yesterday afternoon by returning a verdict of not guilty. The jury left the court room shortly after 5 o'clock.

As soon as the verdict was returned Judge Ashford discharged the defendants. Scully went back to Oahu prison to finish serving a sentence for transporting and otherwise handling opium. Chilton, accompanied by his wife and father, went home. Before Chilton left the court room, Judge Ashford and Clerk Huron K. Ashford congratulated him.

Nine days were consumed in the trial of the case. The matter was argued before the jury yesterday afternoon. The case was one of the longest on record in Circuit Judge Ashford's court. Both the prosecution and the defense called large numbers of witnesses.

In the original indictment, Scully, Chilton and J. H. Fischer were charged with conspiracy, it being alleged that on or about June 29, 1914, they "solicited" a witness away from a meeting of the liquor license commission. Shortly before the case went to trial, the case against Fischer was nolle prossed. Taking the stand in his own defense yesterday, Chilton declared that at no time was there any agreement, as far as he knew, between himself and Scully or anyone else to prevent Fischer from being a witness before the liquor license board.

During the trial two Japanese witnesses for the prosecution were committed by Judge Ashford for perjury. They were indicted and were to be arraigned today.

Honolulu Star-Bulletin

LEY H. ALLEN EDITOR

ATURDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1915.

THE ADMINISTRATION RAPPED IN STATE ELECTIONS.

UNCLE SAM, WORLD FINANCIER.

Attention is drawn by a Honolulu banker to the small size of the half-billion dollar loan compared to the national wealth of the United States, bank deposits or value of farm products. Indeed, the richest country in the world can lend half a billion dollars without more than a ripple in financial circles. Since the war started, not only has the United States steered easily clear of a financial panic, but has wiped out the floating debt of $350,000,000 due Europe on January 1 and absorbed between $750,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 of American securities which up to a few months ago were held abroad, but which were hurriedly re-sold to raise war funds.

The comptroller of the treasury estimates that the income of the people of the United States available for investment amounts to $5,000,000,000 a year. This is all in excess of the income devoted to living expenses, and the people of the United States are notoriously living on a scale which could probably be cut in half in the case of several million people.

These figures indicate the comparative affluence of this country at a time when the Allies are borrowing abroad and the Teutons are "living on their expenses" as one banker put it. The conclusion is that after the war the United States must finance the world to replace the tremendous amount of material wealth which has been destroyed.

A CHAIRMAN'S CONVERSION.

James Hay, representative in congress from the seventh Virginia district, has taken notice, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. This is more important than it may seem at first thought. Hay is chairman of the house committee on military affairs.

Earlier in the summer Chairman Hay in a widely criticised interview declared that he had "not found among the people any real demand for changing our present policy for providing for national defense." The man who, above almost any other in the new house, should be influential in framing new legislation for the better defense of the country thus early showed himself out of harmony with prevailing national thought on the subject.

But last week Hay made an address to the people of his own district at New Market. He told his auditors that he stood with President Wilson on the subject of defense and would be guided largely by the president's recommendations. He denied with emphasis that he intended to embarrass the administration, only reserving the right not to be "stampeded" into support of a stronger military policy.

This is better. The chairman's first statement smacked too strongly of ultra-pacifism to suit the spirit of the time in the United States. It appeared to suggest strongly an indefinite continuation of pork barrel methods in military legislation. The Hay attitude as first announced is precisely what has perpetuated useless army posts and superfluous navy yards; it has helped increase fraudulent pensions while starving the active military establishment to the point of impotence.

The seventh district Virginian does well to join the procession. The new congress has a big task to perform in way of giving the country better military preparedness; it needs the co-operation of the head of the committee on military affairs. Mr. Hay has an opportunity to lead which ought to be a more satisfactory role than the one certain to fall to him had he persisted in his original attitude of blindness toward a grave national necessity.

WHAT PUBLICITY SHOWS.

"Publicity will cure epidemics of disease that spread through indifference or desire to conceal the plague spots. It will also cure epidemics of political indifference that make gang rule possible and result in the criminal waste of the money paid into the city treasury out of on the light! And again, turn the light on!" says the Philadelphia Evening Ledger.

Publicity also shows where efficiency is subordinated to politics; where pull and favoritism weigh more heavily than discipline in certain parts of Honolulu's government. For instance, the road department.

All signs point to a fine young filibuster in the charter convention next week.

You can lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink.

Two state elections recently have resulted in anything but a satisfactory manner for supporters of the Democratic national administration. New Jersey and Maryland have both gone against the Wilsonites and in both states it was recognized that the issues were something more than local, inasmuch as the administration had interested itself actively.

In Maryland the old fight between the Wilson "progressives" led by Senator Blair Lee, and the Smith forces was revived, with victory for the Smith men. Senator Lee is a strong Wilson supporter, one of his mainstays in the senate and it is well understood that the president was interesting himself in the Maryland election. Nevertheless the tide set strongly the other way.

The New Jersey balloting on woman suffrage is not without national significance. Here the president voted for woman suffrage. Though he was careful to emphasize that he voted not as president but as a private citizen, the fact is that it was expected his example would be a powerful factor in swinging a big vote in the same direction.

That the administration's influence was expected to be possibly the deciding force is shown by an editorial in the New York World, a strong pro-Wilson newspaper, a few days before the election. The World said:

Not as president or as party leader but as a citizen of New Jersey called upon to express his conviction at the polls, Mr. Wilson announces that he is favorable to woman suffrage and will vote for it. His remarks also his well-known opinion that the question should be settled by the states and that in no circumstances should the issue be made a party one.

Modest as it is, the effect of this announcement cannot fail to be far-reaching. It will be of immense assistance to the suffrage movement, for it comes from a man whose courage and sincerity are known and not as from one of his predecessors who first vehemently opposed the ballot for women and then, when in desperate straits for a bolting candidate, endorsed the proposition. In spite of his praiseworthy attempt to remove the question of equal suffrage from the sphere of party politics, if Mr. Wilson is to be a candidate for re-election he and his party will naturally profit by his act as a private citizen of New Jersey.

Yet New Jersey beat woman suffrage by a tremendous vote, something like 50,000 majority, and in only one county did the proposition carry.

If these two samples furnish any dependable indication of what the administration's influence is in state elections, the World's comment that Mr. Wilson and his party will profit is to be taken with the reverse English.

CHINA'S IMPENDING REVOLT.

Always dissatisfied with the rule of President Yuan Shih-Kai, the southern provinces of China have found a specific cause of grievance in the apparent drift of the country toward monarchy. Dr. Sun Yat Sen, though driven from his home and forced to go into hiding in cognito, still has many supporters. These discover a rallying-ery in "No Monarchy," and Yuan's recent equivocal utterances give them reason to believe that he is secretly encouraging the move to abrogate the republic.

That Dr. Sun found refuge in Japan and has secured a measure of protection from the Japanese government is well-known. It is to Japan's material interest to see China torn with revolution, for that gives opportunity for further extension of the "spheres of influence." It is hardly likely, so far as Japan is concerned, that the impending revolt in the south will be treated purely as an internal question for China to settle alone.

Judge Cooper's resignation as director of the 1916 Mid-Pacific Carnival is much to be regretted. However, as it is definite, beyond hope of withdrawal, the only thing to do is to get another director and continue the work already well started.

Our idea of a suspicious disposition is one which insists that the Democrats still intend in their hearts to put sugar on the free list next spring.

The shot heard around the world is a back number since the wireless telephone makes the whisper heard round the world, too.

China didn't get into a war with Japan but just to keep up with the times is starting a civil war of its own.

The rolling stone gathers no moss but it has come in mighty handy in the Italian mountain warfare.

Dr. Sun again appears on the horizon.

BERT BOWER NOT FREE, ALTHOUGH SEEN ON STREET

Honolulu Now Serving Prison Sentence, Taken to Court to Testify

Yesterday the appearance of George A. ("Bert") Bower emerging from the doors of the Criterion saloon at 11:30 in the morning astonished many people to whom he was known and who also knew that he was supposed to be serving a three and a half year sentence in the Oahu prison. There was much comment upon the matter and a great deal of wonder as to the reasons for Bower's apparent excursion into the land of freedom.

It was claimed today, however, that Bower was at every moment yesterday accompanied by a guard from the prison. He had left Oahu in order to testify at a damage suit in federal court. He went into the saloon only to use the washroom, was under the surveillance of the guard at that time, and did not go up to the bar, said prison officials.

In contradiction to this, however, the Star-Bulletin has the statement of an entirely reliable eye witness that Bower stood at the bar and drank.

COMMISSIONS TO MEET ON MONDAY AND SWAP IDEAS

For the purpose of discussing the water situation in Honolulu and comparing whatever data has already been secured, the Oahu Loan Fund Commission recently appointed by the governor, and the Honolulu Water Investigation Commission appointed by Mayor Lane will hold a joint meeting in the office of the superintendent of public works next Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

Considerable material has been secured by each commission since its last meeting, the Loan Fund Commission having visited the present water and sewer system, and the city commission having paid a visit to Waihole to secure data of that district. L. A. Thurston is chairman of the latter body, and Charles R. Forbes of the former.

GRADUATES OF M'KINLEY GIVE DANCE TONIGHT

Those former students who are graduates of the McKinley high school will be hosts at a benefit dance at the Outrigger Club tonight, beginning at 8 o'clock. It is reported today that more than 200 tickets are sold.

During the last several years the "old grads" of McKinley have been at work raising money for a tennis court to be presented to the high school. It is believed that tonight's dance will sufficiently fill the coffers of the alumni association so as to permit the immediate building of the court.

The dance will be held in the new pavilion at the club. A Hawaiian quartet will furnish music and refreshments will be served.

Henry A. Asch, chairman, Fred Bailey and Miss Ethel Carter compose the committee in charge of the dance.

Personal Mention

PAUL SUPER, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., has been confined to his home for two days on account of illness.

C. J. MCCARTHY, territorial treasurer, who has been attending the insurance congresses in San Francisco, and incidentally visiting the exposition, is expected to return to Honolulu in the Wilhelmina next Tuesday morning.

MR. and MRS. ZENO K. MYERS,

START BUILDING OF INSPECTOR'S OFFICE AT ONCE

Construction work on the territorial inspector's office at the foot of Fort street, where the new concrete piers, 8, 9 and 10 are to be placed, will begin at once, according to an announcement yesterday by Superintendent Forbes of the public works department.

As the matter of placing the several hundred sampans which are in the harbor and which are to be removed has not been definitely settled, it is now planned to have them tie up at Pier 16 with final disposition of them as soon as a quorum of the harbor board is again in the territory. "I hope that will be soon," says the superintendent, "for there is much work piling up already."

Thomas Church, E. E. Bodge and C. J. McCarthy, all members of the board, are now away. It is hoped that the Lord-Young Engineering Company, which has been awarded the contract, will begin work at once on the piers. Forbes says that the question of safeguarding the yards of the Associated Oil Company from fire has been settled, the company having agreed to make immediate efforts to put the plant in order. C. L. Coppage of San Francisco, sales manager for the company, has given directions for the remodeling work, and bids on it will soon be asked for.

LITTLE INTERVIEWS

HARRY E. MURRAY: We now have in operation about 900 water meters all over the city, and for these meters we have about 15 or 20 kicks or protests against rates and wrong readings. About five months ago we had 230 meters with an average of 100 protests.

CAPT. HENRI BERGER: As a man who has fought as a German soldier I want to say that the report that a woman has been shot while lying on the ground, by a German, is unbelievable. Executed—yes, but not in the way the report has come from London. It cannot be true.

ROBERT HORNER: I understand that the Japanese who own the garage near Beretania and Nuuanu streets have made the offer to plot the little piece of vacant ground there with grass provided the billboards are removed. It is a good idea for the beautification of the city and ought to be looked into.

BENJAMIN F. HOLLINGER: I haven't forgotten my request to Aylett, the garbage collector, that he vacate his present offices for Vierra, superintendent of the parks, schools and playgrounds, and I am going to have another talk with Supervisor Ahia. If that doesn't bring the required results a resolution is possible.

R. W. AYLETT: Garbage collecting is hardest during wet weather, both on account of the fact that the garbage is heavier, and because the roads make harder pulling. As to days in the week, Monday is the hardest because we have two days' gatherings then. Seasons make no difference whatever, as they do in the States.

F. B. FRIETAS: I noticed in the morning paper that some scientist at the Smithsonian Institute is credited with saying that the land shell snails of Hawaii do not sing. I'd like to say that anyone in Hawaii who makes a practise of shell hunting knows that they do sing. The crickets sing, too, but they sing faster than the snails. That's the way we find them, by listening for their singing.

RAYMOND C. BROWN: One of the supervisors recently took A. P. Taylor to task for stating that the road around this island was in bad shape. I wonder if that supervisor has himself been around the road recently to know whether the remark of Mr. Taylor was correct or not. I went around the island yesterday and I want to say that the road from here to Hauula is not good in any place, is bad in all places, and rotten in most places.

Robert Ames, taken to a morgue in New Orleans and prepared for burial after being found under a collapsed building, caused a panic when he came to life and fought attendants in an effort to escape.

who have been visiting in California for the last two and one-half months, will arrive home on the Wilhelmina next Tuesday. They spent some time at the exposition and also recuperated at Lake Tahoe.

FINISH WAR GAME SUNDAY MORNING; PROBLEM SOLVED

Fourth Cavalry Already Marching Home; Other Branches Break Camp Tomorrow

Tomorrow the war game will be over and the men of the army on Oahu will come marching back to barracks after hard campaigning in the hills and on the plains. The 4th Cavalry began the return march this morning and will probably be in some time to camp. Early tomorrow morning the field artillery and the infantry will break camp and start back to headquarters.

The maneuvers were highly successful, according to army officers, and the problems which the soldiers went out to solve were all satisfactorily worked out. Unlike most maneuvers, there were no "blue" and "red" armies fighting against each other. The whole of the maneuvers was devoted to the solution of certain military problems given the field forces by headquarters. No time was set for the end of the work, that being dependent upon the solving of the problems.

Rain has been prevalent since the maneuvers began, and has occasioned some discomfort in the field. The camps were all well drained, and the men did not suffer much, though the showers were at times disagreeable.

Luxuries for officers have been dispensed with in camp, under recent war department rules, and the company officers now fare about as the men do. No more are they allowed big, comfortable wall tents, with chairs, beds, desks and other comforts. They now sleep in the "pup" tents, just as the men do, and at these maneuvers many officers had for the first time the experience of crawling into a tent just big enough to cover them and sleeping on a blanket spread out on the ground.

CLAIMS JOHNSON POINTED GUN AND ASKED FOR CASH

Chauffeur Makes Charge of Attempted Hold-up Against Schofield Private

R. Johnson, private in the machine gun platoon stationed at Schofield Barracks, is being held by the army authorities until full investigation can be made of the charge that he attempted to hold up L. A. Lobell, a chauffeur, at the corner of King and Bethel streets Wednesday night. Johnson was arrested by Officer Sizemore at the point of a gun.

Lobell, who makes his headquarters at the Bethel street auto stand, claims that Johnson held him up just after midnight, sticking a gun in his face and asking for money. Lobell argued with Johnson and during the delay Manuel Correa, who was with him in the front seat of the machine, slipped away and called police headquarters.

Sizemore hurried to Lobell's assistance and surprised Johnson by coming up on him with a gun leveled at his head. The prisoner was turned over to the military authorities Thursday morning.

Three months was the sentence given A. Ferreira yesterday on the charge that he cheated a Chinese boy out of $10 by promising to get him a job which he had no chance of securing. This was the sixth time that Ferreira has been up on this charge.

GEORGE O. HENRY, formerly wagon master for the government and an old resident of the islands, has recently made a change of business by purchasing a large rooming house at 351 Vineyard street. The purchase was made on October 15. There are 20 rooms in the establishment and it will be known as the Ingleside. The purchase price was $1800.

HEADLIGHTS ON AUTOS MUST BE DIMMED AT ONCE

Supervisor William Larsen's automobile light-dimming ordinance goes into effect tomorrow, and the immediate results of it are being watched closely by a large number of interested citizens, as well as organizations. The Chamber of Commerce has decided to pay special attention to it and a paragraph reminding the members of the ordinance was read by Secretary Raymond C. Brown at the last meeting.

According to the ordinance acetylene and prestolite lights are to be dimmed by corrugated or ground glass, and electric lights by the same method or by frosted globes, the frosting to cover the entire globe and to be of a permanent nature. The ordinance was passed 60 days ago, taking effect by law at the end of that period of time.

LARRISON MADE 1ST LIEUTENANT OF ENGINEERS

At a meeting of the Engineering Company of the National Guard of Hawaii to be held next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the office of the superintendent of public works, promotions and appointments of various officers will be made. George K. Larrison has been promoted from the rank of second lieutenant to that of first lieutenant, making, together with 1st Lieut. John Caldwell, two lieutenants for the company. All other companies of the guard, whether infantry, artillery or cavalry, have but one first lieutenant, whereas the engineering companies have two. Lieut. W. C. Whitener, inspector-instructor of the guard, will be present. The officers of the non-commissioned staff will be chosen at this time, and will probably be announced at the regular drill meeting on Monday night.

CADILLAC EIGHT SETS NEW RECORD FOR ONE DAY RUN

Racing cars have covered 500 miles on a paved track in something like six hours, but it is doubtful if any stock car ever covered, in one day, and over ordinary roads, the distance recently recorded by a Cadillac Eight in New England. This car made a trip from Providence, R. I., to Franconia Notch, N. H., and return, 419 miles, in one day of driving. The trip to the Notch from Providence was made in faster time than the return. The distance is 200 miles, and the car was at the Notch 350 minutes after leaving Providence. At times, the speedometer registered 67 miles per hour. Early in the run, fog was encountered; and throughout the trip mountain roads of fair quality were traversed.

On the return, the same roads were traversed for the main part, but several detours were made to pass through towns not included in the route taken on the trip north from Providence, which accounts for the greater distance of the run back to Providence. The car was driven the entire distance by A. J. Feltham of Providence, and carried six passengers.

(Special Cable to Nippon Jiji) SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 23.—The Japanese Association of California will present Emperor Yoshihito with two blooded race horses in honor of the coronation. The horses were bred in America and cost the association $1500 each. The committee selected them at the livestock show at the exposition on Thursday. Emperor Yoshihito has always been a lover of fine horse flesh and the best that could be procured here were purchased by the association.

HALF BILLION SMALL LOAN FOR UNITED STATES

A. Lewis, Jr., vice-president of the Bank of Hawaii, Ltd., reports the following statement appearing in connection with the recent Anglo-French $500,000,000 loan.

While the size of the issue, $500,000,000 appears to be large, it must be remembered that this large sum represents:

Less than 1/360 of our estimated national wealth

Less than 3 per cent of the deposits in our banks in 1914.

Less than half the increase in our bank deposits in 1914.

About two years' increase in our savings bank deposits.

About 1/20 of the value of our farm products in 1914.

Approximately eighteen days' increase in our national wealth. In other words, on the basis of the official estimates of the United States government for the eight years ending 1912, the national wealth has increased more than $500,000,000 since the British and French commissioners have been in this country discussing the loan.

MAYOR AND SUPERVISORS TO MAKE EXAMINATION OF ROUND-THE-ISLAND ROAD

Mayor Lane and the city supervisors will make a trip this afternoon, leaving after the meeting that was called for 12:30, to inspect the Hakipuu section of road. Back queries will also be decided upon from which to take rock for crushing. After next Monday the Alamuki bridge on the belt road at Waiakua is to be closed to traffic, travelers being turned to the lower road through Waiakua. The bridge is to be repaired.

SHIPPING & WATERFRONT NEWS

STEVEDORES AND COAL LOADERS HARD HIT

Among other shipping men of Honolulu who are experiencing a slump in their business due to the stoppage of the Panama Canal, are the stevedores and coal loaders who, before the big waterway was put out of commission by the recent disastrous slides, managed to get in four or five days of work every week.

The canal blockade has stopped arrivals of ships here from Panama and delayed the arrival of American-Hawaiian boats, whose large cargoes furnished much work for stevedores. As the latter boats have been routed via Magellan, they will be weeks late arriving, and in the meantime the cessation of other boats from the canal has resulted in less work for the men who load, unload and coal ships. In some cases the loss of work means a real hardship to these men.

Along Allen street any day now may be seen groups of stevedores and coal passers with nothing to do but kill time until Matson or T. K. K. boats or occasional tramp steamers arrive. When the canal opens again, in January, however, these men will have an attack of nervous prosperity as there will then be a continuous succession of incoming boats from the "big ditch."

MACKINAW WILL CARRY PINES TO EAST BY CANAL

Radio advices received this morning by Fred L. Waldron, local agent for the Mackinaw, stated that the ship will arrive off port Sunday night and dock Monday morning, preparatory to being re-converted into an oil-burner, which she was originally.

On board the Mackinaw, which is coming from New Caledonia with a valuable cargo of chrome ore, also Australian products, is her managing owner, George D. Flood.

Mr. Waldron said today that the steamer will sail probably some time Tuesday for San Diego, taking 250 tons of canned pines from this port for New York. At the southern California port she will take on fuel oil to supply her until she reaches Panama.

At Panama the boat will wait until the canal is partially cleared. As she draws only 22 feet, it is thought she may be able to pass through by November 10, the date on which it is expected the slides in Culebra cut will have been dredged out sufficiently to permit the passage of steamers of light draft.

READY TO HANDLE RECORD MAIL IN HURRY

With 523 sacks of mail coming in on the Wilhelmina Tuesday morning Postmaster William F. Young and his assistants are preparing for the rapid handling of the big consignment.

Auxiliary clerks will be put to work sorting and distributing the mail as soon as it arrives, and the regular clerks will be assigned to this work, and paid over-time as provided for in postal regulations, when necessary.

"Mail for Honolulu is getting heavier with the approach of the tourist season, and the regular fall and winter business," said Mr. Young this morning. "We are using auxiliary service and overtime for regular clerks handling the shipments."

"When the Great Northern starts coming she will bring tourists who will order their mail sent here and who will send large quantities of mail to the mainland, which will mean more business."

"We are now working to induce the postoffice department to grant the Great Northern a mail-carrying contract, and if we can achieve this it will do a great deal to relieve the congestion."

In preparing for the annual Christmas rush the postoffice now has on hand $195,000 worth of stamps, stamped envelopes, stamp books, postal cards and newspaper wrappers.

As the stamp sales for the last quarter showed a gain of $8000 over the corresponding quarter in 1914, and a steady gain is now being shown in all departments, this large amount of stamps and other postal supplies on hand may not last as long as at first believed. The supply was intended to last until the close of the fiscal year, June 30, next.

SONOMA WILL CARRY 160 TONS OF BANANAS TO COAST THIS TRIP

All her cargo space filled except room for 160 tons of bananas from this port for San Francisco, the Oceanic steamer Sonoma left Sydney today bound for Honolulu and the coast. She should arrive here November 4, leaving the same afternoon for San Francisco.

C. Brewer & Company received a cable this morning containing the above information, and stating that the ship will have room for 125 cabin passengers from here. The Sonoma's cargo is considerably larger than usual and consists of Australian products bound for the mainland.

HARBOR NOTES

The barkentine Mary Winkleman is at the Hilo railroad wharf discharging lumber.

The schooner Glendale is en route here from San Francisco, having sailed yesterday.

The Canadian-Australasian liner Makura, from this port October 15, reached Vancouver Thursday.

Next mail from the coast will arrive Tuesday morning at 7:30 in the Matson steamer Wilhelmina, which has 623 sacks on board.

More than $4,000,000 in gold reached San Francisco recently in the Union liner Marana, from Sydney. The money was consigned to San Francisco banks.

The steamer Nihaui is due here some time today from Hawaii with firewood and cattle. She was reported loading at the Kuhio wharf by the Mauna Kea.

The U. S. auxiliary Nanshan started coaling this morning, and will probably not finish until Monday, as there will be no coal taken on tomorrow. The vessel is at Pier 6.

Divine service will be held on board the U. S. cruiser Maryland at 8:45 o'clock tomorrow morning. Chaplain J. D. McNeil of the ship will conduct it in his official capacity.

The Matson steamer Enterprise, which carried a big cargo of canned pines from this port to San Pedro, leaving here October 19, arrived at San Francisco from the southern California port, late yesterday.

Advices received by radio this morning from the Inter-Island, state that the steamer Frank E. Buck will arrive from Melbourne about 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon to take on fuel oil here.

Strong northeast winds and a choppy sea in crossing the channel were reported by the W. G. Hall which arrived this morning from Kaula. She brought a light cargo and a few passengers.

More than 31,000 bags of sugar are awaiting shipment at island ports, according to the Mauna Kea which today reported the following sugar list: Oahu, 7000; Waikae, 2500; Pepeekeo, 8776; Punaluu, 12,213, and Honouapo, 4008.

Bringing 9000 tons of Japanese products, the Great Northern liner Minnesota arrived at Seattle October 8, and will sail for England with wheat and lumber. She is to be offered for sale or charter as an Atlantic freighter on arrival.

Cattle to the number of 77 head were unloaded here today by the Inter-Island steamer Wailele. They came from the Kukuiua ranch. The steamer's cargo also included 21 empty oil and 25 empty gasoline containers and six barrels of wine.

The K submarines look as if they had broken out into a rash today, owing to liberal applications of red lead wherever rust spots developed on the hulls as a result of the trip here from San Francisco. The red contrasts startlingly with the battleship gray of the hulls.

Half of the Maryland's crew were given shore liberty this morning following inspection of the crew at 10 o'clock by Capt. Sumner E. W. Kittelle. The number of men given permission to leave the ship until 7 o'clock Monday morning is approximately 450.

Carrying a few passengers, but depending mainly on freight business, a new steamship line between France and the Society Islands has been organized and will operate by way of Panama. In the South Pacific the line will extend to Sydney.

Freight congestion from Seattle to Alaska exists and steamer lines are unable to handle all the freight of

The phosphate rock steamer Promissive will not sail from Makatea until November 15 for this port, according to a cable received late yesterday by Theo. H. Davies & Company, local agents. Theatrical & Amusements

Two Australian Singers And Pianist at Popular

Indications point to a large attendance at the concert announced to be held tonight at the Popular theater. The program arranged by the Australian trio for the event will appeal to all music lovers on account of its scope.

Heading the Australian trio is Miss Agnes Purcell, a dramatic soprano of exceptional ability. Her talent is to be judged by the things said about her work by the musical critics of Australia. Her voice is classed as phenomenal in many respects on account of its range, flexibility, power, and sweetness of tone.

The other singer with the company is Richard Condon, lyric tenor, who had been hailed by some musical critics as the John McCormack of Australia. Mr. Condon will sing several delightful songs tonight, and will give Irish selections for encores. William Conway, rated in the land of the Southern Cross as one of their best pianists, is the third member of the trio. He is a quiet player, not given to mannerisms.

