SERIOUS FIRE AT ONOMEA SUGAR CO'S MILL

The most destructive fire in the history of this island occurred Saturday night, February 3, in the burning of the big mill of the Onomea Sugar Company at Papaikou.

Disastrous as the fire was, part of the mill was saved from the flames, and in the part of the building burned, most of the machinery appears not injured beyond utility, and the management hopes to be able to have the mill in operation in time to save the crop which they had but recently begun milling.

The cause of the fire is unknown. It originated somewhere in the trash room near the entrance to the mill, possibly in the fine dust from the megass, so dry that when ignited it burned like powder, and spread with the suddenness almost of an explosion.

It was several hours before shutting down time and the mill was running as usual, Mr. Cant, the head engineer, at his post, and all employees busy in their positions. To fight the fire was impossible; it was enough to escape from it. Fortunately the wind was blowing up the gulch, and by the efforts of the army of Japs, who worked like heroes, the rolling and crushing part of the mill, with the machine shop and dynamos, was saved intact.

The damage cannot be fully estimated until the wreck is cleared away. The molasses tanks, also the juice scales, settling tanks, all the filter presses, the molasses feed plant and lavatory were all destroyed with the building.

Most of the machinery appears to be but little damaged. The boilers and brick work look uninjured; the megasse furnaces, or feeders, are out of place but can be replaced, and, apparently, little will need to be done in the boiler room; the mills, engine and shredder are all right. While the boiling house is a mass of ruins, it looks as though the vacuum pans were none the worse; the 17-ton vacuum pan stands on its iron frame, also the 8-ton pan, and they appear not damaged; a smaller one supported on a wooden frame went down, but its loss is not important. The two triple-effects, also the crystallizers and the pumps appear to be all right. The centrifugals will be in the worst shape, being of delicate mechanism and exposed to the intense heat of the stored sugar, which burned fiercely. The centrifugals, however, may be most easily replaced as extra ones are usually kept on hand by all mills. The electric light plant is probably ruined.

It is not expected that a long time will be required to clear away the debris, put up a new building and get machinery started again; and it is hoped that within two months the mill can resume, and that once more sugar will come rolling out at the rate of from 60 to 100 tons a day, as formerly.

The cut cane will be a total loss unless taken to some of the other mills, but on account of the cost of transportation, it is doubtful if this will be found profitable.

About 15,000 bags of sugar were destroyed and 250 tons in process of manufacture, lost. Seven thousand bags, the balance of the season's output to date, was stored across the gulch at the wharf.

The fire made a brilliant illumination that was watched by thousands from points along the coast from Hakalau to Oiaa. The following day crowds visited the scene.

John T. Moir, the manager, was at Hamakua on business at the time and arrived early the following morning.

The fire was of a character that could not have been prevented, and no blame attaches to anyone.

The sacked sugar was fully covered by insurance. The total loss is estimated at between $90,000 and $100,000, not fully covered by insurance.

Arrivals by Enterprise.

Mr. Smith announces that the Trustees of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce have unanimously adopted a resolution calling upon the California Congressmen to support Hawaii's measure.

More Molokans May Come.

"There are 130 families of Molokans coming here to settle the Kapaa lands," said Land Commissioner Pratt, according to the Honolulu Bulletin of Friday, January 31. "But this by no means cleans out the number available. As a matter of fact we can get all the Molokans we want, and we will probably have some more pretty soon.

"The Hakalau directors have voted to pay the expenses of a couple of Molokans, so that they can come here to investigate the lands at Hakalau. That shows how the Hakalau plantation stands in the matter. I expect the Molokan representatives to come by the next steamer.

"The price which was fixed by the Board of appraisers for the Kapaa tract was $29,587, which is at the rate of $5.69 an acre.

"There are 5200 acres altogether. Of this 2000 acres are cane land, 240 acres rice land and the rest pasture land."

Mr. Thurston stated that: "The first consignment of those who are coming for Kapaa will leave in about two weeks. There are about 550 coming altogether, but there may not be more than three or four hundred in the first installment.

