BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR BOYS

KAMAKĒLA, HONOLULU

THE COURSE OF INSTRUCTION embraces the branches of a Christian and Commercial Education. Greek, Latin French and German are optional, and free of extra charge.

The Annual Session commences on the first Monday of September, and closes on the first Friday of June.

Pupils for the Primary Classes will be admitted only at the commencement of the terms (after the summer vacation and the short vacations at Christmas and Easter).

Certificates of Health are required for admission.

A Quarterly Report of the Boarders will be made to parents or guardians.

Boarders may spend the first Saturday of the month with their parents, guardians or any agent authorized by them.

Boarders must be supplied with the necessary toilet articles and with sufficient clothing, so as to be always neat and clean.

::: TERMS :::

For Day Scholars, the fees are from 50 cents to $2.00, according to grade.

The Boarding Department consists of two distinct classes of pupils.

Board and Tuition, First Class, 10 months .....	$150 00
Board and Tuition, Second Class, 10 months.....	75 00
Instrumental Music, per month, piano .....	5 00
Instrumental Music, per month, violin, flute, etc.....	4 00
Laundry Expenses, per month .....	2 00
Medical Attendance, Books and Stationery, Mending, etc., form extra charges.

Payments must be made IN ADVANCE (every quarter—2½ months).

For further particulars apply to

G. BERTRAM, PRINCIPAL.

Sisterhood of the Sacred Hearts

Boarding and Day School for Girls

HONOLULU, H. I.

The ANNUAL SESSION of this Institution Commenced August 1st

Pupils are admitted at any time during the year, paying only from date of entrance.

Young ladies of every religious denomination will be admitted, provided it be previously agreed that they will conform to the general regulations of the house.

The Course of Education for Boarders

Will embrace Orthography, Reading, Writing in various styles, Grammar, Composition, Arithmetic, Algebra, Bookkeeping, History, Sacred and Profane, Ancient and Modern, Chronology, Biography, Geography, the use of the Globes, Astronomy, Mythology, Botany, Natural Philosophy and Chemistry, Plain Sewing, Darning, Dressmaking, and all kinds of Fancy Needlework.

The Sisters, being aware that all education is imperfect without the knowledge of the Law of God, will devote themselves with the most sedulous care to the religious instruction of their Catholic pupils, without neglecting to inculcate in the minds of the others the general principles of Christian morality. The most conscientious attention will be given to form their manners, and to train them up to habits of order, neatness and industry.

The Diet Will be Wholesome and Abundant.

The health of the pupils will be the object of constant and maternal solicitude, and at all times they will be under the immediate superintendence of their teachers.

Vacation of one month will begin each year the 1st of July. Pupils may pass their vacation in the establishment.

TERMS.

Board and Tuition, per quarter of twelve weeks . . . . . $34 50
 Music (vocal and instrumental), Drawing, Painting, German Language, and Artificial Flowers, will form extra charges.

No extra charge for the French Language.

Payments to be made quarterly in advance. Persons residing at a distance are requested to have a responsible agent in the city of Honolulu. No reduction made in case of children being withdrawn before the expiration of the quarter.

Tuesdays and Saturdays will be appointed days for parents to visit their children.

On the first Saturday of each month the Boarders will be allowed to go out with their parents or guardians, but never with any other without a written permission from said parents or guardians. They must return to the establishment before 6 o'clock P. M. the same day.

Postage, Stationery, Washing and Mending, Doctors' Fees and Medicines will be chargeable to the parents.

For further particulars application may be made to

THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS

Are situated in the North Pacific Ocean. Their extremes of latitude are from 18 degrees 50 minutes to 22 degrees 20 minutes north, and of longitude from 154 degrees 53 minutes to 160 degrees 15 minutes west from Greenwich. The islands are eight in number, as follows: Hawaii, Maui, Oahu, Kauai, Molokai, Lanai, Niihau and Kahoolaw. The three latter are comparatively unimportant. The group really includes four other islands, barren and of small dimensions. Bird Island is a rock 120 miles northwest of Kauai; Molokini is an extent crater of but slight elevation, with one side open to the sea, lying midway between Maui and Kahoolawe; Lehua lies off Niihau, having an elevation of 1,000 feet, a fine spring of water, and some little vegetation, and Kaula is seven miles southwest from Niihau. The latter is said to be the smallest of the group, but it abounds in wild fowl, as does also Bird Island. Of the eight islands first mentioned, seven are inhabited, Kahoolawe having been abandoned except by sheep herders.

The group was named the Sandwich Islands on their discovery by Captain Cook, in honor of his patron, the Earl of Sandwich, then First Lord of the Admiralty. The legitimate native title and the one they continue to bear is "Ko Hawaii Paeaina," a collective term synonymous with "these Hawaiian Islands." This term is derived from the largest of the group, Hawaii, whence the Kamehamehas originated, and has entirely superceded the name of Sandwich Islands, which term is only used abroad.

THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The central situation of the Hawaiian Islands is highly favorable to their commercial importance. The position is nearly equidistant from Central America, Mexico, California, and the northwest coast on the one side, and the Russian domains, Japan, China and the Philippine Islands on the other.

There are few harbors, though numerous channels occur in the reefs, affording entrance into basins, capable of accommodating coasters. With the exception of Honolulu and Pearl Harbor, on the south side of Oahu, no really good harbor exists. At Koolau, on the north side of Oahu, there is another harbor, with, however, but nine feet of water in the channel. The surrounding country is verdant, well watered, and the breeze is directly from the ocean. By deepening these channels, should the commerce of the islands ever require it, fine sites for commercial towns would be formed. Hilo bay, on the east of Hawaii, affords excellent anchorage; shipping is protected by a projecting reef, and the holding ground is good, but the surf breaks heavily upon the beach, and not unfrequently renders landing difficult. At all of the principal towns, with these exceptions, the roadsteads are exposed; but such is the nature of the prevailing winds that vessels can anchor in perfect safety. With good ground tackle there is but little to be feared at any season. No dangers to navigation exist in the vicinity of the islands, with the exception of a reef off the west coast of Kahoolawe. It is a little less than two miles from the shore, and with two fathoms of water on it at low tide. A few rocks, within a circumference of two hundred feet, comprise its whole extent.

The structure of the group is volcanic. On Hawaii is found the largest known active volcano, and several others of great size, partially or wholly quiescent. The mountains attain an elevation of fourteen thousand feet. They are of great extent and grandeur, and throughout the group present scenery of peculiar and beautiful character. To the north they slope somewhat precipitously to the sea, covered with a greensward at their base, and above with dense forests. Plains are broken by deep ravines, down whose steep sides cascades fall in bright and pretty sheets. Several of these often unite, as in Kauai, and form rivers of considerable depth and size. Palis, or precipices, in many parts present stupendous walls of rock from one thousand to three thousand feet perpendicular elevation, directly fronting the sea, the surging of which forms large caverns, into which the sea rushes with stunning effect.

Below the region of clouds, vast and rugged masses of broken lava spread themselves over the country. Plains frequently occur with a soil formed of ashes and cinders. Extinct volcanoes are very common. They are of every age, size and shape, at places crowning the summits of lofty hills and mountains; elsewhere, rising precipitously from plains or projecting into the ocean, they form prominent landmarks for navigators. One of the most singular and well known is the promontory near Honolulu, called Leahi, better known as Diamond Head, from an idea once current that precious stones were to be found there.

The minerals are few and simple, consisting of the usual variety of the lavas, from the most solid and granular to the light pumice stone. Ledges of compact limestone, a good material for building, are found on several of the islands. These, being elevated considerably above the sea, have caused much speculation as to how they were formed or arrived at their present situation. The most remarkable is at Kahuku, Oahu. No metals have been discovered. Four miles to the west of Honolulu, and within a mile of the ocean is the famous salt lake of Alia-paakai, elevated only a few feet above the level of the sea. It is in the heart of the crater, nearly oval in form, and about a mile in circumference. At certain seasons salt forms spontaneously and in the greatest abundance; at others but little is created, from its being overflowed by rains. Some have supposed it a mineral salt; but the general belief among the natives is that it is formed by evaporation. The following facts favor the supposition. Its general depth is but eighteen inches; near the center a hole exists five or six fathoms in circumference, which, as no bottom has been found to it, is supposed to connect with the ocean. Through this the lake is slightly affected by the tides, and at times it is crusted over with a stratum of salt sufficiently strong to bear a man's weight.