TWO OF PICKFORD FAMILY ON BILL

Mary Pickford, who has been entertaining capacity audiences at the Liberty theater during the last few days after an absence of several months, once more leaves Honolulu after the performance of this evening. In "Fanchon, the Cricket," the current offering, Miss Pickford is seen in a

'ARMY NIGHT' IS APPRECIATED BY LARGE AUDIENCE

The army night entertainment at the opera house on Tuesday evening was full of surprises for those who were fortunate enough to attend. The musical program bore no resemblance to an amateur performance and Honolulu awakened to the fact that in Mrs. Stone and Mrs. Charles Reynolds the musical talent has a strong and role that might have been written for her but was not. Daniel Frohman selected wisely when he undertook to present his little star in Fanchon. With tonight's performance, also, will be concluded the fourth chapter of "The Diamond from the Sky," unless the Liberty management sees fit to run it as an added feature to Sunday evening's bill. Lottie Pickford, Mary's sister, is scoring a success in this serial film-story.

Coming Sunday evening for four days only is another of the favorites with Liberty fans, Elsie Janis in "Betty in Search of a Thrill," a photodrama that suits this vivacious artist from the ground up—having been written entirely by herself. Owen Moore, another member of the Pickford family—Mary's husband—and a capable cast support Elsie Janis in this offering. The first instalment of "The Romance of Elaine" will be shown Sunday evening. The story of the film appears on another page of this issue of the Star-Bulletin.

trained reinforcement. The numbers by these two ladies of the local army contingent were received with much applause. Lieut. W. A. Gance, 25th Infantry, surprised the audience with his exceptionally well rendered musical interpretations.

Lieut. Gance is widely known throughout the service for his histrionic ability and has endeared himself to the members of the local army garrisons by his clever and imitable interpretations. He not only possesses unusual talent as an actor, but is also gifted with a very fine baritone voice.

The violin solo by Mr. Casper elicited much enthusiasm. Mr. Moss rendered a very pleasing piano solo. Both Mr. Caspar and Mr. Moss very kindly contributed their professional ability to make the musical program of the army evening complete.

Mrs. Tenney Peck and Miss Sutherland had already won the esteem of the army, but their appearance as accompanists on the piano was a gracious act, much appreciated by Gen. Carter, who was mainly responsible for the success of the army night. It was a rare treat to see so clever an exhibition with the folk as was given by Lieuts. Sears and Fifieldon. The 2d Infantry orchestra, under Francis Leigh, rendered several excellent selections.

During the final picture of Mr. Boina's excellent film, the lowering of the flag at retreat, the orchestra illustrated the firing of the gun at retreat and played "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the flag slowly drifted earthward, the audience rising.

By CLINTON PEDRICK.

Thank you, Mary, for your visit. We are glad you will not stay away so long next time.

It was a hopeless task for Theodore Roberts to be a villain in "The Woman," appearing here last week. The old man's face fairly gleams with kindness and appeal. He is again seen in the cast with Ina Claire, but his true nature is given its full sway this time. He is the best "old man" on the screen today.

Ina Claire, the new Lasky protegee, is "doing double." While she is under contract in the Lasky studios for several productions, she continues to appear nightly on Broadway. She "picks up" the hardships of career-building, and fears to abandon the legitimate stage. Ina will be seen in Honolulu November 4th on the Paramount program in "The Wild Goose Chase."

Bets are being taken at the new Panonius Players headquarters, 507 Fifth avenue, New York, as to how long James Kirkwood will dare to wear his resplendent Palm Beach suit. "I shall not be deceived by any such meteorological ruse as the injection of a few cool days into the regular run of oppressive weather. There will have to be a bona fide lowering of the thermometer before I shall venture on advertising Palm Beach suits," declares James firmly. Honoluluans can sympathize with Mr. Kirkwood in sticking to the comfortable Palm Beach suits as long as possible.

A huge reception was tendered Miss Marguerite Clark last Tuesday night. The magnificent Easton (Pa.) theater was exquisitely decorated with plants and myriads of cut flowers in her honor. All society attended, and 2000 photographs of Miss Clark were presented. Miss Clark, in an address to the vast assemblage, said: "It is not so much the fact that they came to see me, though that, in itself, is very charming of them, but it is the annual tribute proof of the popularity of motion pictures with the most refined and best-bred people in the city that particularly pleases me." Marguerite Clark will come to Honolulu in pictures early in November, on the Paramount program, as "The Pretty Sister of Jose," a photo-play that has had a tremendous run on the mainland.

Lottie Pickford as the heroine in "The Diamond From the Sky" is all sensational, and in her class has already made a name for herself at the Liberty, but how strange it is later in the evening, she appears again on the same screen, with her sister Mary in the leading role, but this time, as proof of her flexible adaptability, she adopts a part all emotional, and one would scarcely believe she is the same person. In the Garrick theater, Los Angeles, it is necessary to have police assistance in handling the crowds on the days the "Diamond From the Sky" serial is presented, so great is the throng eager to gain admission to the theater.

Mr. W. W. Hodkinson, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, is a hard worker for the betterment of motion picture plays in isolated localities. He states that the difficulty encountered by small cities in securing famous stars for their theaters has prompted him in his efforts to secure them in pictures, thereby presenting these stars in small cities the world over. Honoluluans should appreciate this fact, for rarely we see a really great star in this city. Mr. Hodkinson has secured for the Paramount feature program, Sarah Bernhardt in "Queen Elizabeth," James K. Hackett in "The Prisoner of Zenda," Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen," and with Elsie Janis, Victor Moore, Hazel Dawn, John Barrymore, Maud Allen, Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark and many others, Honoluluans are as fortunate as New Yorkers for opportunities to enjoy high class entertainment.

How Big Slides in Culebra Cut Close Panama Canal to Vessel Traffic

This is approximately how Culebra cut looks at the present time, with the Panama canal blocked so that it probably cannot be open to traffic before the first of January.

Through the courtesy of President J. A. Kennedy of the Inter-Island, the Star-Bulletin is able to present to its readers today this above remarkable photograph of this troublesome section of the big waterway.

Although this photograph was taken in January, at a time when the first serious slides in Culebra cut began, the slide shown above is practically a replica of the present one, which although much larger, looks much the same as this great mass of mountain-side slid down into the water.

This is one of a dozen photographs showing various portions of the "big ditch," which Mr. Kennedy has at his office in the Inter-Island building. The handsome panoramas were purchased in Panama last January by Capt. T. K. Clarke, superintendent of docks for the Inter-Island Steam Navigation Company, while Capt. Clarke was seeing the Canal Zone.

According to the latest advices from the canal, it is possible that the latest slide, which is more than 1000 feet long, may be dredged away by November sufficiently to allow vessels of light draft to pass through the rut, which is the only part of the canal making trouble at the present time. It is doubtful, however, whether the waterway will be in its former good working order much before the first of the year.

The view shown above depicts the slide which took place there in January, and which was cleared away in a comparatively short time. Scientists who have made an examination of the hill which constantly menaces the cut, state that the slides are due to the pressure of the earth above, crowding down on a loose layer of earth and rock strata at the base.

There is now being considered a project to tunnel into the hill from the other side, and by removing the upper layers of earth to relieve the pressure which causes the present costly and troublesome slides and their consequent tie-ups of canal traffic.

THINK IROQUOIS IS TOO FAR OFF TO GET MESSAGE

New Order to Return By Way of Laysan May Not Have Reached Navy Tug

Has the naval tug Iroquois received the message sent her late yesterday and last night, ordering her to change her course and go to Laysan Island to pick up sojourners there, or is she still plowing the waves for this port, too far away as yet to catch the radio?

This is the question which is interesting naval officers here today. If the tug, whose wireless set is of limited radius both for sending and receiving, did not get the radio, it may mean that the departure of the F submarine for San Francisco may be delayed four or five days. Wednesday is the date which had been set for their sailing, towed by the Maryland, Nanshan and Iroquois.

According to a wireless expert who knows what equipment the Iroquois has, she is not able, even under the most favorable conditions, to catch a message sent from a point more than 200 or 300 miles from the ship. If such is the case, the Iroquois is not yet within hearing distance of radios flashed out from this port, and as there is no wireless at Midway Island, from which the Iroquois sailed at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon (Midway time) or 4:30 Honolulu time, after taking on board the crew of the wrecked American schooner O. M. Kellogg, torn apart on Maro Reef September 15, there is no chance of relaying the message to the tug from Midway.

Late yesterday a cable was received from the navy department by Capt. Sumner E. W. Kittelle, commander of the Maryland, instructing him to order the tug to call at Laysan on her way back here and to take off any trespassers there. Laysan is one of the islands of the Hawaiian bird reservation, and no permits have been issued this year allowing anyone to live there.

As Capt. Max Schlemmer and his family, who left here last June for Laysan, are the only persons now living on the island, unless some Japanese bird poachers are also there, the navy department order, issued at the request of the department of agriculture, will affect him, and, incidentally, solve his problem of getting back to this port. Capt. Schlemmer loaned his sloop, the Helene, to the captain and crew of the O. M. Kellogg, to allow them to make Midway, and with his sloop at Midway the captain would have had difficulty getting it back to Laysan or returning to Honolulu.

The message ordering the Iroquois to go out of her course and proceed to Laysan to pick up trespassers was sent late yesterday and again last night, but it was not sent from the Pearl Harbor wireless station, as announced in a morning paper. The Pearl Harbor government radio plant can only receive messages. The radio was sent out by the Mutual wireless station, which has the only equipment here capable of communicating with U. S. naval vessels, except the government station in this city.

COCOA TRADE INCREASES.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—The United States has broken all records in the last year in its business in cocoa, both raw and refined. This assertion was made yesterday by an official of H. O. Wilbur & Sons, following the receipt of a report from American Consul General Skinner, at London, says the Ledger.

Fourteen seamen were killed when the Japanese battleship Suwo was struck by a shell from a sister ship during night practice off the coast of Fusan, Korea.

FORBES BACKS CIVIC CENTER PLEA IN REPORT

Public Works Department and Other Government Branches Need Fireproof Storage

"The Department of Public Works, the Survey Office, the Registrar of Conveyances and the Land Commission are all very badly in need of a fire-proof, burglar-proof, modern building for the use and storage of plans, maps and documents. This is especially true of the Survey Office. A fire would cause incalculable injury to the territorial records and a great many documents could never be replaced."

This is one of the striking paragraphs in the annual report of the public works department, just submitted to the governor by Charles R. Forbes, superintendent. Mr. Forbes makes the statement in his plea for a new civic center, which he says is worthy much consideration and which will be a necessity before long.

Judiciary ground remodeling and improvement also comes in for consideration in the report, which declares that the grounds are at present "in a disgraceful condition."

No Curbing in Grounds.

Along with the report the superintendent submits also a copy of the letter which he sent to the last legislature telling of the disgraceful condition of the Judiciary grounds. "There is no curb inside the grounds," says the letter, "although all of the three streets are curbed outside of the sidewalks."

The statue of Kamehameha stands isolated from any building or tree, and is unprotected. It has suffered much from curio seekers who have broken off pieces of the bronze. The statue has been recently refinished, but it is again, badly scratched by vandals.

"I would recommend that we enclose the statue with an iron fence designed consistent with other features of the grounds, the plot surrounding the statue to be planted with grass and properly curbed. I would recommend that the entire area which is not occupied by buildings or pavement be resodded, fertilized and planted with grass and arrangements made for proper irrigation and attention."

Cost of New Prison.

In reference to the territorial prison the superintendent states that to date $41,955.76 has been expended and obligated. Prison labor is declared to be a logical and economical method of procedure, and it is recommended that the prisoners be kept at the work until the prison is complete.

Superintendent Forbes gives a brief resume of the past history of the Kealoa reclamation project, and states that all of the obstacles which presented themselves at the beginning of his present incumbency 14 months ago are now in a fair way to being overcome. With careful consideration of each step by the attorney-general it is hoped and believed by the superintendent that the present plans will result in an amicable settlement of all the differences that have arisen.

Considerable space is also given to the Waiohala reclamation sanitation project, with details of the work. It is stated that there is a daily flow of water in the swamp of 38,000,000 gallons, with more than 600,000 cubic yards of earth necessary to fill the proposed grades. As the cost of this work would be far more than the territory could afford, new grades were established which answer all the requirements of sanitation and give a minimum amount of fill and cost to property owners. A careful and accurate map of the entire district has also been compiled.

Dredge Will Help Fill Swamp.

In conjunction with other work, investigations and surveys have been made to determine the amount of available material, excellent for the purpose and of a character easily handled by the use of a suction dredge.

"In the present project," says the report, "are 32 parcels of land held by 28 owners; the amount of material necessary to fill to the established grade of these various tracts varying from 41 cubic yards to 95,912 cubic yards, the largest being the A. A. Richardson estate."

The actual amount of fill to be brought in is 207,169 cubic yards. The area actually covered by the fill is approximately 1,452,775 square feet. Waikiki Reclamation Job.

For the Waikiki reclamation sanitation project, an initial survey has been made and maps drawn of one unit. It is believed that the work had best be carried out unit by unit. Owing to the fact that there is at present only a little more than $200,000 available, and that most of this sum will have to be expended for the Waiohala work, Waikiki will necessarily be delayed until more funds are procured. The unit measured calls for a fill of 190,280 cubic yards, covering a surface area of 37 acres. The superintendent recommends the project.

In addition to the projects named, mention is made of the Round Top road, the Homestead roads, and the Auwalolimu roads. It is stated that the homestead road work has been in general unsatisfactory owing to the homestead laws and insufficient funds for each job.

Mention is also made of the work on the Insane Asylum, the Territorial Marketing building now being constructed, the Hilo kerosene warehouse, which is finished, and the Waimea embankment, also completed.

Considerable discussion is given to the subject of artesian wells with figures showing their flow during the past year. Prevention of overdrafts on artesian supply by legislation is suggested.

In the back portion of the report several pages are given over to a detailed report of the finances of the department. The figures show that of real estate, buildings and equipment, there is a total belonging to the territory of $759,396.89. For the period from July 1, 1915 to June 30, 1917, loan and special appropriations have been made amounting to $793,703.96. Collections made by the department for the year ending June 30 amounted to $49,598.06.

MONSARRAT INSISTS ON "PERFECTLY GOOD BOND"

Willie Moku, charged with assaulting Jonah Davis, was fined $20 by Judge Monsarrat this morning and later released under bond of $25. Before he would consider the bond Judge Monsarrat said to Moku's attorney, "You will have to prepare a perfectly good bond before I will consider it." Previous experience with bonds, the judge said, made him cautious.

Davis charged that Moku attacked him because Mrs. Moku had been arrested for disturbing the peace after Davis made complaint to police headquarters. Moku beat Davis badly and the complainant's face was swathed in bandages when he appeared this morning. The defendant claimed that he struck Davis in self defense.

WEDNESDAY

SOCIAL circles throughout the United States are discussing with deep interest the announcement of President Wilson's engagement to Mrs. Norman Galt of Washington. In Honolulu the topic is a popular one and there is much eagerness to learn more details of the woman hitherto unknown to social rumor outside of New York and the Capitol City.

At the White House the announcement was made on October 7 in the following simple form:

"The announcement was made today of the engagement of Mrs. Norman Galt of this city and President Woodrow Wilson."

The announcement that the President is to marry was a great surprise to most people in Washington. The engagement had been kept a secret within the White House circle and few even of the President's most trusted advisers believed the marriage would take place for many months.

It is understood the President has been engaged to Mrs. Galt for a very short time, possibly only a week or 10 days. Mrs. Galt was at the White House when the engagement was announced.

Mrs. Galt is a beautiful woman of a distinct brunette type, the widow of Norman Galt, who was part owner of a large jewelry store in Washington and who died eight years ago. Mrs. Galt now owns this store, which is run for her by her two brothers.

It is understood that Mrs. Galt sympathizes with the suffrage movement, but never has taken an active part in it.

Mrs. Galt is about 40 years old and comes from Virginia, the President's home state. The President met her less than a year ago, not very long after the White House abandoned social activities because of the death in August of Mrs. Wilson. He made Mrs. Galt's acquaintance as one of the intimates of his daughters, Miss Margaret Wilson and Mrs. McAdoo.

Mrs. Galt witnessed the naval review in New York in May from the Presidential yacht, the Mayflower, where she was a guest of Miss Margaret Wilson. At that time rumors were afloat that the President had developed a strong liking for Mrs. Galt and that another White House romance was to be expected.

Later Mrs. Galt went for a visit at Harlakenden House, the summer home of President Wilson, and for a month or more she was a member of the circle there. The President made two visits to Cornish during Mrs. Galt's stay.

It was there, as Washington understands it, that the romance developed. They took long drives together in the big White House touring car in the beautiful mountain country of Vermont and New Hampshire.

With Mrs. Galt's departure from the Summer White House in August reports that they were to be engaged took tangible shape. These reports were received, of course, with the greatest interest in official and social circles at the capital, but the President's friends refused to discuss the matter in any way. Indeed, it was intimated broadly that the President would resent any effort to pry into his personal affairs.

Mrs. Galt returned to Washington several weeks ago after visiting friends in Massachusetts.

Dr. Cary T. Grayson, U. S. N., the White House physician, and the President's close friend, is credited with having had a good deal to do with the development of the President's romance. Dr. Grayson, who has gained similar prominence as having taken a friendly hand in the romance between Miss Eleanor Wilson and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, which resulted in their marriage last spring, met Mrs. Galt more than a year ago and in turn introduced her to Mrs. McAdoo and Miss Margaret Wilson.

Miss Margaret Wilson especially was attracted to Mrs. Galt and they became warm friends immediately after they had met. Through Miss Wilson and Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, Miss Wilson's cousin, who lives at the White house, Mrs. Galt was brought into the highest official circle and met the President. She has maintained the strongest friendship with the President's two daughters and Miss Bones and has been a frequent visitor at the White House.

Mrs. Galt lives in a handsome residence at 1308 New Hampshire avenue in the fashionable section of Washington.

Mrs. Galt has lived here since her marriage in 1896 to Norman Galt. She was Mr. Galt's second wife. Her husband was the son of William N. Galt, head of the firm of William N. Galt & Co., which was one of the largest and oldest jewelry establishments in Washington. Mr. Galt died about eight years ago, and it was estimated at that time that Mrs. Galt received about $250,000. After his death Mrs. Galt purchased the interest of Sterling Galt, her brother-in-law, in the jewelry store, and since that time the house has been managed for her by her two brothers.

Mrs. Galt has not figured prominently in social circles of the capital, but has been known as a home woman. She has traveled much, having lived for a considerable time in Paris. In appearance she is tall, erect in carriage, with dark blue eyes and chestnut hair. She is fond of driving her own electric runabout and always is attractively dressed.

While possessing the social gifts that are needed to make her a graceful first lady of the land, she is fond of a quiet life. Her activities in club circles have been limited, but she has been particularly interested in social settlement work and in the philanthropies of St. Thomas church. She is a member of the Rector's Aid Society of that church and was chairman of one of the "circles" of that society.

Many persons in Washington are marveling at the way in which the President had managed to keep his attentions toward Mrs. Galt from the public. This was all the more surprising when it became known that she actually had called at St. Thomas church last Sunday evening, met Mrs. Galt and escorted her home.

It was announced that Miss Isabelle Hagner, who was social secretary to Mrs. Galt and Mrs. Roosevelt, has been retained in the same capacity by Miss Margaret Wilson. Society people assume that the capital is entering upon a gay social season. Of course there will be a great deal of entertaining in honor of Mrs. Galt, unless she and the President ask otherwise.

The marriage of the President and Mrs. Galt will be the third in the Wilson family since March 4, 1913. The President's daughters, Mrs. McAdoo and Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre, were married there last year.

A thrill of romantic interest ran through Washington society when it was learned that the future first lady of the land is a direct descendant of Indian royalty and traces her ancestry back through nine generations to Pocahontas, the good Indian princess of colonial days, whose saving of Captain John Smith's life is one of the classic tales of American history. So far as is now known she will be the first mistress of the White House in whose veins runs the blood of the royal race which originally ruled the land.

Mrs. Galt's relationship with the Indian princes comes in through Pocahontas' English husband, John Rolfe, who took the woods maiden to London, where she was presented to Queen Anne, and where, pining for the freedom of her native hills, she soon died. Her children, however, became the founders of several distinguished Virginia houses, including that of John Randolph of Roanoke, who is another ancestor of Mrs. Galt. Thomas Rolfe, son of Pocahontas and John Rolfe, married Jane Poythress. Their daughter, Jane Rolfe, married John Bolling, who was the son of Col. Robert Bolling of the English army. Archibald Bolling of Virginia was the great-grandson of John Bolling and also the paternal grandfather of Mrs. Galt. His son was William Holcomb Bolling, father of Mrs. Galt.

Moonlight Dance at the Country Club.
The dancing craze seems to have gripped the Honolulu smart set even harder this week than it has for some time and everyone will acknowledge that dancing has been voted the most popular of all of the summer entertainments. Perhaps it is because the cruiser Maryland is in and so many of the junior officers are such good dancers that the young people have welcomed so heartily the invitations to dance.

Thursday evening the Country Club was the scene of one of the most brilliant affairs witnessed since the "summer crowd" returned from the coast. It was the evening of the monthly dance and nearly every member answered the invitation to trip the light fantastic. The clubhouse itself was prettily lighted with various colored lights and bright gowns worn by the fair dancers together with the white and gold uniforms worn by the army and navy officers, for there were a goodly number of them there, made a very gay scene and one that will not soon be forgotten by those who took part in the affair. All during the evening the moon was very bright and shone benevolently upon the couples who, unable to resist its attraction, strolled between dances upon the grass covered lawn. The music furnished by a Hawaiian quintet club was exceptionally good. Among those noticed at the affair were Judge and Mrs. Arthur Wilder, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dillingham, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Cartwright, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. von Holt, Lieutenant and Mrs. Howard Bode, Mr. and Mrs. William Williamson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Oignoux, Mrs. Grafton Beall, Mr. and Mrs. Merle Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Blake, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wilder, Mrs. Henderson, Miss Peggy Carter, Miss Anor-Hall, Miss Edith Sutton, Miss Harriet Hatch, Miss Edith Williams, Miss Amy Buchanan, Miss Helen Dow, Miss Marion Chapin, Miss Ruth Anderson, Miss Ruth McChesney, Miss Pauline Schaefer, Miss Betty Case, Miss Dorothy Traut, Miss Jessie Kennedy, Miss M. Schuman, Miss Hilda von Holt, Miss Mary von Holt, Miss Catherine Lenihan, Miss Harriet Lucas, Miss Grey, Paymaster Grey, Dickson-Nott, Bob McCorrison, Walter Rycroft, Lieutenant Hugh Brown, Bert Clarke, Harry Hoffman, Douglas Young, Lieutenant O'Connor, Lieutenant W. E. E. Kays, Ensign Karl Hintze, Ensign Henry, Ensign Gilchrist Hatch.

Mrs. William Montrose Graham is Hostess at Dance.

Mrs. William Montrose Graham entertained at a delightfully informal dance at her home on Green Street on Tuesday evening for a number of the officers on the Maryland. African daisies and roses were used artistically in decoration of the large ball room. The Maryland band furnished good music for dancing, and a buffet supper was served at 11 o'clock. Some among those who enjoyed Mrs. Graham's hospitality were Miss Ruth McChesney, Mrs. Moore, Miss Marion Chapin, Miss Helen Dow, Miss Anor Hall, Miss Tiny White, Miss Beatrice White, Miss Sophie Walker, Miss Enid Sutton, Miss Miriam Stacker, Miss Ruth Stacker, Miss Kathryn Blake, Miss Charlotte Blake, Madame Lester, Ensign Lusk, Lieut. William Baughman, Ensign Gilchrist Hatch, Lieut. H. E. Kays, Ensign Karl Hintze, Ensign Henry, William Warren, Gustave Ballentine, Watson Ballentine, John O'Dowda, Ensign Ivan Graham, Ernest Podmore, Edson Hutcheson, Gordon Campbell and others. During the evening Mr. Campbell and Mme. Lester gave an exhibition dance.

Shower for Miss Lucy Webb.

Miss Lucy Webb, the charming bride-to-be, is being the recipient of much entertaining. Among one of the most delightful affairs was a China shower and bridge party given by Mrs. Douglas Greene and her sister, Miss Catherine Lenihan. Quantities of cut flowers and ferns were arranged throughout the house. Miss Webb's engagement to Lieut. Jones was announced some time ago and though the date for the wedding has not yet been set, the pretty Southern girl has been entertained extensively. Among those present were Mrs. Robert Calder, Mrs. Carl Hardig, Mrs. Manchester, Mrs. Sullivan, Mrs. Richardson, Mrs. Frank Sloan, Mrs. Barker, Mrs. William Cochran, Miss Dorothy Traut, Mrs. Robert Lincoln, Miss Elizabeth Rosenbaum, Miss Dorothy Harker, Mrs. E. J. O'Hara, Mrs. H. H. Zornig, Mrs. Daniel Swan, Mrs. M. J. Lenihan and others.

Mrs. Groff, now Mrs. Stillman, arrived in Honolulu in the Lurline on Tuesday. She was in Honolulu but once before, during the Mid-Pacific Carnival, and it was then that she met Mr. Stillman.

The couple are spending one week of their honeymoon at Kaalawai and will leave for Hawaii on next Wednesday to spend another week on the Parker ranch.

Dinner Dance Aboard the Maryland.

The officers of the Maryland who have been entertained so extensively during their short stay in Honolulu, are hosts at a dinner dance aboard the cruiser on Monday night, the eve of their departure. While there will be much gaiety at the affair, the guests who have been invited feel just a wee tinge of sadness for it is likely that this will be the last trip the Maryland is to make to this port for some time, and needless to say that with the three trips she has made this year there are a few hearts which have been touched. At Monday's affair there will be a dinner in Captain Kittelle's quarters, the first and second lieutenants are entertaining their guests in the ward room, and the ensigns, many of whom are 1915 men, are having their guests in the "steerage," as their mess room is known. There have been numerous "wedges" offered as to which group will have the best time, but the guests of the "steerage" officers insist that there will be more fun in their part of the boat. Later in the evening the officers and their friends will trip the light fantastic on the deck of the cruiser while the band of the Maryland furnishes the music.

Mrs. Arthur Davidson's Luncheon Hostess.

One of the very charming affairs of the week was the luncheon at which Mrs. Arthur Davidson entertained on Monday in honor of Mrs. Coppage, an attractive visitor here from Berkeley. A cut glass basket filled with delicately shaded pink carnations and ferns ornamented the center of the table and white silk Japanese mums marked the places of the guests. Those who were invited to meet Mrs. Coppage were Mrs. Actin Hodgins, Mrs. Merle Johnson, Mrs. William H. Hunter and Mrs. Annie Laekland.

A New Novel by Mrs. Agge.

"Chloe Malone," another of those fascinating heroines created by Fannie Heaslip Lea, has made her appearance in the Woman's Home Companion this month and almost everybody is reading about her or if anyone has forgotten about Chloe he or she should not wait another minute to "dive into the story."

Fannie Heaslip Lea, known among Honolulu society folk as Mrs. H. P. Agge, has written a number of serials that have been followed closely by story lovers all over the world, and though her "Silly Anne" was very much of a favorite, the new lady, "Chloe Malone" promises to be even more popular.

