HOUSE INTERSPERSES BUSINESS WITH MERRY JOSHES AND FOOLING

The Corporation Report Brings a Debate in the Senate—Bill Is Postponed. Loan Appropriations Are Swollen on Third Reading—11 Bills Are Passed.

The question of corporation publicity was before the Senate yesterday in connection with a bill intended to leave the form of the annual exhibits largely to the discretion of the Treasurer of the Territory. It was to this provision that Senator W. O. Smith voiced an emphatic objection on the ground that the statutes should provide specifically just what the requirements of the annual corporation report should be, and not leave it to the "whims of a Treasurer."

Senator Fairchild also expressed the opinion that the bill, if it became a law, would not work out justly, and would be open to favoritism in its enforcement. He said that he was in favor of a greater degree of publicity in the affairs of corporations, but agreed with President Smith that the form of annual report should be carefully drawn up and not left to the Treasurer who could prescribe a different form of report for each corporation if he desired.

Senator Chillingworth was spokesman for the advocates of the bill without amendment. He said that it was known throughout the Territory that the corporations in many instances were submitting to the Treasurer reports that were evasions of the letter of the law, and from which the public could derive no intelligent idea of the financial status. Action on the bill was finally postponed until tomorrow when Chillingworth said that he would be prepared to defend his position with the necessary facts and figures.

The bill making income tax delinquency a lien on real property was passed in the Senate yesterday, but not until it had been shorn of its objectionable features that aroused opposition on the part of President Smith when it was first taken up for consideration. The clause relating to income tax was stricken out on the motion of the bill's sponsor, Senator Kauden, who also amended the period of the lien duration from five to three years.

The Senate gave its formal approval to the appropriation bill as reported by the joint conference committee. Two dissenting votes were cast, those of Senators Robinson and Baker.

Concur In Amendments. Senate Bill No. 120, relating to the licenses of second-hand dealers, was received from the House with amendments, which were approved.

Senate Bill No. 121, the new election law, was received from the House and the amendments explained by McCarthy and concurred in.

Senate Bill No. 150, providing a salary of $300 per year for the district magistrate at Kalaupapa, was taken up on the motion of Coelho and passed on third reading.

The conference committee report on House Bill No. 164, the bill providing for a lunacy commission, was adopted. Senator Fairchild submitted the report of the joint conference committee on the appropriation bill.

Fairchild moved the adoption of the report, seconded by McCarthy. The report was then adopted, Senators Baker and Robinson voting against it.

The select committee on Senate Bill No. 97, allowing the right of appeal from Boards of Supervisors sitting as a court of impeachment, recommended that the bill be tabled and the report was adopted.

A resolution was introduced by Senator Brown, distributing the sum of $155 among the officers of the Senate. It was referred to the Committee on Accounts. The resolution is designed to reimburse officers of the Senate, other than members of the clerical force, for "extra services." There is a little doubt as to just what constitute the "extra services" referred to.

House Bill No. 224, relating to the taxation of insurance companies, passed third reading on the motion of Robinson.

House Bill No. 228, giving more power to the Regents of the College of Hawaii, passed third reading without a dissenting vote.

On Corporation Exhibits. House Bill No. 231, amending the existing law relating to the annual exhibits of corporations, was taken up on second reading.

President Smith took the floor and questioned the wisdom of the provision that stipulated that the annual corporation report "shall contain such information and be made in such form as the Treasurer may require."

He moved to strike out the clause, adding that the bill would give too much power to the Treasurer in that it did not clearly state what the form should be.

The House worked hard, joshed hard, had a luau and an afternoon session and generally put in a strenuous day yesterday. The hard work came in the number of bills up for third reading and the consideration of the conference committee report on the appropriation bill; the joshing came in honoring Kealawa by naming a park in Hilo after him, not considering the feelings of the Hiloites, and the luau came at noon, in honor of the grandchild of the great and only Kanoho. This was one part of the day's doings to which the press was not invited to take a hand.

The bill making special appropriations for public works from loan-fund money furnished much of the excitement of the day. It was first amended and finally tabled for the forenoon, then taken up in the afternoon, amended some more and passed. This was the last chance at money and the various members made the most of it.

Large Order of the Day. Eleven bills, on third reading were on the order of the day, a big enough program in itself for Saturday, on top of which the House went into session with the certainty of having the conference report on the appropriation bill to consider, together with consideration of the Governor's veto on the deer bill and a large amount of routine. The veto consideration was again deferred, however.

The first bill read a third time, House Bill 253, was tabled, Senate Bill 150, an identical measure, having reached the House.

House Bill 234, respecting summary sale on tax liens, was read and passed.

House Bill 229, Shingle, which makes the fact that taxes on property are unpaid for the preceding five years grounds for refusal to issue title in the Court of Land Registration, was read and passed.

House Bill 204, Coney, removing restrictions from sheriffs in regard to practicing law, was read and passed after debate. The excuse for the bill is that other government officials are allowed to do the same thing.

Senate Bill 134, Robinson, exempting real and personal property to the value of $500 from taxation, was read and passed.

Senate Bill 147, Baker, relative to the recording of births, marriages and deaths, passed third reading. This bill provides for each registrar to send monthly statistics to the Board of Health, and for the clerk of the board to file these records and keep alphabetical lists segregated into counties.

Senate Bill 85, Harvey, to boost the salary of the secretary to the Mayor from $1200 to $1800 a year, was read and went through with the rest. It was a good day for bills.

Senate Bill 76, putting witness fees in circuit courts at $1 a day, with twenty cents a mile mileage and allowing mileage to county or Territorial officials when the term is held in a district other than that in which they live, was read. There was a good majority in favor of it.

Christian Science Amendment. The amendment of the Senate to the medical bill, which allows Christian Scientists to "carry out the tenets of their religion," provided they do not charge money for the same, was reported and adopted.

Boosts on Top of Boosts. In House Bill 189, boosting salaries in Maui county, the Senate went the House one better, boosting all the salaries the House had overlooked. Waiwale moved not to concur, and he, Carley and Nawahine were delighted to argue out the matter with the Senators.

The Senate amendments to the inheritance tax bill, House Bill 64, were concurred in.

Bishop Street Extension. Cohen presented a concurrent resolution expressing the desire of the House that enough land trades be made to bring about the extension of Bishop street to the waterfront. This was adopted.

Appropriations Reported. The lengthy report of the appropriation conference committee was presented. The grand total as found by the committee was $2,828,031, a cut of $163,424 from the total. The report was adopted.

Loan Appropriations. Afonso was the first amender when the loan appropriation bill was read, (Continued on Page Five.)

CONSTANTINOPLE TAKEN AND THE SULTAN SURROUNDED BY HIS FOES

THE SULTAN OF TURKEY.

HOW EARLY MISSIONARIES WERE ORDERED TO BEHAVE

Over half a hundred members of the Cousins' Society met yesterday afternoon in the Old Mission Home—the first frame house set up in Honolulu—on King street, heard encouraging reports from the officers of the organization, and listened to interesting letters and extracts from letters written to the first missionaries who came to the Sandwich Islands. George R. Carter was elected president of the society for the coming year by unanimous vote.

The meeting of the society was opened by prayer by the Rev. John Gulick, himself one of the early missionary workers in the Hawaiian Islands, this being followed by the singing by all those present of "The Tie That Binds." After a report by George R. Carter, dealing with the financial status of the society, which was highly encouraging to the members, Mr. Carter stated that a plan was on foot to secure the old Chamberlain property, nearby, and keep it up much as the Old Mission Home is at present being taken care of.

The most interesting feature of the afternoon's program was the reading of old letters which were written to the first little band of missionaries who made the perilous voyage from the Atlantic Coast, in sailing ships, to these mid-Pacific Isles, then populated by the heathen. References were made in several of the letters to the time when Kamehameha II, who was then King of the Islands, burned all the idols and destroyed all evidences of idolatry. Again, it is shown by the letter which is published below that, had the natives of Hawaii not received the missionaries with some show of kindness, the latter would have gone probably to the Society Islands. This evoked a laughing comment from one of the members that "We might have all been born in the Society Islands."

The following letter, which was read by Mr. F. C. Damon, was unusually interesting, not only on account of its contents, but also on account of the fact that the original letter is in the possession of the society at the present time:

"Supplementary directions and notices to the Rev. Hiram Bingham and the Rev. Asa Thurston, Messrs. Daniel Chamberlain, Thomas Holman, Samuel Whitney, Samuel Ruggles and Elisha Loomas, John Honoli, Thomas Hoppo and William Tanooe, members of the Mission to the Sandwich Islands under the patronage and direction of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

"Dear Beloved: In pursuance of preparations made, you will embark on board the brig Thaddeus, Captain Andrew Blanchard, bound to the Sandwich Islands.

"On your journey you will treat the master and officers of the vessel with all due courtesy and respect, and further the spirit of Christian sobriety and kindness in all your deportment toward the sailors and all on board; will observe with as much regularity as possible stated seasons for religious and other proper exercises; will have a settled arrangement for the occupation of your time in the best manner for the improvement of your minds

Palace Will Be Attacked Unless the Sovereign Submits—Massacres Have Cost Between Twenty and Thirty Thousand Lives.

(Associated Press Cablegrams.)

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—The Constitutionalists, after a fierce fight, are in complete control of the city. The Sultan is practically a prisoner, but is still holding out at Yildiz palace, which is surrounded. Preparations are being made to attack the palace if submission is refused.

A FORENOON BATTLE.

The battle for possession of the city began in the morning and ended at noon. Frederick Moore and H. G. Wight, American correspondents and the first dragoman of the American embassy have been wounded. The Belgian legation is riddled.

AMERICAN TOURISTS SAFE.

Sixty American tourists were placed on a steamer during the fighting. The city is now tranquil.

THOUSANDS OF VICTIMS.

BEIRUT, April 25.—A conservative estimate of the number killed in the massacres of Adana and Vilayet puts the total at between 20,000 and 30,000. Hundreds of girls are missing.

BIG BATTLESHIP COMING

GUANTANAMO, April 25.—It is understood that the North Carolina and Montana, after leaving Turkey, will go to join the Pacific fleet.

FAIRBANKS MAKES TRIP AROUND THE ISLAND

Governor and Mrs. Frear, ex-Vice President Fairbanks, Mrs. Fairbanks and Mrs. Timmons returned shortly before six o'clock last evening from an automobile trip around the island of Oahu. Notwithstanding the slight rainfall during the day, the party reported a splendid time, Mr. Fairbanks, in particular, being enthusiastic over the scenery through which they passed.

"It was a splendid trip," he said last night. "What little rain fell did not prevent us from enjoying every minute of the exhilarating ride. We took lunch at Haleiwa, and made several stops along the road at points of interest. It was all very fine, and we had an unusually enjoyable trip."

Monday morning Mr. Fairbanks is to deliver an address before the members of the Territorial Legislature. It is possible that he will leave Tuesday for a short trip to Kauai, the Garden Island.

DEATH OF CHARLES WARREN STODDARD

MONTEREY, April 24.—Charles Warren Stoddard, the celebrated author, died here of heart failure today.

Charles Warren Stoddard, author, poet and teacher, was born at Rochester, N. Y., August 7, 1843. He was educated in the common schools of New York and California and at the University of California. Ill-health prevented his graduation from college. For awhile he was an actor and then entered journalism as special traveling correspondent of the San Francisco Chronicle, visiting nearly every part of the globe and spending five years in the South Seas and in the Hawaiian Islands. Mr. Stoddard became professor of English Literature in the College of Notre Dame, Indiana and afterwards held the same chair in the Catholic University of America. As an author his output was large, including Poems, 1867; South Sea Idylls, 1873; Marshallah, a Flight Into Egypt, 1881; The Lepers of Molokai, 1885; A Troubled Heart, 1885; Lazy Letters from Low Latitudes, 1894; The Wonder Workers of Padua, 1894; A Cruise Under the Crescent, from Suez to San Marco, 1898; Over the Rocky Mountains to Alaska, 1899; In the Footprints of the Padres, 1902; Exits and Entrances, 1903; For the Pleasure of His Company, 1903; Father Damien—a Sketch, 1903; The Island of Tranquil Delights, 1904; The Confessions of a Reformed Poet, 1907; The Dream Lady, 1907.

BLACKSTED'S CONDITION SERIOUS.

Brakeman Blacksted, who was injured on the Wahiawa branch of the O. R. & L. line on Friday and was brought to the Palama hospital for treatment, has not fully recovered consciousness. His condition, while somewhat improved, is a very serious one. Blacksted received his injury by being knocked off a car by a spout overhanging from a water tank on the Waiwahu plantation.

THWING WILL SOON BE HERE.

(By Wireless Telegraph.)
TENYO MARU, April 23.—Advertiser, Honolulu.—Japan pleased over the friendliness of Hawaii. Fine trip. Any news? THWING.

There may be those who would have responded to the inquiry for news by the message "Breckons reinstated," but the Advertiser hadn't the heart.

Special Agent Loyd Childs has received cable information to the effect that the transport Dix is at present in Nagasaki, from which port it will not leave for here until the 26th. This will necessitate the transportation of the greater part of Hawaii's exhibit to the Seattle fair on the next trip of the Alameda to the Coast.

STRANGER GOES CANOEING IN CLOTHES

A wealthy young stranger watched the canoeing and surfing off the Moana Hotel yesterday afternoon until he waxed enthusiastic and engaging a canoe entered it without going to the trouble of donning a bathing suit. He was clad in a linen suit, carried a cane, wore a cigarette in his mouth and was, in fact, faultlessly dressed.