The soil of the islands is formed of decomposed volcanic rocks, sand, mud and ashes. To be made fertile it requires constant irrigation. Valleys which receive the debris and rains of the mountains, and for ages have been accumulating deposits of vegetable mould, are exceedingly rich and productive.

The banana, yam, sweet potato, breadfruit, cocoanut, arrowroot, sugar cane, strawberry raspberry, ohela (a berry,) ohia (a juicy red apple, but of poor flavor,) are indigenous and plentiful. Many varieties of esculent fruits and vegetables have been successfully introduced, among which are melons, the delicious chirimoya from Peru, limes, oranges, guavas, pine apples, grapes, figs, peaches, citrons and tamarinds. The vegetables of the temperate region have been acclimated to a considerable extent. The uplands of Maui produce excellent "Irish potatoes." Wheat of good quality thrives in the same region. An oil used in painting is extracted from the nut of the kukui tree (aleurites triloba.)

THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The forests are usually very dense, broken by deep chasms, hidden ravines and deep, conical-shaped pits, which appear to have once been active craters. The trees are overgrown with masses of ferns and parasitical vines, thickly interlaced and spreading their shoots in all directions, which render it a task of great difficulty to penetrate their recesses. There are but few birds to enliven these sylvan solitudes. Wild geese are found at Hawaii; snipe, plover and wild ducks on all the islands. A variety of the owl is very common; but nature, in the ornithological as well as the entomological tribe, has been chary of her gifts, and the traveler looks in vain for the endless varieties which the more favored intertropical countries afford. Swine and domestic fowls are indigenous, and, besides the wild fowl above mentioned, were the only varieties of animal food before the introduction of cattle.

Fish, of which there is a great variety, form one of the chief articles of diet. They consist chiefly of the albicore, bonita, flying fish, shark, eel and many species preserved in artificial ponds, which acquire a delicious flavor, and are highly prized. The best of these is the mullet. Edible shellfish are also abundant, of which the pearl oyster, cuttlefish and prawn are the most palatable. Pearls are common, but of no great size or beauty. They formerly constituted a profitable branch of trade, and were monopolized by the king. The common oyster is not found.

The climate is salubrious, and possesses such remarkable evenness of temperature that the language has no word to express the general idea of the weather. The tropical heat is mitigated by the trade winds, which blow over a wide expanse of ocean in the temperate zone. The shores on either side show but little difference in the results of the thermometer. Physiologists give a certain point of temperature as most conducive to health and longevity. The mean heat of these islands approaches near to it, and is highly favorable to the full development and perfection of animal economy.

By visiting the interior and ascending the mountains, any desirable degree of temperature can be attained. On the highest mountains snow remains during much of the year, and in exposed situations on Mauna Kea throughout the whole. Snowstorms occur on the highlands of Maui during the winter months. On the upland region of Kauai, a uniform elevation of 4,000 feet, both snow and hail occasionally occur. The temperature here is quite regular the year through, requiring warm garments and fires even in the month of July. A portion of it supports a heavy growth of timber and is frequented only by wood cutters. The average temperature of Waimea, Hawaii, situated in the interior, at an elevation of about 4,000 feet, is nearly 64 degrees Fahrenheit, 48 degrees being the lowest extreme. This place afford an excellent retreat for those whose constitutions have become enervated by too long a residence nearer the coast. Rains are frequent at this altitude, but the character of the soil seldom leaves the ground damp for any length of time. At Mountain Retreat, back of Lahaina, Maui, an elevation of 3,000 feet, the temperature varies from 40 to 75 degrees; but such situations afford few comforts for the sick, and their dampness renders them otherwise objectionable.

Localities can be selected on the seashore which possess advantages for invalids, particularly those affected with pulmonary complaints. Many individuals, by change of residence, have prolonged their lives for years, and others who, in the less favored regions of the North, were perpetual sufferers, live with scarcely an admonition of their disease. Lahaina, Kailua, Ewa and Honolulu have all a good reputation in this respect. At the former, during ten years, the highest thermometrical elevation was 86 degrees; the lowest, 54 degrees, an extreme difference of but 32 degrees. During no day in this period was the range greater than 19 degrees. June has the highest range—January the lowest. But little rain falls, and for successive months the sun is rarely obscured by clouds.

The common range of the thermomeer at Honolulu is 12 degrees per diem. The greatest degree of heat during twelve years in the shade was 90 degrees, and 54 degrees for the coldest; the mean, about 75 degrees. Kailua and Ewa vary but little from the above.

At Koloa, Kauai, the thermometer varies from 50 degrees to 88 degrees; at Waioli, from 55 degrees to 90 degrees, with much rain. A change of wind affects the climate materially. During nine months of the year the northeast trade wind blows with great regularity, and the tempeprature is very uniform. Oahu and Kauai are the most influenced by it; Maui, which is larger, has in a few places to the leeward, including Lahaina, the regular land and sea breeze. Hawaii, from its size and height of mountains, neutralizes its influence, and enjoys an almost uninterrupted land and sea breeze. This occurs, in some degree, even on its northeast coast, where the wind is usually freshest. The winds partake of the character of the sea breeze in the day, and during the night are so modified by the influence of the land as to vary their course, or become very light. Where the mountain ranges are broken by steep defiles, as at Kawaihae and other bays on the west side, the wind rushes through with great violence, gathering strength as it descends, until it passes off to sea in furious gusts. During the winter months the trade winds are interrupted, winds from the south and west often prevailing for several successive weeks. Calms are also frequent and of long duration. Much of the weather at this season is, however, of the most delightful description; the sky becomes cloudless, the atmosphere dry, clear and bracing, and the whole system feels the invigorating influence of the change. Nothing can exceed the soft brilliancy of the moonlight nights. Thunder storms are rare and light in their nature. No hurricanes have been known.

A large portion of the Hawaiian Islands, now under cultivation, was comparatively valueless until foreign enterprise and capital reclaimed it. Lands were worthless for Hawaiian farming, and would have remained an unproductive area had it not been for foreign capital and energy and grit. Thus the largest plantation at Spreckelsville, the two remarkable plantations at Ewa and Makaweli, to say nothing of others, show what American enterprise can accomplish in the face of grave difficulties.

The Arum esculentum, or taro plant, with its broad, lily-like leaves floating on the water, is a part of all Hawaiian landscapes. The Kanaka's farming consists in the cultivation of this plant alone; other things may grow if they will, but to the taro nearly all of his labor is devoted. Great skill is displayed in irrigating and preparing the soil. The beds are made of rich, soft mud each bed being enclosed in a wall of earth impervious to water. The plant is propogated by setting out the tops of the ripe root; water is then let in upon them, and retained until the planting of the next crop. It is said that forty square feet of taro will supply food for an ordinary sized family for a year. The root can be eaten in many ways; boiled, baked or fried is equally good, and the young leaves when boiled make a very good substitute for spinach. It is said, with much truth, that every one, particularly the natives, who eat the taro (poi) are never troubled with indigestion. In fact, many have been completely cured of this ugly disease by the use of the taro flour, being lately introduced from Honolulu.

Every great occasion to the Hawaiian is celebrated by a luau or feast. This feast is elaborate and requires long preparation. The variety of dishes provided are numerous—roast pig, ti root, raw and cooked fish of many kinds, sea mosses, live shrimps, sweet potatoes, mixtures of cocoanut, fruits, and always plenty of poi, that most delectable of all foods for the natives. The method of cooking the luau is peculiar. The different meats and fish are wrapped in taro or ti leaves, placed in a pile of stones, which have been made red hot in a fire built in a pit. The pile is then buried in grass and earth, water is thrown on; and the whole is left undisturbed for many hours. Meats cooked in this manner are exceedingly tender, and foreigners as well as the natives enjoy the flavor acquired. Grass mats are spread upon the ground and gaily decorated in ferns and flowers. Forks and spoons are never seen, the Hawaiians using their fingers with great dexterity.

The beautiful and gigantic banana plant grows in great luxuriance in the Hawaiian Islands. Its leaves frequently measure eight to twelve feet in length and two feet across. The fruit grows in great clusters, often one hundred pounds' weight in a single cluster.

It is calculated that upon a given surface of ground one hundred times as much weight of fruit is produced as that of wheat. The banana is, however, not so extensively relied upon as a food in the Hawaiian Islands as in other tropical countries.

"The Hawaiian holding is generally a strip of land running back from the sea, including a bit of woodland and a bit of land suitable for rice or taro patches. The privilege of fishing in the adjacent waters is bought with the land. This is the common custom of the country. You must have the consent of the proprietor of the land before dropping a line off the shore anywhere in the islands.