"Chloe Malone" first appears before a tall old fashioned mirror and then gowned in the white and silver of the debutante she sets forth with her mother to make her debut at the first night of the opera. Because the Malone have but little of worldly riches it is Chloe's desire, almost her necessity, to marry a millionaire.

On the way to the opera she and her mother meet with an adventure which almost promises to make the debutante forget about her millionaire—but then to tell of that would be telling the whole story, and it is much prettier when read in the words of the author.

Many Society Women Take Their Places as Humane Officers.

With Mrs. L. L. McCandless as their president, and Mrs. Sanford B. Dole as vice-president, a goodly number of Honolulu's best-known women have taken their places as officers and workers in the Humane Society. Among those women are: Mrs. S. M. Damon, first vice-president; Mrs. R. D. Mead, second vice-president; Mrs. Bernice Walbridge, third vice-president; Mrs. E. P. Low, fourth vice-president; Mrs. W. R. Castle, fifth vice-president; Mrs. C. S. Holloway, sixth vice-president; Mrs. M. F. Prosser, secretary; and Mrs. Archie Young, treasurer. Directors: Miss Lucy Ward, Mrs. R. H. Brown, Mrs. Ed Dekum, Mrs. T. J. King, Mrs. W. W. Thayer, Mrs. A. Haneberg, Auditor: H. M. Dowsett. Committees on Education: Mrs. W. Jordan, child welfare, Mrs. A. Haneberg, Mrs. Bernice Walbridge, Miss Alice Cooke; prevention of cruelty to animals, Mrs. E. Dekum, Miss W. Tenney, G. P. Wilder, Miss Mabel Phillips; finance, Mrs. R. D. Mead, Mrs. R. C. Brown, Miss Harriet Hatch.

Noted Polo Player to Wed.

SAN FRANCISCO.—The announcement of the engagement of Mrs. Ruth Merrill Hammond, daughter of the late John F. Merrill, and William Devereux, wealthy New Yorker, famous polo player, who won distinction at the recent exposition tournament, came as a surprise today in town and peninsula society.

The wedding will take place on the afternoon of Nov. 30 at the home of Brown entertained at a dinner in the wardroom of the cruiser and during the evening told his friends in Honolulu of the engagement.

As the guests were seated about a prettily decorated table a sailor appeared with two little dolls, a little boy all spick and span, and a very much beribboned little girl. They both carried miniature hearts, one bearing the name of Hugh Brown and the other inscribed "Estelle Johnson Ryne." The announcement was followed by a merry round of congratulations to the officer. Favors for the young ladies were tiny kewpiees dressed in lace and ribbons. After the dinner the guests motored to the Country Club to take part in the moonlight dance there.

Lieut. Brown's guests included Mr. and Mrs. H. M. von Holt, Miss Mary von Holt, Miss Hyde von Holt, Miss Betty Case, Miss Anor Hall, Miss Peggy Carter, Lieut. H. E. Kays, Lieut. Baughman, Ensigns Hintze, Henry, Bowden, McMorris, Vinson, Hatch and Bates.

Mrs. Randolph T. Zane, wife of Lieut. Zane, U. S. M. C., a popular matron of the service set.

the bride's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sears Bates.

Following close upon the announcement of the engagement of her intimate friend, Mrs. Carrie Mills Fletcher, to Capt. Filbert Hawkins of the British army the engagement of Mrs. Hammond created a stir.

Since her divorce from Leonard Hammond, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Hammond, less than two years ago Mrs. Hammond has been living with her mother, widow of a pioneer financier.

Devereux is a member of a prominent eastern family and is related to Anstelo Devereux of Philadelphia and Devereux Milburn of New York, both of whom also played here in the special polo games. It was on one of his visits to the coast that he met Mrs. Hammond. Devereux has large mining interests in this state and is now at his mine in Calaveras county.

Miss Peggy Richards Complimented at Luncheon on Wednesday.

Miss Peggy Richards was the complimented guest at a luncheon on Wednesday given by Mrs. Charles McCord, with whom she is staying. Quantities of yellow chrysanthemums adorned the table in an attractive center-piece. Covers were laid for the honored guests, Mrs. F. W. Scotland, Mrs. Paul Bates, Mrs. Harry Bogusch and the hostess.

Launching Party.

With the moon smiling gently over the waters a gay party of young people spent several hours last evening riding over the waves out of the harbor in one of the launches of the U. S. S. Maryland. The party was chartered by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wilder, and was made up of members of the younger set and the junior officers from the cruiser. When they had launched until nearly midnight the party was taken back to the ship where a delicious supper was served. Ensign McMorris was the host on the occasion and his guests included Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wilder, Miss Betty Case, Miss Mary von Holt, Miss Hilda von Holt, Miss Anor Hall, Miss Peggy Carter, Miss Ruth McChesney, Miss Pauline Schaefer, Miss Jessie Kennedy, Miss Ruth McChesney, Miss Marion Chapin, Miss Dorothy Wood, Miss Thelma Murphy, Lieut. and Mrs. Howard Spalding, Bert Clark, Walter Rycroft, Vivian Dyer, Francis Brown, Stanley Kennedy, Mr. Miles, Mr. Pfeuger, Mr. Hennoch, Fred Schaefer, Lieut. Kelley, Ensign Hugh Brown, Ensign Karl Hintze, Ensign Vinson, Ensign Bates, Ensign Ivan Graham, Ensign Watson, Ensign D. O. Thomas and many others.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit Wilder Honored.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Last night Mr. and Mrs. Charles Templeton Crocker entertained some of their friends at a dinner party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit Wilder of Honolulu, who did much for the Crockers when they visited at the islands.

Mrs. Crocker's handsome dining room, done in a regal style, its walls of wonderful flame yellow and white marble, with a carved wood frieze enameled in old blues, gold, black and a touch of rose, with its dining room furniture in claret-colored velvet on carved rosewood, looked more beautiful than ever last night. It was massed with flowers from the Crocker gardens, all harmonizing with the rich colors predominating in the room.

The dining room pieces were once the property of the late King of Portugal, but they probably never fitted into a more beautiful home than that of the young Crockers. Incidentally, now that they are really installed in their new home, the Crockers will not follow their usual custom of coming to town for the winter.

At the dinner party were also the Messrs. and Mesdames Henry Foster Dutton, Laurance Irving Scott, Arthur Chesebrough, Eugene Murphy, Willard Brown, Harry Macfarlane of Honolulu, Harold Castle, the Mesdames Malcolm D. Whitman, Arthur Wilder, Miss Marion Newhall, Messrs. John Parrot, Stewart Lowery and Stanford Gwin.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Chaplain McNear Host at Dinner on the Maryland.

Chaplain McNear was host at an enjoyable dinner aboard the U. S. S. Maryland on Tuesday evening. After dinner the guests motored to the Opera House to "Army Night" there. Pink and green was the color scheme used in decoration, the effect being delightfully carried out with pink roses, graceful bows of pink tulle and maidenhair fern. Among Chaplain McNear's guests were Lieut. and Mrs. Charles

Mrs. Randolph T. Zane, wife of Lieut. Zane, U. S. M. C., a popular matron of the service set.

The Maryland Takes Away Army Officers.

The Maryland, when she leaves Tuesday, will not only take away the officers of the cruiser who have made so many friends here, but will also carry away a number of the army officers, some of whom have been transferred to other posts and others who are going merely on furlough. Among the two popular junior lieutenants are Carl Spats and Mr. Wheeler, both of whom have been stationed at Schofield Barracks.

Devereux is a member of a prominent eastern family and is related to Anstelo Devereux of Philadelphia and Devereux Milburn of New York, both of whom also played here in the special polo games.

It was on one of his visits to the coast that he met Mrs. Hammond. Devereux has large mining interests in this state and is now at his mine in Calaveras county.

Launching Party.

With the moon smiling gently over the waters a gay party of young people spent several hours last evening riding over the waves out of the harbor in one of the launches of the U. S. S. Maryland. The party was chartered by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wilder, and was made up of members of the younger set and the junior officers from the cruiser. When they had launched until nearly midnight the party was taken back to the ship where a delicious supper was served. Ensign McMorris was the host on the occasion and his guests included Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wilder, Miss Betty Case, Miss Mary von Holt, Miss Hilda von Holt, Miss Anor Hall, Miss Peggy Carter, Miss Ruth McChesney, Miss Pauline Schaefer, Miss Jessie Kennedy, Miss Ruth McChesney, Miss Marion Chapin, Miss Dorothy Wood, Miss Thelma Murphy, Lieut. and Mrs. Howard Spalding, Bert Clark, Walter Rycroft, Vivian Dyer, Francis Brown, Stanley Kennedy, Mr. Miles, Mr. Pfeuger, Mr. Hennoch, Fred Schaefer, Lieut. Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit Wilder Honored.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Last night Mr. and Mrs. Charles Templeton Crocker entertained some of their friends at a dinner party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit Wilder of Honolulu, who did much for the Crockers when they visited at the islands.

Mrs. Crocker's handsome dining room, done in a regal style, its walls of wonderful flame yellow and white marble, with a carved wood frieze enameled in old blues, gold, black and a touch of rose, with its dining room furniture in claret-colored velvet on carved rosewood, looked more beautiful than ever last night. It was massed with flowers from the Crocker gardens, all harmonizing with the rich colors predominating in the room.

The dining room pieces were once the property of the late King of Portugal, but they probably never fitted into a more beautiful home than that of the young Crockers. Incidentally, now that they are really installed in their new home, the Crockers will not follow their usual custom of coming to town for the winter.

SOILING

Lieut. and Mrs. Lowry's Dance.
The home of Lieut. and Mrs. F. J. Lowry was the scene of a very pleasant dance on Thursday evening, October 14. The affair was given in honor of officers of the first submarine division and their families. The division is soon to leave for the coast.

Dancing began at 8 o'clock, a Hawaiian quartet furnishing the music, and continued until a late hour, when dainty refreshments were served on the spacious lawn. During the serving of refreshments, the orchestra rendered several distinctive Hawaiian selections.

At the close of dancing, the musicians played "Aloha Oe," as a farewell to the officers who are leaving after more than a year's sojourn amid the pleasant surroundings of Honolulu, in the lead of beautiful music and tropic skies.

Those present included Lieut. and Mrs. K. B. Crittenden, Paymaster and Mrs. Corcoran, Lieut. and Mrs. Scamland, Lieut. and Mrs. Zane, Lieut. and Mrs. Green, Lieut. and Mrs. Berry, Lieut. and Mrs. Baran, Lieut. and Mrs. Thompson, Lieut. and Mrs. McDonald, Lieut. and Mrs. Swan, Lieut. and Mrs. O'Hara, Miss Webb, Miss West, Miss Joseph, Miss Richards, Miss Stacker, Lieut. Smith, Lieut. Jones, Lieut. Bachman, Ensign Vanderkooft, Ensign Walton.

Beretania Mission to Hold Sale.
With a "Sho' Early" crusade in full swing long before the holidays, Honolulu was induced last year to prepare quite early and happily for Christmas. There was nothing like the mad Christmas Eve rush of previous years, and as a result merchants and clerks did not go home at midnight wearied to exhaustion. Yet in point of money spent it was the best holiday season in the history of the territory. The secret lay in early preparation.

Beretania Settlement may be said to have started the ball rolling in the right direction by announcing its first annual sale early in November. So tempting was the array of pretty things, and so great the variety that those who went down into the heart of Honolulu's Chinatown for the novelty of the experience, and perhaps a fragrant cup of tea, followed the line of great resistance and brought right merrily.

Nothing was so novel, don't you know, "My mainland friends will be simply charmed with a real Chinese sale." These and other expressions attested to the general delight.

Now, announcing its second sale for Wednesday, November 4, Beretania Mission will bring pleasure to the hearts of those who profited by the affair last year, as well as to those who were unable to take advantage of it.

Those who have seen the array of pretty and useful articles declare that these are even more attractive than last year. Many new suggestions have come to Mrs. Ellen Mackenzie, in charge of women and girl's work, and with the assistance of her clubs, she has executed some charming designs in needlework and manual art.

In response to a general demand, arrangements have been made for a booth at which mandarin coats and blouses will be sold. The Chinese women wear their wedding finery but, other than their own people, or to American ladies who some years ago caught the craze for Oriental party wear and bits of delicate embroidery.

Among the most novel of the small articles prepared for the sale are new place cards—quite the cutest things imaginable! The cards are decorated in gold with Chinese characters and standing upright on them are bell-shaped kowpees dressed in mandarin coats and tight skull caps. Many of the dinner hostesses will rejoice in these novel place markers.

Guest towels—always in demand—these pads and note books of Oriental design and coloring, and a host of pretty calendars are among the other attractive things noted.

Much Interest in the Outdoor Circle Garden Fete.
More than a passing interest is being shown in the Outdoor Circle Garden Fete which is planned for November 13 and while the mothers are busy helping to complete the plans for the affair the kiddies are asking, "Am I going to be a flower or a doll, mamma?" and "Mother, may I be a 'Tomb'?"

One of the most interesting phases of the fete will be the most interesting children are to take part in this feature and the little tots are to represent beautiful flowers, vegetables and riotous animals. It is likely that the boys will represent the animals, for even the tiniest of the little men would object to being a flower. The parent will be a beautiful thing for the children will reign supreme there.

The announcement which has greatly interested the youngsters who have had to enjoy the exposition through the newspapers, and from stories told by those who have actually been to the fair is the word that there is really to be a Joy Zone. Now just what will be contained in the Zone has not been announced, but it is quite likely that there will be attractions there which will be of interest to grown-ups and kiddies alike.

Instead of the usual grab bag there is to be an orange tree, and the oranges will be a new variety, containing all kinds of surprises.

While there are to be all sorts of contrivances at the fete to amuse the children, there will also be a number of booths and novelties planned especially for the grown folks. As it is fast approaching the Christmas season a bazaar will be most welcome to those who are in doubt as to their Christmas gifts. There will be fancy work and novelties very acceptable to the Yuletide box.

Then, too, much attention will be given to the ceremonial tea, the ice cream booth and delicatessen table. There will be many delicious dainties prepared in the form of salads, cakes, pies, and numerous other "goods."

Mrs. Lorrin Thurston and Mrs. A. E. Murphy have charge of the entire affair and they will be assisted by the following committee chairman, who later will choose a boy of young girls to assist in the booths: Mrs. Ferdinand Lindeman and Mrs. Stanley Stephenson.

The Woman's Society Takes a New Step.
For the members of the church as well as the members of the society, the Woman's Society of Central Union church has taken a new step this year in its work. Instead of holding the quarterly meetings only, they have organized 16 neighborhood clubs and each of the clubs is headed by a member of the society. These meetings, which are held in various parts of town, tend greatly to enlarge the membership of the society. Nor are they merely social gatherings. Each of the little clubs has some purpose in view; there are musical meetings held by some women, others are accomplishing something for the war relief societies and in every instance the work is for charity.

On Thursday a number of the section meetings were held and much sewing and other work was accomplished. Mrs. Randolph Moore, who has charge of one of the sections, met with a number of ladies who decided to devote their afternoons to the making of rag rugs, which have become so popular during the past two years. These rugs are to be sold and the proceeds turned over to the Woman's Society. It is an assured fact that this neighborhood branch will realize quite a sum of money for there is hardly a home in Honolulu which does not own at least one rag rug. The rug is very popular with children and with girls who plan boudoir color schemes, for there is no color too bright, or too pale to be woven in rags. Those who met with Mrs. Moore were Mrs. James Bicknell, Mrs. Gribble, Mrs. E. C. W. Ashford, Mrs. Isabelle Creighton, Mrs. C. Crozier, Mrs. M. J. Dickson, Mrs. W. S. P. Hawk, Mrs. J. Farnsworth, Mrs. Theodore Richards, Mrs. George Smith, Mrs. G. Wilkins, Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. A. Blom, Mrs. Percy Pond, Mrs. Robert Lister, Mrs. J. Fisher, Mrs. F. Green, Mrs. Arthur Andrews, Mrs. E. Higgins, Mrs. T. W. De Frees, Mrs. A. A. Hobson, Mrs. J. A. Bevin, Mrs. Tschudi, Mrs. Plum, Miss Anne Hustace, Miss Margaret Lishman, and Mrs. J. L. McLean.

Others who held meetings on Thursday were Mrs. D. L. Withington, Mrs. Edgar Wood, Mrs. Frank Cooke, Mrs. Forbes and Mrs. J. W. Thompson.

QUAINT STYLES ARE REVIVED FOR THIS FALL

The latest creations in fall wearing apparel for women show a revival of many models which have created a furore in years gone by. The dainty shepherdess gowns of colonial days is again playing an important part in setting the pace. Another fancy of the designers has been to build attractive gowns similar to such as ballet dancers, Spanish costumes and many other artistic fashions, modified to conform with advanced ideas.

Separate shirt waists are quite the thing for street wear and are shown in a profusion of chic designs and colorful blends.

The Jeffs' Fashion Shop, rooms 302-303 Hawaiian Trust building, has imported a truly wonderful assortment of things to delight feminine eyes and hearts and invites the ladies of Honolulu to call and enjoy the beautiful display.—Adv.

MUCH INTEREST IN ORIENTAL WORKS OF ART

Mrs. L. W. Taylor, a resident of the Orient, who is spending several weeks in the city, reports an unusual interest displayed among the local women in her exhibit of Oriental art goods. Her collection comprises some rare tapestries and all manner of hand-wrought embroidered articles. Many articles are truly wonderful.

Her exhibit is open to inspection every day at the Colonial Hotel, and Mrs. Taylor extends a cordial invitation to interested parties to pay her a call.—Adv.

FROM PEGGY TO POLLY.

Dearest Polly: I suppose if we had more debutante in town like a real city always has there'd be more excitement, engagements and weddings and things but why want what we haven't got? We had a real live - adding this week any how. Charley Stillman, one of the best known boys and surely one of the most popular ones, joined the benedict when the Reverend Henr Parker pronounced Charley and the pretty Marianne Groff man and wife. Mrs. Groff and Mr. Stillman met during the last carnival and have been engaged for some time, but the wedding was absolutely a surprise. The couple are honeymooning at Kaula and will leave next Wednesday for Hawaii to spend a week or so there.

The Maryland's being back has indeed changed the dull moments and season into the gayest kind of a week. "Every Nice Girl Loves a Sailor" all right, and if you could see them all and get off in a corner with a dozen or so you'd think so, too. I nearly had a fit of giggles in the dressing room of the Country Club the night of the ball. That was Thursday. A bevy of pretty girls came in during one of the intermissions to "touch up" and like a peck of mina birds they - "Isn't Mr. A. perfectly fine?" "Oh, yes, but I don't like the way he crinkles his forehead. Mr. B. is a wonderful dancer."

"Piter-pat" C. is the love, though. Wasn't he too cute at dinner?" "Do you see the way D. is rushing that awful?" I suppose it isn't his fault, though. She fairly glomms on to the boys. And he is so nice, too.

Oh, Polly, I made a dreadful mistake about two weeks ago in describing blue-eyed Adonis. You remember my telling you about receiving communications grave, gay and amusing, and some illustrated? Well, the other day I got the cream of them and from Cecil, calling me down properly for miscalling him Saxon. I admit my mistake, of course. But think how much worse it would have been had I called him a Ford!

More news about Laura Low. She is still in Boston, and after a delightful summer in a girls' camp is studying to be a physical instructor. I can't imagine anyone being more fit. Amy Adams, a former Honolulu girl, and Margaret Jones are both studying in the same class with Laura and declare there is nothing like it. Laura was captain of field day, the last day in the camp, and did a lot of stunts on horseback. According to a letter she and the riding master (who declared he couldn't teach her anything) were hurdlng fences and standing on their heads in the saddle. It has often been said that there is hardly a girl in Honolulu who can sit a saddle as does the popular Laura. She is taking all sorts of swimming honors, too. Having been one of Punahou's star swimmers she is fairly setting people raving over her stroke and remarkable ability in aquatic sports.

I must tell you about a very attractive girl who was at the Country Club on Thursday evening. She is staying at one of the well-known hotels. I think, my word, but she did set the boys all a-raving and they fairly stood in line for introductions and dances. She is the fairest creature imaginable. Hair almost white was done low at her neck with a jet band for ornament. Her gown was of the latest mode, cut low, and was of black beaded net and short. Her black shoes were lacod at the side and caught with tiny red roses. Talk about class; she was all there!

There is going to be the most wonderful farewell dinner-dance aboard the Maryland on Monday evening. I guess everyone who is anyone will be there. A dinner in the captain's quarters, one in the ward room and another in the steeage, and a dance afterward. Really, the thing is setting society quite agog, and I guess there will be more new gowns and things than ever. It has been so long since there has been any occasion for a new gown that they all are going to make up for it.

Punahou has voted no dances this year. Isn't that dull and stupid? The upper-classmen didn't like the idea of 7:30 to 10, so they put it to vote and over two-thirds voted no dance. The class president of 1916 said that they might as well serve malted milk instead of punch and hand out nursery bottles as favors; that a blackboard should be erected and they play blind man's buff during the evening. They decided that the mothers' club be taught a lesson. Mothers may turn the tables, though. It's about time, PEGGY.

FT. SHAFER SOCIETY

(Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence) (Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence) FT. SHAFER, Oct. 23.—Notwithstanding the fact that the troops have been absent from the post for the past week, Fort Shafter has been quite gay socially. Many have had house-guests and several delightful affairs have been given which have helped to while away the hours most pleasantly. The Monday evening bridge club was particularly well attended this week. Mrs. B. W. Atkinson was hostess, and there were five tables of bridge. Mrs. Cochran held the highest score, so

Richardson, Miss Eleanor Scott, Miss Bonnie Scott and the host and hostess. Miss Ann Halloran sailed for San Francisco on the Matsonia Wednesday, and Miss Halloran's many friends bade her aloha with much regret and hope it will not be long before she returns to Shafter. Miss Halloran will attend the wedding of her brother, Lieut. G. Halloran, and then make an extended tour of the Pacific coast.

Mrs. Parker entertained at a delightful little bridge party Thursday evening at her home in the cantonment. Among those playing cards were Mrs. George H. Jamerson, Mrs. Clinton, Mrs. F. F. Black, Mrs. Hartshorne, Mrs. John H. Sullivan, Mrs. Sneed, Mrs. John B. Richardson, Mrs. Malone and Mrs. Parker.

On the post several families have "doubled up" to keep each other from being lonely. Mrs. Holliday and Mrs. Martin are staying with Mrs. Dashiell in the main garrison, and Mrs. Sullivan has spent the past week with Mrs. John B. Richardson in the cantonment.

Mrs. F. F. Black entertained informally at dinner Saturday evening for Major and Mrs. Jenks, Miss Jenks, Miss Bush and Miss Bonnie Scott. Major and Mrs. Jenks sailed on the transport for Manila on Saturday morning.

Mrs. B. W. Atkinson entertained informally at dinner last Monday evening before the Bridge Club at the 2nd Infantry mess. Covers were placed for Mrs. Randolph, Mrs. Bennett, Mrs. Randolph and Mrs. Atkinson.

Mrs. Cecel O'Brien, who was the house-guest of Mrs. Cochran, sailed on the transport Sheridan for Manila where she will join her husband, Surgeon Cecel O'Brien, U. S. N.

Seventeen ladies of the garrison enjoyed this unusual and very attractive affair, which was called a "basket luncheon," being served in buffet style and without knives, forks or spoons. Each lady was given a dainty basket, formed of raffia, with a picnic plate inside, on which were served all the courses of the luncheon. The handle of each basket was tied with a cluster of yellow and white marguerites, their colors being carried out in all the decorations. The first course, quartered peaches, was served in a dainty little case formed of a paper napkin, which was eaten with the fingers, as were all the successive courses which composed the delicious and ingenious affair. The marguerites in great profusion decorated the rooms in which the luncheon took place. WASHINGTON SOCIETY

(Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 7.—Mrs. George D. Widener of Philadelphia and Newport, whose husband and son were lost on the Titanic, of which she was a survivor, is to marry very shortly Dr. Alexander Hamilton Rice, the American explorer. The engagement was rumored some weeks ago and promptly denied by the lady.

The couple first met last June at the dedication of the two-million-dollar Widener memorial library at Harvard. Mrs. Widener's gift in memory of her son. The past summer Mrs. Widener spent in Newport in her new villa, Miramar, the housewarming of which made the great social event of the season there.

Mrs. Widener was Miss Eleanor Elkins of Philadelphia, and she is 47 years of age, Dr. Rice being her junior by seven years. Her other son, George D. Widener, Jr., is at present in Harvard.

In addition to immense wealth, which she inherited both from her father and her husband, Mrs. Widener is the owner of a famous rope of pearls said to be valued at $750,000. They were given her as a Christmas gift by her husband in 1909. Her other jewels are notable, too. The art treasures in her Newport villa are estimated at $800,000.

Dr. Rice is noted for scientific research in his South American expeditions. In 1907 he was so long beyond communication in the region of the headwaters of the Orinoco river that it was believed he had perished. He advanced to the sources of remote tributaries of the Amazon with an expedition that returned in 1913, after two years of exploration, and was a year ago awarded the patron's gold medal of the Royal Geographical Society and the gold medal of the Harvard Travelers' Club for his discoveries in this and previous expeditions in Ecuador, Venezuela and Colombia.

He was graduated eight years ago from Annapolis. He was appointed from Georgia in 1902, having been born in that state in 1885. Prior to being sent to London Lieut. Towers had six years of sea service.

Men, Books, People & Things by Ellsworth

The interest aroused by my reference in a recent review of Prof. Bailey's article on "abandoned farms" in New England, is my excuse for more about the same subject.

In response to the steady demand for farms, Vermont with other New England states has awakened to a sense of values.

"From 1899 to 1909 the value of all the crops in Vermont showed an increase of 51.1 per cent, the greatest of any increase by any of the New England states. In money this increase represents $9,276,577," says the Boston Globe. "The value of eggs produced here rose from $959,965 in 1899 to $1,715,221 in 1909. The potato crop increased 30.7 per cent; orchard fruits doubled in value."

The U. S. government is conducting a large horse-breeding establishment at the Federal Stock Farm in Middlebury. Throughout New England the making of good roads has received a stimulus. In a report of the Vermont Bureau of Publicity we find:

"Professor Farrington, head of the department of dairy husbandry in the University of Wisconsin, recently visited Vermont and declared as a result of his visit that Vermont is a much misunderstood state. He had no idea there was so much fertile land here, and he said that the people of the west had the same mistaken opinion of the size of our farms. He expressed the belief that Vermont was one of the best parts of the country in which a man might engage in farming, mentioning the cheapness of the land and the nearness to markets as inducements. He found our farmers prosperous and the average farm-homes even better than those of the west."

The soil if worn in some places is easily redeemed by a careful rotation of crops. As a rule it is fertile, and the yield of potatoes averages 130 bushels to the acre.

The hay crop scarcely ever fails, while fruits, especially apples, are coming to the front.

Samuel Frowde in "The Country Gentleman" says:

"Vermont will stand out as one of the best sections for apples and will rank with Hood River."