He enjoyed the surfing for some time, but it was real wet out on those big, high billows, and when the canoe finally shot up on the beach, the malihini canoeist was a very much bedraggled Beau Brummel. His linen suit was drenched, his collar was wilted, and the cigarette was gone. He looked into his case of cigarettes and found them waterlogged and they were consigned to the ocean, likewise matches. He examined his handsome gold watch and doubtless it will find its way into the hands of the jeweler for repairs. He wrung his clothes as dry as possible before venturing back into the hotel.

AMUSEMENTS

Scene from "The Girl From The West," Elleford offering for Monday and Tuesday nights at the Orpheum.

Something Good For Next Week.

"Kidnaped" filled the Orpheum last night and the audience laughed at the comedy and wept at the more serious moments and all seemed to be thoroughly enjoying themselves. Commencing tomorrow night the Ellefords offer three new plays, each one a production that has a reputation earned by a season in the metropolis. The bill for Monday and Tuesday is the stirring comedy drama of the year, "The Girl From The West." It is the story of California in the days of its gold mining excitement and introduces several types of the far west in its early days. The comedy is provided by the uncouth western judge, a lazy Chinaman, and other pleasing characters known to the early mining camps. The story is an absorbing one with a strong and well-defined plot and the scenic effects are excellent. The play is cast with the full strength of the company and provides one of the best productions that the popular Ellefords have ever given us. For Wednesday and Thursday the offering is "The Princess of Patches," a story laid in and around an old Virginia plantation with its negroes and cotton fields, and its men to whom the word chivalry is a watchword, and its women who are goddesses in the eyes of southern gentlemen. The story deals with the fortunes of a little waif who is brought up by a family of "white trash," and is known as "The Princess of Patches." She finally turns out to be of one of the first families, but the little waif has to fight for her name and fortune; and the acts are filled with comedy and sensation. The play was written from one of Mark Twain's charming southern stories and makes one of the most pleasing of modern comedy dramas. Friday and Saturday will be devoted to Augustin Daly's greatest success, "Under the Gaslight." This play was written twenty years ago when they knew how to write a melodrama, and it had a run of one year at the famous Daly Theatre, a high mark at that time in American theatricals, and a record breaker for American plays. The Osborn children have selected for next week three of their best specialties, all of which should more than please. All of the productions will be presented with special scenery and effects, and George Hernandez, Mattie Lloyd Luce and Ray Collins will all have some taking songs in the several plays. It is one of the big weeks of the Elleford engagement and our theatergoers will certainly take advantage of it. Seats will be on sale at the box office on Monday morning for the entire week's bills.

Pollards Do Their Best Yet.

As a girl you are sweet, With skirts short or long; When you dance, then your feet Keep time to the song. But you made the best hit, And filled us with joy, When you came out last night Dressed up as a boy. Which, of course, refers to Eva Moore. In the second act of the comical skit, "Fun on the Bristol," that the Pollards put on last night at the Opera House, Eva Moore comes on disguised (?) as a boy, and if she could not make a hit with such songs as "I've Been Showing My Aunt Matilda" and other boy business, appearances are very deceitful. The house was well filled and the audience had a laugh every minute. Goulding was at his very best in his female part as the elderly widow O'Brien, and every member of the company had something good to do. There were two main hits last night. One was the local adaptation of "Fairy Tales" and the other was "Just My Style." In the former, Goulding, Jack Pollard and Harold Frazer sang a series of very clever verses written by a local man, with local absurdities introduced. The Legislature was mimicked and then given the glad hand in the last line. Sonny Cunha was not left out, and many others in town who know how to take a kindly joke were introduced. The song made a great hit and it is a pity that there were not more verses of it. The "Just My Style" song was encored six times, and was responded to in a novel way. After each encore, a new couple, boy and girl, from the company would dance across the stage singing the tuneless words of the chorus, and it wound up with all the girls, including Alfred Goulding, and all the boys, including Eva Moore, tripping across the stage in line and singing the chorus. "Fun on the Bristol" will be played again on Monday night at the Opera House, and then there will be an intermission until Saturday matinee, when it will be repeated. On Saturday night the Pollards will give their farewell with another musical farce that goes by the name of "Under the Pump." The following Tuesday they will go to Hilo and return in time to catch the next British steamer to Vancouver.

Pat had been delegated by his fellow employees to tell Mrs. Casey the

Very Few People Obtain Comfort

By using the ordinary spherical lenses; but when only such are required they should be of the highest grade—perfectly centered. The kind that are sold in "bulk" are always the discarded seconds and thirds, and cost almost nothing. They magnify of course, and some very strong eyes, whose vision has become impaired through age alone, derive some benefit; but oh, the difference when a pair of perfectly central lenses of the same strength are used. It is always better to have your eyes examined by a specialist in whom you have confidence. Our well conducted optical department offers you the services of such a one.

MANY BOOKED; FEW MAY GO

Passenger Liners Are Bringing Many People From Orient.

The Pacific Mail liner Korea sailed from Yokohama for this place yesterday, and will arrive here on the morning of May 3. She will probably depart for the Coast on the evening of the same day. The Korea has 1959 tons of freight for Honolulu. Notwithstanding the fact that there are over one hundred persons booked from this port for the mainland on the Korea, she will arrive here with so many passengers from the Orient that only about thirty-five can be accommodated from this port. This is true on several of the other steamers leaving for the mainland within the next few weeks, so it seems that there is a large number of people who are fated to remain in the Islands much longer than was their intention. The Lurine has a large booking already, and the Marama, which will probably arrive here from the Colonies Tuesday evening, has room for only ten passengers from Honolulu, notwithstanding the fact that there are several times over this number booked.

Tenyo Here Early.

The Toyo Kisen Kaisha liner Tenyo Maru will arrive here at daybreak Monday morning, according to wireless information which has been received. It has not been learned how full the passenger accommodations of the Tenyo are, but it is a safe prediction that the big Maru liner could carry, if it were not for the coastwise regulations, at least fifty of the hundred or more people who wish to get to the mainland. Many complaints are being heard on this score from people who urgently desire to reach the mainland as soon as possible, but who are prevented on account of the lack of steamer room.

Captain Campbell Returns.

Captain Campbell, manager of the Inter-Island ship chandlery store, returned yesterday from a trip to Hilo, which he made for his health. Captain Campbell looks splendid after his outing on the Big Island. He stated yesterday that the ship John Ena was lying in the harbor of Hilo at anchor, discharging ballast and loading sugar. The R. P. Rithet is also at Hilo now. She will take a load of sugar back to the Coast.

Mauna Kea Delayed.

The Inter-Island flagship Mauna Kea arrived here yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, several hours late because of the delay of the passenger train from the volcano in arriving at Hilo. A freight train piled off the track on the Puna switch, and the passenger could not get by until the debris had been cleared off. The Mauna Kea had a good load of passengers from Hawaii, seventy-six making the trip to Honolulu this time.

Shipping Notes.

The Aorangi sailed from Victoria yesterday for this port. The ship Falls of Clyde arrived at Gaviota yesterday from Honolulu. The Oceanic liner Alameda sailed yesterday morning from Honolulu. The bark Annie Johnson arrived at San Francisco yesterday from Hilo. The Pacific Mail steamship Asia sailed from San Francisco yesterday for Honolulu.

LETTERS FROM THE PUBLIC

GAS COMPANY WAS WILLING.

Editor Advertiser: Your reporter is in error in stating that the "Gas and Electric Company had sent representatives protesting against the resolution" for the investigation of those companies. I appeared before the Committee on Judiciary of the House, for the Honolulu Gas Company, and stated to them that the gas company not only did not oppose, but recognized the authority of the Legislature to investigate the gas company at any time and in any way it chose. After I left the committee, it appears that some change was made in the resolution so as to provide for an inspector instead of an investigation.

DAVID L. WITHERINGTON.

AUTO OBSTRUCTIVENESS.

Editor Advertiser: As King street is being repaired and Beretania avenue is out of my way, I am obliged to drive out Hotel street; but I find it difficult to get by the autos that line up between 12 noon and 1:30 p. m. before the University Club and not run on the track, where my carriage wheels fare badly. Can not you induce the gentlemen of the club to put their machines around the corner or inside the Hawaiian Hotel premises?

C. S. S.

A young man, who looked every inch the bridegroom, stood in the rotunda of the Great Northern the other day (says a Chicago paper), telling a friend of the manner of his proposal to his bride. She had known of his wild ways and fondly hoped to reform him through marriage. "After I had popped the question and she had accepted me," he said, "I at once began to talk about the wedding. 'We will go away somewhere by ourselves, my dear,' I said; 'there will be no flourish, no cards, no ceremony'—here she interrupted me, and, with a dignified sweep of her arm, declared: 'Mr. —, I shall certainly insist upon a ceremony.'" there was need of more control and public knowledge on corporation affairs." He said that it was the tendency of the times to make certain that the public shall have full enlightenment on corporation affairs and management. Chillingworth argued further that there was particular necessity for such a law in the Territory of Hawaii, asserting that there was a disposition to avoid complying with the provisions of the present law. The bill was finally deferred until Monday.

THE SENATE

Senate Bill No. 151 was ordered to be printed with the report of the Waikiki Reclamation Commission. The measure embodies the recommendations of the Reclamation Commission members.

Senate Bill No. 152, making an additional appropriation of $2000 for the current expenses of the Circuit Court of Maui, passed its second reading.

Senate Bill No. 153, regulating notification of the dissolution of corporations, passed second reading.

House Bill No. 234 passed second reading.

House Bill No. 225, making income tax delinquency a lien on real property, was amended on the motion of Senator Knudsen, striking out the provisions relating to income tax. The bill then passed on second reading.

Chairman Knudsen of the Judiciary Committee reported on the resolution submitted by Senator Fairchild providing for a "hold over" committee on ways and means.

President Smith said that the committee personnel should not be restricted to the members of the Senate taking office at this session. He maintained that the more experienced members of the Senate should have a place on the committee.

The provision for expenses was stricken out on the motion of Knudsen.

Senator Smith renewed his motion to strike out the stipulation that only "hold-over" senators be on the committee. The amendment was lost and the resolution then adopted.

Notification was received from the House that it had adopted the joint conference committee report on the appropriation bill.

President Smith named Senators Kalamia, Robinson and Coelho as members of the conference committee on Senate Bill No. 189, raising the salaries of Maui officials.

THE HOUSE

his first offering being one of $10,000 for the Honokaa courthouse. This led to a scramble in which the $50,300 total was swollen up to $219,300. Alfonso wanted all the Hilo items cut from the regular appropriation bill, morgues, wharves and other things. Sheldon put in an $18,000 item for the Waimea embankment, Cohen an item of $75,000 to repair the Judiciary building, and others other things. Thus burdened the bill fell of its own weight to the table, where it rested until the afternoon. Then it was helped up, some of the load taken off—$10,000 for Honokaa waterworks—and passed along on its way.

Rice reminded the members of what Governor Carter had done to one loan bill, and urged them not to give Governor Frear a chance to do the same thing. The members took the chance, however.

Kealawaa Park.

On second reading, the resolution to name Hilo park No. 2 "Kamehameha Park." Alfonso's idea, Rice presented an amendment to make it "Kealawaa Park." This passed amid great hilarity, the Puna member being the only one who took the matter seriously. Following the vote, Kealawaa was decorated with a yellow lei.

Hutchinson Plantation.

The report recently issued by the Hutchinson Plantation has been received with satisfaction by the stockholders. The estimate for the present year is that 2646 acres will be harvested, which are expected to yield 7000, provided the drought has not had a worse effect than expected. After paying the running expenses last year and distributing $190,000 in dividends, the plantation carried over a surplus of $245,069. Considerable improvement is under way. At the Honouapuu mill alterations have been made and the pine flumes throughout the plantation are being replaced by redwood. The laborers' quarters are being improved and the fee simple lands are being cleared of stones and undergrowth. Manager Wolters reports a good effect to have followed on a plan put from the Big Island city that two modern hotels are to be opened there, principally as a result of the plain talk of a prominent tourist, published in this paper, to which at first the Hiloites took much exception.

The Brown and Lyon company has increased its capital from $12,500 to $25,000. The stock is divided a fourth to William C. Lyon, a fourth to E. Herrick Brown, and the balance equally divided between J. H. Soper, J. F. Soper and W. H. Soper, all paid up. This means a combination of the Brown & Lyon Co., and the book department of the Hawaiian News Co. The new firm will be known as Brown & Lyon Co., Ltd., and will share the store now occupied by the Hawaiian News Co., in the Young building. The business will be conducted as at present, under the management of William C. Lyon and E. Herrick Brown.

PUNAHOU SCHOOL CONCERT.

On the evening of May 7th at Charles R. Bishop hall, the children of the Punahou Preparatory school are to hold a song festival under the direction of Miss Alice Rogers. The selections on the program have been so arranged that a large majority of the children in the school will have a part in the entertainment. The children in the first five grades will have special numbers. One of the most attractive features on the program is a chorus of 150 voices made up of boys and girls from the sixth, seventh and eighth grades. Many other special features are being rehearsed and every attempt is being made to furnish an evening of pleasure for all who are interested in children and their singing.

into force of paying a bonus of fifty cents a week to laborers who put in a full week's work, thus encouraging the laborers to steadiness and allowing the plantation to progress with a smaller force of laborers than many other plantations of equal cane acreage.

Ookala Plans.

George McCubbin, who has been the head lona on the Ookala plantation for the past several years, has been selected as manager under the new ownership. According to the reports in circulation, T. H. Davies & Co. will commence paying in the purchase price of the plantation—$250,000—very shortly, for distribution among the stockholders of the old corporation.

County Taxation.