The Hilo Tribune.

TUESDAY, FEB. 6, 1906.

Entered at the Postoffice at Hilo, Hawaii, as second-class matter PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY. J. WHEELLOCK MARSH - Editor D. W. MARSH - Business Manager.

THE Board of Trade calls the attention of the authorities to several matters. Among these is that of reducing the number of street lights and policemen. The real economy of such reductions, or the necessity of applying economy at this point at all, is doubtful. The matter of straightening streets and of having fences placed on lines, is important and an application of that principal would make a material improvement in the appearance of some parts of the city. Sign boards and mile posts, also, are inexpensive and desirable, and are among the minor details that go to make up general appearances.

CONCERN is felt in the financial world on account of the state of affairs in Russia and the distrust existing regarding Russian securities. The European markets are flooded with them. The investing public wishes to sell; nobody wishes to buy, and the only purchaser is the Russian government. The reserve of this government and its resources are limited, and, apparently, must soon be exhausted. Should the credit of the autocracy collapse, it would be a disaster far-reaching in its effects. A panic of world-wide extent is a possibility as one of the consequences of revolution in Russia.

THE territorial conveyance and its motive power are replevined by Norman K. Lyman, who as road supervisor, "claims rightful possession of and to the same" and asks restitution as being "personal property." The property belongs to the territory and its use has been allowed to the county road supervisor for official purposes, presumably. No right of possession, not revocable at any time was conferred. The government needs the rig here, and ought to leave it; but that is another story.

Story of Hilo Bay.

A Hawaiian boy of Hilo is the hero of a stirring story which Adeline Knapp, the well-known California writer, contributes to The Youth's Companion of January 18. The scene of the story is Hilo harbor on a morning when a fictitious steamer loaded with gasoline and oil caught fire and ran amuck among the anchored shipping. The story might well have been possible and is true in its setting. It will be interesting reading to residents of the islands, particularly of Hilo.

Bro. Carbonnier Dead.

The funeral of the late Brother Aquille, who was the oldest lay brother attached to the Catholic Mission in Hawaii, took place at four o'clock last Thursday from the Catholic cathedral in Honolulu.

The deceased had been in Hawaii for sixty years. He was born in France, and to the day of his death had not learned to speak English to any extent, but he was fluent in the Hawaiian tongue and was regarded at the Mission as something of an authority on island history.

A TIDAL WAVE.

Unusual Performance of Ocean Along Shore.

A tidal wave of small proportions, but the real thing, came on the coast and into Hilo bay about 6 p. m. Wednesday evening. The waters first receded to a point considerably below low tide and then slowly returned and rose to a height of about 30 inches above high tide mark. The water rose fully up to the floor of the old wharf at the foot of Waianuene Street and over the railroad track at its lowest places. The sea was unsettled and several successive waves followed of about the same height. About fifteen minutes was consumed by the wave in receding from its highest to its lowest point and about as much in rising again to high point. The unusual phenomenon was watched by a good many. At the Waiakeia river and other lower points, inhabited by the Japanese, there was something like a panic. There was very much of a mix up in the river of Japanese fishing boats, steam and naphtha launches and tugs, sugar barges and aquatic vegetation loosened from the upper shores of the river. A few fishing boats were smashed and 50 or 60 feet of Lucas' boat house wharf was damaged and required rebuilding.

The inhabitants, many of them, left for higher and drier ground, some going up the railroad track and camping out for the night, others to the enclosures at the Foreign and Hail churches, bringing what baggage they could carry with them. Some of the white inhabitants, also, down toward Reed's bay concluded to visit their friends on higher ground. Slight damage was done to the Kinua bridge and to the jetty between this and the railroad bridge. The total height of the wave between highest and lowest point was about 7 feet. The big tidal wave of '77 was 6 feet higher, and that of four or five years ago about the same as this. These were both due to earthquakes, the latter tidal wave to an earthquake in Japan, and was higher on the Kona side of the island. The older residents believe such was the cause of the present one, though these waves are often caused by storms at sea.

Extension to Government Wharf.