Sections in New Hampshire and Maine are being set out to apple orchards. Mr. A. J. Gould of New Newport, N. H., gets an average net profit of $1450 from his apple orchard.

The idea that labor and produce are cheap in the "effete" East is an erroneous one. In Cheshire county, N. H., for instance, hay is $25 a ton. Corn sells for 95 cents a bushel; potatoes 75 cents to $1.50; oats 65 cents; apples $2 to $4 a barrel; milk 8 cents a quart; butter 35 cents a pound the year round; Strawberries are 20 cents a quart; poultry 20 to 30 cents a pound; eggs 30 to 50 cents a dozen.

Pine delivered at mill $12 a cord, spruce the same; if firewood, $6 to $8 a cord.

Work on road, hauling with team $5 a day.

Day's wages on farm $1.75 to $2 a day; in chair, box and pall factories, $2 to $3 a day.

Milch cows $50 to $75. Tram horses from $200 to $300 in 1913 and probably higher now.

And yet in Merrimack county there is or was a farm of 500 acres, as good as any, in a most beautiful section of country, with new house of 12 rooms, barn 40x180, hog house 20x40, 40,000 cords of hard wood; 200 acres of pine which in 10 years will be worth at least $5,000—all for $3,900.

In Rockingham county some one offers his 100 acre sheep farm with house, out buildings, etc., for $700.

Stock farms in New Hampshire for less than $3 an acre where cattle can be easily raised and sold at high prices.

All of these places are near neighbors, schools, libraries and may be reached by automobile. Often they are near cities like Concord, Wisconsin or Manchester.

Talk about Salubria henneries—Mr. Dunlap of Salisbury, N. H., has made a net profit on each fowl of $1.60 for 24 consecutive years. In that time his gross receipts have been $24,688.28 and his profits $13,400.41.

The "summer boarder," like the winter tourist in Florida or Southern California, is a great source of income to the New England farmer, especially in New Hampshire.

Five of New England's largest rivers rise in New Hampshire. The Pemigewasset from the Profile mountains, and the Winnepesaukee out of its mother-lake at Franklin, form the Merrimac. Its mountains, lakes, rivers and brooks have made New Hampshire the most popular summer resort in New England. In one small community are summer homes costing over $100,000. Eight thousand hotels cater to the summer visitors, and one year over $50,000,000 was spent by tourists.

The summer homes (farms) of the rich are scattered all about. Here come authors, artists, lawyers, doctors, governors and businessmen to don overalls and raise vegetables.

A millionaire from New York makes his home near one of the resort lakes, and grows vegetables for the local market, often going himself to deliver the produce. He cultivates his own garden, taking strawberries and cabbages to the hotels in his auto truck. If he can, why not the poorer man?

Prof. Taylor of the New Hampshire State College says:

"Dairying is greatly favored by the natural conditions in New Hampshire. The farmers can easily grow grass and forage crops upon which the dairy cattle thrive best. Good water is abundant furnished by clear springs, brooks, rivers, ponds. Thousands of people come here and demand pure, clean, wholesome butter, butter milk, cream and milk. Except in the higher regions, the climate and soil of New Hampshire are well adapted to the production of fine apples—the best in the world. It has been demonstrated that the New Hampshire apple in color, size and texture can equal the most admired specimens of this fruit raised in any section of the country." A writer in the N. Y. Sun considers that the cultivation of alfalfa in New England has passed the experimental stage.

"It has found a particularly suitable soil in Vermont. As the hay brings a much higher price in New England than in the West, the cultivation proves more profitable. Such a crop as that reported will soon redeem the 'abandoned farms.'"

During my father's boyhood in Maine, potatoes were a profitable crop. They are still, and probably average more to the acre in Maine than in any other New England state. Last year the potato crop exceeded 26,840,100 bushels.

Mr. Hubert who came to Maine from Canada is growing rich from his 100-acre potato crop.

But apples do well too, and a large acreage is being set out to trees of the finest varieties. Mr. Baisdell claims that his land is worth $500 an acre, and will this year bring him $7,500 from his apples alone.

A number of Oregon apple orchards have been sold by their owners who brought farms in New England, because they get "better apples," "better prices," "cheaper transportation" and "surer crops."

Incidentally, they like the country better as a residence for their wives and children.

COOKE GALLERY WINS INTEREST

Many visitors, including graduates of Punahou who have not recently spent much time on the grounds of the school, are availing themselves of the privilege of seeing on Sunday afternoon the collection of paintings and works of art in the Cooke art gallery.

In the last few days the collection of Japanese candle-sticks has been very largely increased. It now numbers nearly 300. Mr. and Mrs. Philip Dodge are now engaged in cataloguing this collection.

The gallery and library will be open as usual tomorrow afternoon from 2 to 5:30 o'clock.

PUNAHOU NOTES

The Punahou Preparatory Edison Club is to have its first public affair of the year in a motorbob race to be held on the campus next Tuesday. The rules governing the contest are fairly stringent and much rivalry is manifested by the various entrants.

Yesterday afternoon was observed at the Punahou Preparatory School as a mothers' afternoon, an informal reception for them being held between 3 and 4 o'clock. Many parents who were previously not acquainted with the teachers, as well as former patrons of the school called. A committee of the older pupils acted as ushers and had charge of the decorations, which were simple and appropriate.

At a meeting of the three upper classes, President Griffiths discussed with the students of the school, the dance policy as was decided last year and the modifications as decided this year to have the dances extend from 7:30 to 10 o'clock. He invited the school to give attention to the regulation, and to the necessity of supporting them if the dances are to be a success. After considerable discussion, the students decided not to hold any school dances this year.

HIKES SEVEN MILES AT NIGHT TO BE PRESENT AT GUARD INSPECTION

There is a highly patriotic member of the National Guard of Hawaii living on Maui. He walked seven miles in the dark in order to be at Lahaina in time for Col. Johnson's inspection of the companies on that island. Eben Low is telling the yarn.

When the Claudine docked at midnight at Lahaina Tuesday, Captain Young of the Lahaina company, waiting to meet the adjutant-general, was surprised to see a man wearing the National Guard uniform, pacing the dock.

"What are you here for?" he inquired.

"Why," answered the guardsman, "I heard Col. Sam Johnson was going to inspect the 31st companies, so I walked in from Olowahu. I ain't going to take any chance on missing him."

The distance from Olowahu to Lahaina is seven miles. Capt. Young told the guardsman Col. Johnson wouldn't inspect the companies until daylight at least, so the patriotic guardsman walked away, saying he would be back later.

An earthquake shock lasting two seconds was felt throughout Cumberland, England.

Kamehameha Outweighs Punahou Five Pounds

Coach Booth Will Send Team in Field Today Averaging 152 Pounds—Punahou Weight Given Out at 147 Pounds—Two Heavyweights on Kam Line Brings Average Pounding High—Five Hundred Students Will Cheer Teams on to Victory in Game Today—Contest Begins at 3 o'clock

HOW THEY LINE UP

Kamehameha.	Weight.	Punahou.	Weight.
Dowel	128	Bromley	138
Richmond	157	Gifford	168
H. Bertelmann	206	Thurston	158
Peneku	152	Mott Smith	138
J. Kanui	160	D. Pratt	140
C. Bertelmann	196	Kula	166
Kamaka	148	Baldwin	142
Simeons	123	Norris	134
Hussey	123	Hipa	154
Hobby	130	Peterson	138
Gibson	132	J. Smith	140

J. Wright	152
G. Bertelmann	173
De la Nux	132
Anahu	137
Ioane	165
H. Clark	180

The big question in the minds of the football fans of Honolulu today is: Who will win the game at Kamehameha field? It has been the one big topic of discussion in school circles, and many of the older citizens who have not lost their love for the gridiron sport. Will the Punahou line hold, and will Napthaa and Correa be able to circle the Kam ends? These two questions are asked by many and on these two points may rest the result of the game.

Kamehameha will send in a team that will have an average weight of 152 pounds. Punahou will weigh 147 pounds for an average. Coach Booth of Kamehameha will have two outside fields during the game, and the light backfield will bring down the weight of the Kam team somewhat, so that during a part of the game Kamehameha will not have an advantage in weight. H. Bertelmann will be the heaviest man on either team, tipping the Fairbanks at 206. He will be opposed by Gifford, the star lineman of the Punahou squad, which will make an interesting battle today.

SIX TEAMS WILL BE REPRESENTED IN BASKET-BALL

Kam Center Heavy. G. Bertelmann at center will outweigh the Punahou snapper back by 55 points which should give him an advantage today. Punahou has her weight equally distributed, and at the guard positions will have the best of the weigh argument. Baldwin has been coming along strong in his games thus far and should give Simeons a big battle in the plays around the tackle.

If the ground is wet today Kamehameha should have an advantage, as a slippery field will tend to slow up Napthaa and Correa in plays around end. On a wet field Kamehameha has an advantage and according to all the laws of Walter Camp and other illustrious Knights of the Gridiron, Kam should win. Coach Midkiff will miss Kauhane at the end position, as it necessitates sending in a back field man to take charge of the flank position. Peterson is a scrappy player but has not worked as much with the team as Norris has.

West Field Shows Runners. Dower at end is picked to stop the runs around his territory, but a wet field will handicap him in running down the field under punts. Correa has more distance than Ioane in the punting line, but on a rainy day it will be anyone's game in this department. Ioane has a faculty of getting his punts off with one motion which will give him an added advantage.

Both coaches are ready for the fray, but Coach Midkiff stated that the loss of the two men in the line and a wet field will lessen the chances of the Buff and Gold winning. Coach Booth has the men ready, and expects to win out over the last year's champions. Around town the sentiment appears to be about equally divided as to who will romp home with a victory, and many critics are banking on a tie game. Punahou has won

MILLS TO PLAY M'KINLEY TEAM THIS AFTERNOON

Coach Berney will send his light Mills team against McKinley high school this afternoon on the Punahou gridiron. Last Saturday the bantams were defeated by Punahou by a score of 47 to 0, but the former Whittman star has been training the boys on the forward pass and over field formations, and they are expected to give the high school squad a strong game today. McKinley should win, but it is doubtful if they will be able to duplicate the score made by Punahou, as Mills lost a number of opportunities to score by fumbles in the last game. On a damp field there is bound to be a number of misplays, which might give Berney's crew an opportunity for a score. Dr. Peden has had the McKinley aggregation out for practice this week, and the boys are working toward one ambition, to score as many points as Punahou did last Saturday. Melim and Carter showed particular strength in the backfield last Saturday and the heavy forwards should have an advantage in the game of today on a wet field.

Last Saturday Punui, Kam Moon and Maggion made a good showing for the Mills team, and Maggion's stop on defense was responsible for stopping many of the Punahou backs. Mills showed a number of good plays, but the line was too tight to hold the charging backs of the Buff and Gold. Playing an open game throughout Berney's men should have an opportunity to hold the McKinley tribe down to a fairly low score. The game will begin at 3 o'clock.

THEY ARE GOING AFTER THAT 25TH INFANTRY CRACK TEAM TOMORROW

Fans about the city are beginning to believe that the Chinese will give Wyman's 25th Infantry team a great game tomorrow afternoon. The defeat of the St. Louis team by a big score silenced the opposition for a time, but those who would like to see the 25th lose, are banking on the Chinese to do the job. It is a case of anything to beat the 25th, or any team. This naturally creates a good baseball crowd, and tends to make a good rivalry between the teams.

Luck Yee has pitched some good ball in the past, and with Kan Yen heavy hitters on the lineup, it doesn't look so much for Wyman's boys, whoever mounts the hilltop for the colored team. The 25th look today the winners, but the Chinese team has always been noted for its playing the game out, and a surprise may be in store for the Schofield players. Francis Brown will be on the mound for the St. Louis team against the All-Army aggregation, and the former Punahou star is banking on holding the opposing team down. With Argabrite and Schumann in the game the Saints will present a stronger team than that of last Sunday when they played listless ball.

ROSS ELECTED PRESIDENT OF TENNIS CLUB

E. A. R. Ross was elected president of the Manoa Tennis Club at a meeting held Thursday evening at the clubhouse. The other officers elected were: Kenneth Barnes, vice-president; B. F. Beardmore, secretary and treasurer; and M. M. Graham, auditor. The grounds committee chosen for the coming year are: F. E. Steere, J. B. Guard, A. L. Andrews and B. F. Beardmore. H. E. Savage and D. L. Oleson were elected members of the membership committee.

The treasurer's report was read at this meeting, which showed a healthy financial condition for the year. The grounds committee will have charge of all tournaments, and a number of interesting matches are planned for the season. A singles tournament will be scheduled for some time in the near future, and as the Manoa Club is the only club in the city where one can play every day and every night, there will be much interest in the coming matches.

NEW KEWALO STREET CHRISTIAN CHURCH SCENE OF SOCIAL

Last night the members of the Christian church which has just taken up a new home on Kewalo street gave a social, "The Neighborhood Evening," to which they invited all the people from the surrounding district. Large numbers of the neighbors came and found that quite an elaborate but prompt musical program awaited them. The church itself had been profusely decorated with potted palms and ferns.

Recently returned from three years of musical study in Germany, Miss Maud Seyde and Miss Pearl Johnson, a recent arrival from Australia, gave several selections on the piano. Miss Josephson will direct the Christian church choir. George Andrus of Kamehameha and Mr. French of Punahou sang, accompanied by Miss Knowles.

TRAVELERS WIN TWO GAMES FROM CUBAN TOSSERS IN HAVANA

A. E. Larimer of the Y. M. C. A. has received a letter from Lai Tin, who is with the Chinese Travelers. The baseball player states that the boys are having a good time in Cuba, but the weather is too hot there at the present time. Lai Tin remarked that the Cubans are good ball players and that they are the greatest fans in the world. The Travelers have been on many sight-seeing trips around Havana, and enjoyed the scenery in and about the capital city. When the letter was written the Travelers had played four games, winning two. Lai Tin said that the Cubans had as fast teams as they have met on their trip.

JOHN L. TAKES BELT OUT OF HOCK.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—With the odds 100 to 1 against him at the start, John L. Sullivan won the greatest fight of his career. John Barleycorn, who for years had threatened to prove his superiority, went down for the count before the old master today when Sullivan, said Tom Donnelly, a Jeweler, $3,500 to redeem the famous championship diamond belt, presented to him by friends in 1887. Sullivan had pawned the belt for money to buy alcohol. Shortly after Sullivan's battle with Corbett in New Orleans, in 1892, the belt left his possession and adorned the wall of a New York saloon, where its 350 cut diamonds and 14 pounds of gold attracted many a dollar into the till of the barkeeper. Then it disappeared from view for many years, and was finally found in the possession of Donnelly, where it had been made security for a loan of $4,000.

LEGALITY OF DRY LAWS QUESTIONED IN SUPREME COURT

TOPEKA, Kan. — Constitutionality of the Mahin liquor law of Kansas and the federal Webb-Kenyon act was contested here in argument before the state supreme court, involving the payment of a fine by the Missouri Pacific Railway Company for the transportation of liquor into Kansas to be used in violation of the state law. The case is in appeal from the Cherokee country district court, which found the railway guilty on 12 counts—one for each carload of beer transported—and assessed a fine of $1200.

KAULUWELA AND PALAMA LEAD IN INDOOR LEAGUE

Senior League.	W.	L.
Palama	1	1
Star-Bulletin	0	1
Beretania	0	1

The indoor baseball season opened last night and the four teams playing played to packed halls. Palama won the first game from Star-Bulletin, 21 to 17, and Kauluwela took Beretania into camp at Kauluwela by a one-sided score of 62 to 3.

The Bulletin and Palama game was exciting and interesting from start to finish and up until the seventh was even. In the first of the seventh the Palama boys went after Chang and hammered the best he had to all parts of the diamond, scoring a total of 13 runs. The Star-Bulletin boys came right back in the same inning and by dint of heavy slugging sent nine men over the pan before J. Parker succeeded in retiring the side.

The one great feature of the game was the fast, clean playing of both sides and the fine work of the umpires, Ben Clark behind the bat, and Arthur Parker on the bases. Parker, for Palama, retired 14 men on strikes, and Chung, for the Bulletin, fanned 11. There was little to choose between the teams in the line of fielding. Quon and Brash led with the bat for Palama, while Lam and F. Tyau did the best stick work for the Bulletin team.

Umpires, Ben Clark and Arthur Parker.

A Slaughter. The game between Kauluwela was entirely too one-sided to be in any way interesting, but the one redeeming feature about it was the brilliant pitching of Marquis, who allowed but three hits and struck out 13 men. Up until the last of the ninth inning Beretania men had crossed the bases and he got over on a passed ball. Marquis, however, gave six passes on balls, three of which resulted in the only runs scored by Beretania.

Beretania all through the game showed an utter lack of team work and the Kauluwela on the other hand played like a machine, making two fast double plays and hitting everything that the Beretania pitchers had to offer. Manabu, catching for Kauluwela, had a hard time holding Marquis and all of Beretania's runs came in through passed balls. The best fielding was done by Peter Leo, who speared a line drive from Ho's bat for the third out in the fifth, and again getting another hot liner that Lo drove past the pitcher in the eighth inning.

Hyashi and Ah Leong did the best stick work for Kauluwela, while Lee Lai, for Beretania, made two of their three hits. Beretania 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 2

LOVER OF GOOD BOOKS DEFENDS LIBRARY FROM RECENT CRITICISM

Declares Selection is Competent and Critic Failed to Find Out Scope of Collection

Editor Honolulu Star-Bulletin.

Sir: In the issue of your paper of August 20th appeared a criticism of the Library of Hawaii, in which criticism "Good Literature" makes several statements which, while amusing to those who know the really excellent manner in which the Library of Hawaii is meeting the varied needs of the community, may be misleading to those who have not had occasion to become familiar with the more serious side of the work.

In the first place, "Good Literature" overlooks the fact that a public library is supported by the public, and that a public which demands Robert Chambers will have him, or it will not support the library. Should the system follow the suggestion that a large sum be voted for the use of the Library of Hawaii, that money, in fairness to the taxpayers who have paid it into the treasury, must be expended in a manner to cater to the wishes of all, not the wishes of any one class. The proposition of readers who wish to read history, travel, science, or art have a right to expect the expenditure of a corresponding proportion of the funds for books for their use. On the other hand, the proposition of fiction readers have an equal right to expect that a corresponding proportion of the funds shall be spent for their class of books. If the latter class outnumber the former, then the shelves of the library will show such to be the case. The only way to change this condition in any community is by creating and stimulating a desire for better literature in general—for cleaner, more wholesome reading matter instead of books which are lacking in so many of the essentials which are necessary in order that a book shall prove a really desirable addition to any library, private or public.

The confirmed reader of light fiction is a different problem—I refer to the adult who, from childhood, has read only the very lightest of fiction—for his mind has been trained to feast on that intellectual diet and craves it just as a child fed unwisely on sweets loses appetite for more substantial food. It is the training of the child mind which determines the trend of the adult mind, and the Library of Hawaii is doing some of its best and most important work when it devotes a certain proportion of its time, space and money to the needs of the children. The library workers who are daily coming in contact with both children and adult readers realize how important it is that the minds of the children shall be trained to recognize the good in literature as well as in other essentials of life, and this can best be done by reserving the right of the children to the best to be had in books suited to their needs. The children who are being trained to enjoy good reading today will not be asking for an exclusive diet of light fiction when they become the men and women of tomorrow. They are being trained to demand that a story shall not only possess some interest but that it shall be well told—and a well-told story has a place whether its theme be history or romance. As an indication of the work the Library of Hawaii is doing in the children's department, let me call attention to the little booklet issued by the library as a guide to buyers of gift books for children. In "Christmas List of Gift Books for Children" the librarian has noted some of the many suitable books which are already on the shelves of the library and are on sale at local book stores. On looking through its pages, I found among many others these titles which indicate that the library is offering its young readers books which tend to form their minds for the enjoyment of good wholesome reading as they grow older: "Fifty Famous Stories Re-told," "Hero Stories from American History," "Old Testament Stories," "Victor Reading for Boys," "Famous Men of Greece," "Famous Men of the Middle Ages," "Famous Men of Rome," "Famous Men of Modern Times," "Viking Tales," "Hawaii Primer," "Stories from Famous Ballads," "Mer-trick's Children's Blue Bird," "Stories from Wagner," "Tales of the Canterbury Pilgrims," "Ruskin's 'King of the Golden River,'" "Brownie's 'Plea Piper of Hamelin,'" "Dickens' 'Christmas Carol' and 'Crickets on the Hearth,'" "Hawthorne's 'Tanglewood Tales,'" "Kipling's 'Jungle Book,'" "Children's Longfellow," "Lamb's Tales from Shakespeare," "Ivanhoe," "Bird's Garden of Verses," "Children of Other Lands," a series of six volumes; "Peeps at Many Lands," a series of six volumes; "Kingship," "Treasure Island," and others which possess interest not only for children, but are read with interest and pleasure by many "grown-ups" who are fortunate enough to have retained youthful enthusiasms. Among the magazines for children I noticed "The American Boy," "Popular Mechanics," "Something to Do," "World's Advance," "Youth's Companion." I think I have quoted enough from this list to show that the Library of Hawaii is working along the right lines to produce an intelligent body of adult readers from the children who today are patronizing the bookshelves of the children's department.

Turning to the statement of "Good Literature" that the library is being built up to suit the needs of the "tired business man," who has exhausted his capacity for thought by "squabbling over a phone or yelling at his stenographer," that statement at once stamps him as a malingerer, for those of us who have known Hawaii for any length of time know that we have very few of that type of "tired business man." I have had occasion to speak with many business men over the telephone, and have been in many offices, but I have yet to hear any squabbling over a telephone or yelling at any employe. I doubt if in any community there can be found a more courteous or more intelligent class of businessmen than those who handle the business of Honolulu, most of the men having been born here or have lived here long enough to have absorbed the gentility of our semi-tropic atmosphere which tends to produce agreeable rather than disagreeable people. "Good Literature" must not judge them too severely if, after thinking all day about business problems they prefer to seek relaxation and recreation in a good story rather than in an evening spent in digging out facts about Grecian antiquities. There is nothing displeasing to me in seeing a man who has spent the day studying the many complex problems which arise in every business, asking the librarian for "something light," or being eager to read the latest effort of some popular and interesting writer whose stories are full of life and sparkle and calculated to make a man forget the day of care. I am not a reader of light fiction except for occasional reading, my preference being for history, travel, art or biography, but I have spent many pleasant hours with books chosen from the fiction list of the Library of Hawaii; and here let me call the attention of "Good Literature" to the classification of books in the libraries of today. There are certain rules which govern classification in public libraries and under these rules many books are classed as fiction when their real interest lies in the manner in which they present facts about some certain subjects which are either interpreted or connected by a thread of story—the story is not the main feature, but its presence classifies the book as fiction. Take, for instance, the delightful books of Gene Stratton Porter, which portray the phases of bird and moth life in the great Lumberlost. The story in most of her books is subservient to the nature interest, but since there is a story, her works are classed as fiction. Then there are the travel stories of the Williamsons. The story in each of them is of the lightest style of fiction, but the reader of "Sue in Silver" or "Heather Moon," who follows up the many quotations and references, and reads the books mentioned, will have a better idea of English and Scottish history. The same is true of their books on continental journeys—and yet the reader who aims through them for the purpose of merely getting the story or for criticism will miss the real interest; but that can not be set down as a fault against the book. Mrs. Hugh Fraser's "Custom of the Country" is fiction, as are Frances Macaulay's "Lady of the Decoration" and "Little Sister Suev," but they are also studies of life in Japan. Will Levington Crawford's "Routeledge Hides Alone" is fiction, but many of the women's clubs of America found it worth including in their list of books for serious study. Jack London may have written much which does not appeal to all classes, but I do not recall anything he has ever written which could be called "non-sense"—on the contrary, he seems to be striving to produce books which shall make people think seriously about many of the present day problems.

It seems to be the customary thing, when London is mentioned, to hark back to "The Call of the Wild," but it is one of his later books, "John Barleycorn," which is attracting attention as a strong factor in one of our greatest problems. The man who can write a book which shall be of the value of "John Barleycorn" in fighting the evils of intemperance, can not be dismissed with any such light criticism.

As to the "tired businessman's wife" whom "Good Literature" mentally pictures as "balancing a teacup while she registers epigrams on her neighbors' gowns," here again he proves himself one not conversant with Hawaii and her people. The women of Honolulu are not always registering epigrams on their neighbors' gowns when they balance a teacup; more often they are discussing plans for social betterment, civic improvement, or the many local and foreign charities which have made Honolulu known in every land. The good work done by the women of Honolulu is not belittled because the details are discussed in a special issue of the institution using public funds to benefit the individual. As to his statement concerning research work, I have had occasion to use the reference resources of the library many times, both for myself and for others who have asked me to assist them, and I have never yet failed to find the desired information somewhere in the many books or periodicals to which the seeker has access. I have heard many words of praise for the resources of the library and for the courteous staff of assistants who are always so willing to assist one.

Concerning the allegation that "the library can furnish a great deal of amusing printed matter but very little that will encourage serious study or stimulate thought," I fear that "Good Literature" was not a very serious seeker after genuine knowledge or he would have looked through the card index instead of casually glancing over the shelves as he must have done to have missed so many of the more serious works listed in the library catalogue. He forgets, as so many do when they fail to find their special book on the shelves at the special moment they want it, that the Library of Hawaii is a territorial library and must supply other islands as well as Oahu, and that because we fail to find a certain book on the shelves is no indication that it is not on the library list—someone on Kauai or Hawaii may have it, or someone in Honolulu may have it. I glanced through the card index for a few minutes the other evening and I noted that there are between 20 and 25 volumes on ancient Greece, about a dozen on modern migration, playground work, women and suffrage, civic betterment, the city beautiful, delightful books dealing with authors and with other books, a long list devoted to useful and industrial arts, books which deal with other countries in discussions of national life and feeling, which aim to make us understand each other better—and this is a very important study—books which deal with the present war from the various standpoints, books on the tariff—a list long enough to furnish food for serious thought for more time than most of us can devote to books. As I passed the small bookshelves standing near the entrance, I glanced over its contents as I always do, and I noticed among the books placed there to invite attention the following: "The Development of American Nationality," "Mozart's Operas," "The Making of Nations—France," "The Relations of Geography and History," "The Masters of Modern French Criticism," "A Short History of England," "Plays by Andre Gide," "Modern Industry," "Asia at the Door," "Forces Mining and Undermining," "China," "The Old Paths—Literary Pilgrimages," "Anarchy," "France's Revolt of the Angels," "The Faith of Japan," "Masters of Today," "Umbrian Towns" and "The History of the United States"—surely books which would afford a means of stimulating thought. This little list of shelves which always holds some of the really good books is only one of the many ways in which the library staff seek to have the reading public become acquainted with the best of the books of the library—it catches the attention as soon as you enter.