Great opposition is developing throughout the group against the proposed law allowing the counties to help out their revenues by taxing real property a quarter of one per cent in addition to the Territorial two per cent and the special immigration fund tax on incomes over $5000. The county-taxation system is regarded by the business interests and the plantations as a breach of faith, after they had agreed and assisted in carrying the special income tax bill.

The measure has passed the House and is on second reading in the Senate, upon which the business interests are exerting all possible influence to kill the bill. Tomorrow it is expected that the various members will be deluged with remonstrances by wireless from the outside districts.

It is not likely that the bill will be passed, but no effort should be spared to make this certain.

Real Estate Active.

Honolulu real estate continues to be in demand, principally by Honoluluans. There is a general disposition now for everyone to own his own home, and the number of suburban additions being planned and put on the market is an indication of this movement. Kaimuki and Manoa at this time are in the highest favor as localities, and in both sections there is a considerable amount of residence building under way. Hilo has developed a "Watch Hilo Grow" disposition also. It is reported tional interest to the affair, for to judge from the reports, there is a possibility of the wedding taking place before the return of the prospective groom, who has been spending several weeks at the Alexandria with his mother.

Mr. Salisbury met Miss McGilvray a year or two ago during a trip to the Yellowstone, and even then there were rumors of the engagement, but the announcement of Monday was the first definite information received in confirmation of the approaching marriage.

Miss McGilvray is described as a very beautiful and accomplished girl of the tall brunette type, and one in whom Salt Lake society will find a charming addition to the younger married set.

Major and Mrs. Winslow gave a tea yesterday at their residence at Wai-kiki. The Fifth Cavalry band was in attendance and the guests were mainly Army and Navy people. The decorations of white and green were most effectively arranged.

Hoby Walker gave a dinner at the Country Club on Friday evening in honor of his birthday. It was attended by many of his intimate friends and was informal and delightful.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Cooke have moved to their summer home at Luakaha. Paul de Longpre, the painter of flowers, who has been in California for many years, is expected here shortly. His health and eye-sight have been greatly impaired during the past six months. He is arranging to arrive here sometime in May. He will be accompanied by his wife and two daughters.

Mrs. Merrill, wife of Rev. F. W. Merrill, formerly of this city, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. O. A. Steven.

Mrs. Edwin Benner and family were among the passengers who left by the steamer Hilonian on Tuesday, April 20, for San Francisco. She will spend several weeks visiting her husband's people in Oakland before leaving for Oberlin, Ohio, where she intends spending the summer and winter with her mother and get a touch of cold weather before returning to Honolulu.

Mrs. Ivers, mother of Richard Ivers, was the guest of honor on Thursday at a luncheon given by Mrs. Richard Ivers, pink roses being used for table decorations. The guests included Mrs. M. M. Scott, Mrs. James Wilder, Mrs. Ranney Scott, Mrs. Gertrude Wilder, Mrs. Ralph Forster, Mrs. Helen Noonan, Mrs. Edward Tenney, Mrs. S. G. Wilder, Mrs. F. M. Swanzy, George Davies, Mrs. Blackman, Mrs. J. Kinney, Mrs. Schaefer, Mrs. Francis Gay, Mrs. von Holt, Mrs. A. M. Brown, Mrs. Alonzo Gartley, Mrs. Faxon Bishop, Mrs. George Carter, Mrs. B. F. Dillingham, Mrs. Dunning, Mrs. Spaulding, Mrs. W. O. Smith, Mrs. Alexander G. Hawes, Jr., Miss Marion Scott.

The wedding of Miss Ethel Amweg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Amweg, and Walter Scott took place last evening at Trinity church, which had been handsomely decorated with masses of fruit blossoms and lilies, says the Chronicle. These augmented the regular Easter decorations, which were still in place and which were of extraordinary beauty. The ceremony took place at 8:30 o'clock, the marriage service being read by Rev. F. W. Clappett, rector of the church. The bridal party included Mrs. Clarence Monroe Reed as matron of honor, Miss Enid Gregg, Miss Elyse Schultz, Miss Marian Lally and Miss Aloise Gebhardt, as

HONOLULU'S CALLING DAYS.

Mondays—Punahou, College Hills, Manoa Heights, Makiki.
Tuesdays—Waikiki, Kapiolani Park, Kaimuki and Palolo.
Wednesdays—Nununu, Punui and Pacific Heights, Above Nununu bridge, first and third Wednesdays; below, second and fourth; Pacific Heights, fourth.

The bride wore a handsome Princesse gown of white Directoire satin, with a band of hand-embroidered insertion, which crossed the front of the bodice and continued down either side to the hem of the gown in two broad panels. The yoke and sleeves were of old lace, with an embroidered tracery of silver thread furnishing a further adornment of the bodice. A long tulle veil, held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms, and a shower bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley completed the bridal toilet.

The matron of honor was gowned in lavender Directoire satin, handsomely embroidered in silver, and carried a muff of lavender lilies.

Miss Gebhardt and Miss Lally wore Directoire gowns of pale green chiffon over messaline satin of the same shade, the bodices being incrustated with opalescent beads.

Miss Gregg and Miss Schurtz were gowned alike in Princesse gowns of yellow Directoire satin trimmed with gold embroidery and lace. All four bridesmaids carried armfuls of Easter lilies.

Mrs. Frederick Amweg, the mother of the bride, wore a gown of amethyst Directoire satin, with panels of cloth of gold extending down the front and about the bottom of the skirt, and with sleeves and yoke of white lace.

After the church ceremony an informal reception, followed by dancing to the strains of a Hawaiian quartet, and concluding with a buffet supper, was held at the home of the bride's parents on Washington street.

Mr. Scott and his bride will enjoy a short honeymoon trip to Del Monte, which will be supplemented next month by a trip to the Hawaiian Islands, which will consume the entire summer.

During her three years' residence in San Francisco the bride has become identified with the younger social set, with the members of which she is extremely popular. After their return from Honolulu the young couple will make their home in San Francisco where Mr. Scott has business affiliations.

Another chapter has been added to the pretty romance of Gerald Beaumont, the young author, who proposed by cable and his intended bride who is steaming across the Pacific from Honolulu in reply to Cupid's call, says a San Jose dispatch of April 14.

The role now to be assumed by Beaumont was to have been played by Augustus Aguirre of San Francisco, but he was taken ill and Beaumont hastened from his country home at Calistoga and will be married and spend his honeymoon beneath the shade of the historic walls of the old Mission at Santa Clara.

Miss Gorman, the pretty young bride, comes from a widely known family in the islands. In addition to being a remarkably beautiful girl she is a talented musician. During the trip to California from her island home last year Miss Gorman was the guest at many exclusive social functions held in the bay cities, and she has a host of friends in San Francisco, San Rafael, Oakland and San Jose.

The marriage will take place at the Star of the Sea Church in San Francisco upon the arrival of the bride on the steamer Hilonian, April 28.

Mrs. Porter Ashe, Miss Margaret Bender and Miss Bolerio were guests of honor of Mrs. F. W. Klebahn at a delightful luncheon on Tuesday, other guests including Mrs. George Carter, Mrs. Edward Tenney, Mrs. Holloway, Mrs. Charles Wilder, Mrs. S. Dunning, Mrs. Richard Ivers, Mrs. Faxon Bishop, Miss Margaret Walker.

Mrs. Boettcher and daughter of Denver, and Mrs. Robinson and daughter of Los Angeles, form an interesting party at the Moana Hotel. They will leave in the near future for the Orient, and included in their itinerary is a visit to Java. Mrs. Boettcher was here in 1902 en route around the world.

Ashton Potter, who will be remembered as a corporal in the First New York in 1898 and 1899, has been divorced by his wife, formerly Mary McNutt of San Francisco. The same day, a Mrs. Dwyer was divorced by her husband at Colorado Springs, and Denver papers say that Potter will marry Mrs. Dwyer, to whom he has been attentive. Gossip says that Dwyer will marry Potter's divorced wife. The quartet were the best of friends for years, and toured Europe together a year or two ago.

Mrs. Lindsay and daughter returned from the mainland on the Lurline. Judge and Mrs. Lindsay will reside at the Dr. Cooper home in Punui until the return of Mrs. Cooper.

Captain and Mrs. Falls entertained at dinner for Major and Mrs. Wadhams and others at the Young on Wednesday, joining later in the dance which followed the concert of the 5th Cavalry band.

Mrs. Bottomley entertained for Mrs. Lewton-Brain on Thursday at a tea, as a farewell function, Mrs. Lewton-Brain planning to go to England presently. The lanai was used for the tea service. Among the guests were Mrs. Stanley, Mrs. Cockburn, Mrs. King, her mother, Mrs. Lange, Mrs. Ushorpe, Mrs. Weston, Mrs. Arthur Berg, Mrs. Ralph Jordan, Mrs. Birney, Mrs. George Davies, Mrs. Soper, Mrs. Moses, Mrs. John Waterhouse, Mrs. Ernest Waterhouse, Mrs. Hawes, Jr., Miss Bullen, Miss Norreys, Miss Mist.

A very delightful surprise party was given to Prof. B. E. Porter and wife last Friday evening by the Holoalae club. While the guests were coming Mrs. Porter received a special messenger package which contained a cake beautifully decorated with the name of the club. Prof. Porter, returning from choir practise, was surprised beyond measure to find his house full of merry-makers. The evening was very delightfully spent in games and words of good cheer to all. The refreshments began by the presentation of a very choice China tea service, which was accompanied with the following lines:

Dear Pa and Ma, you'll find in here,
 A token from your kiddies dear;
 From Mary Ann and Susie sweet,
 From Sal and Maggie, Bill and Pete,
 From Tom and Dick and Harry, too,
 And Lizzie—all with hearts so true.

In hours of joy, oh, sip from this,
 And add a gusto to your bliss;
 When clouds of trouble meet above you,
 Remember that your kiddies love you.
 One draught of this your hearts will cheer,
 And banish every pillikia.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Porter were very much pleased with the present which was so beautifully presented with these lines by one of the members of the club. Additional lines have been penned for the club.

Your present and your lines of rhyme,
 Are each so dear to me and mine;
 I would not part with each, nor you,
 Who make us glad with hearts so true.
 Good cheer and joy are in our line,
 Be glad! Dear friends, just now's the time.

Let's set the cups and sip the tea,
 And know more joy twixt you and me.
 Goodwill and friends are ever dear;
 Yes, deeds of love and words of cheer,
 Make life so sweet to us and they,
 With whom we meet or pass the day.

BOUDOIR PIANO

Is Easily Within Your Reach

There are lots of people on these Islands who have long wanted to buy a piano, but who have always felt the price of a good one to be out of reach. We want to get acquainted with these people right away for we have now a piano that will interest them all.

It is the wonderful Boudoir made for us by the Columbus Piano Co., Columbus, Ohio. It has 6 1/2 full octaves, dropping the extreme upper and lower notes (never used anyhow) and requiring a somewhat smaller case than usual. Every part, outside and inside, from top to bottom is strictly first class. The general appearance and the tone are both away above the ordinary.

WE WANT YOU TO COME IN AND SEE THE NEW BOUDOIR.

If not ready to buy now we have a plan whereby we can rent you one and have the rent apply on the purchase price later. Better hurry, though, for the stock is limited.

BIG OPENING OF MILITARY LEAGUE SERIES TODAY

Four Service Teams Will Play at League Park This Afternoon and Society Folk Will Attend.

This afternoon there will be the biggest doings seen in a long time at the league park. The occasion is the opening of the Military Baseball League, and everybody will be there. There are four teams in this league, the 5th Cavalry, the 20th Infantry, the Marines and the National Guard.

There will be two games today and these will be the only games to be played on the league grounds. All the others will be played either at Leilehua or on Aala park. The games for today are 5th Cavalry vs. 20th Infantry and N. G. H. vs. Marines.

Beside being a great afternoon of baseball the event will be by way of big social doings, for many officers will be present and, where there are officers, there also are ladies and many of them, in their latest confections, or whatever it is that Society editor talks about in describing these things.

Each of the teams is very confident of winning the pennant but it must be stated that things look best for the N. G. H. boys. They have clearly proved their superiority over the 20th and the Marines and will have a hard tussle only with the 5th Cavalry, judging by precedent.

The Guards have a bulge over the other teams in that most of the local big league players belong to the militia and are nearly all available on the diamond. Take for instance today's battery for the N. G. H. There is Bushnell in the box and Louie Soares behind the bat. There is no header nor more careful pitcher in town than the young St. Louis alumnus and everybody knows what Louie Soares can do with the big mitt.

The Marines will have out their very best today. Hines and Anderson will be their battery and this is the best they have yet played. Hines is a dandy pitcher when he is feeling right and Anderson is certainly the kid who can catch the hardest ones and slip the right signals over at the right time.

Batemant, the star catcher of the Fort Shafter aggregation, will wear the big mitt for the road-ponders and either Moran or Ramsey will twirl. This is a hard battery to go up against, take either pitcher, and the four-leggers will Gibson lf; Anderson c; Hines p; and Knight ss. Winter and Makin will be subs. Lieutenant Kilgore is the manager of the team.

20th Infantry—Bateman c; Moran p; Ramsey (Capt.) p; Glynn, lb; Lemm 2b; Durant 3b; McCall ss; Ellis lf; Kistler cf; and Gongel rf. Bolun, Oakley, Truer, Bird and Brady are subs. Lieutenant Chilton is the manager of the team.

5th Cavalry—Hartley c; Butler p; Sheppard lf; Bates 2b; Groninger 3b; Walters ss; Rollins lf; Hansen cf; Harris rf. McKnight, Morrison and Bell subs. Lieutenant Groninger is manager and Lieutenant Hansen captain of the team.

