June Andrews, who lives in the little town of Kilauea, has made a career of aviation. After her marriage to an aviator and the birth of two children, she decided to make aviation a full-time occupation. Her husband, Colonel Andrews, is a well-known pilot and has been flying for many years. He recently sold his own airline, which he had operated for several years, to a large company and now flies for them. He is a popular figure in the aviation world and has been honored for his service to the country.

CHAPTER IX

THE first step in June's career was the formation of her own airline company. She had always been interested in aviation and had spent many years studying the subject. She knew that she wanted to fly and she was determined to make it her career. June's husband was supportive of her decision and he helped her to get started. He taught her how to fly and he helped her to build her own airplane. It was a small, single-engine plane and it was fast but not very powerful. June loved flying and she enjoyed the challenge of flying alone. She was always looking for new ways to improve her skills and she was never satisfied with what she had accomplished.

June's company was called Andrews Airways and it was based in Kilauea. She and her husband flew it together and they were soon flying all over the island. They were very popular and they made many friends. The people of Kilauea loved to see them fly and they were always happy to see them. June's company was very successful and it quickly grew. June was a very good pilot and she had a great deal of skill. She was able to fly over the mountains and through the clouds with ease and she never made a single mistake. She was a true aviation expert and she was loved by all.

Andersen, the editor of the local newspaper, admired June very much and he wrote an article about her in his paper. He praised her for her courage and for her ability to fly. He also praised her for her unwavering dedication to her husband and to her family. Andersen was a good friend of June and he was always willing to help her in any way that he could. He was also very interested in aviation and he was always eager to learn more about it. He loved to read about it and he loved to fly. He was a very good pilot and he was always willing to help others.

June and her husband were very happy together and they were always ready to help others. They were always willing to fly for anyone who needed it and they never charged anything for their services. They were very friendly and they were always willing to help others. They were a great team and they were loved by all. June's career was a great success and she was very happy with it. She loved flying and she loved her husband and she loved her family. She was a very good pilot and she was very happy with her life.
