NO-SOIL FARMS SEEN SPREADING

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UP)—Experts predict that Phoenix and the “Valley of the Sun” in which it is located soon may be the world’s farming capital of the future.

Ernst Brundin, Montebello, Cal., scientist who developed soil-less farming on a mass production basis and planned commercial use of the method, said the Phoenix area offered ideal conditions for the proposed new industry.

The revolutionary new farming method adapts itself easily to culture of vegetables, Brundin explained. He expected hopes to produce vegetables out of season that would bring good prices on eastern markets.

Roots of the vegetables are immersed in glass tanks filled with water to which chemicals are added in the combinations to produce the best growth.

The scientific balance of elements needed to bring out luxuriant foliage, strong roots and better fruit. Approximately half again as many plants are produced on a given surface of the soil-less nutrition system as on an equal area of soil, Brundin estimated.

In experimenting with tomatoes over a 12-month period, scientists found that the height of the vine and size of the tomato was considerably increased. There was no noticeable difference, however, in vitamin and mineral contents.

Brundin said present methods make it too expensive to produce vegetables on a large scale, and no competition will be offered field crops. When the method is perfected, however, labor costs will be one third lower than those for soil operation and fertilization and water costs will be about 56 per cent lower.

Soil-less farming was discovered in 1898 and perfected in 1944 by German and Dutch scientists. It was not commercialized, however, until 15 years ago by Dr. W.F. Gericke.

HYDE PARK NEAR NEW “BIG HOUSE”

ALBANY, N.Y. (UP)—The state’s second largest prison, Green Haven, will be ready for occupancy this fall to take convicts from century-old cells in the Sing Sing prison.

Ironically, the structure is only a few miles from the sum­mer residence of New York State’s District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey. It is even closer to the estate of Secretary of the Treas­ury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., and only a half hour drive from Pres­ident Roosevelt’s Hyde Park home. Poughkeepsie is in the nearest large city.

The buildings occupy 50 acres and are on the site of old Camp Whitman, where thousands of infantrymen were trained during the World War.

TO HAVE 2,016 CELLS

“This new prison will do much to relieve congestion in our prisons, especially in Sing Sing, where it has been neces­sary to use a much older century-old cell block,” Correction Commissioner John A. Lyons said.

The penitentiary will cost $8,000,000 and will have 2,016 cells. Its high walls and other features make it a “maximum security” institution. All vital facilities are to be outside the walls so that they cannot be seized by an uprising of pris­oners.

Twelve towers surmounting the barrier can be reached only from outside the wall. Each tower had 10 powerful searchlights and special gun ports.

ONLY TWO GATES

The enclosed area can be entered through only two open gates, one for visitors and the other leading into a huge safe for the inspection of service trucks.

The warden will probably be 74-year-old William Hunt of Attica prison. He is known as a stickler for details and was recommended for his organization of Attica prison when it was opened.

Lyons explained that the congestion and need for the new prison were not the product of a continued crime wave. Al­though several governments have averaged about the same in the past 10 years, they have been a smaller and smaller per­centage of the state’s growing population.

“The resulting congestion in our prisons,” he said, “is due mainly to longer sentences for persons with more vir­ulent law enforcement and more effective application of prison rules.”

THEORY OF ATOM HORN IS STUDIED

MILWAUKEE (UP)—A modern Paul Piper has infiltrated some 8,000 casualties among the rat population of Shore­wood, Milwaukee suburb.

The hero is Daniel Robertson, exterminator, who pre­cribes on the theory that rats think like human beings and display unbelievable showing to their pilfering ex­perts.

Robertson’s theory worked in Shorewood and soon a neighbor­ noteworthy community complained of a rat infestation. He accepted this fact as further proof of his contention that the reason many people.

“Suppose you had been away on a vacation and returned to find bodies strewn about the street,” he said. “You’d natural­ly come to the conclusion that a terrible plague had struck the town. And you would have no escape as you could. It’s the same way with rats. They decided that Shorewood was an unhealthy place and moved out.”

Robertson even suspects that rats have a language and use it to converse with each other. He says he often has placed food near a colony of rats and once or twice they carried the eggs back up the pillar, into the house without a single slip.

Robertson does not consider himself a professional in the extermination business, although he is an ex­pert in controlling rats. By the way, he calls these rat infestations “raiders.”