The schedule of the league series is as follows:
Sunday, April 25—Cavalry vs. Fort Shafter; N. G. H. vs. Marines. At the league ball grounds.
Wednesday, April 28—Marines vs. Fort Shafter. At Aala Park.
Sunday, May 2—Cavalry vs. N. G. H. At Leilehua.

Wednesday, May 5—Marines vs. Cavalry. At Aala Park.
Sunday, May 9—Fort Shafter vs. N. G. H. At Aala Park.
Wednesday, May 12—Cavalry vs. Fort Shafter. At Leilehua.

have to work overtime to make any bingles off these live ones.

Butler will pitch for the 5th Cavalry team and Hartley will be at the receiving end. This is one of the best batteries that the Leilehua kids can put on the diamond and they expect to do some big things with it. Lieutenant Groninger, the greatest third baseman that West Point ever knew, will be in that position and Lieutenant Hansen will be out in the centerfield to stop all the high flies. Sheppard, well-known among local sportsmen for his genial smile, will be at first base and may be depended on to fill the position properly.

The lineups of the different teams will be as follows:
N. G. H.—Louie Soares c; Bushnell p; Marcellino lf; Alex. May 2b; Lota 3b; Dudie Lemm ss; Oom Paul Buris lf; Lieutenant Sumner cf; (never known to miss a fly) and Knaf rf. Johnson, Sam and Henry Chillingworth, Moses and H. Williams will act as subs. Sergeant Barry is the manager of the team.

Marines—Thompson rf; Williams cf; Gaw lf; Call 3b; Davis (Capt.) 2b;

Fort Shafter vs. Marines. At Aala Park.
Sunday, May 23—N. G. H. vs. Cavalry. At Leilehua.
Sunday, May 30—Marines vs. Cavalry. At Leilehua.
Sunday, June 6 (last game)—Fort Shafter vs. N. G. H. At Aala Park.

TICKETS FOR SALE TUESDAY

Tickets for the big excursion to Pearl Harbor on May 9, which is to mark the opening of the yachting season, will be on sale at the business office of the Advertiser next Tuesday afternoon.

These tickets will be in the shape of tags and the name of the yacht on which the purchaser is to sail, will be marked plainly across the front of it. Early arrivals at the booking office will have a chance to say on which yacht they wish to go. There will be a list of craft to choose from and it will be a case of "first come, first serve."

The Mokoli and Luka will go to Pearl Harbor under power. That is, the Mokoli will have her power and will tow the Luka. These are the two largest vessels that will make the trip and those who are at all liable to seasickness had better pick out one of them for their choice.

All those who like a pleasant sail with all the inspiration of a list to leeward, of spray slashing over the top of the cabin house and of a lee rail well under water, should get tickets for some of the smaller sailing yachts.

As already stated, preference will be given to the ladies so far as the Hawaii is concerned. The good schooner can carry only a limited amount as she has a flush deck and her booms come very near to the deck; but as many women as possible will be carried aboard the Hawaiian champion and for this, as for the other boats, it will be a case of "first come, first serve."

All the yachtsmen have taken the matter up with great gusto and will be out with their craft to make the trip a grand success. The committee in charge is working its metaphorical head off to see that no detail is overlooked and the genial yachtsman who suggested the big excursion to Pearl Harbor would go down posterity as famous if his name were only known.

PLUVIUS STOPS SCHOOL GAMES

Old man Pluvius raised trouble for the interscholastic league yesterday afternoon by weeping over the Kam diamond and forcing the boys to postpone the games. The High School and Punahou team played the better part of an inning and then the rain came down.

There was no chance to continue the game, so it was called off, as was the second game, scheduled to be played between the Kams and St. Louis College. It was not raining so awfully hard in town, but out towards Kalihi way it was coming down in sheets and baseball would have been like a game of sliding on the old frozen pond.

The Punahou-High School game will be played off next Wednesday on Alexander field, as there is no interscholastic fixture for that day. The Kam-St. Louis game will be played at some date yet to be named. These postponed games will not interfere with the order of games in the schedule already arranged.

Sport Notes

Team tournament at the Country Golf Club today. Entries close at 10 o'clock sharp. There is a prize for each of the members of the winning team in the shape of a stein. Two busses will run from the end of the Nuuanu earline, starting at 8:30. No entries taken in over the telephone. Usual special lunch for Sunday.

The swimming race at the Hotel Baths was postponed yesterday afternoon until a week from next Saturday. Carl Oss had insufficient notice, so he claims, and wishes to have another two weeks in which to get perfectly fit. Therefore the postponement. The race is to be between Carl Oss and Lawrence Cunha and the winner takes the swimming championship of the Y. M. C. A. for last year.

There will be a meeting of the directors of the Healani Boat Club next Wednesday evening at the clubhouse. All directors are especially requested to be present as some very important matters are to come up.

Dick Reuter needs encouragement. What is the matter with a bunch of live Honoluluans sending him a postal card occasionally with a big aloha all over it. Dick is in a hard place and every little boost he gets from home will help wonderfully. We don't want those Coast boobs handing the lemon to one of our Hawaiian boys. Not on your life. Get busy some of you fellows and send him a few rays of sunshine.

The Chinese Minor League will start their second series this morning on the Oil-rank diamond. The pake kids have a good bunch of young sportsmen playing in the league and are all to the strawberry patch generally.

A newspaper man once asked the late J. K. Hudson whether he should call him "major" or "general." Hudson was a major in the Civil War and was made a brigadier-general in the Spanish War, but in the latter conflict he did not get into active service. "Call me major," said Hudson in reply to the question. "I was vaccinated for 'general,' but it didn't take."

MISS CASSIDY IS HONORED

Honolulu has more than mere male athletes. When our young people go away to colleges on the mainland they are always heard from as way up in the sports division of their education and usually their names come back to us with the big word "Captain" after it. But it is not only the boys who do this. Honolulu girls have always made a name for themselves in all sports that the fair sex can take part in and the following clipping from a coast paper will be welcome news to the many friends of Miss Florence Cassidy.

In 1905 and 1906 the High School team won the basketball championship and Miss Cassidy was a member of the team in each case. She graduated from the High School in 1907 and then went to Berkeley where she did so well during her freshman year in the basketball team that she has been elected captain, a very high and coveted honor.

The following is the article referred to:
BERKELEY, Cal., April 15.—At a meeting of the University basketball women held recently, the report of the manager was given and the officers for next year chosen.

Florence Cassidy was elected to captain the coming team. Miss Cassidy this term played on the Varsity against Stanford and is one of the coolest and most reliable players on the team. Her position is side center, and in that place Miss Cassidy is a sure player, both in regard to catching the balls thrown to her and in passing the balls exactly where she wants them. In her the players all feel very sure of an efficient leader.

For manager, Bell Gluckman was chosen. Although she has never taken part in an intercollegiate contest Miss Gluckman has shown her interest in basketball since her freshman year, and by hard work has been placed on the Varsity as substitute for the position of center.

Sterling Bicycles

The "Built Like a Watch" Kind

Sterling Bicycles are exceedingly graceful in appearance and substantial in construction. They are made in one of the largest and best equipped factories where for fourteen years the one aim has been to combine style, running and wearing qualities with moderate price. The quality which enters into these bicycles is made possible only by the possession of this long experience, unequalled manufacturing facilities and a great output.

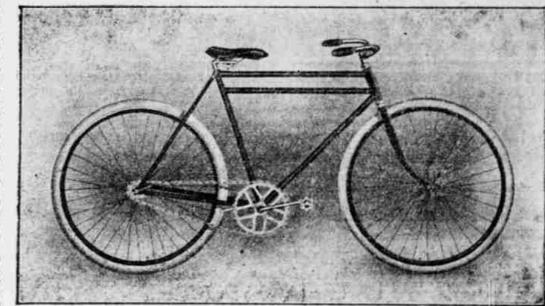

The frame is made of one-inch seamless steel tubing, and a glance will show that the lines are as fine as steel be designed.

The enamel and nickel are applied with great care, making a durable as well as attractive finish.

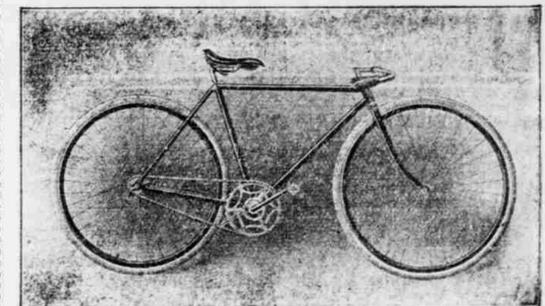

The limited space in this advertisement forbids an extended description of the Sterling Bicycles, but we shall be pleased to furnish any further details on request. We would, however, impress upon the reader that in these bicycles we offer machines that cannot be equalled at the price.

and hearts and for the satisfaction and benefit of all who are with you; and will make it your care to cultivate and establish the feelings and habits befitting the character of Christians appointed to the high and holy work of evangelizing the heathen.

"On your arrival at the Islands, or either of them, you will employ all proper means for obtaining such information as will enable you to judge correctly respecting the most eligible plan for the mission; will use all proper care to awaken no jealousies, to create no prejudices and to conciliate confidence and favor; and without unnecessary delay will fix upon your stations and commence your settlements and labors upon the principles of your general instructions, and in such manner as circumstances shall render most advisable.

"If, however, in the sovereign wisdom of Providence things be found in such a state as to render an attempt for establishing the mission in the Sandwich Islands, or either of them impracticable or extremely hazardous, you will make the best arrangements in your power, conformably to the articles of agreement between the prudential committee and the owners and captain of the Thaddeus, for getting to the Society Islands, and will act according to your best information and judgment in regard to settling there or going to some other of the dark places of the earth.

"In all cases, and especially in cases of great importance, you will make it a point of affectionate and religious care to act with the utmost unanimity.

Not the least pleasing feature of the gathering yesterday afternoon was the song selections rendered by four sweet-voiced girls from the Kaula Home. They sang a very beautiful hymn first, later rendering "Sing Me to Sleep," a slumber song of appealing softness, as only a Hawaiian girls' quartet could. They were heartily applauded.

George E. Carter suggested that all the members donate pictures and autographs of their early relatives who came to Hawaii, these to be framed and hung on the walls of the Mission Home. Several valuable donations of this nature were received yesterday, one of them being a rare picture of one of the early missionary schooners. A collection was taken up during the course of the afternoon, the money to go towards meeting the general expenses of the society.

W. W. Hall stated that the Old Mission Home was peculiarly an object of love to him on account of the fact that he had lived there a space of about ten years, many years ago. He said that his brothers and sisters were born either there or in houses very nearby. Mr. Hall also gave some very interesting information regarding the grounds near the Mission Home, stating that he could remember seeing the grass houses in which the missionaries had lived when they first came to the Islands.

F. C. Atherton read extracts from several letters of great interest to all those present. A general discussion of things for the betterment of the "Cousins' Society" then ensued, after which the meeting, after being in session over two hours, adjourned.

Of the carload of "White-Streak Buleks" just received by the von Hamm-Young Co., Dr. Herbert has bought one, a model 17, with which he is entirely pleased. A model 19 went to A. W. T. Bottomley, and he is getting unalloyed pleasure out of it.

A CHANCE TO HELP IN GOSPEL SERVICES

If there is any one that is not engaged today in any other Christian work and would like to help in the services at Oahu Prison or the Leahii Home, they will be welcome. The service at the prison is from 11 to 12 o'clock a. m. and at the Leahii Home hospital, Kaimuki, near Diamond Head, from 2:30 to 3:30 p. m. Come and help if only in singing and saying a few words of encouragement to those who cannot come to us. For the Blessed Master has said in Matt. 25:40—"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

P. S.—I think it would do us all good to read the whole of the 25th chapter of Matthew once in a while.

CRUEL, BUT NOT UNUSUAL.

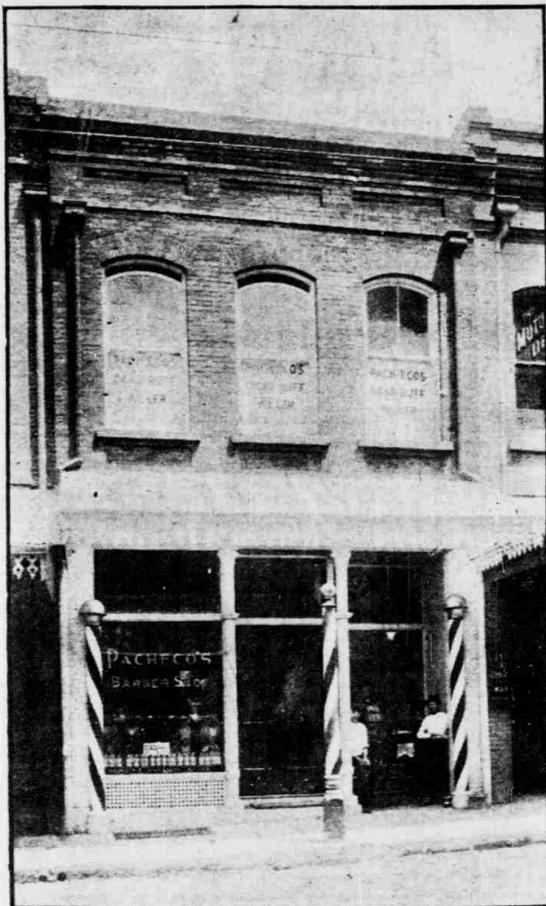

The foreman of the furnaces to Satan went and said: "We must husband our resources or the fires will soon be dead; for the brimstone mines are falling and I have the gravest fears, that our pipes will all be frozen in perhaps a dozen years." Then the devil sat and pondered, and he said: "I've often thought, in the course of passing ages, that we're keeping hell too hot; there are other ways to torture than to cook on blazing pyrex, so I think we'll close the dampers and put out the biggest fires, and the damned who come to suffer for their evil deeds and wrongs, they will have to sit and listen while we sing them ragtime songs."—Walt Mason in Emporia Gazette.