"The native Hawaiian prefers the hot lava cliffs to the cooler heights inland. He is amphibious, too, and hence prefers to live by the water. Captain Cook found a dense population crowding these western shores of Hawaii. The burial caves of their chiefs can still be seen dotting the walls of the cliffs, and as an ancient superstition prevents the inmates from being disturbed, skeletons, wrapped in cocoa bark, with calabashes and stone implements, can be seen within.

Sugar cane grows in the Hawaiian Islands to perfection. Spreckelsville Plantation, the largest in the islands, yielded alone one season 15,000 tons of sugar. The output from all the islands for the year ending December, 1895, was 294,784,819 pounds, valued at $7,975,590, and all of this immense product was consumed in the United States.

Coffee culture is comparatively a new industry. It is only since a remedy for the blight has been discovered that it has yielded sufficient returns to make its cultivation a commercial success. The oldest plantaion was only begun five years ago. Notwithstanding the many blunders incidental to a new industry. it has paid dividends on the total cost of the investment of 125 per cent. A second plantation, now four years old, will pay with its first crop not only the original cost of the investment, but a considerable bonus. In general, sure returns of not less than 25 per cent can be looked for on every fairly well-conducted coffee plantation within the Hawaiian Islands, estimating that coffee be sold in San Francisco at fifteen cents per pound. A considerable difference in price of coffee is due to the locality. The products from the districts of Hilo, Puna, Oloa and Hamakua have brought twenty-two cents per pound during the past year, and with improved manufacturing processes this price will be increased several cents per pound. The districts before named possess every requisite for the successful cultivation of coffee, and the heaviest crops per acre are produced there; all are readily reached by water communication. The Hawaiian Government has lately enacted a law by which lands in new portions of these districts will be sold in tracts not to exceed one hundred acres each to one individual at a nominal sum, and as fast as lands are taken up the government is pledged to build roads to them. This will throw open to purchasers every facility for their immediate cultivation.

Coffee is one of the few agricultural products that improves through keeping. The world's area, where it can be grown successfully, is so limited that there is no danger from overproduction. The pioneer, of small means, must make up his mind to withstand three years of moderate privation and self-denial. Every available dollar should be devoted to the purchase of land and the putting in of the crop. After that time the returns are so large that a life of comfort, if not of luxury, can be looked forward to.

THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

HONOLULU AND ISLAND OF OAHU.

Honolulu, the metropolis and seat of government of the Hawaiian Islands, the largest city and most important social the trade center in the islands, is situated on the southern coast of the Island of Oahu and possesses an excellent harbor, with abundance of water for the deepest drafted ships, a smooth bar, easy of approach and passage, extensive wharriage, and buoys and the necessary signal lights.

The city of Honolulu is long and narrow, being about three miles long on the seaside and about half a mile wide, and extending nearly two miles into Nuuanu Valley on the land side, with an average width of about half a mile. The houses are rarely occupied by more than a single family, and in general the yards about each dwelling are ample. The private residences are attractive and are every year being constructed more in accordance with the privileges of the climate. The lanai, or veranda, is the distinctive feature in Honolulu house construction. It is being gradually evolved into a novel room of three sides, broad and airy, and open on one side, with a protecting screen that can be lowered as required. An afternoon tea on a lanai, open toward one's garden, with orchids and choice ferns, and a delicious breeze for inspiration, is one of the treats of tropical life.

The general appearance of the city is suggestive of a mixture of English, American and Mexican. The old English ideas of laying out a town would seem to have prevailed in the older parts of the city, as many of the streets are tortuous in their course. In the matter of paving and cleanliness, the streets, and, in fact, the roads for some distance out of town, as a general thing, will compare favorably with the best turnpikes and fashionable drives of America, or even Europe. In this respect Honolulu reminds us of Victoria, British Columbia and vicinity. In Honolulu, as in Victoria, all the streets are macadamized and receive constant attention.

The arrangement of gardens and the architectural style of many of the residences are largely Mexican and Central American in appearance, while the business part of the town (except in the Chinese quarter) and many private houses recall to mind the American style. Of the resident foreigners the Americans predominate, and have infused the social and business spirit of the Great Republic into Hawaiian affairs to such an extent as to give everything a decidedly American character. Not even the torpidity produced by a tropical climate can subdue the characteristic energy of the North American.

When we say that the American customs prevail, we would not be understood as saying that every other element is entirely overshadowed. Such is not the fact. The British and German nations both have a numerous and creditable representation in a superior class here. Almost without exception they are of the liberal, educated, refined, traveled, enterprising and adaptable class. In fact, the whole foreign population, including the Chinese, live along in remarkable and almost complete harmony with one another and the natives—notwithstanding that the Hawaiian Islands are jealously watched by the different governments. The community, too, is very generous and kindly disposed to strangers who prove themselves deserving of confidence.

The Chinese figure very prominently in the Hawaiian population, and control a large proportion of the trade of the Islands. They are numerous and influential in Honolulu. If a Chinaman selects a country outside of China to live in for life, that country will most probably be the Hawaiian Islands. All the conditions here are eminently favorable for him. The climate suits him; the natives are not averse to him; the native women consider it a piece of good fortune to win a Chinese husband, and the children raised by the cross are really superior. So a great many Chinamen come to the Islands, gain a competency, marry native women, educate their children in a liberal manner, and spend their lives in the land of their adoption.

The Chinese quarter of town, which is also largely inhabited and frequented by natives, occupies a considerable portion of the center of town. The two races mingle a great deal together. The average Chinaman finds it at once easier and more important to acquire a knowledge of the Hawaiian language than to learn English, though we do not believe that the Kanaka will ever make any effort to master Chinese.

Waikiki, the favorite "outing" of Honolulu, with its fringed sentinels of cocoa palm, offers its attractions of sea beach and delightful temperature of water for bathing, freed from danger by its guarding reef, at times a picture of grandeur with its playfully angry surf. Tramcars convey passengers quarter-hourly to or from the city; or by carriage, the beauties of a drive, after a refreshing salt bath, can be had through and around Kapiolani Park, where every variety of tropical tree and shrub can be seen. A beach road extends along to the foot of Diamond Head.

In the opposite direction from Honolulu, the trains of the Oahu Railway and Land Company connect Honolulu with Pearl River Lochs, by two or more trains daily, whereby the recently established Ewa Plantation at Honouliuli, and the new town of Pearl City at Manana, and its peninsular attractions have been made possible. Excursion trains to Remond Grove and points beyond to Waianae, at frequent intervals, afford an excellent opportunity for tourists and others for the study of the interesting features of two leading industries; viz., sugar and rice. At no other point throughout the islands, can these two be seen so advantageously working, as it were, side by side.

Then to watch the surf off Diamond Head after a southern storm is a revelation of the ocean's power. Standing on the site of a heathen temple, where once sacrifices were offered to the gods of the storms and waves, you watch the great billows as they come rolling in, dashing against the rocks beneath with tremendous force, throwing clouds of spray fifty feet in the air, that turn into showers of molten gold in the sunshine. Above the incessant roar of the waves ring the shouts of the native bathers, diving and swimming through the great billows. The more violent the surf, the greater the joy and excitement. Some times canoes with long out-riggers, each with its single occupant, come racing in over the breakers guided with wonderful skill. At Diamond Head, perhaps, there is a better opportunity of seeing the ancient sports of the Hawaiians than at any other place on the island.

The primitive Hawaiians were very bold and skillful navigators. There can be no question that they frequently visited in their little canoes the Society Islands and Tahiti, south of the equator and 2400 miles distant from Hawaii. How they could cross such vast wastes of ocean seems at first mysterious; but they had a knowledge of astronomy such as we sometimes marvel at in the old Egyptians and Chaldeans. They knew the planets and had names for the brighter stars. They also had a good calendar. Their year was three hundred and sixty-five days long, and began when the Pleiades rose at sunset. They had twelve months, of which eleven had thirty days each, and the twelfth thirty-five days. They had also a primitive arithmetic and a system of numerals in which they could number up into the thousands. It was partly decimal and partly tesseral.

The natives are fearless and safe boatmen; they take their boats through the surf with wonderful skill—waiting in the smooth water until some high swelling wave sweeps them landward at railroad speed, always nearly engulfed by the high crest of the foaming breaker, but always just escaping and safely landing their heavily loaded whale boats, that in the hands of ordinary boatmen would be dashed into thousands of pieces.

