To reach a solution where the people of all nations might agree that peace together seems to be the broad aim of the present day. It has probably been a general aim of humanity ever since mankind first inhabited the earth.

Now, with the world at war, the hope of mankind, as it has been in all major wars of the past, that this will be the war to end wars.

As each nation in the world becomes more and more imbued with a fighting spirit and in its thinking, most every nation agrees that its well-being depends upon the warfare and activities of other nations.

There are many in America who would like to build a wall around our country and forget the rest of the world. But without considering the arguments for and against such an isolationist policy, all of us now realize that our government is pledged to a policy of internationalism. Whether we like it or not, our interests have been drawn in with the interests of Europe, Asia, South America, and Africa. And our nation’s leaders are trying to promote a League of Nations, stronger even than that dreamt of it in the past, which will make us find all nations to work and achieve the same end—peace.

It may not be in the lifetime of any of us now living that such a solution will become an actual reality. But in good food for dreams. The trouble is war, while love breaks barriers between all, at the same time deepens the enmity between those fighting one another.

When Orson Welles frightened thousands of people with a radio dramatization of an invasion by the people of the planet Mars, he perhaps hinted at the solution. If the world had a common enemy— an enemy that demanded the writing of all nations on the globe to defeat it—that would bring about the world antagonism being sought.

But perhaps someday we can agree that war itself is the real enemy of mankind, and that we can all work together to form a crusade of all nations to drive it from the face of the earth.

In the past the Garden has been converted on successive nights from a boxing arena to a political rally, to a kosher bath and the job of making it a juggling contest took seven days preaced by three weeks of intimate planning on the part of Geo. D. Smith, director of the Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey circus, which enclosed the Garden for six miles of water-jugs of saltwater each four days to lay the food. He had to find a way to construct a spectacular waterfall at the Ninth Avenue end of the Garden, from which millions of water-jugs pour each minute and one of his greatest problems was to find a "sky hook" for the 60,000 square yards of fabric which make the Garden roof. If the Old Timer's son, an oval, well-muscled man in horn-rimmed spectacles, did a lot for the thumbs and the rhumba has done for him. Now he is just a joke.