RHEUMATISM CURED WITHOUT DRUGS

You can't cure rheumatism with drugs. There's no use trying. Drugs, or rather poisons, will stop the pain for awhile by stupefying the nerves, but that does not remove the cause, so the pain comes back.

You know that rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. There's only one thing on earth that can get at this uric acid and drive it out of your system. That's electricity. It soaks into every vein and tissue of the body and drives the poisonous acid through the circulation, back to the kidneys, which filter the blood of all impurities.

My Electro-Vigor has cured the worst cases of rheumatism after drugs and other methods had failed. When electricity goes in the body, rheumatism must go out.

There's a whole lot of know about applying electricity so that it will cure. I've spent a good many years learning how to use it successfully, and I give my patients the benefit of my knowledge.

Electro-Vigor is a body battery of dry cells, which pumps a stream of electric life into your nerves and vitals while you sleep.

Electro-Vigor is not an electric belt. It never needs charging, for it makes its own power continuously.

No pain can exist in a body charged with electric life. You can have no rheumatism, no weakness, because the life generated by this grand force gives health and strength to every organ.

Your Electro-Vigor has cured me of rheumatism, cramps and general debility, and none of these troubles have returned since I stopped the treatment.

I am 64 years old and feel as strong and well as I did at 40.

A RAILROAD CZAR.

Many remarkable stories have been told of James J. Hill and his rough-and-ready methods in dealing with the thousands of men on his railroads before he retired from active service. Often cyclonic in the vigor and suddenness with which he discharged men from important positions, he was also almost equally swift in showing his favor. A writer in the Saturday Evening Post gives two graphic instances of these traits. We read:

One cold winter night a short, heavily built man, wrapt in a huge, fur-lined overcoat, dropt off a freight-train at a little way-station in Montana. His cap was pulled down about his face, the lower part of which was covered with a bushy and grizzled beard. He looked the part of a burly and prosperous ranch-owner. The visitor walked about the little frame station, his keen eyes surveying through the windows the alert, young agent busy about the telegraph-key. Presently he entered the waiting-room and, as the agent looked up, peremptorily turned the knob of the door leading into the agent's private quarters. The door was locked.

"I want to come in," he said gruffly "it's too cold out here."

"Against the rules to allow outsiders inside," the agent answered.

"But I'm cold, I say."

"Wait a minute."

The agent came out into the waiting-room, bringing with him a comfortable arm-chair which he placed close to the cast-iron stove. "Sit down here," he said. "I'll poke up the fire."

In the midst of this process the agent suddenly dropt the poker and darted back into his private reserve.

"What's the matter?" growled the surly man in the fur coat.

"My call," snapt back the agent.

Presently, the fire roaring, the agent picked up the coal-scuttle and went out, leaving the door open behind him. The man in the fur coat promptly rose and closed it. Instantly it was thrown open by the agent. "Let it alone," he said, with a suspicious glance; "can't hear the call if it's shut." Once more inside his little coop the agent looked up as the old man asked:

"How's business?"

"Rotten. Mostly cast-bound empties through here."

"What's the matter?"

"Ranchers around here can get a better rate by driving thirty miles across country."

"The men who run this road must be a set of chumps."

"They are. If we had a forty-cent rate we could get ten carloads a week out of this station in the season."

"Must be pretty lonesome for a young fellow. Any pretty girls close by?"

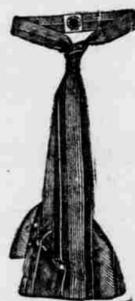

"Excuse me," said the agent, sitting down; "I've got to make out my report."

The east-bound passenger came along shortly and the man in the fur coat boarded it. When the next payday came around the young agent got an entirely unexpected ten-dollar raise.

With it came a notice from the general freight department that a forty-cent rate on beef cattle, effective April 1, was established. Then some one told him that his unidentified visitor had been "Yim Hill"—as the Norwegian settlers call him—creator of the Great Northern Railroad system and uncrowned emperor of the Northwest. And within two years the agent was called in to the general office at St. Paul and became one of the officials of the general freight department.

The second picture is not as inspiring. To quote:

Another man, now serving as an executive officer in a large Chicago corporation, went to St. Paul to fill a place very close to the supreme head of the Great Northern system. As a protection against the sudden changes of climate common in the region he insisted on a contract for one year at a fixed and very handsome salary. For several months the sun shone brightly. The new man was doing a lot of interesting and important work, and Mr. Hill had had no visible or audible fault to find with him. Then, one morning, no unfinished business was put on his desk for handling; the other officials with whom he was accustomed to work shook their heads when he asked for an explanation. He put himself in the way of his chief, but apparently he had become invisible. Thereafter, until his contract expired, he sat each day during business hours at his desk, drawing his salary regularly, but cut off entirely from any participation in the business.

THE FIFTY-FOUR INVASIONS OF GREAT BRITAIN; THE PLACES AT WHICH FOREIGN TROOPS HAVE LANDED ON BRITISH SOIL SINCE 1066.

Now that there is so much talk of the possibility of invading England, this map, compiled by the Hon. Charles Russell and reproduced by courtesy of the Daily Mail, is of particular interest. It shows that, from the time of the landing of William the Conqueror at Hastings, the shores of Great Britain have been invaded by foreign troops on no fewer than fifty-four occasions. Amongst the forces that have landed is that one of two thousand Germans, which, in 1486, under Marshal Swartz, landed in Lancashire. The Arabic figures give the date of each invasion; the Roman figures the numbers of invasions up to that date. —Illustrated London News.

AS THE ENGLISH SEE MRS. TAFT.

Some pleasing pictures of the new mistress of the White House are given to us by an English writer in M. A. P., thus:

Few American Presidents' wives have come to take up the onerous duties of mistress of the White House with better qualifications than has Mrs. William H. Taft. She has had a great deal of experience of public life, and is a hostess of marked ability. Her knowledge of the White House, too, is already extensive, for when she was a child she stayed there a good deal, owing to the fact that her father was the legal partner of President Hayes. Mrs. Taft is very musical, and possesses a keen sense of humor, two attributes that are indispensable in a hostess, and she is also much interested in the arts and in literature, while as a linguist she has few equals in the United States. Her favorite book, by the way, is Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice." The new President owes no small amount of his great success to his clever wife, and she has always been of the opinion that he would do great things in the world. Asked some time ago if she wished Mr. Taft to become President, she replied in the affirmative, and when questioned as to who first thought of him for the office, she replied at once: "I did!" "When did you think of it?" was the next question. "When I was somewhere about sixteen," said Mrs. Taft. Here we have a pleasing picture of a woman's devoted belief in a man; and that that man's success is largely due to her is rather to his credit than otherwise.

The sad scenes on the Republic at the time of the recent disaster were not wholly without humorous incidents. A bald-headed gentleman was accosted by a woman whose hair was streaming down her back, and who asked him, excitedly if he had a comb about him. Describing the incident, he says: "I looked at her very sadly. Then I took off my hat."

The collection of pictures yesterday placed on exhibition in Gurrey's, which are to be sent to the Seattle exposition, will make a good advertisement not only of Oahu College, whose exhibit they are, but also of the Islands. The pictures have been made under the general supervision of Alonzo Gartley, who has also taken many of the pictures. R. W. Perkins furnished the originals of most of the others, and Eddie Fernandez made an interesting contribution in an unusually good football picture. The whole collection is finished in sepia and harmoniously framed. The pictures, in addition to being beautiful representations of buildings and views on the grounds, are works of art. Such a picture as that of Bingham Hall, showing the green turf, palms and evergreens and vines is a revelation of beauty. The panoramas show comprehensive views of the whole grounds. The one with the title "After Chapel," which shows the students leaving Pa-uahi Hall for recitations, is especially interesting.

The expense of making these pictures is being borne by the alumni association, and much credit is due to the officers—H. P. Judd, W. T. Rawlins, Lawrence Robinson and Mrs. Malcolm Macintyre—for carrying through the plan. The expense is being met by subscriptions, which may be paid to Lawrence Robinson, treasurer. The pictures will later be presented to the trustees of the college for their use.

NEWELL'S REPORT.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Giving the results of observations made in a recent visit to the Hawaiian Islands, Director Newell of the reclamation service, speaks at length of the possibilities of the reclamation of lands there suitable for homestead purposes. He finds that as a rule the sugar companies are irrigating most of the cane lands, but thinks "that there are considerable tracts of other lands as well adapted to sugar cane which will have a great value when water is brought to them and they are intelligently cultivated."

He thinks it probable that over 100,000 acres of land now practically useless may be reclaimed, and says that on this basis it would be possible to furnish 5,000 farms of twenty acres each, which would provide for a population of about 20,000 persons. He therefore recommends a systematic examination of the water resources of the islands and the preparation of a contour map.

HOSPITAL ON WHEELS.

N. Y. Commercial—Thomas H. Benton, who travels over many countries yearly, makes a suggestion to the transportation companies of the United States. He thinks they should follow the example of Walter Dillingham, general manager of Oahu road in the Hawaiian Islands. "There is not a train on that system, freight or passenger," he says, "which is not furnished with an emergency hospital, and the trainmen are instructed in furnishing first aid to the wounded. Everything necessary for the relief of injured passengers is carried, and no man can be in the employ of the company unless he submits to instructions. It is an excellent idea and has saved many a life."

HERALD ON HAWAII.

N. Y. Herald—The Hawaiian House of Representatives yesterday passed resolutions welcoming Admiral Ijichi and the crews of the Japanese training ships visiting our outpost Territory.

A special despatch to the Herald from Honolulu this morning gives the text of these resolutions. In the effort to do honor to the gallant admiral and assure him of American friendship for the Japanese Empire, the author of the resolutions "stood so straight that he leaned backward" and needlessly reflected upon another friendly nation.

The following affidavit was filed in court of common pleas in Dublin in 1822: "And this deponent further saith, that on arriving at the house of the said defendant, situate in the County of Galway aforesaid, for the purpose of personally serving him with the said writ, he, the said deponent, knocked three several times at the outer, commonly called the hall, door, but could not obtain admittance, whereupon this deponent was proceeding to knock a fourth time, when a man, to this deponent unknown, holding in his hands a musket or blunderbuss, loaded with balls or slugs, as this deponent has since heard and verily believes, appeared at one of the upper windows of the said house, and presenting said musket or blunderbuss at this deponent, threatened that if said deponent did not instantly retire, he would send his (the deponent's) soul to hell, which this deponent verily believes he would have done, had not this deponent precipitately escaped."

A short time ago (says the Courier-Journal) a young lady was troubled with a boil on her knee which grew so bad that she thought it necessary to call in a physician. She had formed a dislike for the family physician, so her father suggested several others, and finally said that he would call in the physician with the homeopathic case, who passed the house every day. They kept a sharp lookout for him, and when he came along he was called in. The young lady modestly showed him the disabled member. The little man looked at it and said: "Why that's pretty bad." "Well," she said, "what must I do?" "If I were you," he answered, "I would send for a physician. I am a piano-tuner."

Emergency Desserts

By Mrs. E. G. S.

I am my own cook, and subject to frequent and prolonged interruptions at any time during the day. Inevitably I often find myself facing dinner a half hour away and no dessert in sight. This forces me to quick action, and I have found it a help to keep hanging in the kitchen a list of desserts requiring the shortest possible time for preparation.

First on this list is plain junket, which can be made in ten minutes and set cooling in a pan of cold water in a shaded open window. Try grating crystallized ginger on top of each mold. Serve with cake and fruit.

Second on the list I place rice; there are so many simple ways of preparing it besides serving it plain with cream and sugar. A handful of desiccated or fresh grated coconut put in when the rice begins to boil, is a delicious addition for those who like the coconut flavor. Another agreeable variation is lemon rice.

Lemon Rice.

Into a sauce-pan put a cup and a half of water and half the peel of a lemon, cut in tiny shreds. When it boils, add one-half cup of sugar and let it boil gently till it is a thin syrup. Then add the lemon pulp cut in little bits. Let it boil up sharply a few minutes, then set back where it will keep warm. Pour over rice when served.

Again, plain boiled rice may be arranged in mounds or thick rings in deep saucers. The mounds may be surrounded or covered with sliced peaches, juicy, well-flavored pears, sliced bananas, dates stoned and cut in halves, fresh berries, or even nice prunes halved and stoned after cooking. The rice rings may be filled with the same fruits or with orange marmalade, apple-ginger or any nice jelly; all the above to be served with cream and sugar.

If you happen to have on hand sufficient cold boiled rice, it can be mashed with a fork in a little hot milk and covered closely on back of stove or in slow oven fifteen minutes. It may then be used as if freshly cooked.

Next on the emergency list is stale cake. If you have enough, cut three-inch squares from a loaf, heat between tins closely covered in the oven, and serve with any good pudding sauce, adapting the sauce to the sort of cake used. If the cake has been baked in little tins, all the better. The plain, light cakes call for liquid or semi-liquid sauce, the white fruit cakes and the dark cakes are better with creamy or hard sauces. Whipped cream lightly sweetened and flavored is good with nearly all cakes or puddings, including hot gingerbread.

Pudding Sauce.

I have a standard foundation for a hot sauce for emergencies which is quickly made and can be turned easily into lemon, orange, strawberry, jelly, chocolate or cream sauce simply by the addition of those fruits or flavors to the taste. It is made with a cup of boiling water, a half cup of sugar, a tiny pinch of salt and a small lump of butter. It is thickened with about a teaspoon of cornstarch wet up smoothly with cold water. Boil at least ten minutes. Then add fruit or jelly and set back to keep hot. But add flavoring only shortly before serving.