Probably there is no better place in the world to see the night-blooming cereus in all its glorious beauty than Honolulu. Just at the entrance to the Manoa valley stands Oahu college. The stone wall which surrounds the college grounds is covered with a luxuriant growth of this cactus. At the seasons of its blossoming thousands of flowers open in a single night. Going to this wall at the verge of the evening, the visitor can watch flower after flower quiver open, making the air heavy with its delicious fragrance. Soon the whole hedge is covered, gleaming white in the silvery rays of the moonlight, a scene of indescribable beauty, only to be conceived by those who have beheld it. The flowers often measure twelve inches in diameter, averaging much larger than the usual hot-house specimens; it is said that upon this wall from eight to ten thousand of them have been seen open at one time.

TRANSPORTATION.

Communication between Honolulu and the various islands of the group is maintained by two principal lines of steamers, viz., those of Wilder's Steamship Co. and the Inter-Island Steam Navigation Co. By one or other of the fine steamers of these companies, passengers or freight are transported regularly and promptly to all parts of the islands. The chief point of interest to tourists is, of course, the volcano of Kilauea, a plain, practical description of which, together with some points as to how to reach it, will not be out of place here.

The Volcano of Kilauea.

WHAT IT IS.

Kilauea is the greatest active volcano in the world. It is not in the form of the standard geography volcano, a cone vomiting fire, smoke and lava, but is a great sink, three miles in diameter, in a plain, with nearly perpendicular walls varying from 300 to 600 feet in height, which in places are broken by debris slopes. The bottom of the sink, or "floor of the crater," is a mass of gnarled, twisted, black lava, comparatively level, and gradually rising to a central point of main action. The depth of the crater has varied during the past fifty years from 500 to 1200 feet, the variation being caused by the alternate overflow of liquid lava upon the floor, the upward thrust of the imprisoned lavas beneath, the subsidence of the floor under the accumulated weight of successive overflows, and the drawing off of the lava beneath the floor, leaving it unsupported, and the consequent falling in of the floor. These subsidences, or breakdowns, occur at irregular intervals of from four to ten years. The distance fallen is from 100 to 600 feet, generally about 500 feet, and the area involved from a few acres to the whole floor of the crater. The area which has most often fallen in has been about half a mile in diameter.

The action of the volcano is unique, in that it is non-explosive. The main action is usually in a lake or lakes of molten lava, varying from a few hundred feet to half a mile in diameter. In these lakes the lava is continually boiling in a furious manner, throwing up jets and fountains of lava to a maximum height of 75 feet, dashing against the banks in fiery waves and throwing up clouds of molten spray, making one of the grandest, most awe-inspiring sights on earth. The lakes can usually be approached to within a few feet without special danger. They are visited by thousands; but no accident to a visitor has ever occurred.

The last breakdown occurred in March, 1891, when an area of a half mile in diameter, upon which a hill 200 feet high was lo-

WHERE THE VOLCANO IS.

Kilauea is situated at an elevation of 4000 feet, on the southern slopes of Mauna Loa, on the island of Hawaii, about 200 miles from Honolulu, the capital city. It is fourteen miles in a direct line from the sea, and 30 miles from Hilo on the north, and Punaluu on the south, the two ports at which tourists land to visit the crater.

HOW TO GET THERE.

There are two ways of getting to the volcano. One is by Wilder's Steamship Co.'s 800-ton steamer Kinau, which leaves Honolulu every ten days, and, touching at Maui, runs around the northern coast of Hawaii, to Hilo. At Hilo there is a good hotel, kept by Mr. J. R. Wilson. There is a fine carriage road through sugar cane fields, magnificent tropical jungles and fern tree forests for the full distance of thirty miles.

The other route is by the Inter-Island Steam Navigation Company's 700-ton steamer W. G. Hall, which leaves Honolulu every ten days, coasting along Maui and the southern coast of Hawaii to Panaluu. There is a good hotel at Punaluu, owned by the Volcano House Company. The trip up from Punaluu, is a ride of six miles over a plantation railroad, and a stage ride of twenty-four miles over an average country road.

Each route has its advantages. The coast on the Hilo side is a succession of cliffs from 100 to 1500 feet high, over which scores of waterfalls fall into the sea. The cliffs are seamed with numberless canyons and valleys running back into the mountains, and everything is covered down to the water's edge with tropical vegetation.

The Punaluu route is usually through smoother water, and is along the scene of more recent volcanic action, hundreds of black lava flows marking the steep sides of the mountains where they have run down into the sea. The last great flow was in 1886. Captain Cook's monument at Kealakekua is always an object of interest.

There are good hotel accommodations at the crater. The climate is cool and bracing, the tops of Mauna Loa and Mauna Kea, covered with perpetual snow, being only thirty miles distant.

EXPENSE OF GETTING TO THE VOLCANO.

Several methods of visiting the Volcano, involving different expenditures, may be followed.

1. The Oceanic Steamship Company issues tickets in San Francisco, covering all traveling and hotel expenses to and at Honolulu and the Volcano, involving a five weeks' absence from San Francisco, for $225.

2. A round-trip ticket from Honolulu to the Volcano and return, going up and returning by the same route, can be bought in Honolulu via either the Hilo or Punaluu route, involving an absence from Honolulu of one week, for $50.

3. A round-trip ticket going up by way of Punaluu and returning by way of Hilo, involving an absence from Honolulu of ten days, costs $70.

4. A round-trip ticket going up by way of Hilo and returning by way of Punaluu, involving an absence from Honolulu of fourteen days, costs $80.

An unlimited stop-over is allowed on all tickets. Volcano Hotel rates are, transients, $4.00 a day; to ticket holders stopping over, $3.00 a day.

The following is from The Traveler's Hawaiian number descriptive of "Kilauea":

"Once on the floor of Kilauea, interest is quickened. One can pick out old and later flows, mounds, hillocks, gulches and chasms, in every form and variety. One soon begins to feel the heat. This comes not alone from the crater, but also from the gnarled, twisted, somber lava beneath our feet, and a haze, like the fumes of a hot summer air, wave and float from many quarters about the pit.

"Lanterns are carried, and Albert, the trusty guide, carries a lunch and a big canteen of water.

"As we approach the Lake of Fire, sounds are heard as if some immense iron works were near at hand; first, a heavy jar, then a puffing and hissing, combined with a steady, dull, heavy roar. The lava beneath our feet trembles more and more, evidently from the continuous falling of heavy bodies. As yet we have seen nothing, but as we mount a slight rise, a chasm filled with mighty fire appears at our feet.

"Ours was a gay party of young people, and our progress over the lava had been a noisy one, but a sudden silence fell over all as the crater in its awful sublimity appeared before us. Below was one immense expanse of writhing, seething, boiling red and white hot lava. At frequent intervals a huge mass of liquid fire would raise itself, apparently without effort, some ten or fifteen feet above the surface of the lake, falling with a chash, causing the whole crater to tremble; again a fountain of white hot lava would rise with a hiss, similar to that of an immense rocket.

"One can well understand that the natives believed that the Lake of Fire was inhabited by spirits. The constant motion and the erratic and unexpected movements of the fire are totally different from anything seen elsewhere, and it resembles nothing so much as an immense throng—the constant change in color, and of light and shade, make the comparison yet more vivid. No description of this work of nature can be extravagant; no tongue or pen can rightly portray its awe-inspiring sublimity. In every detail it is superlatively distinct.

"After working thus for perhaps twenty minutes, all motion suddenly ceased, and the lake in its sudden cooling was covered by a heavy black crust. A gleam of fire now and again appeared, to be suddenly extinguished. After thus lying dormant for perhaps twenty minutes, the surface of the lake was lighted up by breaks in the crust of black lava. Through some unexplained reason the whole surface sinks, and the lake appears as if an entirely different kind of lava had issued forth. It fountains and boils and seethes, and creeps and jumbles until one would think that all the imps of Satan were appearing in nature's grand ballet; and as if fittingly to close the scene there are a series of explosions and collisions, fountains and shocks, to make the grand finale. Then again the lake cools and darkens as if some immense black curtain had been drawn across its surface preparatory to the next scene. Thus it continues hour after hour, day after day

"To see the crater once is not to see it for all time—each minute it is varied; and even the guide who frequently visits it ten times daily, finds it as great a novelty, and he views it with as eager an interest as the tourist who looks upon it for the first time.

"A longer pause than usual brings us to ourselves; our interest had been so intense that we had lost conception of time, and we were surprised that we had remained five hours at the crater's brink."

Places of Amusement.

THE HAWAIIAN OPERA HOUSE.