The Territory advertises for bids for making repairs to the Government wharf and for the construction of an addition. The addition is to be built at an angle with the present wharf and about parallel with the Railroad wharf, the front line of the addition to be flush with the corner of the old wharf, and to be 180 feet long and 52 1/2 feet wide. The rebuilding and enlargement is done to fit it for the use of the Inter-Island Navigation Co., and on completion this company will occupy it exclusively.

The contract for construction will require the contractor to furnish all tools, labor, etc., the material to be furnished by the Board of Public Works. Piles are to be driven to solid rock, braced with driven piling, sheathed with ship felt and yellow metal, and eighteen of the number are to be protected at the base with concrete armor. The wharf is to be surfaced with 4x12 inch planking. It is to have two freight chutes and six mooring bits. Each bidder must stipulate the shortest time in which he will agree to finish the work. The successful bidder will be required to furnish a bond of some territorial corporation or surety company in the amount of $250. The contractor shall employ a competent foreman, and must also give his personal attention to the work; a subcontractor will not be allowed to act as contractor's foreman or representative. No one in the employ of contractor shall be required to work longer than eight hours a day, and no one but a citizen of the United States, or eligible to become a citizen, shall be employed.

Replevin of Rig.

A team and buggy belonging to the territorial government, sent over here for the use, principally, of G. H. Gere, engineer in charge of public works under construction in this county, were replevined by N. K. Lyman, papers being served on the Volcano Stables at 2 a. m. Friday.

County Clerk Pua received a letter, dated January 23, from C. S. Holloway, Superintendent of Public Works, Honolulu, asking him to request the Board of Supervisors to return the horses and buggy by first steamer, stating that Mr. Gere would see about shipment. Mr. Pua replied immediately that the Board would not be likely to meet till February 6, that the matter would be referred to them at that time, regretting delay, etc. Mr. Gere called upon the county clerk for an order for the rig and the county clerk having no authority excepting as authorized by the Board, called upon Chairman Moir for such authority, which was issued by phone, addressed to N. K. Lyman who had been authorized to use the rig as road supervisor under permission of the territorial authorities. The replevin papers were issued out of Judge Hapai's court and the parties were ordered to appear Saturday morning. Carl S. Smith appeared for the Volcano Stables and County Attorney Williams for N. K. Lyman. At the request of the attorneys the case was postponed till Saturday, February 10th. It is supposed the postponement was asked for to give the Board of Supervisors opportunity to act.

BOARD OF TRADE.

Matters of Public Importance Considered and Acted Upon.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Board of Trade was held at Fireman's Hall Friday evening. Meeting was called to order by Vice-President Scott, and, in the absence of the secretary, Mr. L. Turner acted in his stead. Messrs. W. S. Wise and R. I. Lillie were elected to membership.

I. E. Ray asked for information as to the construction of a sewer on Waianuene street. Mr. Scott had the information that a sewer would not be constructed at present on account of the undesirability of tearing up that street and on account of the fact that the street was already provided with sewer, as far as the court house.

On account of a report that $15,000 only of the $20,000 appropriated for sewer work was to be used, it was suggested that the secretary be instructed to inquire into the nature of the plans, as to the location of the sewers and the amount to be expended; and upon motion a committee of three, consisting of Richards, Lindsay and Brughelli, was appointed for the purpose of obtaining this information.

Brughelli raised the question of the location and condition of Ponahawai Street, and of the encroachment upon Volcano Street by a fence at the intersection of the two streets; also of the desirability of having mile posts on the principal roads leading out from Hilo and of sign boards at intersections of roads. Andrews introduced the following motion: "That the association through its secretary call attention of the Supervisors at their next meeting to the narrowing of Volcano Street near the bridge, by the fence which has recently been placed there, and also to the crooked and unsightly appearance of the fence on Ponahawai Street, and suggest the advisability of at once moving these fences to their proper locations; further, that they be requested to place mile posts along all roads leading out of Hilo, and sign posts at the junction of all principal roads." Motion was seconded by Brughelli and carried.