There are some improvements which I think would be very welcome in the library, but they are improvements which I believe those in charge are just as anxious to see in effect as those who would benefit by them. The system of indirect lighting would do away with the glare and make it easier and far more pleasant to read by an under present conditions. Then there is a small matter, but a vital one—that of getting a sanitary fountain for the use of the children. These suggestions are not made in any spirit of criticism, as I feel sure that those in charge of the library are making improvements as fast as funds are available. The Library of Hawaii is one of the institutions of which I feel that we can justly be proud. I have met many tourists who praise the appearance of the building, the friendly atmosphere of its reading rooms, its stock of books and the courtesy of its library staff. If the library has come from the old Honolulu reading rooms, and it has grown from that source, then those who founded and built up the old reading rooms have reason to be proud of their work. I am not connected with the library in any way, except as a reader who feels that the good work being done there should receive its due praise and at least be secure against unmerited criticism.

BEST LIVER AND BOWEL LAXATIVE FOR FAMILY USE

"Cascarets" Regulate Women, Men and Children Without Injury

Take When Bilious, Headachy, For Colds, Bad Breath, Sour Stomach

WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP
Inasmuch as Cascarets, being pure, salts, castor oil or dangerous cathartics, why don't you keep Cascarets handy in your home? Cascarets act so gently you don't realize you have taken a cathartic, but they act thoroughly and can be depended upon when a good liver and bowel cleansing is necessary—they move the bile and poison from the bowels without griping and sweating in the stomach. You eat one or two at night like candy and you wake up feeling fine, the headache, biliousness, bad breath, coated tongue, sour stomach, constipation, or bad cold disappears. Mothers should give Cascarets, sick, feverish or bilious children a whole Cascarets any time—they are harmless and safe for the little folks.—Adv.

WAR SPEED MAKING NEUROASTHENICS OF STOLID EUROPEANS

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Slow-going Europeans will develop into neuroasthenics just like Americans, as a result of the speed that is being developed on the battle fields, according to Dr. George A. Crile of Cleveland in a lecture before the Academy of Medicine. Dr. Crile has just returned from France, where he was with the American ambulance corps. He declared that the Europeans are going at a speed never known to them before and comparable only to the manner in which New Yorkers work.

Red Cross units are being found in Greece.

SHORES AND SHOPS AT BIG NAVAL STATION AT PEARL HARBOR BUSY

Enormous Expenditures Going on and Small Army of Workmen Working to Complete Plants at Big Strategic Point

It is more than probable that but a small fraction of the people of this city have any conception of the magnitude of the task Uncle Sam has set for himself at Pearl Harbor; magnitude in dollars and cents and in execution. What the pioneer of the Pearl Harbor naval station did seemed haphazard to the onlooker at the start. There was that element of rough eagerness by all concerned to the point that everything planned should be planned right. From then on things did move, and today the work in hand constitutes one of the biggest enterprises on the face of the earth.

A visitor to this new naval station at Pearl Harbor will find such a wonderful city of shops and foundries, that in the absorbing pursuit of gathering information the chances are that he will not do justice to any of the different departments.

The whole harbor, from the inside channel buoy to the far end of the locks embraced in the government work, is teeming, living, feeling, pulsing, throbbing with the work now in hand. Dredgers are digging at the bottom accompanied by a continued clang of hoisting apparatus, immense screws are ever on the move from place to place with parts of construction, and many small launches are darting here and there on some mission of this important work. Locomotives, hauling loads of coal or material, go puffing and snorting along the shores, and the exhaust of the engines that drive the excavating machinery is heard on all sides.

In the many industrial buildings machinery that has been available for many months is being assembled and put in place. Especially is that so regarding the heavy machinery.

Engineers are busy at the present moment mapping out the locations for three "destroyer" slips. These slips will be excavated on the shore of the main section, the contract for the work of digging the slips having been secured by the Lord-Young Engineering Company.

One does not grasp the significance of Pearl Harbor and all that it means to these islands until a visit there is made, and the features of interest are pointed out. There are several points of interest with huge muzzles that can be viewed from a distance, as Uncle Sam is quite jealous of his weapons of peace or war, and allows no one to "monkey" with them, or get the lay of the land with the aid of a camera.

The coaling plant at this great naval station is to be the greatest and most efficient in the world, and the working of the different parts is as smooth and well balanced as are the workings of fine watches.

The debris of the previous ill-fated drydock has been cleared away and the work on the new one is progressing well. The massive gate for this new drydock is resting in mid-stream, ready to be installed when needed. This affair of steel and searchlights cost in the neighborhood of $200,000.

Work of improving and beautifying the grounds is kept abreast of the most important construction work. The reservation has the best roads to the islands, and will have a beautiful drive when the road connecting the naval station and Watertown is completed.

At Watertown the amount of naval construction that is going on at the present moment is a seven-day wonder. The buildings are all substantial and of a pleasing design. It is here that considerable filling in will be required, but this will be accomplished and the place beautified.

Some of the local steamship companies might run an excursion steamer to Pearl Harbor occasionally, at a price for the round trip, with lunch, that would drop quite a few dollars into its pocket, and give the people an outing that would be beneficial to all.

SCORES PUTTING UNTRAINED MEN IN HIGH PLACES

Gen. Carter's Prize Winning Essay Insists Upon Experience for Commanders

Experience, training and demonstrated ability are the qualities which a republic should demand of its military commanders, says Major General William H. Carter in his essay on "The Human Element in Warfare," which was awarded the 1915 Reeve Memorial Prize. The first part of the essay was printed in the Star-Bulletin on October 9 and the second part on October 16. The third portion of the essay, which will be concluded next week, follows:

The peculiarly mystifying and deplorable thing in military life is not that an occasional Benedict Arnold develops into a traitor, but that solid did men, honorable and upright through a long course of years, and who have given upon hard-fought fields the highest evidence of courage, soldierly ability and patriotism, should be sacrificed for a single miscarriage or alleged lukewarmness in the execution of orders, as ruthlessly as the savage Indian demands blood for blood.

In writing of the importance of selection and employment of general, Washington wrote: "Delicacy, if misapplied, becomes serious, must yield to expediency. The stake we play for is too great to be trifled with." And the highest and most patriotic motives must be credited to those who see that gallant soldier and gentleman, General Warren, broken-hearted to an untimely grave, and to those who condemned Fitz John Porter to so many years of suffering such as a guiltless conscience alone endures.

No Time for Amends.

These typify only the more celebrated and historic cases. In the rush and swirl of war there is no time to ferret out and make amends for misjudgments of the actions of men. The very development of soldierly pride makes the man all the more sensitive to just rebuke, while unmerited censure may readily develop a life grievance.

It is seldom that one unblushingly discloses his own scheming as Gen. E. D. Keyes set down in his personal memoirs, when he advocated that loyal men should make known their qualifications for office, and if needs be, enter into combinations for the purpose of mutual exploitation. It was in this spirit he wrote, under date of April 19, 1861, to Capt. Montgomery Meigs of the Corps of Engineers, subsequently quartermaster-general:

"In such a state of things it is all-important that you should be here, and if you can make a little capital where you are, hasten on. I will enhance your exploits and capacity, and when you return I trust we may work together for the common cause and of one another." That Meigs was not averse to working to a common end is apparent from a letter written by him to Hon. W. H. Seward, secretary of state, from which this excerpt is taken: "Colonel Keyes has shown intelligence, zeal, activity, and I look for a high future for him."

We go to serve our country, and the country should not neglect us or leave us to be strangled in tape, however red.

In a letter from Dwight Bannister, dated at Cincinnati July 10, 1862, made public by General Keyes, the following appears:

Letter Went to Cabinet.

"I told you all would yet be right. I knew that Secretary Chase would stand by you, when he once understood thoroughly your merits. To make him fully acquainted with them I did all and more than I promised you I would do. The letter I wrote from your headquarters was copied by Chase's secretary (he informs me) and taken before the Cabinet. I met and refuted charges of incompetency contained in a letter from a person on the staff of one of your brother corps commanders made against you and sent to Secretary Chase, but of this fact say nothing until I see you and I will tell you what a set of jealous men you have, right in the Army of the Potomac."

Men are not always so frank in giving expression to the personal antagonism to others in the public service as appears in these two letters, which require no comment:

"Headquarters, Naglee's Division, Newbern, June 12, 1863.

"General: I am most happy to advise you that I have been transferred with my brigade into the department of North Carolina.

"It may be equally agreeable and satisfactory to you, as it certainly is to myself, to be assured that the separation is a permanent one.

"To Maj. Gen. Erasmus C. Keyes, Commanding, Etc., Etc."

Keyes Sent Sharp Answer.

HILO BREAKWATER DURING THE STORM

Could be Found Anywhere on the Mainland

Contractor George Marshall asserts that the Hilo breakwater is the most important strategic point in the United States and that they need stronger defenses.

According to information from Washington the billion dollars which it is proposed to spend within the next six years will be divided about equally between the army and navy. A great part of the extra appropriation for the army will go for coast defense, and the most powerful guns and fortifications which have ever been constructed will be put in place at points along the coast. Out of the money there will also be purchased a supply of ammunition greater than any that has ever before been on hand in this country, and a vast number of machine guns.

Army men here are confident that the government is waking up to the necessity of stronger defenses for the islands since the work at Pearl Harbor was begun. The visit of the congressional party last May will probably result in a great deal of attention being given the situation in Hawaii at the next session of Congress.

SHIPS BARBER TO GO, TOO, AND BE REPLACED BY REAL CUTE LITTLE MANICURE

By LESTER B. KARELLE Yeoman, 1st Class, U. S. S. Maryland.

Recent activities among the feminine voters of the states have begun to take concrete form in many of the states of the union, and many women now hold various offices, such as councilwomen, alderwomen, lawyers and judges, and it was with a great deal of surprise, not to say consternation, that it became noised about in naval circles that the next secretary of the navy would be a woman.

Though nothing official has yet been given out, the Maryland's press agent found out that the future secretary would be Miss Susan Neverwead, and arraying himself for the occasion with his best smile and a bouquet of hibiscus, he timidly called upon her and succeeded in obtaining the following interview:

"Briefly," said the new secretary-to-be, as she looked up from the pattern of the new uniform to be adopted, a perfect creation in lavender and white with a darling renaissance collar and Irish lace cuffs, "briefly, my plans, upon which I have spent a great deal of time and study, are these: I will retain the various training stations. In winter I will use San Francisco and Chicago for training purposes, and in summer the recruits will go to Newport and Norfolk for instruction. More Shore Training.

"I have decided to lengthen the time of training ashore, as my girls would otherwise not be able to meet outside society. In Newport the daily routine would be simple.

"Instead of grouping my girls in companies as they enter the service, I will group them according to size, so that there will be a regularity in my companies. For instance, all the 38's will be in one company, all the 35's in another, and all those who are larger than the 35's will be given daily instructions in banding, and will be attended by expert masseuses, and in a short time I shall have them all looking like sylphs.

"Instead of rising at 5 a. m., which is much too early, I will have them rise at 9 a. m., and from that time until 11 they will have to dress in the uniform of the day. Although that is not long to dress, I think that by constant drill they will be able to dress in that time.

"After breakfast we will have physical exercise, consisting of a 15 minute period of Delaerte and 30 minutes of gum chewing. This finished, there will be a short nap until 3, when my dears will arise and then go to Barracks A, which is splendidly appropriate for a ballroom, and we will have the dancers from 3:30 until 5:30, during which tea will be served by the officers to Newport Society (the capitals are the reporter's).

Engage Movie Actors.

"After tea will come dinner, and then the girls will repair to the Auditorium, where we will not only have moving pictures, but also the movie actors themselves to talk to the girls. I have already spoken to Mr. Kerrigan, G. M. Anderson, Antonio Moreno and some others and they have agreed to come to these shows—though they necessarily expect some remuneration for their services.

"Once a week I shall give a ball, and we will invite only the best society, and will have our girls well chaperoned, for there may be some ex-navy officers among the guests, and if anyone can steal a girl's heart a naval officer can. (Here Miss Neverwead stopped, smiled coyly and gazed in soulful rapture at the picture of a handsome man in a lieutenant's uniform, and the reporter was surprised to see that the portrait was that of one of the Maryland's most popular officers.)

"I shall necessarily have to change the sea routine somewhat. You have read very recently of—er—er—pat-lamas have been abolished in the navy. That was at my suggestion, because, when I become secretary and have my girls at sea, I have some very pretty lingerie nightgowns (here she blushed prettily) for my girls. The idea of having them sleep in hammocks is preposterous, and I shall have state-rooms built about the ship for them.

Abolish Horrid Title.

"One of the first things I shall do is to abolish the berth deck, and also the rank and grade of vice-admiral. I think that's too horrid a title for any self-respecting naval officeress to wear. Then we shall paint the ships differently. That war color is a horrid color and really does not match the uniforms of the men at present, nor will it harmonize with the projected uniform of the future.

"I will have my port watch girls dressed in pink, the starboard watch in lavender, and the port and starboard sides will be painted pink and lavender respectively, so that there will be no clash of colors. Apropos of that, we will abolish a great many of the signal flags, as the colors do not harmonize at all and really are jarring upon the true esthetic sense. Semaphore flags will be either pink or cerise, I have not yet decided.

"For winter we will have a heavy uniform, trimmed at the neck and cuffs with ermine, and in summer, the neck and cuffs will have that dear lingerie effect. We will have a delightful lot for winter and a white sailor, trimmed with pink, for summer. Uniform will be changed three times a day, in the morning,

HOPEING HAWAII WILL GET BIG SHARE OF MILLIONS FOR ARMY

Army men and civilians in Hawaii are hoping that a large part of the scores of millions of dollars which will probably be spent in increasing the efficiency of the army and making the coast defenses stronger will be used here.

While they have no information and do not care to make statements, officers here who are closely in touch with affairs are sure that an enormous amount will be spent in making Honolulu Harbor and Pearl Harbor impregnable and in putting a land force on the islands which will be strong enough to repel any attack.

They base their opinion on the fact that the Hawaiian Islands are recognized as the most important strategic point in the United States and that they need stronger defenses.

According to information from Washington the billion dollars which Semaphore flags will be either pink or cerise, I have not yet decided.

We will have a delightful lot for winter and a white sailor, trimmed with pink, for summer. Uniform will be changed three times a day, in the morning,

HOPEING HAWAII WILL GET BIG SHARE OF MILLIONS FOR ARMY

Army men and civilians in Hawaii are hoping that a large part of the scores of millions of dollars which will probably be spent in increasing the efficiency of the army and making the coast defenses stronger will be used here.

While they have no information and do not care to make statements, officers here who are closely in touch with affairs are sure that an enormous amount will be spent in making Honolulu Harbor and Pearl Harbor impregnable and in putting a land force on the islands which will be strong enough to repel any attack.

They base their opinion on the fact that the Hawaiian Islands are recognized as the most important strategic point in the United States and that they need stronger defenses.

WILL ABOLISH HORRID TITLE OF VICE ADMIRAL FROM NAVY

Ship's Barber to Go, too, and Be Replaced By Real Cute Little Manicure

By LESTER B. KARELLE Yeoman, 1st Class, U. S. S. Maryland.

Recent activities among the feminine voters of the states have begun to take concrete form in many of the states of the union, and many women now hold various offices, such as councilwomen, alderwomen, lawyers and judges, and it was with a great deal of surprise, not to say consternation, that it became noised about in naval circles that the next secretary of the navy would be a woman.

Though nothing official has yet been given out, the Maryland's press agent found out that the future secretary would be Miss Susan Neverwead, and arraying himself for the occasion with his best smile and a bouquet of hibiscus, he timidly called upon her and succeeded in obtaining the following interview:

"Briefly," said the new secretary-to-be, as she looked up from the pattern of the new uniform to be adopted, a perfect creation in lavender and white with a darling renaissance collar and Irish lace cuffs, "briefly, my plans, upon which I have spent a great deal of time and study, are these: I will retain the various training stations. In winter I will use San Francisco and Chicago for training purposes, and in summer the recruits will go to Newport and Norfolk for instruction. More Shore Training.

"I have decided to lengthen the time of training ashore, as my girls would otherwise not be able to meet outside society. In Newport the daily routine would be simple.

"Instead of grouping my girls in companies as they enter the service, I will group them according to size, so that there will be a regularity in my companies. For instance, all the 38's will be in one company, all the 35's in another, and all those who are larger than the 35's will be given daily instructions in banding, and will be attended by expert masseuses, and in a short time I shall have them all looking like sylphs.

"Instead of rising at 5 a. m., which is much too early, I will have them rise at 9 a. m., and from that time until 11 they will have to dress in the uniform of the day. Although that is not long to dress, I think that by constant drill they will be able to dress in that time.

"After breakfast we will have physical exercise, consisting of a 15 minute period of Delaerte and 30 minutes of gum chewing. This finished, there will be a short nap until 3, when my dears will arise and then go to Barracks A, which is splendidly appropriate for a ballroom, and we will have the dancers from 3:30 until 5:30, during which tea will be served by the officers to Newport Society (the capitals are the reporter's).

SCORES PUTTING UNTRAINED MEN IN HIGH PLACES

Gen. Carter's Prize Winning Essay Insists Upon Experience for Commanders

Experience, training and demonstrated ability are the qualities which a republic should demand of its military commanders, says Major General William H. Carter in his essay on "The Human Element in Warfare," which was awarded the 1915 Reeve Memorial Prize. The first part of the essay was printed in the Star-Bulletin on October 9 and the second part on October 16. The third portion of the essay, which will be concluded next week, follows:

The peculiarly mystifying and deplorable thing in military life is not that an occasional Benedict Arnold develops into a traitor, but that solid did men, honorable and upright through a long course of years, and who have given upon hard-fought fields the highest evidence of courage, soldierly ability and patriotism, should be sacrificed for a single miscarriage or alleged lukewarmness in the execution of orders, as ruthlessly as the savage Indian demands blood for blood.

In writing of the importance of selection and employment of general, Washington wrote: "Delicacy, if misapplied, becomes serious, must yield to expediency. The stake we play for is too great to be trifled with." And the highest and most patriotic motives must be credited to those who see that gallant soldier and gentleman, General Warren, broken-hearted to an untimely grave, and to those who condemned Fitz John Porter to so many years of suffering such as a guiltless conscience alone endures.

No Time for Amends.

These typify only the more celebrated and historic cases. In the rush and swirl of war there is no time to ferret out and make amends for misjudgments of the actions of men. The very development of soldierly pride makes the man all the more sensitive to just rebuke, while unmerited censure may readily develop a life grievance.

It is seldom that one unblushingly discloses his own scheming as Gen. E. D. Keyes set down in his personal memoirs, when he advocated that loyal men should make known their qualifications for office, and if needs be, enter into combinations for the purpose of mutual exploitation. It was in this spirit he wrote, under date of April 19, 1861, to Capt. Montgomery Meigs of the Corps of Engineers, subsequently quartermaster-general:

"In such a state of things it is all-important that you should be here, and if you can make a little capital where you are, hasten on. I will enhance your exploits and capacity, and when you return I trust we may work together for the common cause and of one another." That Meigs was not averse to working to a common end is apparent from a letter written by him to Hon. W. H. Seward, secretary of state, from which this excerpt is taken: "Colonel Keyes has shown intelligence, zeal, activity, and I look for a high future for him."

We go to serve our country, and the country should not neglect us or leave us to be strangled in tape, however red.

In a letter from Dwight Bannister, dated at Cincinnati July 10, 1862, made public by General Keyes, the following appears:

Letter Went to Cabinet.

"I told you all would yet be right. I knew that Secretary Chase would stand by you, when he once understood thoroughly your merits. To make him fully acquainted with them I did all and more than I promised you I would do. The letter I wrote from your headquarters was copied by Chase's secretary (he informs me) and taken before the Cabinet. I met and refuted charges of incompetency contained in a letter from a person on the staff of one of your brother corps commanders made against you and sent to Secretary Chase, but of this fact say nothing until I see you and I will tell you what a set of jealous men you have, right in the Army of the Potomac."

Men are not always so frank in giving expression to the personal antagonism to others in the public service as appears in these two letters, which require no comment:

"Headquarters, Naglee's Division, Newbern, June 12, 1863.

"General: I am most happy to advise you that I have been transferred with my brigade into the department of North Carolina.

"It may be equally agreeable and satisfactory to you, as it certainly is to myself, to be assured that the separation is a permanent one.

"To Maj. Gen. Erasmus C. Keyes, Commanding, Etc., Etc."

Keyes Sent Sharp Answer.

"Headquarters, Fourth Corps, Yorktown, June 25, 1863.

"General: Your letter of the 12th instant has been received.

"The happiness you express in your announcement of a permanent separation from me is, I assure you, most cordially reciprocated. I will add,

HILO BREAKWATER DURING THE STORM

Could be Found Anywhere on the Mainland

Contractor George Marshall asserts that the Hilo breakwater is the most important strategic point in the United States and that they need stronger defenses.

According to information from Washington the billion dollars which it is proposed to spend within the next six years will be divided about equally between the army and navy. A great part of the extra appropriation for the army will go for coast defense, and the most powerful guns and fortifications which have ever been constructed will be put in place at points along the coast. Out of the money there will also be purchased a supply of ammunition greater than any that has ever before been on hand in this country, and a vast number of machine guns.

Army men here are confident that the government is waking up to the necessity of stronger defenses for the islands since the work at Pearl Harbor was begun. The visit of the congressional party last May will probably result in a great deal of attention being given the situation in Hawaii at the next session of Congress.

STRICT EMBARGO OF MUNITIONS TO MEXICAN BORDER

Customs Officials Guard Line Against Export of Arms to Rebels

[Associated Press by Federal Wireless] EL PASO, Tex., Oct. 23.—The United States embargo on all arms to Mexico which are not for Gen. Carranza, now the recognized de facto ruler of Mexico, has formally been declared along the border between Marfa, Tex., and Columbus, N. M. Enforcement of the embargo is left largely to the discretion of the customs officials. They are expected to prevent any smuggling by Villistas in the name of Carranza and to this end will be compelled to rely upon agents who are in close touch with Mexican communities on this side of the border where the juntas of the various factions are active. Villa to Open Smelter. It is reported here that Gen. Villa, who recently seized a Chihuahua plant of the American Smelting & Refining Company, for failure to operate upon "government orders" will soon be opened by the revolutionist himself. Failure of the plant to operate, it is understood here, was due to scarcity of labor. No workmen were available, all the men being at war, and the plant was compelled to close. Under a technical feature of a contract with the state government Gen. Villa then seized the plant.

BRITAIN'S KING APPEALS TO MEN TO ENLIST

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 23.—An appeal to his subjects to enlist was issued yesterday by King George, who makes a personal call to the men of the Empire to rally to the support of the nation. "The end of the great conflict is not yet in sight," says the appeal, signed by King George, "and more men and yet more men are wanted to keep my armies in the field up to their full strength, that a complete victory may be secured and an enduring peace result from the sacrifices that have been and are yet to be made. I ask the men of all classes within the British Isles voluntarily to take their places in the ranks and bear each their share in the fighting that is to be."

Mission Wage for Women Granted

Yesterday an important announcement was made by Minister of Munitions Lloyd George, which states that the government recognizes the justice of the minimum wage demand made on behalf of the women engaged in the manufacture of munitions. Hereafter, the announcement states, all women over the age of 18 years will be paid a minimum of one pound a week, while skilled workers among the women will receive the same pay as the skilled workers among the men.

RECRUITING BRISK AS RESULT OF CAVELL INCIDENT

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 23.—Public indignation at what is denounced in the press as "brutal, premeditated murder," the execution of the English nurse, Edith Cavell, in Belgium, by court-martial sentence, is still at white heat throughout the country and recruits are flocking in by the thousands "to avenge the murder of the angel of mercy."

TEUTON TRAWLER ATTACKS SWEDISH SUBMARINE

STOCKHOLM Sweden, Oct. 23.—The Swedish submarine, the Hvalen, returned to port yesterday evening with her helmsman badly wounded as a result of an attack by an armed German trawler. Her commander reports that his ship was fired upon on Thursday afternoon by a German trawler, which approached him under the disguise of a fishing boat. Although he had the Swedish flag hoisted, the report states the trawler opened fire at close range, firing several shells at the submarine before it could be submerged. One shell struck the submarine, a portion of it wounding the helmsman. The attack, says the report, occurred in Swedish waters.

ROME REPORTS IMPORTANT ITALIAN ADVANCES

ROME, Italy, Oct. 23.—As a result of the desperate fighting of the past ten days along the Carso front in the Trieste district the Italians have made the most notable advance of their portion of the war. The Austrian line has been broken in several points and the Italians have advanced successfully to the shores of the Gulf of Trieste. The Austrian losses in prisoners and supplies is large.

BELGIAN WOMEN PUNISHED FOR REFUSING TO WORK

PARIS, France, Oct. 23.—Punishment under the German military rules is being imposed by Gen. von Bissing, the German military governor of Belgium upon the Belgian town of Harlebeke, where the Belgian women have refused to perform tasks under German orders, which are for the military benefit of the invaders. Rock From Waipio Quarry Extending Hilo Breakwater at Great Rate

LOADING A TEN TON ROCK WITH STEAM SHOVEL AT WAIPIO

Aided by as complete a plant as could be found anywhere on the mainland in connection with a like project, Contractor George Marshall asserts that, barring the occurrence of some unforeseen accident, his section of the great Hilo breakwater extension will be completed on the time set in the contract. Contractor Marshall now contends that if he can secure the remainder of the breakwater work, or at least $500,000 worth of it, he would duplicate much of his big plant at Waipio and begin to send in 1000 tons of rock every day in the year. "I would complete the breakwater in far less time than it would take another contractor, without my quarry, to get really going on the job," declares Mr. Marshall. Thus far, Contractor Marshall has expended $100,000 on his plant. Aside from this, he has taken over the other contractor's plant, which had a valuation of $100,000. The breakwater and wharf which have been constructed at Waipio have now become permanent improvements, and the rice-growers in the Waipio valley are considering shipping direct from the wharf instead of conveying their product over the steep hill trail. Marshall declares that if he is given the chance, and not called upon to bid for the next and all the other sections, he could finish the entire breakwater within a comparatively short time. He contends that, if bids are called for now and some mainland concern which knows nothing about the proposition secures the contract by underbidding him, then Hilo may have to wait six or seven years more for its breakwater.

LOADING SCOW AT WAIPIO BAY

HILO BREAKWATER DURING THE STORM

(Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence) HILO, October 19.—Although the rather rough weather of the past few days has made the operation of towing the rock-laden scows from the Waipio quarry of Contractor Marshall to Hilo a trifle slow, there has been no serious difficulty experienced and the rock has been coming to hand well on time. The heavy seas along the coast have at times rendered the scows invisible from the tug, but have not prevented the loads from arriving safely. On one trip this week from Waipio the waves washed over the scow but not a rock was lost or displaced. Something in the way of a record was made on Friday last when a scow carrying 550 tons was hauled from Waipio. Twenty-five of the many rocks on the scow weighed 250 tons in the aggregate, or 10 tons each. The rocks are very hard and they are of the kind that are expected to be incorporated with a breakwater that will last for ever. Find Rocks on Beach. Many individual rocks of 10 tons and over have been brought from Waipio, but to find 25 stones on one scow, each weighing 10 tons, is rather startling and goes to show the kind of quarry the Marshalls have. And, in some places, the expression quarry is incorrect, for the rocks are not quarried from the face of the cliffs at all. Nature attended to that years ago when she shook herself free of the big stones and sent them hurtling down to the beach from the cliffs hundreds of feet above. Contractor Marshall says that any ordinary kind of rough sea cannot prevent him from working at both ends of the job—Waipio and Hilo. He, naturally, prefers the calmer weather, but declares that it will take very heavy swells to stop operations temporarily. He adds that, of course, there may come spells when a lay-off of a few days may become necessary, but he is exceeding the record so much each week nowadays in the way of placing rocks that there will, after all, be no delay, even should operations have to be stopped for a short time now and again. The breakwater is jutting further and further out into the bay each day and the big job is going along in good shape.