The new Hawaiian Opera House, completed in September, 1896, is one of the most artistic ornaments of Honolulu. In its construction and furnishing no expense has been spared to produce a place of amusement equal in all its appointments to any in the United States. William T. Porter, the famous scenic artist, was engaged for several months in painting a stock of scenery equal to that of any stock theater in the States. Each scene is composed of fifteen pieces, opening in any position required. The entire construction and arrangement of the stage was under the supervision of Mr. Robert Abrams, who was for fourteen years stage machinist at the Baldwin theater in San Francisco. The stage is 60 feet in width by 34 deep and 40 feet high. In the stage are two quarter traps, and two six foot, or Hamlet, traps. The use of tables for stage scenery is superseded by a bridge constructed in three sections, adjustable at any desired angle; all scene shifting is mechanical. The footlights are incandescent electric, in sets of various colors, and the entire building is lighted by electricity, there being no gas or other open lights. Ten large dressing rooms are located under the stage and are fitted up with all modern conveniences. The auditorium is very handsome, well lighted and well ventilated. It has parquet, dress circle and balcony, with four large and artistically finished and furnished proscenium boxes, the seating capacity being about 1000. There are two large double exits from parquet and dress circle, and two from the balcony, making it possible to clear the house in four minutes. The erection of this handsome house makes the engagement of the best American artists possible, and Honolulu will undoubtedly be in the circuit of all first-class companies going to the colonies.

PARKS.

Kapiolani Park, Kapiolani Park Association managers, Wai-kiki road, base Diamond Head; A. S. Cleghorn, president; directors, W. G. Irwin, Cecil Brown; W. M. Giffard secretary. Was organized on April 27, 1891. Its objects are the cultivation of sociability among Scotsmen and descendants of Scotsmen to the third generation; to maintain an interest in Scottish song, story and amusements, and to promote mutual improvement. This society maintains a social hall and reading room in Honolulu, giving frequent concerts and entertainments, including a weekly business and social meeting Friday evenings. It supplies many members isolated in employment on the other islands with the periodicals from its reading room after they have been perused by the town members. The officers for the year 1896 are: A. C. Steele, chief; William White, chieftain; Thomas Black, secretary; Evan Rennie, treasurer; A. Stoddart, sergeant at arms; honorary chieftains, T. S. Kay, A. S. Cleghorn, H. E. McIntyre.

A considerable part of the above information was taken from Thrum's Annual, a book containing very complete and valuable statistical and other information in regard to the Hawaiian Islands. Before publication the matter was carefully revised and corrected to date by Mr. Thrum, himself, who kindly allowed its use in this book.

Wheels?

Well rather. Just watch the wheelmen, and the wheelwomen go by, some afternoon and see how many "RAMBLERS" you see, and keep your eyes open, and you will see plenty of the Wheels you all know as the

— "Yellow Fellow."

First Grade Wheels, that's what these are and fully guaranteed,

Just the wheels that will give you the best satisfaction, because they will ride the easiest, wear the longest, and, being things of beauty, will be "a joy forever."

We keep a full line of Extras, so if you have an accident, we can furnish you with just what you need to replace any broken part.

If you ride without a Light at night, you do so at the risk of paying more the next day for so doing than, one of our fine

BEST MEALS IN THE CITY
LARGE, BREEZY, COMFORTABLE ROOMS
COTTAGES FOR FAMILIES, if preferred

Beautiful and Extensive Grounds, Including Tennis Court, Located in the Heart of the City

THE increasing popularity of the ARLINGTON necessitated the securing of the "Arlington Cottage" and "Arlington Annex," one located in the Hotel Grounds, and the other immediately adjoining. This gives the ARLINGTON a large number of very desirable rooms.

To the Kilauea Volcano.

To the Hawaiian Islands unquestionably belongs the fame of revealing to human vision and human understanding the most wonderful natural phenomenon in existence—a lake of real burning, boiling, seething, hissing, molten lava. This sublime and awful spectacle has no parallel among earthly scenes, and few depart from the islands without having witnessed it.

The route of the Inter-Island Steamship Company from Honolulu to the volcano presents an opportunity to view the splendid scenery of the coast of Hawaii in the daytime, together with time to visit the historic residence and place of death of the great Kamehameha, and the monument of Captain Cook.

Leaving Honolulu by the fine steamship "W. G. Hall," the tourist will find every comfort and convenience on board. The steamer invariably leaves Honolulu on Tuesdays and Fridays alternately, at 10 a. m., giving the passengers fine views of rugged island scenery while running along the coasts of Molokai and Lanai. About 5 in the evening the anchor is dropped in the Bay of Lahaina, on the Island of Maui, the former seat of government and the old port where hundreds of whaling ships used to congregate. Here a stay of an hour or so is made, and every facility is offered passengers to go ashore, the ship's surf boats being at their service at this and every other landing on the route.

At six o'clock in the morning the Island of Hawaii is sighted, from which point there is nothing but smooth water to the end of the trip. For five or six hours the vessel skirts the Kona coast, with its magnificent scenery and mountain peaks within plain view. About seven o'clock Kailua is reached, and a stay of three or four hours gives the tourist abundance of time to view the royal residences. On this spot is an elegant hotel, where the traveler may obtain an excellent breakfast or lunch.

Half an hour's more steaming brings the vessel to Keauhou, where a stay of only a few minutes is made.

Everywhere along the Kona coast the Hawaiian is seen in his native simplicity. His grass huts abound along the shores, and he comes out to meet the steamer in his frail canoes, laden with fruit, fish, and the products of his handiwork, in the shape of mats fans, etc. Hundreds of these canoes are seen on this coast, where one will be found in Honolulu, and the ease, skill and speed with which they propel these frail crafts over the heavy surf is marvelous.

At the next landing place, Kealakekua Bay, everyone will want to get off and take a look at the monument erected to the great navigator, Captain Cook, who discovered the Islands, and was killed on the exact spot where the monument now stands, two hundred feet from the landing.

On the way to the next stopping place, Hookena, the great stone temples of King Keawe are passed in plain view from the steamer's deck. Hookena is a growing village, and near it is the coffee plantation owned by J. F. Morgan and F. B. Mc-Stockler, two of Honolulu's prominent citizens.

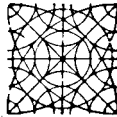

At Punaluu is situated a comfortable country hotel, in which the tourist is housed for the night. In the morning passengers take the railroad through cane fields to Pahala, a distance of seven miles, and from thence to the Volcano House the trip is made through picturesque and romantic scenery by comfortable coaches. At the Halfway House a stop is made for lunch.

So far, the trip from Honolulu has been a constant succession of delightful changes, but the tourist has yet to witness the grandest sight of all, the great volcano itself. The Volcano House is a handsome two story hotel, with every late improvement for convenience and comfort. The natural sulphur baths connected with the hotel are unequalled in the world for their curative properties. Careful and experienced guides conduct the tourist to the crater, either on horseback or on foot as he may prefer, and telephonic communication can be had with Hilo and all parts of the island.

The Inter-Island Steamship Company is now building a splendid new steamer of about 750 tons expressly for this route, in order to accommodate its constantly increasing business. Steerage passengers will be entirely separated from the others, and will be located on the main quarter deck. The new vessel will be provided with a powerful search light for use at night. It will be put on the route about the end of the year, and will be far the handsomest of the island steamers.

S. S. "W. G. HALL"—Inter-Island Route.

To the Traveling Public.

THE popular, most comfortable and picturesque route to the "CRATER OF KILAUEA" is by the Inter-Island Steam Navigation Co.'s Steamer "W. G. Hall," which leaves Honolulu on Tuesday and Friday of each alternate week.

The superior advantages of this route over all others is that most of the trip is made in smooth water, and the whole distance, from the landing at Punaluu to the Volcano House, is made by rail and carriage. Through Tickets to the Volcano and return are furnished for Fifty Dollars ($50.00), which includes all expenses during the trip, and allows three nights and two days at the Crater.

HALE-MAU-MAU THE HOUSE OF FIRE VOLCANO OF KILAUEA, HAWAII.

The Volcano of Kilauea.

