The Territory of Hawaii should congratulate itself in its good fortune at having a new Governor of the camaraderie and ability of Mr. Long. No better choice could have been made by the people of the United States. And no appointment is so well received as that of Governor of Hawaii.

Governor Long has been on the island for a long time that he knows and understands the needs of the people of this Territory. He has, therefore, the experience, the temperament and the personality that will enable him in the most difficult and delicate task of executive government to the best advantage of the people of Hawaii. He is a man of the highest capacity and a leader of the people.

Hawaii is on the threshold of adulthood. It is well that on the eve of its becoming a statehooded member of the American Union, we should have as its chief the able and statesmanlike Governor of Hawaii. Mr. Long, who is a statesman and resourceful person, has chosen to be governor. He is a public servant and will serve the people with ability and efficiency.

GENERAL DOUGLAS MACARTHUR

It is with a sense of fulfillment pride that I write this last page. The United States has arrived at a point where it can be said with justifiable assurance that the American people are ready to demand their own destiny and to exercise their own freedom. The American people have done an excellent job, and they are prepared to do it.

The story of the United States is one of progress and expansion, of economic and social development. It has been a story of achievement and progress, of leadership and example for the rest of the world. The United States has been the model to which other nations have aspired.

The United States has been a leader in the fields of science, technology, and education. It has been a leader in the fields of diplomacy, international law, and peace. The United States has been a leader in the fields of economic and social development.