JEVDED PASHA BLAMED FOR SIEGE OF VAN AND ARMENIAN MASSACRES

Mere Handful of Armed Men Held Turkish Army at Bay Until Relief Arrived

(By Associated Press.) LONDON.—Details of the siege of Van and the massacre of Armenians by the Turks are given in the current issue of the Near East, which fixes the responsibility for the crime on Jevded Pasha. It was on Jevded Pasha also that the refugee Armenians inside their houses from 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 7 in the morning. The residents of Lessines, where the women have likewise refused to carry out the orders of the German officers, are being similarly disciplined. The massacre began at Shadokh, a large and isolated village, where not a man was spared except those over 60 years of age. Of the women, the more comely were carried away by Jevded's soldiers and Kurd tribesmen. The massacre was carried out systematically in the entire province of Van beginning with the outlying village. Great care was taken to prevent rumors of this from reaching the capital. Slaughtered "Dear Friend." There was living in Van city at that time Prince Ishkhan, an Armenian who had formerly been useful to the government in settling troubles between the Turks and the Armenians. He was asked by Jevded to go to the villages and try to reconcile the contending parties. Jevded addressed the prince in a letter as his "dear friend." The prince, unaware of the plot, started out with a number of advisers. The entire party was slaughtered by a party of Jevded's horsemen while taking lunch at a coffee house. At this time also there was in Van an Armenian member of the Turkish parliament by the name of Vramian, who was invited by Jevded to call on him at headquarters. On arrival at headquarters Vramian was arrested, a large stone was tied to his feet and he was thrown into a lake and drowned. The Russians were now reported on the advance. Talat Bey published a warning against the Armenians participating on a penalty of dire punishment. But the story of the massacre in the isolated parts was carried by survivors, and the Armenians prepared to sell themselves as dearly as possible, the peaceful element as well as the revolutionaries. Jevded then called on the Armenian bishop to vis-

PACKS SAFE AND 50,000 FRANCS THROUGH TRENCHES OF GERMANS

(By Associated Press.) PARIS, France.—The first and only trooper of the Turcos, or French black troops from Senegal and Algeria, to receive the Legion of Honor from the French government, is a thick-set, coal-black, middle-aged infantryman who went through one of the queer experiences of the war. While operations were active at the front a short time ago, it was determined to fall back from a given point, and this Turko was given the small steel safe containing 50,000 francs in government funds to carry back to the new position. He was given a donkey and started off with the safe and treasure. Suddenly, however, all the plans of removal were interrupted by a German raid, which swept the Turcos and all other troops, with their horses and supplies, into the utmost confusion. Many were killed and the whole force was badly scattered. It was taken for granted that the Turko with the safe and treasure was certainly lost, as even those not burdened with heavy loads had been swept away in the impetuous raid. They gave him the Legion of Honor and the whole regiment was drawn up as he received it from the representative of the government, who gave him the accolade or kiss of honor on his coal-black face.

DEVELOPMENTS IN WAR-ZONE OF IMPORTANCE TO WORLD

WAVE OF INDIGNATION SWEEPING OVER STATES AT TURK ATROCITIES

Threatened Annihilation of Armenians Causes Outbursts of Sympathy

A growing wave of indignation is sweeping over the United States against the Armenian atrocities. Judging by intances in American newspapers and magazines of all shades of sympathy. The Literary Digest says:

It is a period marking the death of nations, and the one to reach the goal first seems to be the victim of the "jihad" which was to overwhelm the Allies. Instead of having any such result, the Holy War is merely extinguishing the race who were Christians when our ancestors were offering heathen sacrifices in the dense forests of Europe. Turkey is now in the act of murdering Armenia, and she has almost completed her work, says Vincent Yardum in the New York Times. All able-bodied males, we are told, have been impressed into the army, where they have met their death; or they have perished in prisons or on the gallows. Old men, women and children have been driven out of their homes and sent into exile toward Arabia, where they never arrive. Death from starvation or from the attacks of plundering Mohammedans overtake most of them. The American Armenian Relief Fund Committee issues in the Churchman, New York, a letter dated Constantinople, June 15, 1915, and purporting to come from a high authority whose word is not to be doubted. We quote:

"The public in America are unaware of the great crisis through which the Armenian nation in Turkey is passing at present. Indeed, our knowledge of the actual condition of the provinces is very little, because of the strict censorship to which communications with the interior are subjected, and because of the absolute interdiction against traveling on the part of Armenians; yet you will have an idea of what we know already. The Armenian nation is swindling between life and death at this moment in every part of Turkey. I will pass over the misery caused by arbitrary confiscations, the ravages of typhus, the description of men between eighteen and fifty, and the imprisonment and exile during the last two months of thousands of Armenians. About the beginning of April, immediately after the news of the Armenian losses, schools, churches and diocesan offices were searched, by the order of the central government, even in the poorest country corners, and consequently many people were thrown into prison for possessing arms, which were hitherto permitted, and for books and pictures publicly sold. In the fall of Caesarea alone 500 Armenians are incarcerated today, besides those who have been exiled, by administrative orders only and without any guilt, to places inhabited solely by Moslems. But this condition of affairs is much silder than...

At the provinces of Cilicia and of those bordering the Caucasus. The Turkish government is executing today the plan of scattering the Armenian of the Armenian provinces, propping from the troubles of the European powers and from the acquiescence of Germany and Austria. This scheme began to be carried out first in Cilicia. The whole of the population of Zeitun, Doryol, and its neighborhood, and the greater part of those of Marash and Hassansbey were deported locally and without notice...

"The condition of the Armenians is extremely aggravated since my last letter. It is not the Armenian population of Cilicia only which has been deported wholesale and exiled to the deserts. Armenian communities from all the provinces of Armenia—from Erzerum, Trebizond, Sivas, Kharput, Bitlis, Van, and Diarbekir, also from Samsun, Caesarea and Gurfa—a population of 1,500,000—are marching today, the stock of forced pilgrimage in hand, toward the Mesopotamian wilderness, to live among Arabian and Kurdish savage tribes. It is evident that these poor people can take with them only a little of their goods and property, owing to the impossibility of transportation and the insecurity of traveling. Very few of them will be able to reach the spots designated for their exile, and those who do will perish from starvation if no immediate relief reaches them. There are no means of communicating with the people in the provinces, as the scattered people are not permitted to send any telegraphic despatches. However, we hope that it will not take very long to find out their present locations and to reach them somehow or other. I trust that the Armenians of America will hasten, on being informed of this distress of their parents, children and relatives, to send us funds, so that their lives may be saved. I hope also that the American charitable public, on hearing of the condition of this ill-fated nation, already in the throes of death, will not refuse its helping hand. Immediate action is necessary. Every day that passes carries away many victims of starvation. It would be superfluous to add anything more. You may conceive from these lines that we are facing the extermination of a nation. Is it that God Almighty, not deeming sufficient the unlimited sufferings of this people in the past ages, has left the bitterest cup to be tasted in this twentieth century? It is in the name of a starving population of 1,500,000 that urgent appeals should be made to the charitable public of America."

The Chicago Daily News prints a despatch from Sofia, Bulgaria, giving an account of the activities of Henry Morrenthau, the American ambassador to Turkey, who recently made an offer to the Turkish government to raise $1,000,000 to transport to America the Armenians who thus far have escaped the general massacres. "Ever since the minister of war, and Talaat Bey, minister of the interior, accepted the offer, and September 3 the ambassador asked the government at Washington to appoint a committee of five Americans, whom he recommended, to take charge of the great undertaking," Mr. Morrenthau declined, however, to give the names of the five Americans in Constantinople.

"Since May, said the ambassador, 250,000 Armenians have been slaughtered or have died of starvation. There are 500,000 Armenians who could now be sent to America, and we need help to save them. One million dollars is too little for the purpose of transporting them as it takes $100 to equip, feed, and transport one man. Perhaps 45,000,000 will be necessary. I should like to see each of the western states take a few to equip a ship to bring the names of 'saviors' to the world. The Armenians are a most hard-working race, and would make good citizens to settle the less heavily populated parts of the western states."

Turks admit that the Armenian persecution is the first step in a plan to get rid of Christians, and that Greeks will come next. Jews also are marked for slaughter or expulsion. American missionaries must also be driven out for Turkey. Mohammedans are to be for Turkey. The Sultan's edicts, on being questioned, said that the deportation of the Armenians was contrary to Moslem law, but that he was powerless in the face of military despatch.

Foreigners in Constantinople hold the Germans in part at least, responsible for the persecution of the Armenians, for they are being advised to prevent the distribution of inflammatory literature among the savage tribes inciting them to attack Christians.

Vincent Bryce, formerly ambassador to the United States, writes to the Associated Press to enlist the aid of America in this crisis. "If anything can stop the destroying hand of the Turkish government," he thinks, "it will be an expression of the opinion of neutral nations, chiefly the judgment of humane America." He writes:

"Soon after war broke out between Turkey and the Allies, the Turkish government formed, and since has been carrying out, with relentless cruelty, by the exterminating hand of the Turkish government, the policy of killing off Christians of the Armenian race."

In Trebizond City, where the Armenians numbered 10,000, orders came from Constantinople to seize all Armenians. Troops hunted them, drove them to the shore, took them to sea—threw them overboard and drowned them all—men, women and children. This was seen and described by the Italian consul.

HOW YOU MAY THROW AWAY YOUR GLASSES

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not need them. If you are one of these unfortunate ones, these glasses may be rubbing your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Opton; fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water and drop in one Opton tablet. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, non-functioning and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind or nearly so, or who wear glasses would never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late. Do not become one of those victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition; so better see if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy, strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given.—adv.

No Peace Until Central Empires Win Their Ideals, Declares Chancellor To Reichstag

Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg Forecasts German Policy From Present Until Peace Is Declared, in Speech Which Reiterates Assertions Since Beginning of War Regarding Responsibility for Conflict—Reviews Ante-Bellum Diplomacy

[The Continental Times, a paper published in English in Berlin and devoted largely to American news, recently published the following important statement by the German chancellor, forecasting German policy throughout the war. It succinctly states the position taken by Germany.]

Great events have happened since last we met in session. Every action made by the French to pierce our western flank, though carried out in defiance of death and at the utmost sacrifice of human life, has been shattered by the transcendent courage of our valiant troops. Italy, our ally, whom I fancied she might make an easy conquest of those alien possessions which she coveted, has been repulsed in the most brilliant manner, despite her numerical superiority and despite the ruthless sacrifices of human lives which she did not scruple to make—and make doubly in vain. Unshaken and unshakable stands the Turkish army at the Dardanelles. We stand ready to defend our allies. Today, assembled under this flag, our thoughts turn likewise to the exalted ruler of the Danubian monarchy, who yesterday entered upon the eighty-sixth year of his life.

Everywhere—wherever we have seized the offensive, we have beaten the enemy and hurled him back. In conjunction with our allies we have freed almost all Galicia and Poland, we have freed Livonia and Courland from the Russian yoke. Ivanograd, Warsaw and Kovno have fallen. Far distant in the land of our enemies our lives have built up an impenetrable wall. We possess powerful armies which are now free to strike fresh blows. Proudly and fearlessly and with the firmest faith in our magnificent troops we may regard the future.

In the very midst of the terrors of war we think gratefully of that humanitarianism, rich in deeds, which has been shown us by neighboring neutral states, not only during the return of civilians from enemy lands, but also during the exchange of invalid prisoners of war. During the second exchange of prisoners of war with France, all classes of the Swiss population from Geneva to the German frontier, tied with one another in the ancient spirit of hospitality in their endeavors to make out brave warriors forget as far as possible their sorrows, lay by behind them. For the second time the Netherlands have bestowed their generous care and help upon the seriously wounded that have returned from England. The exchange of prisoners with Russia which is now taking place for the first time and which occurs along great stretches of Swedish territory, proves how the government and the people of that land are unsurpassed in the philanthropy and kindness. To these three nations I would express my heartfelt gratitude as the German people. I would at the same time utter a word of special gratitude to His Holiness the Pope. He has tolled indefatigably in the matter of the exchange of prisoners and upon many other humane tasks. He has conferred enduring honor upon himself in the execution of these measures and he has but recently contributed to alleviate the sufferings of the people of East Prussia by means of a most generous donation.

Gentlemen, our opponents take upon themselves a monstrous and blood-stained burden of guilt in their attempts to deceive their people as to the true situation. When they cannot deny their defeats, our victories serve as excuses for heaping new calumnies upon us. We were victorious during the first year, they declare, because we had long and treacherously prepared for the war, whilst they had lived on in an innocent love of peace, totally unprepared. Well, gentlemen, they spoke differently before the war. You may recall the warlike articles circulated in the press by the Russian minister of war during the spring of 1914, articles in which he gave praise to the Russian army's complete preparation for war. You may recall the haughty and in many ways provocative language used by France during recent years? You are aware that whenever France gratified the Russian need for money, she stipulated that the greater part of the loan was to be used for purposes of war armaments?

And England, gentlemen? On the 3rd of August of last year, Sir Edward Grey spoke in parliament as follows:

For us with a powerful fleet, which we believe able to protect our commerce, to protect our shores, and to protect our interests. If we are engaged in war we shall suffer even if we stand aside."

He who speaks thus in a spirit of almost gruesome business matter-of-factness on the very eve of his own declaration of war, he who directs not only his own policy, but the policy of his friends according to this, must surely do so merely because he is aware that he and his allies are ready. To be sure, gentlemen, it is not difficult to understand that our opponents should again and again endeavor to absolve themselves from the guilt of this war. I have presented the inner history of these things before the Reichstag both at the beginning of the war and again last December. All that has since transpired has been only a confirmation of all this. The myth that England entered the war merely on behalf of Belgium has, in the meantime been abandoned absolutely valid testimony as to the tendencies of English politics and the origin of the war has been furnished us in the reports of the Belgian Ministers which I have had published. They suffice to convince all who have not yet been convinced. Why are they doing their utmost to suppress the contents of these documents in London and Paris and St. Petersburg? Why does the enemy press, whenever it does refer to these reports, strive so strenuously to belittle the real significance of these documents and to put forward the vain pretext that they constitute no proof that the neutrality of Belgium had been forfeited by Belgium herself? That proof has already been established elsewhere. The people of the Entente nations need only inspect the publications which I have had issued in connection with the negotiations which the English military attaché carried on with the Belgian military authorities. We have an altogether different matter to deal with here. In those negotiations we have to consider the Entente and the isolation policy of England. I can assure the public of England and France that they would find these documents well worth reading.

These Belgian reports make such interesting reading because they are so entirely unanimous in their verdicts upon English politics. Had it been only Baron Grendl, the Belgian minister at Berlin, who criticized English policy so sharply, it might perhaps have been said that his views had been influenced by his sympathy for the country to which he was accredited, though such an assumption would be unjust to so non-partisan a diplomat. But the same decision is reached in the reports of his colleagues in London and Paris and their judgments are unanimous and of absolutely incontrovertible weight. Since so little notice has been taken of these reports in other lands, I will here venture once more to read a few specimen passages from the revelations. Baron Grendl, in February, 1905, wrote as follows:

"The real reason for England's hatred of Germany is the envy which has been called into being by the development of the German navy, German commerce and German industry." Two years later he writes: "The French encroachments have once more assumed the same proportions as those that prevailed during the worst days of the Second Empire, and the Entente Cordiale is to be blamed for this. These presumptions have even perceptibly increased since it has become plain that the negotiations between London and St. Petersburg to which France undoubtedly had been a party, might lead to an entente."

In another place he states: "The policy carried out by King Edward under the pretense of saving Europe from an imaginary danger, has evoked a French peril only too real—which is primarily inimical to us."

Count Lalaine, the Belgian minister in London, declared on May 24th, 1907: "It is clear that official England is pursuing a secret policy hostile to Germany, the purpose of which is isolation, but there is no doubt that it is very dangerous to poison public opinion in the way this is being done by the irresponsible press."

The Belgian Charge d'Affaires in London, Mr. Cartier, in March, 1907, wrote: "Since the conduct of Russian foreign affairs has been left to hawks, a remarkable rapprochement has taken place between the cabinets of London and St. Petersburg. The incident of the Dogger Bank, the English sympathy for Japan in 1904, the embittered rivalry in Persia, all that belongs to the past. The entire force of English diplomacy is directed towards the isolation of Germany."

Finally, Baron Guillaume, the Belgian Minister in Paris, writes on the 6th of January, 1914:

"I have already had the honor to report that it was MM. Poincaré, Delcasse, Millerand and their friends who invented that nationalistic, militaristic, chauvinistic policy and followed it through. We have now confirmed a revival of this policy, which constitutes a danger for Europe—and for Belgium!"

Gentlemen, these reports of the Belgian diplomats coincide thoroughly in all the main particulars and give a clear picture of the policy of the Entente during the last ten years. In the face of such witnesses, all the attempts made by our opponents to ascribe to us the lust for war and to themselves the love of peace, are rendered null and void. Gentlemen, we German policy uninformed of these happenings or did it purposely close its eyes; in that it again and again endeavored to find a way out of the difficulty? Neither the one nor the other. I am well aware that there are circles that reproach me with political short-sightedness because I repeatedly endeavored to bring about an understanding with England. I thank God that I did this. Remote as were the hopes with which I sought again and again to renew these attempts, it is as clear as day that the fatality of this monstrous and murderous war-configuration might have been prevented had an honest understanding, based upon the preservation of peace, been achieved between Germany and England. Who in Europe would then still have ventured to wage war? With a goal such as this to strive for, would I have been justified in putting aside a task merely because it was a heavy task and one which proved fruitless time and again? Gentlemen, where the ultimate solemnity of the life of nations is concerned, where millions of human lives are at stake, I hold that with the help of God there is nothing that is impossible. I would rather have perished in the struggle than have evaded it. Permit me briefly to recall to your memories the course of events.

King Edward had conceived the personal furtherance of the English policy of isolating Germany to be one of his chief duties. I therefore had reason to hope that, after his death, the new policy and understanding which I had begun as early as August, 1909, might proceed under more favorable conditions. These negotiations dragged along until the spring of 1911, without result, when the interference of England in the discussions between

"Peace of Europe Can Only Be Accomplished By Strong and Unassailable Position for Germany," He Says; "Must Achieve Freedom of Seas"

Germany and France regarding Morocco, made clear to the eyes of all nations how the world's peace was threatened by Britain's extreme policy and by her friends of the entente, to impress her will on the entire world. At that time, too, the English people were but scantily instructed as to the dangerous course pursued by the policy of their government. For after the crisis was happily past and they realized how narrowly they had escaped the precipice of a world-war, a feeling gradually began to express itself in many English circles that it would be desirable to bring about a relationship with Germany which would preclude warlike entanglements. One perilous walk along the brink seemed to have been enough. This gave rise to the mission of Lord Haldane to Berlin in the spring of 1912. Lord Haldane assured me of the sincere desire for an understanding on the part of the English cabinet. But he felt a certain anxiety because of Germany's naval program. I asked him whether an open understanding with us, an understanding which not only precluded a German-English war, but every European war, would not be worth more than a couple of German dreadnoughts. Lord Haldane personally seemed to incline towards the point of view, but asked whether we would not, as soon as our hands were left free against England, make an attack upon France and annihilate her? I replied that the policy of peace to which Germany had adhered for a period of more than 40 years should have spared us a question such as that.

For surely, had we been planning for war, we had most excellent opportunity to evince our rage for it during the Boer war or the Russian-Japanese war. But there, as well as during all the phases of the Moroccan crisis, we had done precisely the opposite and had proven our love of peace before the whole world. Germany, I assured him, sincerely desired to live on terms of peace with France and would attack France as little as she would attack any other power. After Lord Haldane's departure from Berlin, the negotiations were resumed in London. A few weeks ago I had the formulas of agreements which were proposed on both sides during these negotiations, published in the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung. These documents are well worth the attention of our antagonists. But so far as I have seen, the English press, with a single exception, has ignored them. For that reason I would like once more to make brief mention of the facts.

First, in order to attain a permanent understanding with England, we made a proposal based upon a treaty of mutual and unconditional neutrality. When this proposal was declined by England as too comprehensive in its scope, we suggested that this neutrality be confined to wars in which it would not be possible to refrain from such unprovoked attacks as could scarcely be said to meet the requirements of a solemn treaty between civilized nations. The English cabinet was obviously of another mind, and thought to meet our representations by having the following words prefixed to the unchanged formula:

"The two powers being mutually desirous of securing peace and friendship between them, England declares that she will..." and so on, as I have already read to you. This prefix, however, could in no wise alter my judgment of the essence of the English offer. Even today I am forced to believe that no one could have blamed me had I broken off all negotiations even at that period. But I refrained from taking such a step. I did all that lay within my power to secure the peace of Europe and the world. I consented to consider these English proposals and to discuss them, with the one stipulation that they be completed by the insertion of the following clause:

"England will therefore, as a matter of course, preserve a benevolent neutrality in case a war should be forced upon Germany."

I beg you, gentlemen, to consider these words: "In case a war should be forced upon Germany." I shall afterwards return to this point. Sir Edward Grey blankly refused to accept this addition. He was unable to exceed the limits of his formula, and, as he declared to our ambassador, Count Metternich, chiefly because he might otherwise endanger existing friendships with other powers. This, is Hector Macdonald—"Fighting Mac," the greatest Scottish soldier since the days of Bruce—still living! Is he playing a hero's part in the present war? These are strange and staggering questions. But hundreds are asking them. Thousands and tens of thousands will be asking them soon. All the world knows that in the gusty murk of a March morning 12 years ago a coffin believed to contain the remains of the departed general was lowered into a grave in the Dean cemetery, Edinburgh.

Britain was heavy of heart that day. Westminster Abbey was the only resting place fit for so grand a warrior. But his amazing career had ended, not in a blaze of glory, but in blackness and horror. "Fighting Mac," the soldier's idol, the man who had climbed by sheer brain-power and courage from the ranks to a knighthood and a great command, had died by his own hand. Thus, at least, all believed.

And now a story comes from the front, and is gaining currency all over the north of Scotland, that the soldier's grave in that Edinburgh cemetery is empty; that "Fighting Mac" never died and was buried; that the uniform of a Russian general he is fighting the Germans in the eastern theater of war, opposing to Prussian weight and ferocity that grim infinitude of resource, that superbly calculated strategy, that thunderbolt suddenness of action that won for Britain the "batts" of Omdurman, and that placed Macdonald for all time among the great military heroes of the world, the great military heroes of the world, Gen. Demetrief, the mysterious and brilliant leader of Russian troops, whose exploits during the past few months have been of incalculable service to our great ally in the east, is said to be none other than Macdonald, Sir Hector Macdonald, K. C. B.!

Demetrief bears an amazing facial resemblance to the great Scottish soldier, whose grave lies in Edinburgh. This fact was commented on again and again by Scotsmen traveling in Russia before the war.

STRANGE RUMOR LEADS RUSSIANS

England Stirred By Report That Hector Macdonald Not Dead But Fighting Germany

Is Hector Macdonald—"Fighting Mac," the greatest Scottish soldier since the days of Bruce—still living! Is he playing a hero's part in the present war? These are strange and staggering questions. But hundreds are asking them. Thousands and tens of thousands will be asking them soon. All the world knows that in the gusty murk of a March morning 12 years ago a coffin believed to contain the remains of the departed general was lowered into a grave in the Dean cemetery, Edinburgh.

Britain was heavy of heart that day. Westminster Abbey was the only resting place fit for so grand a warrior. But his amazing career had ended, not in a blaze of glory, but in blackness and horror. "Fighting Mac," the soldier's idol, the man who had climbed by sheer brain-power and courage from the ranks to a knighthood and a great command, had died by his own hand. Thus, at least, all believed.

And now a story comes from the front, and is gaining currency all over the north of Scotland, that the soldier's grave in that Edinburgh cemetery is empty; that "Fighting Mac" never died and was buried; that the uniform of a Russian general he is fighting the Germans in the eastern theater of war, opposing to Prussian weight and ferocity that grim infinitude of resource, that superbly calculated strategy, that thunderbolt suddenness of action that won for Britain the "batts" of Omdurman, and that placed Macdonald for all time among the great military heroes of the world, the great military heroes of the world, Gen. Demetrief, the mysterious and brilliant leader of Russian troops, whose exploits during the past few months have been of incalculable service to our great ally in the east, is said to be none other than Macdonald, Sir Hector Macdonald, K. C. B.!

Demetrief bears an amazing facial resemblance to the great Scottish soldier, whose grave lies in Edinburgh. This fact was commented on again and again by Scotsmen traveling in Russia before the war.

When, therefore, Demetrief drew sword against the Germans, and began to display military abilities of the highest order, small wonder the rumor arose that here indeed was Macdonald himself.

No one who comes in detail the portraits of Demetrief and Hector Macdonald can fail to be convinced of the striking likeness that the two faces bear to each other. "They're photographs of the same man taken by different angles" is the thought that immediately springs to the mind. The Features Compared.

Head and brow are of the same massive cast in both portraits. The deepest eyes hold the same bright, dauntless expression. The nose, straight and broad, and big-nostriled—the nose of the born fighting man—is common to both; so is the pug-nosed chin, hewn out of granite resolve; the ragged mustache, and the firm, generous mouth.

In the case of the heavy jaw there is some slight divergence, but not more than 12 years of life might well account for.

Compare a present-day photograph of Kitchener with a portrait taken of him at the close of the Boer war, and you will see that the jaw-line has altered in precisely the same degree as the difference between the jaw-line of Hector Macdonald and that of Gen. Demetrief.

In fact, one might truthfully say that the Kitchener of today differs no more from the Kitchener of 1905 than does the present day face of Demetrief from the face of "Fighting Mac" as we know and loved it.

GERMAN CHANCELLOR SAYS WAR WILL GO ON UNTIL IDEALS WIN

so far as we were concerned, terminated the discussion. No commentary upon this need be made. England assumed it to be a sign of special friendship well worthy of being sealed in a solemn compact, that she would not attack us without cause, but would nevertheless keep a free hand in the event of her friends doing so. These negotiations, so far as I know, have never been completely revealed in England, at all events only in fragments and then incorrectly. Mr. Asquith, the English Premier, referred to this subject in a speech at Cardiff on October 2, 1915. I quote from an official version of his published speech, revised by himself. Mr. Asquith communicated to his hearers the English proposal not to make an unprovoked attack upon us—according to the text of the formula which I have just read you. He then proceeds as follows:

"But that was not enough for German statesmanship. They wanted us to go further. They asked us to pledge ourselves absolutely to neutrality in the event of Germany being engaged in war."