Another way of using stale cake is to cut three-inch squares about an inch thick. Spread half the squares with sliced fresh fruits, or preserves, marmalades, or stiff jellies; cover each with one of the remaining squares and top each with a generous mound of sweetened and flavored whipped cream. Or, the squares may be hollowed with a spoon, the hole filled with fresh or canned fruit, or suitable preserves and completed with whipped cream as before.

Dates cut fine and mixed with cake crumbs and lemon juice make a good filling. If cream is lacking, prepare the three-inch squares with the fruit or marmalade and cover thickly with white of egg and sugar beaten very stiff, as for lemon pie frosting. Place is buttered dripping pan, at least one inch apart, and brown lightly on the grate in a quick oven.

I have even used part of a freshly baked lot of little cakes to serve as puddings; and in one case of stringent necessity, with the breadknife heated in boiling water, blocks were cut from a warm loaf of inexpensive cake without injuring it in the least.

Any of these preparations of cake can also be made by using stale bread, without crust, soaked in a sweetened custard and browned lightly. Add the fruit or preserve, cover with the white of egg and sugar, as before and brown in oven.

When making pies, roll out and bake several pie shells more than you immediately need. They will keep several days and are great time savers when you wish to make lemon or chocolate pie or an open fruit tart piled with whipped cream.

Fruit Shortcakes.

Last on my list are the fruit short-cakes. The best and surest recipe I have found, which serves two people, is as follows: One cup of flour, two level tablespoons of shortening, one-half level tablespoon of sugar, one-quarter teaspoon of salt, three level teaspoons of baking powder. Rub together with tips of fingers, and add enough water to make a batter which spreads easily with the spoon on bottom of tin about six inches by twelve. It must be baked in a hot oven. Two favorite varieties in our family are orange and peach. I have never had a failure with it if the conditions were fulfilled.

And if your John wants the "name of this concoction," give him a name without hesitation, the funnier the better; and if he is like my John and little John, the laugh which follows will at least aid digestion.

Home-Made Candies

Kisses.

Beat the whites of four eggs until very stiff, fold in one cup of confectioner's sugar, drop on oiled paper and bake in a moderate oven.

Peppermints.

Boil two cups of sugar and one-half cup of water for five minutes, flavor to taste with oil of peppermint, stir until a thick syrup and drop on buttered paper.

Missouri Taffy.

One cup of boiling water, two cups of brown sugar, two tablespoons of molasses, four tablespoons of vinegar and one-quarter of a cup of butter. Boil without stirring until brittle.

Taffy.

Three and one-half cups of brown sugar, one scant cup of molasses, three cups of water, one-quarter cup of butter, one-half teaspoon of cream of tartar. Boil without stirring until it hardens when dropped into cold water, turn on a buttered platter, cool and pull.

Ice Cream Candy.

Dissolve one-quarter of a teaspoon of cream of tartar in one-half cup of boiling water, add two cups of granulated sugar and boil without stirring until brittle when dropped into cold water. Flavor with vanilla or lemon, add one rounded tablespoon of butter, remove from the fire, turn into a buttered pan and pull when cool.

Horehound Candy.

Boil two ounces of dried horehound in three cups of water for about half an hour; strain, add three and one-half pounds of brown sugar and boil until brittle. Pour into buttered tins and mark in squares when cool.

Maple Candy.

Boil one cup of granulated sugar, one and one-half cups of maple syrup and one rounded teaspoon of butter until it hardens when dropped into cold water. Pour into buttered pans to cool.

Chocolate Caramels.

Boil one cup of brown sugar and two cups of molasses for ten minutes, add one tablespoon of flour, one-quarter of a cup of butter and one-half pound of grated chocolate. Boil twenty minutes longer, pour into buttered tins and mark in squares when cool.

Tutti-Frutti-Cream Candy.

Boil three cups of granulated sugar, one-half cup of water and one tablespoon of vinegar for ten minutes, then add one cup of grated coconut and boil ten minutes longer. Remove from the fire and stir in one and one-half pound of chopped figs and an equal measure of chopped nuts. Drop from a spoon on buttered paper.

Peanut Molasses Candy.

Butter deep square pans and nearly fill with peanuts. Boil one cup of New Orleans molasses, one cup of brown sugar, one tablespoon of vinegar and one rounded teaspoon of butter until it hardens when dropped into cold water, stir in one scant teaspoon of soda and pour over the nuts.

Coconut Chocolate Creams.

Put the unbeaten white of an egg and an equal measure of water into a bowl, add one-half cup of confectioner's sugar, a small package of coconut, two teaspoons of vanilla and enough more sugar to make a stiff dough. Knead with the hand, shape into small balls, let harden for two hours, then dip into melted, unsweetened chocolate and place on paraffin paper.

FOR TIRED EYES.

Bathing with equal parts of witch hazel and water is restful to the eyes. Another plan is to bathe the eyes with warm water in which are dissolved a pinch of powdered borax and two or three drops of spirits of camphor.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

The careful daily manueuring of the nails and the pinching of the finger tips softly after washing will tend to keep the fingers tapering and to prevent the square stubbly look so often noticed in badly kept hands.

Disturbed circulation will make the lips white. Timid women have blue lips; women with heart trouble have purple lips and those who are not strong and whose blood is defective, either in quality or in circulation, will have lips like chalk.

Common baking soda, dissolved in ammonia, will bleach superfluous hair and cause it to rot, after which it can be removed with a pumice. This application does not kill hair roots and is harmless. It must frequently be applied until the hair is dead looking.

Here is a bit of advice that can be made to work two ways—for the woman who is too thin and her too plump sister: Hurry and worry are twin foes to rounded curves. A good motto for the thin woman is, "Do not trouble trouble till trouble troubles you."

Raw onions have more than once proved a cure for insomnia. One girl whose work keeps her out late several evenings a week and who was unable to put her work out of her mind after retiring has found relief by eating a slice of bread and butter with a slice of raw onions just before going to bed.

An Emergency Salad of little green onions diced, finely shredded cabbage, sliced cucumbers and lettuce hearts, with French dressing, has often been repeated successfully on the table, repeated successfully on our table.

Discoveries

By Ellye Howell Glover.

To give a nice flavor when scrambling eggs, add one or two tablespoons of grated cheese. To any one liking cheese this will be found appetizing and delicious.

A Welsh Rabbit that Never Strings.

One large cup or small bowl of grated or finely cut cheese, not quite as much cream and milk (half and half), two eggs beaten, cayenne pepper, dash of dry mustard, one teaspoon of sugar. Put butter size of a walnut in blazer, when hot, put in cheese, milk and cream, seasoning; let melt for about five minutes, then stir in the eggs. Let it cook until the mixture has thoroughly emulsified. Have plates warm. Serve on crackers or toast, and if there should be any left, spread bread with it the next day and you will have the most delicious cheese sandwiches.

Convenient hat pin holders are made from long round glass bottles covered with satin ribbon, the ends fringed and tied closely around the top; suspend with ribbon, and one has a most satisfactory hat pin receptacle. The bottle should be long enough to allow the tops of the hat pins to show a couple of inches.

We are extremely fond of maple sugar, but can not always procure the genuine article, so we substitute brown sugar and make a very good "Maple Fudge" as follows: Two cups brown sugar, one cup of milk, butter size of an egg, boil until a soft lump is formed in cold water. Then beat in a cup of chopped nut meats. Beat until quite stiff, pour on a buttered platter and mark in squares.

Some Plain Dishes

Bread Puddings.

Bread puddings have rather fallen into disrepute because they are so often poorly made. A well-made bread pudding is a delightful thing which any epicure might be glad to have served him. A good rule is the following: Beat the yolks of four eggs light, add a cupful of sugar, a tablespoon of softened butter and, when these are well mixed, four cupfuls of milk. Lastly beat in two cupfuls of dried crumbs and turn into a buttered dish. Bake, and when brown cover the top with a meringue made of the whites of the eggs and beaten stiff with half a cupful of sugar, and return to the oven to brown lightly. This may be varied by adding raisins cut into small pieces to the custard mixture or by spreading the pudding after it has been cooked, but before the meringue has been put on, with strawberry preserves or with fresh fruit, and then with the meringue.

Apple Roll.

Mix and sift 2 cups of flour with 2 teaspoons of baking powder, rub in 2 tablespoons of butter or lard. Make a dough by adding 3-4 cup of milk. Roll thinly about twice as long as the dough is wide. Brush over with softened butter, spread evenly 6 chopped apples and add sugar and nutmeg to taste. Roll like jelly roll, cut in slices an inch thick and lay cut side up on a greased baking pan. Bake in a moderate oven and serve hot with a sweet sauce.

Sauce.—Beat 2 eggs until very light, add gradually 1 cup of sugar and beat again, add 1 teaspoon of vanilla or lemon.

Italian Spaghetti.

Two cans of tomatoes, 2 pounds bottom of round steak, 2 onions, 1-2 dozen cloves of garlic, 1 teaspoonful butter, 2 tablespoonfuls sugar, 1 saltspoonful of soda, salt and pepper to taste, pinch of cayenne pepper, 1 package spaghetti cooked unbroken; fry small pieces of salt pork till crisp; then 1 onion till light brown; sear the beef; cut in small pieces in same fat after removing onion; bring tomatoes to boiling point and add the other ingredients; cook slowly all day until reduced one-third; cook spaghetti in salted water the next day and mix thoroughly with the tomato. Serve with either bread or toasted crackers.

Hot Chicken Toast.

Chop cold chicken meat fine, put into a stewpan, add one cupful of milk, a lump of butter the size of an egg, salt and pepper to taste and thicken with a little flour stirred in water. Take thin slices of bread, place one spoonful of the creamed chicken between two slices of bread and put the sandwich on a plate and pour a large spoonful of the cream over it.

Coconut Cookies.

Try this recipe for coconut cookies, and they must be kept from the air in a tin box, to remain crisp. Three cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup butter, 1 cup sugar, 2 eggs, well beaten, 2 table-spoons milk, half cup shredded coconut. Mix and sift the dry ingredients, cream the butter, add the sugar and mix thoroughly. Add the beaten eggs and milk, then the dry ingredients. If you chill the dough before rolling, it can be rolled thinner and more cakes can be cut.

Cottage Pudding.

Try Mistress Marjorie's cottage pudding. It is inexpensive and good. Beat level teaspoon of butter to a cream with 4 level tablespoons of sugar. Add 1 beaten egg and beat five minutes. Add 1-4 cup of milk, 3-4 cup of flour sifted with 1 level tablespoon of baking powder. Bake in five custard cups or loaf pan.

"He That Hateth His Life--"

By John Fleming Wilson.

Oh, art thou fool or madman?
Thy port is but a dream,
And never on the horizon's rim
Will its fair turrets gleam.
—Sealed Orders.

He maintained that pure religion was to be found only in San Francisco. "The export article they have here in Honolulu," he said, "may be all right for the kanakas and pakes. But it don't bite in on a white man like the genuine domestic Peniel Mission, Kearney street brand. I admit I've been pupple (crazy) from gin for three months. It's because the religion down here hasn't got any real hold. You just get me an order on the transports to San Francisco and give me the ten dollars I need to pay my meals, and I can get saved right. Look at that time in '99; wasn't I on the beach, then? And I went to Frisco and the Peniel people took me and converted me and I quit liquor and was decent for a year—till I came to Papeete and these parts where religion is thin." The man he addressed shook his head. "Nothing for you, Jim," he said. "The Coast article may be a bit stronger than we have down here; but you're too far gone this time. You have taken your pitcher too often to the well. You aren't worth saying any more. Clear out!"

So James Hughes, formerly respectable but now a vagrant, staggered out of the cool office into the hot street, his dirty linen trousers flapping about his bare ankles. He attempted jauntiness of demeanor, but some tourists, examining Chinese, drew aside at his passing with expressions of disgust. Farther on a Chinese hack driver, lolling in his vehicle, scoffed loudly at the drunken hooie. The outcast tried to assume dignity enough to resent such familiarity, but his failure was evident to himself and he rolled round the next corner holding a shaking hand over his face. He passed along King street in such manner as he could, swaying amid the scornful crowd, till a turn in the road brought him into the Japanese quarter. Here no one paid him any attention. But he refused the silent invitation of the saloons and kept on till he reached Iwilei, hot, desolate, and foul, but free from the surveillance of the police. Once within his asylum of wretchedness he threw out his chest and strode boldly up an alley.

He stopped in front of a little hovel. A child cried shrilly within, its plaint rising, a thin note above the hum of the quarter. The vagrant listened, nodding his unkempt head. "That's Yohara's kid," he said to himself. "And I forgot the candy."

He felt in all his pockets for the coin he had spent in a Kakaako bar. "Poor little kiddie," he muttered, when his searching fingers failed to find anything. Then, as an after-thought, he added, "Poor Jim Hughes!"

At this instant a tall, angularly built man in decent clothes, wearing a broad-brimmed hat, came out of the hut, almost bumping into Hughes. They suddenly eyed each other, blinking in the terribly sunshine. "I beg your pardon," said the stranger.

"No offense," Hughes answered, rubbing his unshaven face. "My fault entirely. Didn't expect to see a white man here."

"I'm Rapp," the other responded to this suggestion. "I have a school in Palama and the little boy here was going to it. But he's not well, and my wife sent him home today."

"You're the new missionary?" Hughes demanded.

Embarrassment was plain on Mr. Rapp's face. He swept off his big felt hat with an easy gesture and seemed to interrogate the glaring heavens. "I don't know that I'm much of a missionary," he said, slowly. "I'm only a teacher—Social Settlement, you know."