THE VOLCANO of Kilauea, the greatest active volcano in the world, is situated at an elevation of 4,000 feet on the southern slopes of Mauna Loa, on the island of Hawaii, about two hundred miles from Honolulu, the capital city. It is fourteen miles in a direct line from the sea, and thirty miles from Hilo on the north and Punaluu on the south, the two ports at which tourists land to visit the crater. Kilauea is not in the form of the standard geography volcano, a cone vomiting fire, smoke and lava, but is a great sink, three miles in diameter, in a plain, with nearly perpendicular walls, varying from three hundred to six hundred feet in height, which in places are broken by debris slopes. The bottom of the sink, or "floor of the crater," is a mass of gnarled, twisted, black lava, comparatively level, and gradually rising to a central point of main action. This main action is usually in lakes of molten lava, varying from one hundred feet to half a mile in diameter. In these lakes the lava is continually boiling in a furious manner, throwing up jets and fountains of lava to a height of seventy-four feet, dashing against the banks in fiery waves and throwing up clouds of molten spray, making one of the grandest, most awe-inspiring sights on earth. Although these lakes are visited by thousands of visitors no accident has ever occurred.

There are two ways of getting to the volcano. One is by the Wilder Steamship Company's steamer Kinau, which leaves Honolulu every ten days, and, touching at Maui, runs around the northern coast of Hawaii to Hilo. Good hotel accommodations can be had at Hilo. There is a good carriage road through sugar-cane fields, magnificent tropical jungles and fern-tree forests for a distance of thirty miles through to the Volcano House. This beautiful carriage drive has been completed at government expense.

The other route is by the Inter-Island Steam Navigation Company's steamer W. G. Hall, which leaves Honolulu every ten days, coasting along Maui and the southern coast of Hawaii to Punaluu. There is a fair hotel at Punaluu, owned by the Volcano House Company.

The Hawaiian Islands are only six days from San Francisco and eleven days from New York. The fine steamers of the Oceanic Steamship Company of San Francisco sail twice a month to and from Honolulu. The steamship Australia of this line sails to and from Honolulu only, making the round trip in twenty-four and twenty-five days; the downward voyage being but six days. The through Australian line, comprising three steamers, the Alameda, Mariposa and Monowai, touches Honolulu both outward and homeward, and through passengers to the Colonies frequently avail themselves of the privilege of stop-over at the Islands.

Under a late arrangement with the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, whose steamers touch in at Honolulu about every five weeks, through tickets to Yokohama and Hongkong or vice versa are made available via Honolulu, and passengers may proceed to Honolulu on the Oceanic Steamship Company's steamers. This exceedingly favorable arrangement with the Japan and China lines draws a large proportion of the through travel via the Islands.

The single fare to Honolulu is $75, or $125 for the round trip; round trip to the Volcano from San Francisco and return, via Honolulu, including hotel accommodations and other necessary expenses, for a period of five weeks, $225. For five cents in postage stamps a copy of Picturesque Hawaii will be mailed to any address, as also time-tables and other information pertaining to the "Island Paradise," by writing to J. D. Spreckels & Bros. Co., 114 Montgomery Street, San Francisco.

A LIVING VOLCANO.

How to Reach it and the Coffee Lands of Hawaii.

THE SCENIC LINE OF THE WORLD.

RAINBOW FALLS.

STEAMER "KINAU"

The largest and fastest steamer in the Hawaiian Islands, 25 large staterooms, electric lights and call bells.

A TRIP OF SEVEN DAYS, coasting the Island of MOLOKIA, making three stops on the Island of MAUI, giving a magnificent view of the crater of HALEAKALA, four stops on the Island of HAWAII, skirting the richest sugar and COFFEE lands in the world. A carriage ride of thirty miles over a fine macadamized road; traversing a primeval tropical forest, interspersed by SUGAR and COFFEE plantations. Eight hours from HILO to the VOLCANO. No change of vehicle. TWO DAYS AND THREE NIGHTS AT THE VOLCANO.

To those seeking INVESTMENTS IN COFFEE, this line offers unequalled facilities for selecting lands. Stops are made on the Island of HAWAII, at ports in the Districts of Hamakua, Hilo and Puna. Coffee from these districts commands a higher price than that produced on the older lands; the yield per acre is also greater. Large tracts in all these districts are now producing coffee. The HAWAIIAN GOVERNMENT OFFERS LANDS AT A NOMINAL SUM ON EASY TERMS OF PAYMENT, and REMITS TAXES on improvements. An ASSURED FORTUNE to industrious men of moderate means. A crop that does not spoil or deteriorate, but improves with age. A sure return of twenty per cent on CAPITAL.

HAWAIIAN FERTILIZING COMPANY

ISLAND OF HAWAII.

Hawaii, the largest island in the Hawaiian archipelago lies at the southern extremity of the group. Its central portion is in latitude 19 degrees 30 minutes, longitude 155 degrees 30 minutes; the island is triangular in shape, having three well-defined sides. It is 100 miles long by 75 miles wide, having an area of 4200 square miles, and embraces two-thirds of the area of the Republic. The name of the group is taken from this island, the term "Sandwich Islands" being obsolete.

Hawaii, as are all the islands of the group, is of volcanic origin. There are, or, rather, have been, three great centres of volcanic activity: Mount Hualalai and Mauna Kea, now extinct, and Mauna Loa, having two active craters, one at the summit, 14,000 feet high, and the other, Kilauea, on the southern slope, at an elevation of 4000 feet. Kilauea is the youngest of the Hawaiian craters, and probably did little towards forming the island. The other volcanoes, acting together or separately, built up the island with successive layers of lava; each crater formed one side of the island. The region between the craters is a table-land. From the summit of the volcanoes the surface slopes gently to the sea, and the great height of the mountains is not perceived.

Some portions of the surface of the island consist of ancient lava fields, the lava glistening bleak and bare as when first vomited from the bowels of the earth; other sections are covered with the primeval forests; mammoth trees, giant ferns, creeping plants, and a wilderness of tropic vegetation are laced and interlaced together until a solid jungle exists.

The fertile portions are along the southern and eastern coasts, where copious rains usually fall and the trade breezes render the climate cool and bracing. The sugar estates are large and numerous. Coffee is receiving attention and grows readily in all portions of the kingdom, requiring no cultivation. As a superior article can be raised, this staple will undoubtedly soon become a leading product.

The western coast of the island is dry, hot and nearly rainless, and the traveler is sometimes troubled to find water; but at a small elevation the climate becomes cooler, and the absence of dampness, and the clear, bracing, sea-scented air, render a visit to this coast very enjoyable.

The population is scattered among the plantations and villages along the coast; the settlements form a fringe about the edge of the island, and, as a rule no habitations are found after penetrating a few miles inland.

A road encircles the island, but only in certain districts can wheeled vehicles be used. The island is nearly belted with a system of telephone lines, all the principal places being connected. Parties contemplating a journey around the island should provide themselves with strong clothes and water-proof garments.

As the shores of Hawaii are bathed in tropic waters, glowing with phosphorescence and peopled with flying fish and gaudily colored denizens of the deep, while the distant peaks are capped with everlasting snow, it follows that all kinds and conditions of climate can be found on the island. The upper table-lands have the climate of the temperate zone, and all the products of temperate climates there grow with wonderful vigor; in the lower belts the tropic fruits flourish luxuriantly. In the upper forests roam large numbers of domestic animals in a wild or semi-wild state—horses, cattle, hogs, sheep, goats, etc. Turkeys, geese, ducks, plover, quail, doves, are also found in large numbers.

The following description of Kilauea was written for this work by C. M. White Esq., of Honolulu.

KILAUEA.

The Volcano of Kilauea is of the Strombolian type. Nothing of the volcanic kind since the memory of man can approach it in grandeur and sublimity. It is the acme of sight seeing and the climax of phenomena. No sense so sated with views and no soul so blase as not to thrill with awe at this incomparable sight.

Tourists from Honolulu may reach it by two routes. One via Kau where the road passes over a stretch of barren lava for the most part, and the other by the way of Hilo. Leaving Hilo the route is nearly an air line of easy and gradual ascent for thirty miles, mostly through a forest of tropical exuberance. The altitude of the Volcano House is about 4000 feet. The whole distance is now accomplished by comfortable stages and hardships to win a sight of the volcano are a thing of the past. And who can adequately picture the delights of this drive? Atmosphere of elastic vitality, luxuriance of vegetation, coloring of the most delicious character, lights and shadows most artistically blended, and odors most enchanting, appeal to and exalt every sense.

The beauty of the scene, the tireless interest, excited by the passing panorama, awaken the purest sensations and touch the most exquisite sensibilities. Were there no volcano at the end of this magnificent drive the passage would yet remain as an enchanting memory.

The Volcano House is situated about a stone's throw from the brow of the crater. The crater itself is a vast sink on the slope of Maunakea, about nine miles in circumference, and having a varying depth of 500 to 900 feet. The descent to its floor is by a steep, winding road. A trail leads across the bottom to the crater to where the palpitating throbs of earth's heart are exposed to view. Briefly this lake is a seething furnace about 1000 feet in diameter. Its characteristics are constantly changing so no set description will fit it.