This declaration on the part of Mr. Asquith is a distortion of the facts. It is true that at the beginning of the negotiations we had demanded unconditional neutrality, as I have just said. But in the course of the negotiations we had limited our claims for neutrality to the event of a war being forced upon us. "Should war be forced upon Germany?" This fact was concealed by Mr. Asquith from his auditors. I consider that an unjustified in declaring that through this he has in the most unappealing fashion, misled the public opinion of his country.

Naturally, had Mr. Asquith given a complete presentation of the case he would not have been able to pursue the course he adopted in his speech, a speech well trimmed to suit the feelings of his auditors. He says, and this is again the literal text:

"They asked us to pledge ourselves absolutely to neutrality in the event of Germany being engaged in war, and this, mind you, at a time when Germany was enormously increasing both her aggressive and defensive resources and especially upon the sea. They asked us, to put it quite plainly, for a free hand so far as they were concerned when they selected the opportunity to overbear, to dominate the European world."

It is simply inconceivable to me—and I would choose no other word—how so eminent a statesman as Mr. Asquith could have represented an event of which he was informed officially in detail in a manner so contrary to the facts as to draw deductions therefrom which are nothing less than a blow in the face of truth. And this representation of his was introduced by Mr. Asquith with such words as these:

"I wish to call not only your attention but the attention of the whole world to this when so many legends are now being invented and circulated."

I should like to ask: Who is it that I have paid particular attention to this case in order that I might utter a protest against the untruths and the calumny with which our opponents wage war upon us. Although we were fully aware of the anti-German tendency of England's policy, we nevertheless with the utmost patience went to the extreme limits of conciliation. But stones were offered us instead of bread. And yet by a most unexampled distortion of the facts, we are to be set in a pillory before the world. Even though our enemies may succeed in smothering established truth, in their unworthy incitement of nation against nation, or in the clash of arms, yet the day will come when history shall deliver its judgment. The moment had arrived in which an understanding between England and Germany would have guaranteed the peace of all the world. We were prepared to accomplish this. England rejected it, and nothing through all eternity will ever come to England from the burden of this episode of Lord Haldane's came to an end. Soon after, Edward Grey and M. Caillaux, French Ambassador in London, as in well known, their letters, the text of which Anglo-French defection.

and fully cognizant of the seriousness of the international situation, we constantly strove, in addition to carrying on negotiations with England, to improve our relations with Russia in every way possible. I have repeatedly spoken upon that point here in the Reichstag, never having concealed anything in all our policies to the representatives of the people. To ward Russia, whose policy was of the most decisive importance for the conclusions of France, I have always been actuated by the conviction that friendly relations with each individual member of the Entente must at least reduce the general tension, and that every year of peace gained would tend to lessen the danger of a universal explosion. We had arrived at an understanding with Russia in regard to various separate questions. I would remind you of the conference at Potsdam. The relations of the one government to the other were not only correct, but supported by mutual confidence. But the general situation was in no wise improved by this. It had been poisoned at the very roots, since the chauvinistic idea of revanche in France and the warlike Pan-Slavic strivings for expansion in Russia, instead of being assuaged by England, were continually stirred and goaded into fresh life through the anti-German policy of the British cabinet, as shown in its adherence to the idea of the balance of power. The tension became so great that the first great and serious strain was bound to lead to a rupture.

Thus, gentlemen, the summer of 1914 arrived. I have depicted the separate events on August 4. The constant misrepresentations and attacks on the part of our enemies oblige me even here to refer once more to a certain point. The statement that the whole war might have been avoided if I had agreed to accept the suggestion of Sir Edward Grey and take part in a conference for the regulation of the Russian-Austrian question at issue has again of late been repeatedly made in England. Here are the real facts: The English proposals for a conference were delivered here by the English ambassador on the 27th of July. The English Blue Book also shows that the secretary of state at the foreign office in the conversation in question with Sir Edward Goschen—a conversation in which the secretary designated the means proposed as unsuitable—had communicated to the English ambassador that, according to his information from Russia, M. Sazanov had inclined to consider a direct exchange of opinion with Count Berchtold. He was of the opinion that a direct conversation between St. Petersburg and Vienna might lead to a satisfactory result. For that reason it was best to await the results of this conversation. Sir Edward Goschen communicated this to London and received a telegraphic answer in which Sir Edward Grey used these words:

"As long as there is a prospect of a direct exchange of views between Austria and Russia, I would suspend every other suggestion, as I entirely agree that it is the most preferable method of all."

Thus Sir Edward Grey accepted the German point of view at that time, and expressly withdrew his proposal of a conference for the time being. However, unlike Sir Edward Grey, did not permit matters to rest at the platonic wish that a conversation might ensue between St. Petersburg and Vienna, but did within my power to persuade the Russian and the Austrian governments to discuss the matter by their respective capitals before declared in our endeavors in Vienna, in a manner which "went to the bottom of the matter."

It was in this wise, gentlemen, the episode of Lord Haldane's came to an end. Soon after, Edward Grey and M. Caillaux, French Ambassador in London, as in well known, their letters, the text of which Anglo-French defection.

Herr von Tschirschky in answer to this communicated on July 30th:

"Count von Berchtold states that, as Your Excellency assumes, there has indeed been some misunderstanding in question, and that on the part of Russia. Having already received word of this misunderstanding also through Count Szapary, the Austrian-Hungarian Ambassador in St. Petersburg, and having at the same time followed our urgent suggestion that the communication with Russia, he had at once given the necessary instructions to Count Szapary."

Gentlemen, I made all this known to the British press when excitement in England increased shortly before the outbreak of the war, and serious doubts as to our endeavors to preserve peace became audible. Now after the event, that press makes the insinuation that this occurrence had never taken place at all and that the instructions to Herr von Tschirschky had been invented in order to mislead public opinion in England. You will agree with me that this accusation is unworthy of an answer. I would also allude at the same time to the Austrian Red Book which merely confirms my presentation of the facts and shows how after the aforesaid misunderstanding had been cleared up, the conversations between St. Petersburg and Vienna had begun to take their course, until the general mobilization of the Russian army brought them to an untimely end. I repeat, gentlemen, that we have supported the direct discussion between Vienna and St. Petersburg with the most emphasis and success. The assertion that we, by refusing to accept English suggestion of a conference, must accept the blame for this war, belongs to the category of base calumnies under cover of which our enemies endeavor to hide their own guilt. The war became unavoidable only through the Russian mobilization. Once more I would establish this fact beyond all dispute. I have permitted myself to enter somewhat fully into certain diplomatic occurrences, in order to oppose those floods of accusations which are designed to blacken the clean conscience and serene mind of Germany. But we shall finally emerge as victoriously from this battle against vilification as we shall from the great struggles upon the battlefields.

Our troops, gentlemen, and those of Austria-Hungary, have reached the borders of Poland in the east and to the west. Geographical and political conditions have for centuries compelled Germans and Poles to battle against one another. The memory of these ancient contraries does not decrease our respect for the passion, the patriotism and the tenacity with which the Polish people, amidst great sufferings, have defended their ancient and western civilization and love of freedom against Muscovitism, nor for the spirit they have displayed under the heavy affliction of this war. I shall not attempt to emulate the hypocritical promises of our enemies. I hope that our country will be able to Polish frontiers to the east and to the west. Gentlemen, Germany must so build up her position, so fortify and strengthen it, that the other powers shall never again venture to think of a policy of strangulation.

Not only for our own protection but for the welfare of all the nations of mankind, we must achieve the freedom of the seas, not in order, like England, to command them as a monopoly, but in order that all other nations may be served equally by them. It is not we who threaten the little nations. Our desire is to be and to remain a refuge for the peace and the freedom of the nations, great and small. And I do not confine this remark merely to the peoples of Germanic race. How hard the diplomats of the Entente are toiling to convince the Central Powers would plunge them into servitude and that on the other hand the triumph of the Quadruple Entente will procure them liberty, independence, increase of territory and economic prosperity! It is only a few years since Russia in her lust for power created the Balkan League under the cry "The Balkans for the Balkan Peoples!" But she dropped it in order to favor the Serbian breach of treaty with Bulgaria. It is the German and the Austrian-Hungarian victories in Poland that have freed the Balkan states from the Russian aggression. There was a time when England served to protect the Balkan States, but as the ally of Russia she can only be the oppressor of their independence. Even now she is letting them feel the weight of her selfish hand.

I would conclude, gentlemen, with a brief summary. There is scarcely another great nation which in the course of the last centuries has suffered such sorrows as the German, and yet we might almost love this destiny which has spurred us on to tremendous achievements. When the empire was united at last, every year of peace proved to be a distinct gain, for it was without war that we made our great progress. War was no necessity to us. Germany has never striven to obtain the mastery of Europe. Her ambition was to stand foremost in the peaceful rivalry of the nations in all the tasks of progress and civilization. This war has revealed to us the greatness of which we are capable when supported by our own moral force. This power which is conferred upon us through our inner strength we can use in no other sense than that of liberty. We cherish no hatred for the peoples whose governments have hounded them into the war against us. But we have put by our sentimentality. We shall hold out in this war until these peoples demand peace from those who are really guilty, until the road is clear for a new Europe, a Europe freed from French intrigue, from Muscovitism, from conquest, and from English tutelage.

I shall not attempt to emulate the hypocritical promises of our enemies. I hope that our country will be able to Polish frontiers to the east and to the west. daringly original fashion in which he led his Sudanese troops.

"Had the brilliant, the splendid deed of arms, wrought by Macdonald been done under the eyes of a sovereign or in some other armies," wrote Bennett Burleigh, the famous war correspondent, "he had surely been created a general on the spot. If the public are in search of the real hero of the battle of Omdurman, there he is ready made!"

But it is not for these feats, or for the many brilliant ones he accomplished in the South African war, that the memory of "Fighting Mac" is so beloved by the rank and file.

He was a great man as well as a great soldier. His heart was as warm and impulsive as his brain was machine-like and cold.

And if the story of his changed identity be true, if it be proved eventually that that noble, generous heart is not dust but in living and beating still, then a thrill of joy far beyond the power of words to express will pass through his native land.

What deeds the Highland troops would do if Hector were with them now!

OLD IOLE CHURCH CELEBRATES FOR 60 YEARS' WORK

Occasion is Made Gala Day on Big Island and Many Persons Attend Services

Commenting on the recent observance of the 60th anniversary of the founding of the old Iole church in Kohala, Hawaii, of which Rev. Elias Bond is pastor, the Kohala Midget News:

Iole church, or Kalahikiola, as its Hawaiian name is had a grand jubilee last Sunday, with 10 years to spare over the Biblical half century which constituted a jubilee.

The gala day began at 9 a. m. with a Sunday school holks in which 42 classes took part, viz: Pololu, Nihiu, Kapaemahu, Hahaione, Halaona, Kanihama, Kailua, Hanalei, C. K. Jagers, Pali, Kailua, Hanalei, Kanihama, and Kailua. Each class wore badges of its own color, and all sang and performed their parts well.

The interior of the newly painted and carpeted church was beautifully decorated with ferns hung in the windows and flowers to give a touch of color.

All Races Represented.

The second part began at 11 a. m. with the 600 seating capacity of the house nearly all filled by an audience representative of all elements and races in Kohala. A large choir led by Mr. Nipho made beautiful melody. Miss Alice Bond presiding at the organ.

There were three distinguished speakers from abroad, Rev. C. M. Kanihama, H. S. Timoteo, and Rev. A. Kama. The former two had been students under Rev. Elias Bond, the school for Hawaiian boys, to which Mr. Kama had devoted his life. He spoke on "What the Church Stands for in the Community"—(1) Worship, (2) Light

Perfect Religio us Freedom In Christian Education Work In Japan, Says Report

Nothing to Indicate That "Open Door" for Protestant Missionaries is Fast Closing

(By Associated Press.)

KARUIZAWA, Japan.—American missionaries here are somewhat disturbed over reports from the United States that apprehension exists there as to the future of Christianity in Japan. This apprehension is said to be the outgrowth of the new school regulations in Korea about which the missionaries think, some misleading private reports have been sent to the United States.

The situation led the mission of the Methodist Episcopal church to hold a special meeting here under the chairmanship of Bishop Merriam C. Harris. At this meeting it was voted to draw up and send to the home church a detailed report of the exact conditions. It is most optimistic in tone and contends that contrary to any idea of restricting the teaching of Christianity, the Japanese government contemplates the extension of privileges already granted. Among other things, the statement emphasizes the progress made on a project to found a Christian University at Tokio—a project that is engaging the attention of all leading American and Japanese Christians.

Korean Schools Only.

In the first place, the report points out that the new regulations affect the schools in Korea only and not those of Japan proper. The essence of the regulations is that the private schools, including the mission schools, are required to conform in grade and curriculum with the government schools. The effect of this will be the same as the effect of old-time similar regulations—that is, it will lift the mission schools to a higher level and compel them to stay there, says Dr. Berry.

As to the prohibition of all religious instruction and worship in the schools seems serious, but the report emphasizes that the rules apply equally to all private schools. They are not directed solely at the Christian schools. Furthermore, Shintoism (ancestor worship) is not to be substituted for Christianity in the schools. The regulations do not apply to colleges or theological schools, and religious worship and instruction may be carried on outside regular school hours.

The committee thinks that at the end of the two years allowed for compliance with the new order of things, the schools in Korea may come under the department of education at Tokio and there obtain the same freedom and privileges enjoyed by the private schools in Japan proper. It recommends that the Korean schools comply with all the other regulations and then wait in patience and pray that the evil day of prohibition of religious instruction may not come.

Freedom in Japan.

The report emphasizes that there is perfect religious freedom in Christian education work in Japan proper. This is acquired by accepting a special governmental classification which while signifying loss of certain school rights entails the loss of nothing that is fundamental. But even the difference in classification, it is declared, has come to be almost entirely nominal.

"Our big, prosperous Christian schools," writes Dean Berry, "which are crowded with students and in which the Bible is a text book and which are openly and aggressively Christian in atmosphere and activity—these are the most conclusive proof of the fact that there is religious freedom in educational work in Japan. And this perfect religious freedom is not threatened from any quarter whatever. The attitude of the government of Japan toward religious should be judged by the way it treats Christian work in Japan itself and not by the exceptional attitude taken under exceptional circumstances by the government-general in Korea."

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS ASKED TO JOIN CLASS

Organization for Training of Workers Will Be Launched at Central Union Sunday

Sunday school teachers and workers in the various churches and missions in Honolulu have been invited to attend the teachers' training class which will be opened at Central Union church at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. The meeting hour was originally announced as 10 o'clock, but this has been changed in order that those persons engaged in teaching may attend the class.

Charles T. Pitts, principal of the Punahou preparatory school, will have charge of the teachers' training class. This is the fourth year of the work and no efforts are being spared to make this the best and largest year in the history of the work. The course is thoroughly modern, eminently practical and represents the best educational thought of the times.

Following are excerpts from notice of the organization of the class which have been sent out by Central Union church:

"Membership:

"1. The class is planned for the training of young men and women who look forward to teaching in Bible schools. As training has been given to older teachers in previous years, the plan this year is to have a group of young people under 30 years of age.

"2. The course offered is designed for those who have never taught, although it may be taken by those now in service who have not had the training they wish.

"3. For the purpose of securing the maximum of individual training, a small group is planned.

"4. Young men and women who have completed the senior course of the Bible school and who desire to be added to their master by teaching are specially invited into membership.

Courses of study:

"1. Bible Study and Elementary Psychology. Text-book: Slattery's 'Talks with the Training Class.'

"2. Bible Study. The great characters of the Old and New Testaments. Text-books: (a) The Bible. (b) Stanzas Studies.

"3. Teaching Methods. Text-books: 'Talks with the Teacher that Teaches.' 'Talks with the Teacher who is to be a Teacher.' These text-books will be furnished to each member of the class. The authors of the 'Punahou Preparatory Course' are experts. The texts are full of good ideas and suggestions.

BROADEN SCOPE OF ACTIVITIES AT NEW CHURCH

First Christian Congregation Being Introduced to Many New Plans and Features

The erection of the new building on Kewalo street by the Christian church naturally called for a broadening of its activities, and this broadening now is taking place.

The "Neighborhood Evenings" last night was one step in that line. The church invited all the residents living within the neighborhood of the church during the evening for social enjoyment and better neighborhood acquaintance. There was a large turnout of the members of the church and of the neighbors. The idea met with a hearty approval. The facilities offered by the new church makes it a fine community center, and it is expected that it will be used by the people of that part of town for many purely neighborhood interests.

Arrangements have been perfected by which Miss MacDougal is to give a reading once each month in connection with a social evening. The readings will be selected to fit into the special significance of the season—Thanksgiving in November, Christmas in December, and so on, with an interspersed of readings from selected fiction. Miss MacDougal is too well known as a reader to leave any doubt concerning the pleasure of those evenings.

The Bible school library has always been in demand, and since the church moved into the new building that demand has increased. The supply of books necessarily is limited, but a book social is to be held on Friday, October 29. Each person attending will be asked to bring a book suitable for such a purpose. It is not necessary that it be a religious book. The object of this library is to encourage the reading of good literature. Any book falling within that class will be acceptable. There is hardly a person who does not possess at least one such book which he would be willing to give for such a purpose. One person can bring more than one book if he desires.

A number of people will be constituted in representation of the character of the book, and in a half minute talk introduce the character. This will naturally create a desire to read the book presented. Miss MacDougal will give a number of readings at this social. And since it is Halloween, the Halloween spirit will be present in more ways than one.

allowed to "crush" somewhat in its depth. Please notice the pointed effect of the coat's peplum and the bell shaped out of the sleeves.

The English box coated suit is happily illustrated in our design of black velvet, showing a circular skirt and a waist not quite so long. The fascinating dabs of embroidery done in colors, which also illumine the cuffs and big buttons. A military style is achieved by the braided trimming down the front of the coat and the high collar edged with beaver so snugly. A new model is this.

Our stunning knickerbocker sailor is black velvet with a narrow brim and a climbing crown, around which is bound a deep fluting of black satin ribbon. Halfway down the crown is banded a moire ribbon, finishing in a saucy little bow on one side and a black jet fancy. This design may be adapted for the high school senior and the college girl.

The afternoon frock is of deep dahlia georgette crape with a full skirt banded with insets of the same tone and a neat tunic which dips in the back. The simple bodice has touches of shadow lace and hand embroidery to enliven it, and a soft felt hat wreathed with floppy roses completes the smart gown. For evenings we illustrate a frock of palest blue with an accordion plaited foundation and a deep tunic of indestructible voile dropping in points which finish in three rows of frothy ruffles. The simple bodice has a crushed girde of satin in a deeper shade than the foundation. This frock is highly suitable for the debutante.

The dance frock is an important item in the fall wardrobe of either the young girl or the dancing matron. This year it will be, at least at the beginning of the season, of comparative simplicity, for the smartest designs will be in the form of severely made tulle frocks, having shoulders and arms softened by tulle or mousseline as sote, but otherwise absolutely devoid of ornament. There is, however, a trend toward the panier, always a charming fashion when interpreted in the bouffant taffeta.

Cheeks are to be worn during the cool seasons. The checkerboard pattern has assumed a new name for the new season, that of "chessboard" design.

The high collar is becoming insistent. High, bone collars are promised or threatened, depending upon the point of view, but at the present moment the intruded styles are high and snug fittings, but nonetheless. Fortunately there is also a good smart assortment of flat collars, which, some, but very few, separate convertible collars.

A new veil has about the edges tulle chenille drops in the form of bells.

The sailor is the basic idea for many of the new hats of both large and small sizes. In the shapes which may be termed as "close fitting" the crown, bonnet, alarped turbans and the corns are in order. All of these shapes are subject to much modification, depending upon the twitch or turn becoming to the wearer.

CAMPAIN FOR DRY CALIFORNIA BEGINS AT ONCE

SAN FRANCISCO.—The Women's Christian Temperance Union of California will begin at once the campaign for state-wide prohibition called at its thirty-sixth annual convention, held in Oakland September 27 to October 1, when its program for national and state suppression of the liquor traffic was linked with the movement for international peace.

Four lines of activity for carrying the state for prohibition were laid down: (1) To secure the vote of the 200,000 registered voters who failed to cast their ballots; (2) to obtain the support of the 80,000 electors who voted for other amendments but failed to record their judgment on the question of prohibition; (3) to win the support of those who vote for the first time; and (4) to canvass those voters who come from other states.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE VOICES PROTEST IN MATTER OF LICENSE

Last Thursday more than 15 organizations, religious and otherwise, were represented by delegates at a meeting of the liquor license commissioners to protest against the granting of a restaurant liquor license to Lee' Chong for his chop suey restaurant in King street, near the public market. This was the largest representation ever present on such an occasion, and in the addresses made to the board by W. A. Bowen, Rev. D. C. Peters, C. H. Dickey, Mrs. Walter F. Frear and Mrs. Edwin Cooper, representing bodies composed of a large number of citizens and voters, many reasons were advanced why the license should not be granted. The board, after a short executive session, granted the license.

In the Realm of the Feminine

SOME MODISH DESIGNS FOR EARLY AUTUMN

DIVERSITY of styles still marks this season. Crinoline and hoopskirts still vie with shrunken skirts and panniers. The wise woman who likes to dress in accordance with her own temperament and individuality will take advantage of this range to suit her own good points instead of sacrificing them to the "latest thing." There is something becoming and modish for every woman this fall.

Her first concern from now on will be her suit. These English made outer skirts of many godets well pressed and fitted into cunningly designed yokes. All sorts of pockets—watch, patch, everything but the pistol pocket—are contrived on these yokes, while other skirts give way to wide belts buttoned in front. These English suits take box, bolero and Norfolk coats, the fronts of which are loosely hung. Their belts have vanishing effects, disappearing under the arms or missing across the front.

The popular French design comes in georgette suits and one piece dresses which are ornately trimmed with metal and novel braids. Charming blouses of chiffon or crepe come in harmonious or beautifully contrasting colors to go with these suits. Georgette also combines wool plaids with plain colored serges, uniting them with cleverly toned embroideries of wool.

Of our three suits the almost severe one is developed in navy broadcloth with two deep plaits on each hip to give the skirt fullness and a flaring coat that fastens irregularly with two cloth buttons. A choker collar of beaver gives the full effect, and line is the distinction of the design. For the woman whose figure molds to long lines this suit will prove becoming.

The next design is a somewhat dressier, a brown gaberdine trimmed with different widths of silk braid, with a handsome girde of silk cord and a full tassel to finish the waist. Novelty buttons are used down the front and on the sleeves, while the high collar is allowed to "crush" somewhat in its depth. Please notice the pointed effect of the coat's peplum and the bell shaped cut of the sleeves.

NEW FALL FROCKS FOR CHILDREN

The display of the new fall frocks for school children's wear is attracting much attention just now. One notices the clever way in which the predominating fashion features of a season are introduced in these petite frocks, and this season, according to custom, they have adopted styles taken from the gowns and frocks of their older sisters, which make them very quaint and interesting.

The full gathered or plaited skirts, the semi-fitted bodice, short or long waisted; the high, close collar and long sleeves, all are given a place in the more or less modified forms in the clothes of the small girl.

The fashionable materials used for developing women's gowns are also employed in making the replicas intended for the little folk.

One jaunty loose coat was made of plain blue serge, while the plaid material formed the full plaited skirt. The coat was made with a yoke, which was finished at the front with a round shaped tab, which crossed over from the right side to the left and fastened with a single button. The lower part of the sleeves was also made with a tab shape buttoning, holding the sleeve closely to the wrist. The fronts of the coat rounded away toward the bottom, showing a blouse of white pique. The lower part of the coat, at the fronts, had two small shaped inset pockets. There was a small turn-down collar on the coat, over which fell a narrow collar of white pique, which was attached to the blouse.

Another smart little frock was made of shepherd's plaid piped with green. The frock was made with suspender effect, with two straps buttoned across the shoulders to a little short waisted bodice. The skirt was made with narrow box plaits.

Another charming little frock was made of invisible striped serge. The long waist line was defined by a sash of navy blue silk. There were a collar and cuffs of plaited fine cream net. There was a full plaited bodice attached to a yoke, and the skirt was plaited, a box plait of the striped material, with the stripes running crosswise, extending from the yoke to the hem of the skirt.

There are many interesting little three piece frocks made of plain blue serge having "gumpes" of plaid or striped silk or of linen in white natural tones or some pale tone.

One little frock of blue serge had a gumpes and sleeves of linen in natural tones. The frock was made with loose jacket effect held in at the waist line by a belt of gobelin blue silk running through large eyelets. The belt was fastened at the front by small round buttons. The turndown linen collar and turnback cuffs of the linen gumpes were ornamented in a hand embroidered design in blue, the same tone as the belt.

The coats for the small girl are varied and interesting this year. Velveteens, corduroys, chevrets, zibeline mixtures and chinchilla cloths are the materials most in evidence.

One model of corduroy was made with a semi-fitted short waisted bodice. To this short waisted bodice a full skirt was attached. The collar and cuffs were of gray astrakhan.

Hats for children are picturesque and charming. They are all sizes and kinds, but velvet predominates.

FREAKS IN FASHIONS.

Detached trains for evening dresses, worn over a short skirt, are more fashionable than beautiful.

Corduroy cut as a full skirt seems to be an unsuitable but is nevertheless a fashionable fabric for such a purpose. There are traces of the war in many modes, often not in good taste, among them a trimming formed in black of the form of the cross which the Red Cross ambulances have made their own and is their distinguishing feature.

Black is more worn than it has ever been, but the attempts to relieve it in many freakish ways are never successful and hardly ever fashionable.

The same richness is apparent in the evening cloaks represented by the Russian cloaks, voluminous and splendid in texture and color, generally after the style worn by Catherine of Russia.

Scarlet and gold is a fashionable combination. The full skirted, braided gowns are less freakish than some of the moyen age dresses and have belts of broad black braid.

Keen an old comb to clean the car. Some the nail before it is driven into pet sweeper with and you will save woodwork. Yellow soap is better than time and hands.

The Exploits of Elaine

A Detective Novel and a Motion Picture Drama

By ARTHUR B. REEVE

The Well-Known Novelist and the Creator of the "Craig Kennedy" Stories

Presented in Collaboration With the Pathe Players and the Eclectic Film Company

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company. All Rights Reserved

SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders and other crimes. The principal clue to the criminal is the warning letter which is sent the victims, signed with a "clutching hand." The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend, Jameson, a newspaper man. After many fruitless attempts to put Elaine and Craig Kennedy out of the way the Clutching Hand is at last found to be none other than Perry Bennett, Elaine's lawyer and the man she is engaged to marry. Bennett flees to the den of one of his Chinese criminals, the Chinaman lawyer from Bennett the secret of the whereabouts of $2,000,000. Then he gives the lawyer a position which will suspend animation for months. Kennedy reaches Bennett's side just after he has lost consciousness.