"Anything like Peniel Mission?" Hughes removed his own tattered hat with a faint insinuation of mutual courtesy.

"Not exactly," Mr. Rapp answered. "I don't believe I know just who the Peniel missionaries are."

"They're the real article," Hughes asserted, standing more erect. "They work in San Francisco. I was converted by them several times. Their religion is the only thing for a man that's got many bad habits, like me. Now I was thinking that if you are a Peniel man, it might save me a trip to San Francisco."

The Settlement worker looked somewhat mystified. The man before him showed every sign of degradation. They were in a quarter of Honolulu shunned even by the police. He had just come out of a hovel where disease reigned, into a street where vice reigned. And a white man, shaking from excesses, was looking at him with appealing eyes and affirming that a sect he had never heard of were the bearers of the only true gospel. Lacking words, he nodded. His companion nodded back, as if he quite understood, and went on: "I was just trying to make arrangements to get back to the Coast a little while. I need a turn in Peniel. Somehow the religion down here isn't strong enough for my case. It's all right for the natives and people that don't have much to fight against. But a man like me needs a good strong doctrine to hold him up." He glanced at Rapp, humbly. "I'm sort of a weak sister, you see. Now in San Francisco I'm all right."

The Peniel people get me and I say to myself, 'Jim, this time's the time the Lord has got you by the ear, sure. You can't get lost again.' Then I come back to Papeete or Honolulu. I'm all the way for a month, maybe. I live among the good people and work hard and save my money. Then the religion gets sort of thinned out and by and by I take to gin, not being able to find anything in the way of doctrine, and I land here in Iwilei."

"Why don't you keep going to church, and keep up your good works?" Mr. Rapp demanded.

Hughes put on his hat again. "I tried it," he said, "but the religion here don't bite; honestly, it don't. I'm used to strong liquor and I want strong doctrine. Anyway," he added, somberly, "the missionaries don't want me around. They all know Jim Hughes—drunken Jim, they call me. But I advise you, if the missionaries get down on you and you find you're weak on practice and shaky on doctrine, to hunt up the Peniel people in San Francisco. I'm going back there myself to get saved. Seven times they plucked me from the burning. All I need is the price to pay my passage. You haven't ten dollars, have you? I'll pay you back just as soon as I get saved and find a job again."

Mr. Rapp's interest turned to disgust. The man was begging. He would have started away, except that a sense of his duty made him pause to say: "Look here, I'm in no position to give you money. If I did, you'd spend it for drink. Why don't you brace up and live like a white man? Quit this life and be decent. You really look as though you might have been a man, once."

The thin wail of the child rose into the afternoon air and Hughes shambled into the hut. As he passed the Settlement worker he shook his head. "Nothing does me any good except Peniel Mission. I've tried all the other brands. I ought to know. Ain't I the one that needs salvation?"

He disappeared into the interior, and Rapp, picking his way down the filthy alley, heard the wail turn to a feeble cry of joy. "I wonder," he mused, "whether that is the brute's child?"

The same question occurred to him the next day when he visited the hut in Iwilei and found Yohara bending over a very sick child, indeed. When he had done what little he could to ease its pain, Mr. Rapp determined to decide the question. "You remember one man very drunk yesterday? Haole?"

Yohara seemed at a loss for a moment. Rapp suddenly remembered the name the man had given himself. "Hughes? Hughes?" he added.

The woman smiled instantly. "He bring my baby candy?"

"He your husband, you aikane?" he continued.

She shook her head vigorously. "Aole, aole me aikane. Me aikane pake."

"But he give your baby candy," he persisted.

The Japanese woman smiled. "He pupule" (crazy), she said, curtly.

The next day and the next, Mr. Rapp came to visit the child, now dying in the stifling heat of the foul alley. But it was not till a week later that he met Hughes again. This time the vagrant was sober. He was bending over the fretful child when Rapp entered. He straightened up and silently stood to one side while the child was examined.

"How's the kid?" he ventured at last.

"Not going to last much longer," was the reply.

"What's the matter?" Hughes demanded.

"Everything—principally poor food and bad air. I'd bring milk myself, only this woman would let it get warm and it would be worse than none at all inside of an hour. I've tried to persuade her to take the child somewhere else. But she don't seem to understand."

Hughes bent his head over the little mat a moment. "Poor little kid!" he muttered. When he straightened up, the Settlement worker observed that the slack lips were quivering; he did not notice that round one finger was clutched a feeble baby's hand. "I'll ask the Jap what's the matter," Hughes mumbled, not moving in his tracks, feeling that faint tug on his hand. He broke out into speech that Rapp could not follow, so mingled was it of three languages.

The woman listened sullenly. Then she spread out her empty hands in a gesture eloquent of poverty. "She has no money," Hughes interpreted. "Her husband, who is a Chinese luna (overseer) on Kauai, sends her no money. She is afraid."

"I can't make these people out," Rapp said, angrily. "That kid would have a chance to get well anywhere but here. I've done what I could. It'll just have to die." He took his hat and left.

When he had gone, the woman went and set in the doorway while Hughes lifted the frail child into his arms and soothed its fretfulness by grotesque grimaces and snatches of song. When it was stilled he carried it out into the scant shade of the hut and sat down to fight out his battle.

Palama paid no attention to the hooie when his voice rose in soliloquy. He was pupule. He would not hurt the child. "Poor little kiddie," the outcast was saying. "Chink father and Jap mother. No chance at all. Going make (dead) because there's no one cares." He repeated this last sentence and fell silent. When the child stirred and its clawlike hand reached up and touched his bare throat he said again, "Going make because no one cares."

The woman fell asleep, her head on her breast, and Hughes shook his head. "Poor little kiddie," he whispered. "And ten dollars will do it. But I've got to go to the Coast and get saved. It'll take that ten dollars. If I don't go, I'll never straighten up and I'll go make, too, here in Iwilei where nobody cares."

The day-mosquitoes stole in upon his emaciated body, and he took off his hat and slapped at them. The child wakened and cried again, twisting till its hot cheek rested on Hughes' breast. His face suddenly whitened. His weak mouth drew into firmer lines and he painfully got upon his feet. Thrusting past the drowsing woman he entered the hut and laid the child upon its mat and drew a torn piece of netting over it.

"It's got to be done," he muttered. King street was crowded. Gaily decked native women pushed their way along in front of the shops, chattering and laughing. Heavily laden coolies trotted through the midst, swinging their baskets from under the noses of the panting hack horses. Japanese women, hauling bedizened children by the hand, called to each other across the stream of traffic. Here and there a mounted policeman rode above the current, debonair, careless, dominant. Occasionally linen-clad white men lounged by in the shadow of the wall, red-faced, complaining of the mid-afternoon heat. At intervals a crowded street car clanged on its hurried way to Kalihi or Waikiki.

Hughes noted nothing of this. He was walking as fast as he could, careless where his bare feet stepped. A withered garland depended from his tattered hat. His torn jacket flapped behind him, snatched at by coarse flower sellers, almost plucked from his body by impudent children.

He went out of the crowd and down the alley that leads to the postoffice. A few steps more brought him to a bank. Without pause he stepped in and went down the big room, past the cages wherein clerks worked over books, to a far window. He tapped on the counter and a man at a desk inside looked up with a frown. "What is it, Hughes?" he said. "The transport doesn't sail till next week."

"I know that," Hughes answered, "but I need the ten dollars you promised me today. I thought maybe if I didn't bother you any more, you'd be glad to be rid of me, Mr. Haskins."

"I certainly would be glad to be relieved of your constant pestering," was the response. "But you've always said you could straighten up if you went to the Coast. I told you I'd give you the money to go. Now you take advantage of my good nature and try to work me for it now. If I give it to you, it means that you'll get and get drunk again. Don't you want to be decent?"

Hughes' face darkened. "I never lied to you, did I?" he demanded.

"No-o," Haskins admitted.

"Well, I'm not lying now. I need that money worse today than I will next week. I'll never bother you again, if you'll let me have it now."

"All right," said the banker, "here's your tenner. But don't come in here any more."

Once on the street Hughes started back the way he had come. But his feet lagged. Time and again he stopped to gaze out over the many-tinted bay. "I could make it all right," he said to himself. "And the Peniel people would straighten me out, and I could quit the beach, and be somebody. But I guess I've had my last chance. We'll just give somebody else a show!"

Two hours later the woman Yohara was seated under the awning on the forward deck of the Inter-Island steamer Caroline, a little bundle of her belongings at her feet and the child on her lap. As the last whistle blew, Hughes shambled to her side and thrust a package into her hands. "Candy," he mumbled. The mate bellowed at him and he hastened away. The woman drew her gown closer about her and then looked down at the child. "Pupule," she murmured.

When the Caroline had fussed out of her slip and passed down the gleaming bay toward the tossing reef, Jim Hughes left the wharf and shambled to Iwilei. Once safe within its precincts he sought a cheap saloon and laid down his solitary quarter on the bar.

A couple of nights later Mr. Rapp was surprised to see the outcast walk into his little chapel in Palama where he and his wife were trying to teach a polygot assembly the virtues of cleanliness and godliness. Hughes listened silently to the reading of a chapter from the Bible, to the songs, to the exhortations. Before the services ended he slipped out into the night.

Thereafter he made occasional visits to the chapel. Ragged and unkempt, he was usually sober. Even when drunk, he was scrupulously quiet and attentive. Finally Mr. Rapp sought him out alone. "You ought to straighten up," he said, kindly. "I see you are really interested. I'd like to help you."

Jim shook his head. "I'd like to oblige you," he said. "I'd like mighty well to be saved again. But the only thing that will take hold of old Jim Hughes is San Francisco gospel. If I could have made it back to the Coast I'd have been all right. But I passed up my chance. Don't worry about me."

Rapp was provoked, thinking it a play for his sympathy. "I haven't any money to send you up to the Coast," he said, sharply. "And if you went there, I doubt if you would do anything but what you do here."

"I'm not asking you for money, am I?" said Hughes, suddenly flushing. "I was simply trying to explain to you. Good-night."

Palama Chapel saw him no more and honest Mr. Rapp's heart was troubled. But he and his wife found plenty to occupy their minds in their efforts to save in the morning the fruits of their toil of yesterday. And in due time the Settlement came into conflict with the interests of certain of the powers. Their efforts to cleanse the filthy purlieus of Chinatown and the still filthier slums of Iwilei met with a quiet but effective opposition that finally ended in a courteous notice to Mrs. Rapp that her prescribing for the sick and the ailing was against the territorial law providing that only licensed physicians should be allowed to practise in Honolulu.

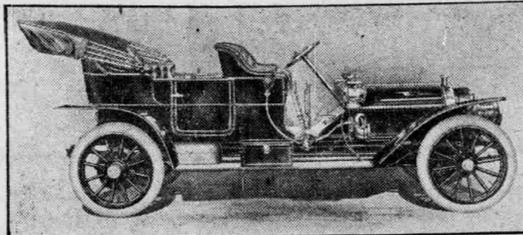

Three nights later a Chinese came out of a house across the street from the deserted chapel and built a fire in the gutter. He worked hastily, putting noisily as he thrust little sticks of kindling into the heart of the burning pile of paper. A little crowd gathered, jabbering curiously. The Chinese, baring his arms, poured incense on the blaze from a paper sack, working his lips in mad incantation. A block away another fire suddenly flared into the darkness, sparks streaming upward to the stars. A long rolled its thunderous beat over the quarter. The crowd melted silently. All Palama shuddered within doors. The plague had broken out.

The next morning Mr. Rapp found a squad of mounted police barring the way across Nuuanu creek. Beyond the bridge he saw the uninterrupted traffic of the careless city. He distinguished a party of tourists viewing the sights. He turned and looked back over Pa-

Uniformly Good

Those words are quickly read, but they mean a lot when applied to an automobile. They don't mean "good this year, bad last year, and doubtful next year." They mean "good every year." That's where the STEVENS-DURYEA stands today. It is one of the best today; it was last year, it will be next year. Among the few really high grade cars now on the market, there is not one with so uniform a record as the STEVENS-DURYEA. The man who owns a STEVENS-DURYEA has a car with a pedigree which is clean strain right from the beginning, and such records are the best evidence of real quality.

Think of it; $7,000.00 for one time!

Occasionally we hear a man say "Advertising's all right in the big city where you have lots of people to reach, but costs too much down here." If that man lived in San Francisco he'd have to pay $350.00 for a page ad in the Chronicle; In New York $750.00 for a page in the World; In Honolulu only $20.00 for a page in the Advertiser.

It's merely a matter of relative values—with the advantage decidedly in favor of the Honolulu merchant.

EVERYBODY BLOOMS BUT FATHER

lana. It was deserted of grown people. A few dying fires sent little spirals of smoke toward the glowing sky. Little children huddled on the curbs, oppressed by the silence. From an alley near by came the strident wail of a mourning woman. Against an electric light pole a Chinese slept his last sleep, awaiting the dead wagon.

"You can pass," said the police sergeant, lighting a cigarette. "But I guess they'll shut Palama up by itself tomorrow. We don't allow pukes or Hawaiians into the city now. Better get your wife and take her out while you can."

Mr. Rapp paused, turning his eyes from the safe city back to the quarter he called home, the quarter he was trying to cleanse and make decent.

"Thanks," he said, quietly. "I shall stay. But you'll let Mrs. Rapp pass?"

The sergeant, who remembered gratefully the woman who had soothed the last hour of a little child whose girl-mother did not know how to save it, nodded his head. "You better get her through right away," he suggested.

With a groan, Mr. Rapp turned and made his way to the little cottage he called home. In the lanai his wife waited for him, her face drawn and white. "Dear heart!" she called, as he came up the steps. "Dear heart, they're dying!"