But such a cold account of the volcano bears about the same comparison to the reality as does the mere charcoal outlining to the masterpiece of painting. The furnace is a sea of glory whose waves beat with demoniacal fury against rock-bound shores. To an accompaniment of roaring, rumbling and hissing weird figures dance and reel in ghostly measure. Brilliant jets and fiery fountains sport in unrestrained abandon. Grayish films forming over the surface foretell slumber and dreams when lo! all is again seething activity, the films, like lids, open over flashing eyes and a carnival of riot ensues. The appalling spectacle is never monotonous but is always a succession of startling effects. Hues brilliant, lurid, grand, subdued, weird, enchanting, fantastic, appalling, play successively above the burning cauldron. Intense activity and dying throes alternate. All the emotions of the soul seem written and struggling on the fiery face before us. Hatred, despair, glee, fury, pathos, humor, horror, serenity, frenzy and repose chase each other, and the spectator for the time being escapes from his every day sensations and hypnotized by a power which he cannot resist, revels not in his own fancies but in distorted phantasies and emotions of the thing before him. Hence it is that never afterwards can he recall and describe these awful sensations so utterly foreign to his rural nature. The rational mind cannot recall its fantastic masquerade.

Attempted descriptions of the volcano possess no value except as they operate to secure additional visitors. As well be content with the heaven which the preacher describes instead of the realty which he cannot describe. Go gaze on this prolonged death throe of earth's internal organism and then realize how powerless are words to describe either the scene which you contemplate or the feelings engendered by th contemplation.

THE ISLAND OF HAWAII.

THE VOLCANO ABOVE THE CLOUDS.

On the summit of Mauna Loa, 14,000 feet above sea level, is another lake of molten fire, which at times overflows its walls, and devastating streams of lava, 20, 30 and 40 miles in length, sweep resistlessly to the sea. One of the last flows was in 1881, when a line of lava crept downward towards Hilo, fortunately stopping a short distance from the village. The last flow was in 1886, running from the top of the mountain through the district of Kau to the sea in three days. A visit to this crater involves a hard, wearying journey, and the ascent is seldom made. Of course, an almost frigid coldness is experienced at the summit, the elevation being nearly three miles. The cost of a trip from the Volcano House to this cloudland crater is about $35, the distance from Kilauea being 25 miles.

PLACES OF INTEREST.

Below is a list of the more notable or attractive points on Hawaii, which are arranged by districts. For a detailed description of these places, the reader is referred to the "Tourists' Guide through Hawaii," published by the Hawaiian Gazette Co., Honolulu. A visit to any of the places named will well repay one for the undertaking. Especially grand and striking scenery can be seen from the steamer when passing the Hilo and Hamakua coasts, but, as a rule, this part of the coast is traversed after nightfall.

MAUI.

Maui, the second in size in the group, is not less important in many of its features than Hawaii, from which it is separated by a channel 26 miles wide. It has an area of 760 square miles, or 486,400 acres, and a population at the last official enumeration of 17,357 souls. Haleakala, its principal mountain with the largest extinct crater in the world, having an area of 16 1-3 square miles, gives Maui an elevation of 10,032 feet, while the West Maui range of mountains reaches a height of but about 5,820 feet. The formation of this island is unlike Hawaii in that a low sandy plain of an area of some 50 square miles divides the western range of mountains from East Maui. On the northwestern slopes of Haleakala the ascent is gradual and easily accomplished on horseback, while on the eastern and southern sides it is difficult to travel, being cut up with precipitous ravines and gulches, dense with forest growth. The scenery through the eastern part of the island possesses very much the same general characteristics that mark the peculiar tropical grandeur of windward Hawaii

Maui is divided into four taxation or election districts, viz., Lahaina, Wailuku, Makawao and Hana. Lahaina, near the north west point of the island, once the capital of the kingdom and the favorite rendezvous for whalers and traders, now devotes her energies entirely to sugar making, while Wailuku, on the east of the western range of mountains, until recently was aspiring to the title of the second city of the Republic. Kahului, only three miles distant from it, of late years has been a port of entry. A railroad connects the two, continuing on with branches to Spreckelsville and Paia. Kahului rejoices in a small harbor, and since the development of the sugar interests has had a number of vessels plying regularly with San Francisco and the Sound, and occasional vessels from the colonies with coal. Hana, at the eastern point of the island, also has a small and safe harbor against all winds but "northers." It is in regular weekly steam communication with Honolulu. Other shipping points on Maui are but landings at open roadsteads.

The principal products of Maui are sugar, corn, potatoes, taro, awa and coffee. The mills and cane fields are as fine as any throughout the islands, and compare favorably with any in the world.

Maui plants about 8000 acres of corn and potatoes, the product being about 10,000 tons of each. Of the corn about one-half is converted by the Haleakala Corn Mill into excellent meals for family use and a variety of feed for stock. These products are exported to the other islands and are fast filling the place of foreign imports.

Stock raising is also a prominent industry on this island, beef cattle being exported in large numbers.

In addition to the regular government schools, Maui has numerous private schools and seminaries notably Maunaolu Seminary at Makawao, founded by Rev. C. B. Andrews in 1860. The building was destroyed by fire in 1869 and the following year, mainly through the efforts of Mr. Edward Bailey (affectionately known as "Father Bailey,") a new and commodious edifice was erected and since that time the school has done excellent work. In 1896 78 pupils are enrolled.

The main scenic points of interest on Maui are the famous Iao valley and the great crater Haleakala.

IAO VALLEY.

To one who has visited this gem of mountain scenery the name recalls at once an impression of grandeur and of gloom. Pelion piled upon Ossa would scarcely reach the shoulder of these towering peaks, and the Cretan labyrinth could not surpass in gloom the savage cloud capped gorges and echoing caves that pierce the mountain sides. And all this within an easy after-dinner walk from the flourishing town of Wailuku, situated immediately at the entrance to the valley. For half a mile a fertile soil produces taro and other vegetables, and the whitewashed cottages of the natives, nestling under tropical tree and vine by the river side make a landscape extremely picturesque and charming. But soon the towering walls close in, the stream is now a torrent, tumbling over boulders, whirling in rock-bound pools. There is still a little space on either side of the brawling river which is filled with tropical vegetation. Bananas here grow wild and guavas and the ohia ripen a prodigal harvest. In an open glade a clump of kukuis spread their long and crooked branches to catch the few sun beams that escape the cloud capped peaks above. This grove reminds one of a Dore wood, where all the trees take shapes of human agony. Gnarled trunks bear marks of ghastly wounds, and twisted limbs stretch out their hands as if in supplication. Here also is the Lantana, beautiful of bloom, but with briars that sting and tear. Imported for use as a hedge it is becoming a terror to the planter by spreading over valuable land and sending its roots so deep into the ground that it is next to impossible to exterminate it. Tropical ferns and orchids abound and grow in great luxuriance.

Farther on, upon the right and about two miles from the entrance is the "Needle," a slender ivy crowned column that rears its crest above the clouds and points like a gigantic finger to the sky. Overhanging cliffs are veiled by waterfalls that are scarcely more than mists before they reach the depths below.

The whole valley seems to be a cleft cut in the mountain by some great volcanic convulsion ages ago. Clouds hover constantly among the peaks on either side and vegetation covers their sides and crowns their summits. The Iao valley is a wonderful and awe inspiring result of the mysterious forces of nature.

HALEAKALA.

"Imagine, if you can, yourself standing on the edge of this vast pit, 'the largest crater in the world,' and looking down more than two thousand feet into the abyss below, its sides almost perpendicular and twenty-eight miles in circumference. From its uneven floor rise fourteen distinct cones or chimneys, some of them nearly 700 feet in height, but from where we stood they appeared less than 50 feet high, giving it the appearance of the ruins of some great city left in ashes. On the east and north are two enormous gaps, presumably the outlets for the lava of the last great flow. What must have been the scene when this mighty mountain was thus rent and a great sea of molten lava, ten miles in diameter, rushing, seething, roaring, dashing against its prison walls, ever rising higher and still higher as the pent up forces of the internal world crowded the yielding mass of liquid fire out from its depths! Then there came a time when the rock-bound rim of this vast crater could no longer withstand the mighty pressure of millions of tons of molten fire rolling and surging against its walls, and then, with a roar like that of all the thunders of heaven's artillery at once exploded, the mountain bursts, and a mighty sea of fire rushes, with lightning like velocity, down the mountain slope to the sea. Probably nothing more grand or impressive has ever happened on this planet, or anything executed on so grand a scale.