TWENTY-FIFTH EPISODE

THE LOST TORPEDO.

From the rocks of a promontory that jutted out not far from the wharf where Wu Fang's body was found and Kennedy had disappeared, opened up a beautiful panorama of a bay on one side and the sound on the other.

It was a deserted bit of coast. But anyone who had been standing near the promontory the next day might have seen a thin line, as if the water, sparkling in the sunlight, had been cut with a huge knife. Gradually a thin steel rod seemed to rise from the water itself, still moving ahead, though slowly now as it pushed its way above the surface. After it came a round cylinder of steel, studded with bolts. It was the hatch of a submarine, and the rod was the periscope.

As the submarine lay there at rest, the waves almost breaking over it, the hatch slowly opened and a hand appeared groping for a hold. Then appeared a face with a tangle of curly black hair and keen, fearful eyes. After it the body of a man rose out of the hatch, a tall, slender, striking person. He reached down into the hold of the boat and drew forth a life preserver.

"All right," he called down in an accent slightly foreign, as he buckled on the belt. "I shall communicate with you as soon as I have something to report."

Then he deliberately plunged overboard and struck out for the shore. Hand over hand, he churned his way through the water toward the beach until at last his feet touched bottom, and he waded out, shaking the water from himself like a huge animal.

The coming of the stranger had not been entirely unheralded. Along the shore road by which Kennedy and I had followed the crooks who we thought had the torpedo, on that last chase, was waiting now a powerful limousine with its motor purring. A chauffeur was sitting at the wheel and inside, at the door, sat a man peering out along the road to the beach. Suddenly the man in the machine signaled to the driver.

"He comes!" he cried eagerly. "Drive down the road, closer, and meet him."

As the swimmer strode shivering up the roadway the car approached him. The assistant swung open the door and ran forward with a thick, warm coat and hat.

Neither the master nor the servant spoke as they met, but the man wrapped the coat about him, hurried into the car, the driver turned and quickly they sped toward the city.

Secretly though the entrance of the stranger had been planned, however, it was not unobeyed.

Along the beach, on a boulder, gazing thoughtfully out to sea and smoking an old briar pipe, sat a bent fisherman clad in an oilskin hat and heavy, ugly boots. About his neck was a long wooden muffer which concealed the lower part of his face quite as effectively as his scraggly, grizzled whiskers.

Suddenly he seemed to discover something that interested him, slowly rose, then turned and almost ran up the shore. Quickly he dropped behind a large rock and waited, peering out.

As the limousine bearing the stranger, on whom the fisherman had kept his eyes riveted, turned and drove away, the old salt rose from behind his rock, gazed after the car as if to fix every line of it in his memory, and then he, too, quickly disappeared up the road.

The stranger's car had scarcely disappeared when the fisherman turned from the shore road into a clump of stunted trees and made his way to a hut. Not far away stood a small, unpretentious closed car, also with a driver.

"I shall be ready in a minute," the fisherman nodded, almost running into the hut, as the driver moved his car up closer to the door.

The larger motor had disappeared far down the bend of the road when the fisherman reappeared. In an almost incredible time he had changed his oilskins and muffer for a dark coat and silk hat. He was no longer a fisherman, but a rather fussy looking old gentleman, bewhiskered still, with eyes looking out keenly from a pair of gold-rimmed glasses.

"Follow that car—at any cost," he ordered simply as he let himself into the little motor, and the driver shot ahead down a bit of side road and out into the main shore road again, urging the car forward to overtake the one ahead.

Such was the entrance of the stranger—Marcus Del Mar—into America.

How I managed to pass the time during the first few days after the strange disappearance of Kennedy I don't know. It was all like a dream—the apartment empty, the laboratory empty, my own work on the Star uninteresting, Elaine brokenhearted, life itself a burden.

Hoping against hope, the next day I decided to drop around at the Dodge house. As I entered the library unannounced I saw that Elaine, with a faith for which I envied her, was sitting at a table, her back toward the door. She was gazing sadly at a photograph. Though I could not see it, I needed not to be told whose it was.

She did not hear me come in, so engrossed was she in her thoughts. Nor did she notice me at first as I stood just behind her. Finally I put my hand on her shoulder as if I had been an elder brother.

She looked up into my face. "Have you heard from him yet?" she asked anxiously.

I could only shake my head sadly. She sighed. Involuntarily she rose and together we moved toward the garden, the last place we had seen him about the house.

We had been pacing up and down the garden, talking earnestly, only a short time when a man made his way in from the Fifth avenue gate.

"Is this Miss Dodge?" he asked.

Neither Elaine nor I knew him at the time, though I think she thought he might be the bearer of some message from Craig. As a matter of fact, he was the emissary to whom the stenographer had thrown the torpedo model from the Navy building in Washington.

His visit was only a part of a deep-laid scheme. Only a few minutes before three crooks—among them our visitor—had stopped just below the house on a side street. To him the others had given final instructions and a note, and he had gone on, leaving the two standing there.

"I have a note for you," he said, bowing and handing an envelope to Elaine, which she tore open and read.

Washington, D. C.

Miss Elaine Dodge,
Fifth avenue, New York.

My Dear Miss Dodge:—The bearer, Mr. Bailey of the Secret Service, would like to question you regarding the disappearance of Mr. Kennedy and the model of his torpedo.

Morgan Bertrand,
United States Secret Service.

Even as we were talking, the other two crooks had already moved up and had made their way around back of the stone wall that cut off the Dodge garden back of the house. There they stood, whispering eagerly and gazing furtively over the wall as their man talked to Elaine.

After a moment I stepped aside, while Elaine read the note, and as he asked her a few questions I could not help feeling that the affair had a very suspicious look. The more I thought of it, the less I liked it. Finally I could stand it no longer.

"I beg your pardon," I excused myself to the alleged Mr. Bailey, "but may I speak to Miss Dodge alone just a minute?"

He bowed rather ungracefully I thought, and Elaine followed me aside while I told her my fears.

"I don't like the looks of it myself," she agreed. "Yes, I'll be very careful what I say."

While we were talking I could see out of the corner of my eye that the fellow was looking at us askance and frowning. But if I had had an X-ray eye I might have seen his two companions on the other side of the wall, peering over as they had done before and showing every evidence of annoyance at my interference.

The man resumed his questioning of Elaine regarding the torpedo, and she replied guardedly, as, in fact, she could not do otherwise.

Suddenly we heard shouts on the other side of the wall, as though someone were attacking someone else.

There seemed to be several of them, for a man quickly flung himself over the wall and ran to us.

"They're after us," he shouted to Bailey.

Instantly our visitor drew a gun and followed the newcomer as he ran to get out of the garden in the opposite direction.

Just then a tall, well-dressed, striking man came over the wall, accompanied by another dressed as a policeman, and rushed toward us.

The car bearing the mysterious stranger, Del Mar, kept on until it reached New York, then made its way through the city until it came to the Hotel La Coste.

Del Mar jumped out of the car, his wet clothes covered completely by the long coat. He registered and rode up the elevator to rooms which had already been engaged for him, in his suite a valet was already unpacking some trunks and laying out clothes when Del Mar and his assistant entered.

With an exclamation of satisfaction at his unostentatious entry into the city, Del Mar threw off his heavy coat. The valet hastened to assist him in removing the clothes, still wet and wrinkled from his plunge into the sea.

Scarcely had Del Mar changed his clothes than he received two visitors. Strangely enough, they were dressed in the uniform of policemen.

"First of all we must convince them of our honesty," he said, looking fixedly at the two men. "Orders have been given to the men employed by Wu Fang to be about in half an hour. We must pretend to arrest them on sight. You understand?"

"Yes, sir," they nodded.

"Very well, come on," Del Mar ordered, taking up his hat and preceding them from the room.

Outside the La Coste, Del Mar and his two policemen entered the car which had driven Del Mar from the seacoast and were quickly whisked away, uptown, until they came near the Dodge house.

Del Mar leaped from the car, followed by his two policemen. "There they are, already," he whispered, pointing up the avenue.

All three hastened up the avenue now, where, beside a wall, they could see two men looking through intently as though very angry at something going on inside.

"Arrest them!" shouted Del Mar, as his own men ran forward.

The fight was short and sharp, with every evidence of being genuine. One of the men managed to break away and jump the garden wall, with Del Mar and one of the policemen after him, while the other only reached the wall to be dragged down by the other policeman.

Elaine, thinking I had been, as I have said, talking with the man named Bailey, who posed as a secret service man, when the rumpus began. As the man came over the fence, warning Del Mar, it was evident that neither of them had time to escape. With his club the policeman struck the newcomer of the two flat, while the tall, athletic gentleman leaped upon Bailey, and before we knew it had him disarmed. In a most clean-cut and professional way he snapped the brackets on the man.

Elaine was astonished at the kaleidoscopic turn of affairs, too astonished even to make an outcry. As for me, it was all so sudden that I had no chance to take part in it. Besides, I should not have known quite on which side to fight. So I did nothing.

As it was over so quickly, I took a step forward to our latest arrival.

"Beg pardon, old man," I began, with well-manicured finger, scarcely reminiscent of a fisherman, began tracing the names down the list until he stopped before one which read:

"Marcus Del Mar and valet, Washington, D. C. Room 520."

With a quick glance about, he made a note of it and turned away, leaving the La Coste to take up quarters of his own in the Prince Henry down the street.

Not until Del Mar had left with his two policemen did the fussy old gentleman reappear in the La Coste. Then he rode up to Del Mar's room and rapped at the door.

"Is Mr. Del Mar in?" he inquired of the valet.

"No, sir," replied that functionary.

The little old man appearing to consider, standing a moment dandling his silk hat. Absent-mindedly he dropped it. As the valet stooped to pick it up the old gentleman exhibited an agility and strength scarcely to be expected of his years. He seized the valet, while with one foot he kicked the door shut.

Before the surprised servant knew what was going on his assailant had whipped from his pocket a handkerchief in which was concealed a thin tube of anesthetic. Then leaving the valet prone in a corner with the handkerchief over his face, he proceeded to make a systematic search of the rooms, opening all drawers, trunks and bags.

He turned pretty nearly everything upside down, then started on the desk. Suddenly he paused. There was a paper. He read it, then with an air of extreme astonishment shoved it into his pocket.

As he was going out he stopped beside the valet, removed the handkerchief from his face and bound him with a cord from the portieres. Then, still immaculate in spite of his encounter, he descended in the elevator, re-entered a waiting car and drove off.

Quite evidently, however, he wanted to cover his tracks, for he had not gone half a dozen blocks before he stopped, paid and tipped the driver generously, and disappeared into the theater crowd.

Back again in the Prince Henry, whither the fussy little old man made his way as quickly as he could through a side street, he went quietly up to his room.

His door was now locked. He did not have to deny himself to visitors, for he had none. Still his room was cluttered by a vast amount of paraphernalia and he was seated before a table deep in work.

First of all he tied a handkerchief over his nose and mouth. Then he took up a cartridge from the table and carefully extracted the bullet. Into the space occupied by the bullet he poured a white powder and added a wad of conversation until at last we came near the La Coste.

"Charmed to have met you, Mr. Jameson," he said, pausing. "We shall see a great deal of each other I hope."

I had not yet had time to say good-by myself when a slight exclamation at my side startled me. Turning suddenly, I saw a very brisk, fussy old gentleman who had evidently been hurrying through the crowd. He had slipped on something on the sidewalk and lost his balance, falling near us.

We bent over and assisted him to his feet. As I took hold of his hand, I felt a peculiar pressure from him. He had placed something in my hand. My mind worked quickly. I checked my first impulse to speak, and, more from curiosity than anything else, kept the thing he had passed to me surreptitiously.

"Thank you, gentlemen," he puffed, straightening himself out. "One of the infirmities of age. Thank you, thank you."

In a moment he had bustled off quite comically.

Again Del Mar said good-by, and I did not urge him to stay. He had scarcely gone when I looked at the thing the old man had placed in my hand. It was a little folded piece of paper. I opened it slowly. Inside was printed in pencil, disguised:

Be Careful. Watch Him.

I read it in amazement. What did it mean?

At the La Coste, Del Mar was met by two of his men in the lobby and they rode up to his room.

Imagine their surprise when they opened the door and found the valet lying bound on the floor.

"Who the deuce did this?" demanded Del Mar as they loosened him.

The valet rose weakly to his feet. "A little old man with gray whiskers," he managed to gasp.

Del Mar looked at him in surprise. Instantly his active mind recalled the little old man who had fallen before us on the street.

"Who—what was he?"

"Come," he said quickly, beckoning his two companions, who had come in with him.

Some time later, Del Mar's car stopped just below the Dodge house.

"You men go around back of the house and watch," ordered Del Mar.

As they disappeared he turned and went up the Dodge steps.

I walked back after my strange experience with the fussy little old gentleman, feeling more than ever, now that Craig was gone, that both Elaine and Aunt Josephine needed me.

As we sat talking in the library, Rusty, released from the chain on which Jennings kept him, bounded with a rush into the library.

"Good old fellow," encouraged Elaine, patting him.

Just then Jennings entered, and a moment later was followed by Del Mar, who bowed as we welcomed him.

"Do you know," he began, "I believe that the lost torpedo model is somewhere in this house, and I have reason to anticipate another attempt of foreign agents to find it. If you'll pardon me, I've taken the liberty of surrounding the place with some men we can trust."

While Del Mar was speaking Elaine picked up a ribbon from the table and started to tie it about Rusty's neck. As Del Mar proceeded she paused, still holding the ribbon, Rusty, who hated ribbons, saw his chance and quietly sidled out, seeking refuge in the conservatory.

Alone in the conservatory, Rusty quickly forgot about the ribbon and began nosing about the palms. At last he came to the pot in which the torpedo model had been buried in the soft earth by the thief the night it had been stolen from the fountain.

Quickly Elaine recalled herself, and, seeing the ribbon in her hand and Rusty gone, called him. There was no answer, and she excused herself, for it was against the rules for Rusty to wander about.

In his haste the thief had left just a corner of the handkerchief sticking out of the dirt. What none of us had noticed, Rusty's keen eyes and nose discovered, and his instinct told him to dig for it. In a moment he uncovered the torpedo and handkerchief and sniffed.

Just then he heard his mistress calling him. Rusty had been whipped for digging in the conservatory, and now, with his tail between his legs, he seized the torpedo in his mouth and bolted for the door of the drawing room, for he had heard voices in the library. As he did so he dropped the handkerchief and the little propeller, loosened by his teeth, fell off.

Elaine entered the conservatory, still calling. Rusty was not there. He had reached the stairs, scurrying up to the attic, still holding the torpedo model in his mouth. He pushed open the attic door and ran in. Rusty's last refuge in time of trouble was back of a number of trunks, among which were two of almost the same size and appearance. Behind one of them he had hidden a miscellaneous collection of bones, pieces of biscuit and things dear to his heart. He dropped the torpedo among these treasures.

Del Mar, meanwhile, had followed Elaine through the hall and into the conservatory. As he entered he could see her stooping down to look through the palms for Rusty. She straightened up and went on out.

Del Mar followed. Beside the palm pot where Rusty had found the torpedo he happened to see the old handkerchief soiled with dirt. Picked by the little propeller. He picked them up.

"She has found it!" he exclaimed in wonder, following Elaine.

Outside, on the lawn, Del Mar's men had been looking about, but had discovered nothing. They paused a moment to speak.

"Look out!" whispered one of them. "There's someone coming."

They dropped down in the shadow. There in the light of the street lamp was the fussy old gentleman coming across the lawn. He stole up to the door of the conservatory and looked through. De Mar's men crawled a few feet closer. The little old man entered the conservatory and looked about again stealthily. The two men followed him in noiselessly and watched as he bent over the palm pot from which the dog had dug up the torpedo. He looked at the hole curiously. Just then he heard sounds behind him and sprang to his feet.

"Hands up," ordered one of the men, covering him with a gun.

The little old man threw up his hands, raising his cane still in his right hand. The man with the gun took a step closer. As he did so the little old man brought down his cane with a quick blow and knocked the gun out of his hand. The second man seized the cane. The old man jerked the cane back and was standing there with a thin, tough steel rapier. It was a sword cane. Del Mar's men held the sheath.

As the man attacked with the sheath the little old man parried, what it flying from his grasp and wounded him. The wounded man sank down, while the little old man ran off through the palms, followed by the other of Del Mar's men.

Around the hall he ran and back into the conservatory, where he picked up a heavy chair and threw it through the glass, dropping himself behind a convenient hiding-place near by. Del Mar's man, close after him, mistaking the crash of glass for the escape of the man he was pursuing, went on through the broken sash. Then the little old man doubled on his tracks and made for the front of the house.

With Aunt Josephine I had remained in the library.

"What's that?" I exclaimed at the first sounds. "A fight?"

Together we rushed for the conservatory.

The fight, followed so quickly by the crash of glass, also alarmed Elaine and Del Mar in the hallway and they hurried toward the library, which we had just left, by another door.

As they entered they saw a little old gentleman rushing in from the conservatory and locking the door behind him. He whirled about, and he and Del Mar recognized each other at once. They drew guns together, but the little old man fired first.

His bullet struck the wall back of Del Mar and a cloud of vapor was instantly formed, enveloping Del Mar and even Elaine. Del Mar fell overcome, while Elaine sank more slowly. The little old man ran forward.

In the conservatory Aunt Josephine and I heard the shooting, just as one of Del Mar's men ran in again. With him we ran back toward the library.

By this time the whole house was aroused. Jennings and Marie were hurrying downstairs, crying for help and making their way to the library also.

In the library the little old man bent over Del Mar and Elaine. But it was only a moment later that he heard the whole house aroused. Quickly he shut and locked the folding doors to the drawing room as, with Del Mar's man, I was beating at the rear library door.

"I'll go around," I suggested, hurrying off, while Del Mar's man tried to beat in the door.

Inside the little old man, who had been listening, saw that there was no means of escape. He pulled off his coat and vest and turned them inside out. On the inside he had prepared an exact copy of Jennings' library.

It was only a matter of seconds before he had completed his change. For a moment he paused and looked at the two prostrate figures before him. Then he took a rose from a vase on the table and placed it in Elaine's hand.

Finally, with his whiskers and wig off, he moved to the rear door where Del Mar's man was beating and opened it.

"Look," he cried, pointing in an agitated way at Del Mar and Elaine. "What shall we do?"

Del Mar's man, who had never seen Jennings, ran to his master, and the little old man, in his new disguise, slipped quietly into the hall and out the front door, where he had a taxicab waiting for him down the street.

A moment later I burst open the other library door and Aunt Josephine followed me in, just as Jennings himself and Marie entered from the drawing room.

It was only a moment before we had Del Mar, who was most in need of care, on the sofa, and Elaine, already remaining unconscious, lay back in a deep easy chair.

As Del Mar moved I turned again to Elaine, who was now nearly recovered.

"How do you feel?" I asked, anxiously.

Her throat was parched by the asphyxiating fumes, but she smiled brightly, though weakly.

"Wh-where did I get that?" she managed to gasp finally, catching sight of the rose in her hand. "Did you put it there?"

I shook my head and she gazed at the rose, wondering.

Whoever the little man was, he was gone.

I longed for Craig.

del Mar and the old man drew guns together.

"but don't you think this is just a little raw? What's it all about?"

The newest comer eyed me for a moment, then with quiet dignity drew from his pocket and handed me his card, which read simply:

M. DEL MAR, Private Investigator.

As I looked up, I saw Del Mar's other policeman bringing in another manacled man.

"These are crooks—foreign agents," replied Del Mar pointing to the prisoners. "The government has employed me to run them down."

"What of this?" asked Elaine, holding up the note from Bertrand.

"A fake, a forgery," reiterated Del Mar, looking at it a moment critically. Then to the men uniformed as police he ordered: "You can take them to jail. They're the fellows, all right."

As the prisoners were led off, Del Mar turned to Elaine. "Would you mind answering a few questions about these men?"

"Why—no," she hesitated. "But I think we'd better go into the house, after such a thing as this. It makes me feel nervous."

With Del Mar I followed Elaine in through the conservatory.

Del Mar had scarcely registered at the La Coste when the smaller car which had been waiting at the fisherman's hut drew up before the hotel entrance. From it alighted the fussy old gentleman who bore such a remarkable resemblance to the fisherman. Hastily paid his driver and entered the hotel.

He went directly to the desk and paper, like a blank cartridge, placing the cartridges in the chamber of a revolver and repeating the operation until he had it fully loaded. It was his own invention of an asphyxiating bullet.

Perhaps half an hour later the old gentleman, his room cleaned up and his immaculate appearance restored, sauntered forth from the hotel down the street like a veritable Turveydrop, to show himself.

Elaine seemed quite impressed with her new friend, Del Mar, as we made our way to the library, though I am sure that it was a pose on her part. At any rate he seemed quite eager to help us.

"What do you suppose has become of Mr. Kennedy?" asked Elaine.

Del Mar looked at her earnestly. "I should be glad to search for him," he returned quickly. "He was the greatest man in our profession. But first I must execute the commission of the secret service. We must find his torpedo model before it falls into foreign hands."

We talked for a few moments, then Del Mar, with a glance at his watch, excused himself. We accompanied him to the door, for he was indeed a charming man. I felt that if in fact he were assigned to the case I ought to know him better.

"You're going downtown," I ventured, "I might accompany you part of the way."

"Delighted," agreed Del Mar.

As Del Mar and I walked down the avenue, he kept up a running fire of conversation until at last we came near the La Coste.

"Charmed to have met you, Mr. Jameson," he said, pausing. "We shall see a great deal of each other I hope."

I had not yet had time to say good-by myself when a slight exclamation at my side startled me. Turning suddenly, I saw a very brisk, fussy old gentleman who had evidently been hurrying through the crowd. He had slipped on something on the sidewalk and lost his balance, falling near us.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - Beginning this year all classes in the grade schools were given free textbooks. The books were given free to the lower grades before, but this year an additional appropriation by the state made the extension of the service possible. The board has purchased 175,000 books.

To meet one problem that the new system has evolved the school board is considering the establishment of a book-binders in one of the vocational schools where worn books may be put in good condition. The books in use in the lower grades get hard usage.

GREAT INCREASE IN ARGENTINE FREIGHT
BUENOS AIRES, A. R.—For the first seven months of the year 1915, 126,551 freight tons have carried 31,318,293 tons of cargo into the port of Buenos Aires, including 2963 cars of live stock. This is a great increase over the corresponding period for last year due to a 56 per cent rise in the exports which overbalance a slight decrease in the imports. The chief import has been sent for building purposes, the next coal, and the rest are lumped together. Exports have consisted mainly of foodstuffs for Europe.

IV. MAIN THOROUGHFARE CONTRIBUTION TO COST BY CITY AND COUNTY: The entire street so to be improved is deemed and has been declared by the Board of Supervisors as a main or general thoroughfare, with respect to which the City and County of Honolulu proposes to assume and pay out of general revenue ten per cent. (10%) of the cost of the improvements (except as to the portion occupied by the Honolulu Rapid Transit & Land Company for its right of way, and except as to new curbing).

V. MATERIALS: The materials proposed to be used are the following: (1) For paving said street: "Warrenite"; (2) For new curbing: Lava rock; (3) Rock curbing already laid to be moved and reset to conform to new street lines where necessary; (4) For storm sewers: Concrete pipes.

VI. METHODS AND RATES OF ASSESSMENT AND FRONTAGES SUBJECT TO ASSESSMENT: The proposed methods of assessment are as follows: (1) The cost of improving streets, including gutters, moving and resetting of rock curbing, and all general expense not otherwise provided, (less the proportion to be borne by the City and County and the portion of work to be done by the Honolulu Rapid Transit & Land Company), is to be provided by general assessment at the rate of $3,194.7 (maximum) per front foot against all land abutting upon said street, both sides included, the total frontage subject to assessment therefor being approximately 10,214.9 linear feet. (2) The cost of acquiring the new land for the widening of said street, including the cost allowed for the removal and reconstruction of fences and walls occasioned by street widening, amounting to approximately $1,489.19 to be borne by the City and County out of general revenue. (3) The cost of new curbing to be provided by assessment at the rate of $0.40 per front foot against the abutting lands opposite which the same shall be laid; there being approximately 1600 linear feet.

VII. SUMMARY OF DETAILED ESTIMATES OF PROBABLE COST (Gross): Cost of widening and incidental expense $ 1,489.19 Preparation of subgrade, 19,000 sq. yds. at $0.15 2,850.00 Extra grading, 950 cu. yds. at $0.60 570.00 Warrenite Paving (including sub-base) 19,000 sq. yds. at $1.70 32,300.00

To ascertain cost of which the City and County shall pay 10% toward main thoroughfare, deduct as follows: (a) Area to be paved by the Honolulu Rapid Transit & Land Company, 1310 sq. yds. $1.85 $2,423.50 (b) Cost of acquiring new lands to be borne by City and County 1,489.19 (c) Cost of setting new curbs (to be charged against the individual lots) 640.00 Total deductions $ 4,552.69 Balance $34,207.50 Add 6% for engineering, inspection, and incidentals 2,062.45

Cost of construction of which 10% shall be borne by the City and County toward main thoroughfare $36,269.95 Proportion of cost to be borne by City and County (10% toward main thoroughfare) 3,626.99 Balance to be charged on a frontage basis $32,642.96

Rates of assessment per front foot $3,194.7 VIII. ASSESSMENTS: AUWAIOILIMU TRACT LOTS: An agreement has been made between the Territory of Hawaii and the City and County of Honolulu, of which a copy is on file with the Clerk, under which not to exceed $1,946.23 will be paid to the City and County by the Territory out of the moneys provided by Act 128 of the Session Laws of 1915, to be used by the City and County to pay the assessments which will be made under these street improvement proceedings against the lots in the "Auwaioilimu Tract" abutting on Lusitana street. A list of the lots entitled to participate in the benefit of this "Auwaioilimu Fund" is attached as Exhibit 7 to the City and County Engineer's report on file with the Clerk.

IX. FURTHER DETAILS: The map and general plans, details, specifications, particulars of estimates and other data so prepared by the Engineer, showing the area and frontage of each parcel of land subject to assessment, the location of existing curbing and the location of the storm sewer system, may be seen and examined by any person interested at the office of the City and County Engineer in the Kapoli building on the north corner of King and Alakoa streets in said Honolulu at any time during business hours prior to the date fixed for the public hearing below stated.

X. DEFINITION: The term "subject to assessment," as herein used, relates also to lands not subject to direct assessment but with respect to which their proportion of cost is to be borne by the City and County, including the lands entitled to the benefit of said "Auwaioilimu Fund." And notice is further given that by the terms of said Resolution No. 301, a public hearing respecting the proposed improvements will be held at the Assembly hall of the Board of Supervisors of the City and County of Honolulu on Tuesday, the 9th day of November, 1915, at the hour of 7:30 o'clock p. m., at which time and place a full opportunity will be given to all persons interested to present suggestions or objections to the proposed improvements or any part or detail thereof.