They were, all around them. But after that first cry of anguish neither spoke again of the horror. Rapp tried to suggest that she take advantage of the chance and go to Waikiki. "I can stay and do what I can," he said.

She smiled. They were almost alone the first days. Honolulu, kept in ignorance of the death that knocked at her door, heard only vague rumors of infectious disease and the necessity of an active health department felt of cleaning up the native quarters. The band played in Emma Square as of old and from Fort street to Waikiki none but the government officials suspected the scenes in which Mr. Rapp and his wife were acting across the stream, fighting the plague with such supplies as they could get from the police.

The third day they came to their home in the little lane bordered by papayas for a brief rest. The servant had fled and they cooked what food they could find, ate it, and went to sleep in the lanai, holding each other's hand that neither might be seized upon by death alone.

They woke to find a man in dirty cotton trousers and a ragged shirt seated on the steps. He looked at Rapp bashfully and nodded. "I thought maybe I could help you," he muttered.

It was Hughes. When Mrs. Rapp sat up in her chair and brushed the hair out of her weary eyes he nearly fled. She smiled at him and he mumbled inarticulately. "Hughes thought we might need some help," said her husband, doubtfully.

Quicker to understand, Mrs. Rapp nodded to the outcast. "It's good of you," she said. "Would you mind helping me to get something for us to eat?"

So there were three of them that toiled in the heat and smoke of the disinfecting fires. It was grim work, the grimmer because they heard no news from the city that hummed across Nuuanu stream, careless of the dying. Hughes said little as he went about the tasks that mercy set. But every now and again he would look at Mrs. Rapp, nod his head vigorously and smile. It was a confident smile, cheering beyond words to the exhausted woman. She taught herself always to respond to it, feeling a certain stimulus in thus acknowledging that all was not lost. But the hour came when she did not smile in answer to Hughes' quick flash of cheer. Instead she gazed at him with weary eyes and sank to the steps of the little hut within which the child she had been nursing lay dead. Her eyes closed.

With a startled leap Hughes reached her side. Rapp was far up the street burning rubbish. The outcast stared and then he stopped. With an effort he raised the light body in his arms and strode away toward the cottage under the papayas. It was a hard climb up the lane and the heads of sweat stood out on his white face when he finally reached her chair in the lanai. There he laid her down, gently, and sped away for her husband.

He came, his limbs shaking under him, fearing the worst. He poured out all his little skill to revive her, and when Hughes heard the man's voice calling to the wife, he slipped out into the little yard, where he stood, bare-headed, in the hot sun.

But it was not death, only exhaustion, that had overpowered Mrs. Rapp's frail body. She revived, and when Hughes tiptoed up the steps he met her smile. He mumbled inarticulate words and turned away, hurrying down the lane and out of sight.

So there were but two of them to carry on the battle. They toiled harder than ever, working with frantic strength to stem the tide of death that rippled to the very hills. But this time they made shorter shifts of it, coming back to the little cottage to meet the woman's smile, to hover about her with anxious words of encouragement, to steam over the stove compounding soups and dishes she might enjoy. And when her smile grew stronger, Hughes would slip out, his rake in hand, to battle with filth, to burn rubbish, to bury the dead, to lift the dying into the open air.

One day Rapp paused on the porch of his house and stared out at the bay. He saw a couple of steamers anchored out beyond the reef. He saw others anchored inside, flying signal flags. Hughes joined him and they nodded to each other. The city had been quarantined. The black death had crossed the stream. They were not alone.

That afternoon soldiers appeared in Palama. Wagons loaded with disinfectants rumbled across the bridges and squads of men with rakes and brooms invaded the alleys. The city had wakened. On every hand officialdom worked beside them.

But it was too late. The plague had got a foothold that nothing could shake. Chinese and Japanese, native and white, they cried out in pain, panted and wheezed on their mats, and died.

All day long the good priest of Kahi-aka chanted the masses for souls and flung the incense into the polluted air. All day long the dead wagons toiled up the hills and the walls of the desolate rose to the languid skies.

Rapp found himself suddenly overcome with distaste of life. It mattered nothing what he might do. He labored on because Hughes worked beside him, with his flashing smile, his eternal confidence. But the end came. He went to the cottage and slipped into the chair beside his wife. There he stayed, fighting for strength to live through the horror.

But Hughes accepted this, as he had the woman's collapse, with cheerfulness. He still worked with rake and fire and medicine. But he came oftener into the lanai where these two militant workers drowsed in exhaustion of body and soul. He cooked their meals. And now and then he would stop before them, smiling cheerfully. "Not so bad, today," he would remark. "Only three died in Palama since morning. We've got it under. Cheer up!" They looked wearily for him when he was gone. The hours passed with unbearable sluggishness. And when he came again they would rally a smile to meet his, only to sink back into apathy.

One night he came to the house and threw his rake down with a bang. "It's all over," he said. "No new cases today." He breathed chokingly.

"How about Honolulu?" Rapp demanded, fretfully.

Hughes blew his breath out with a whistle. He panted in the heat, still smiling. Then he threw his hand out. "Come and see."

For the first time Rapp and his wife rose to their feet and walked feebly out of the gate. Hughes went beside them, blowing out his breath, wheezing like a spent runner. "Look!" he said.

They looked. The sky was crimson above the city across the stream. Sparks soared among the stars. A faint roar, as of a distant crackling surf, beat upon their ears. They pushed on into the lane, followed its delirious hundreds yards, and came out into a full view. The city was afire from Nuuanu stream to Fort street. Rapp drew a long breath. He stared, open mouthed, for a moment. Then he turned to his wife.

"It is all over," he said. "Fear has done what we could not. This saves the city."

"Will they burn Palama, too?" his wife demanded.

Hughes puffed out his white cheeks and seemed to be muttering to himself. Suddenly his voice broke artlessly. "No," he said, hoarsely. "Palama was saved." He smiled. But agony gathered in his eyes.

With a sudden leaning forward Mrs. Rapp put her hand on the outcast's arm. "You saved it," she said.

He gazed at her in astonishment, the ultimate amazement of a man who turns a corner and finds the end of his thoroughfare. He gasped. Then he turned on his heel, clutched at the air, and fell. They bent over him. He opened his lips. "I lost my show to be saved," he said, with difficulty. "Pencil Mission. . . . strong doctrine. . . . Couldn't go again. . . . No good, anyhow. . . . Unsaved. . . ."

The conflagration across Nuuanu roared into the sky.

But Palama was safe. Under the papayas lay the last case, his face upturned to the crimson sky.

Some New Cleveland Reminiscences

Grover Cleveland's keen insight into current events and political movements has recently been illustrated by some interesting personal recollections. A recent writer, Jesse Lynch Williams, who enjoyed a long intimate acquaintance with the ex-President, has gathered some reminiscences from his records for publication. He comments upon Mr. Cleveland's humor, sympathy, and simple friendliness, and on his aversion to needless conversation. Mr. Williams found him, however, a most inspiring listener, "with a flattering manner of regarding you while talking, as if your views upon the topic of conversation were quite as worthy of attention as his own."

As an illustration of this characteristic trait, Mr. Williams sketches the following dramatic incident in The American Magazine:

On the afternoon that President McKinley was shot at Buffalo, Mr. Cleveland was fishing with a friend in a small lake in the Berkshires. At about sunset a man was seen rowing rapidly out toward the ex-President's boat. "Mr. Cleveland, Mr. Cleveland," he shouted as he drew within call, "President McKinley has been assassinated." The ex-President did not start. He simply looked at the stranger, too much amazed by this bolt out of the blue to say anything.

The man came nearer. "I tell you," he repeated, panting from his rapid rowing, "President McKinley has been shot—killed!"

Mr. Cleveland scrutinized the stranger a moment in grave silence, betraying nothing of what he thought or felt. Then making a sign to show that he had heard and appreciated what the man wished to say, his gaze dropt to his line again, though of course he was not thinking of fishing now.

The bearer of bad tidings looked at the apparently stolid figure of the silent fisherman. "You don't seem to be much excited about it," he muttered, and, putting about, rowed slowly to shore.

Mr. Cleveland waited a little while, still in profound silence, then thoughtfully reeling in his line he merely said to his friend, "Well, I guess we may as well go." On the way to shore he disjoined his rod in his careful, deliberate manner, put it in the case, saying nothing.

At the landing he was met by the nearest local correspondent for a certain New-York newspaper, also quite excited and not a little embarrassed by his unwelcome assignment. "I'm sorry to trouble you, sir," he said, "but my paper wants me to get two hundred words from you on the assassination of the President."

Mr. Cleveland at first shook his head. "Say this," he finally answered, "that in common with all decent, patriotic American citizens I am so horrified by this report that I am unable to say anything." Then turning hastily away he drove off with his friend, and for some time said nothing even to him as the carriage jolted over the hilly roads and the sunset faded. Then suddenly, as if they had been talking all the time, he said aloud, "Well, it may not be true."

Presently he added, "It may be true that he has been shot, it may not be true that he has been killed." After that there was still a longer silence until finally just before the end of the drive—it was now quite dark—he began to talk (and note the extraordinary presence of the conclusion he reached as a result of his slow, silent brooding upon the momentous tidings): First of all, he said, if the report were true, the thing could hardly have been done by a disappointed office-seeker as in the case of "poor Garfield," for the circumstances at the time were not such as to make that very probable. Nor, he explained, was it very likely that labor troubles could have been the immediate cause; there were no strikes of importance on at the time. Other possible agencies were passed in review and cast aside as possible but hardly probable. "So," he added quietly, but with the divination of a seer of old, "if McKinley has been shot there is no other explanation than that it has been by the hand of some foreign anarchist." And within a few hours he was reliably informed that this precisely was the case!

Mr. Cleveland's early recognition of Mr. Roosevelt's political ability also emphasizes another phase of his alert analytical mind. Mr. George F. Parker, his official biographer, gives the following incident in McClure's Magazine for April. Mr. Cleveland said to Mr. Parker immediately after the accession of Mr. Roosevelt to the presidency:

"Roosevelt is the most perfectly equipped and the most effective politician thus far seen in the presidency. Jackson, Jefferson and Van Buren were not, for a moment, comparable with him in this respect. When I was Governor he was still a very young man and only a member of the Assembly; but it was clear to me, even then early, that he was looking to a public career; that he was studying political conditions with a care that I had never known any man to show; and that he was firmly convinced that he would some day reach prominence. I must, however, confess that I never supposed that the presidency would come within the scope of his aspirations so early in life."

The writer adds: In October, 1867, in the course of conversation, I told this anecdote to Mr. Richard Olney, in Boston, and he exclaimed:

"Oh, I can beat that! I know of an occasion when Mr. Cleveland expressed his opinion long before his talk with you."

When I asked for particulars, Olney said:

"In 1862, when the question of choosing a president of the Civil Service Commission was presented to the Cabinet—every member of which was in favor of the promotion of Mr. Roosevelt, then a member of that body—President Cleveland was strongly opposed to this action and said: 'I want to tell you gentlemen now that you are making a mistake. I have known this young man Roosevelt since 1832, and I tell you that, without exception, he is the most ambitious man and the most consummate politician I have ever seen. However, as you all favor his nomination I will not oppose it. I only want you to bear my words in mind. The time will come when you will see that I am right.'"

BALLADE OF THE PRUDENT SPORT.

I'm not pugnacious, not a bit. Before I'd fight I'd always run. That I'm a liar I'll admit. In fact, that's what I've often done. I never could see any fun In being wiped from off the map By some big brute who weighs a ton. But, oh, I love to see a scrap!

It is a pity that the pit— That is an inadvertent pun— Is frowned upon as most unfit To patronize—a thing to shun. But fighting coeks do take the bun For force and fury, fire and snap. My morals are most finely spun. But, oh, I love to see a scrap!

I like to see a fellow hit. A blow with force enough to stun And come up smiling, full of grit, As if the thing had just begun. Of all things underneath the sun That is the one that warms a chap, I'm not a Vandal, nor a Hun, But, oh, I love to see a scrap!

L'ENVOI.

To safely sit and watch the one The other's crimson claret tap! In mildness I will yield to none, But, oh, I love to see a scrap!

They were talking of the strange sights to be seen in a great city, and one man paid his tribute to New York: "I don't believe one of you could think of any combination of circumstances that hasn't at some time occurred on the streets there," he said. "I reckon I know of one that's never occurred there," said Hiram Fowle. "What's that?" asked the other, curiously. "I guess," said Hiram, slowly, "that you've never seen, nor ever will see, a brass band going in one direction on the left of the folks going the other."

OF THE MULTITUDES

who have used it, or are now using it, we have never heard of any one who has been disappointed in it. No claims are made for it except those which are amply justified by experience. In commending it to the afflicted we simply point to its record. It has done great things, and it is certain to continue the excellent work. There is—we may honestly affirm—no medicine which can be used with greater and more reasonable faith and confidence. It nourishes and keeps up the strength during those periods when the appetite fails and food cannot be digested. To guard against imitations this "trade mark" is put on every bottle of "Wampole's Preparation," and without it none is genuine. It is palatable as honey and contains all the curative properties of pure Cod Liver Oil, extracted by us from fresh cod livers, combined with the Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites and the Extracts of Malt and Wild Cherry. Taken before meals it creates an appetite, aids digestion, renews vital power, drives out disease germs, makes the blood rich, red and full of constructive elements, and gives back to the pleasures and labours of the world many who had abandoned hope. Doctor S. H. McCoy, of Canada, says: "I testify with pleasure to its unlimited usefulness as a tissue builder." Its curative powers can always be relied upon, and "You can trust it as the Ivy does the Oak." One bottle convinces. Avoid all unreliable imitations. Sold by chemists throughout the world.