"When we arrived, the great pit was free from clouds, so that we could discern nearly everything in its great area, but in a few hours great masses of clouds came rolling in through the gaps we have mentioned, until the whole vast crater was filled with a fleecy billow. It was an impressive sight looking down upon this sea of clouds that enveloped the whole earth and her waters, save our own pedestal and the snow capped peaks of Mauna Kea and Mauna Loa across the channel on Hawaii. We were impressed with the absolute silence of the place, and, remarking upon it, we all hushed our voices and made no sound—and there was perfect stillness, and for the first time it occurred to me that I had never before been in a place where there was absolutely nothing to make the slightest noise. I think this perfect quiet would become oppressive after a while if one was there alone."

The above is quoted from Henry M. Whitney's "Tourists' Guide," a very valuable and indeed indispensable book to tourists.

Many tourists understand that there are no hotel accommodations in Maui, and this has prevented them from seeing the great crater of Haleakala and Iao Valley. There is an excellent hotel at Wailuku, and several livery stables, where any kind of conveyance can be had and there is no more enchanting place on the islands than Mrs. Bailey's Kawaapoe Resort at Makawao on the flank of Haleakala.

KAWAAPAE RESORT

MAKAWAO, MAUI.

HALEKALA! The largest extinct crater in the world. Elevation 10,000 feet above the sea level.

People contemplating a Round Trip to the Volcano on Hawaii, also a Trip to the Summit of Haleakala (House of the Sun), would find it much more pleasant and convenient to visit the latter place first (also less expensive).

By taking the fine Steamer "Claudine" direct to Kahului, and from there to Paia Station by rail, teams or horses will meet them, conveying them to Kawaapae Resort. From there they go to the "Summit of Haleakala," spending a night or two, then back to the "Resort," then to Paia Station when the responsibility of the Proprietor of the "Resort" ceases. From there to Wailuku and Maalaea Bay, taking the "Kinau" for Hawaii. It is a far better plan to follow than to go to Hawaii first, as those who have tried it will testify.

TOURISTS' RATES:

Persons wishing to visit the "Summit of Haleakala" can be accommodated at "Kawaapae Resort" at very reasonable terms. From Paia Station to the Summit and return, including a guide, provision, horses, and lodgings on the Summit, including 4 days board, terms $33.00 each. Board per week $10, per day $2.50.

Upon arrival at Kahului, ring up Telephone No. 60 for conveyance from Paia.

Schmidt & Pitzer Co

W Schmidt

A black and white advertisement for Schmidt Label & Lithographic Co. The central focus is a large, dark splash of ink that radiates outwards, creating a starburst effect. The splash is composed of numerous fine lines and dots of varying sizes, giving it a dynamic, energetic appearance. In the center of this splash, the company's name and address are printed in a stylized, bold font. The text is arranged in four lines: the first line reads 'SCHMIDT', the second line reads 'LABEL & LITHOGRAPHIC', the third line reads '17 TO 31 MAIN ST', and the fourth line reads 'SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.'. The overall composition is centered and balanced, with the splash drawing the viewer's eye directly to the text.

KAUAI AND NIIHAU.

KAUAI.

The Garden Island of the group, is divided from Oahu by the Kaieiwaho Channel, some sixty-one miles wide; it is the most northerly of the Hawaiian Islands proper; has an area of 590 square miles, or 377,600 acres; is almost circular in form, with a well-wooded mountain range of nearly 5000 feet elevation. This island is noted for its numerous streams, charming valleys, broad plains, picturesque cliffs, its waterfalls and splendid carriage roads.

Its central mountain peaks are probably older than any others of this group, and have been worn down by the elements of past ages until their outlines are all softly moulded and clothed with abundant vegetation and grand old forests. It is largely under cultivation of sugar and rice, and has many large grazing tracts devoted to stock raising and wool growing. The principal towns and landings of Kauai are Koloa, Lihue, Nawiliwili, Kealia, Hanalei and Waimea. Inter-island steamers ply regularly between Kauai and Honolulu.

HANALEI VALLEY ON KAUAI.

Some of our more gushing visitors worship this valley as they would the real Paradise. Everyone who sees it is delighted. I certainly was impressed with its grandeur and beauty. It has every element to rave about, the magnificent palis, or mountain walls, towering to the very sky, whose slopes are one mass of feathery ferns, mosses, creeping vines, and many-hued tropical flowers, reaching from base to summit; the waterfalls dart from their mossy dells and dark mountain shades into the bright and sparkling sunshine, and are battered into fleecy spray by the resistant air, ere one is aware of their existence. The upper ridges are densely timbered. Many of the forest trees are very large. From the foot of the pali flows the placid Hanalei, through the golden rice fields stretching away on either side to the mountains and to the sea. This stream is navigable for three or four miles from its mouth. The valley where it opens on the Pacific is nearly three miles wide, but narrows gradually, so that five miles from the ocean a narrow gorge and magnificent waterfall alone remain. The Hanalei as seen from Haena Point, or the caves as we approach the valley from the ocean, is the most beautiful landscape in the whole island. It is easy of access from Hanalei landing or by carriage from any point on Kauai.

Other interesting natural features of Kauai are the Spouting Horn near Koloa, the barking sands of Mana, Lumahai valley, the caves of Waiakanaloa and Waiakapalae, the mirage near Waimea and Mt Waaleale, the central peak of the island.

ISLANDS OF MOLOKAI, LANAI, AND KAHOOLAWE.

MOLOKAI.

The fifth in size of the Hawaiian group, lies between Maui and Oahu, separated from the latter by a channel twenty-five miles in width. The eastern end consists of a central mountain which rises 3,500 feet above the sea, while the western half is a plain, the highest part of which is a thousand feet above the sea. The eastern and northern coasts are precipitous and rocky, with no good harbors, while on the southern coast are several small lagoons, which serve to shelter small craft in stormy weather. The plain on the western end as well as the mountain slopes furnish good pasturage for a limited number of cattle and horses, but there is very little land which can be called arable or suited for cultivation on a large scale. There is one small sugar plantation on the lee or southern side, and along the same coast are numerous walled enclosures used as fish ponds. This island is noted chiefly as the site of the leper settlement, which is located on the northern side, about midway between the eastern and western points, lying on a grassy plain, fronting on the sea, and backed by precipices from one thousand to fifteen hundred feet high. The location is one of the most charming and healthy spots on the island, with perennial verdure on every side, and fanned by the cool trade winds from the north. The houses, as they appear from the deck of the steamer, form a pretty village, all painted white, and kept in good condition. Besides the numerous small cottages which dot the plain for two miles or more, are several larger buildings, including two churches, the hospitals, and dwellings erected for the physician, superintendent, clergy and nurses, who reside here. There are about seven hundred lepers and three hundred relatives and assistants of the sick, making in all a colony of about one thousand. The lepers are not not allowed to leave the place, but the overseers, physicians and nurses have or can obtain permission to go and come as often as is desired. Visitors are not permitted to go to the settlement, except with permission of the Board of Health, which is only granted in exceptional cases.

LANAI.

The sixth island of the group is distant from Honolulu fifty miles and is reached by weekly steamers. In size it is twenty-one miles long, eight miles broad, and has a territory of a little more than 100,000 acres. The summit of its main ridge rises to about 2400 feet, and this mountain range forms a wall continuous with a circle of lower elevations, so as to completely enclose an interior space like a crater, which it no doubt is, that has an area of about 20,000 acres; and this large, round, landlocked valley of Palawai, elevated 1500 feet above the sea, is level and grassy, like the richest of cultivated meadows. The ridges and ravines of the island are covered with forests of timber and shrubbery, which afford a rich field for the botanist. The outer slopes of the island leading to the sea present usually a brown and uninviting appearance; but they afford excellent pasture for numberless herds of animals,—about 30,000 sheep, 2500 goats, 650 horses, 500 head of cattle, and innumerable hogs and turkeys. Lanai is well watered with springs and ravines, and with sweet fountains at several points on its beach; and has one perpetual stream of water in a great ravine or barranca of great natural beauty, named Maunalei or the Mountain Wreath. The native population is now about two hundred, who are fishers, shepherds and patch cultivators.

KAHOOLAWE.

This small, low island, to the southwest of Maui, is barren, save a few low shrubs, and uninhabited save by occasional sheep herders, to which industry the island has for some years been devoted.