Turner called attention to the reduction in the number of street lights and of policemen, holding that it was false economy to make such reductions, and moved that the matter be referred to the Local Improvement Committee and that they be authorized to confer with the Board of Supervisors with the view of getting the lights restored and the number of police increased. Motion was carried. Turner also brought up the question of having abated the sand pile nuisance near the fish market, and Richards moved that the Local Improvement Committee be instructed to take action looking toward the abatement of such nuisance.

Andrews moved that hereafter meetings be held at 7:30, instead of 8 o'clock, which was carried and meeting adjourned.

GOVERNOR CARTER'S CONDITION.

Diagnosis of the Case Difficult—Can Give No Attention to Public Business.

The Honolulu Bulletin of January 29th says:

"Governor Carter is still very seriously ill, according to his attending physician, Dr. Judd, although it is at present not considered that there is any particular danger.

"Shortly after 8 o'clock last evening the temperature of the patient registered 103½. At 4 o'clock this morning it was down to 101. At 8:30 o'clock this morning the Governor's temperature was 102.

"Dr. Judd was with the Governor all last night, indeed he has attended him all night long for the last four nights.

"When seen by a Bulletin reporter at 11 o'clock this morning Dr. Judd had the following to say:

"It is still impossible to make any definite diagnosis of the Governor's condition. His temperature was as high as 103½ Saturday evening about 8 o'clock. I staid with him all night and at 4 o'clock this morning the fever had gone down to 101. When I saw him last, at 8:30 o'clock this morning, the temperature had risen again to 102.

"The condition of a patient whose temperature registers as high as 102 for several days is naturally serious, but I would not say at this time that the indications are those of particular danger.

"The Governor is in a condition of collapse and indifference, as is to be expected under the circumstances. He is not worrying, nor is he being worried about anything. Mrs. Carter and the two nurses and myself are the only persons admitted to his room. We keep all matters of business away from him altogether.

"At no time during his illness has the Governor said anything about resigning his office. Nor does he talk about the circuit court judgeship matter or anything else of a public nature.

"Yes, I know there are rumors, but there is no truth in the story that the Governor is considering resigning. He is too sick to bother about such things. The matter of an extended trip, when he is well enough, is too far off to be considered at this time.

"There is no indication of brain fever or any such complication in the Governor's case.

"An examination of the blood is being made for possibly typhoid fever though I think it unlikely that the Governor is suffering from that disease; the symptoms are more like those of severe case of the grip.

"It may be impossible for several days to say just what is troubling the Governor."

According to the Advertiser of the 30th:

"Symptoms indicating typhoid persist in the case of Governor Carter, and there are other symptoms complicating the case of, a somewhat mysterious nature, nevertheless the Governor had a good day yesterday, and last night his temperature had fallen to 99.4-10 degrees. This abatement of the fever is the most favorable feature that has yet attended the case. The patient rested easily all day Monday and complained of no pain."

To Destroy Japanese Beetles.

Brother Newell, of Hilo, has given valuable assistance to the Board of Agriculture and Forestry by his study of the Japanese fungus and its use in destroying the Japanese beetle. Following are extracts from a bulletin prepared by Jacob Kotinsky, assistant entomologist:

"Perhaps no one upon these Islands has had more extensive experience with the propagation and distribution of this useful fungus than Bro. Matthias Newell of Hilo. With the assistance of the pupils attending his classes he has been able to inoculate and distribute tens of thousands of diseased beetles through Hilo and vicinity, besides a good many that went to other localities and other Islands. He asserts with authority that fungus has been distributed to all portions of the group. His efforts in and about Hilo have been rewarded with success which to the writer's mind is due, first, to Bro. Newell's perseverance; and secondly, to the very favorable climatic conditions, namely, the abundance of rain in Hilo."

"In course of the past several years many people of these Islands have acquired the habit of reposing considerable confidence in the effectiveness of this fungus to check the ravages of the Japanese Beetle. In point of fact, if the necessary conditions for its propagation are supplied, either naturally or artificially, some degree of success is inevitable. Fortunately the beetle shows preference for plants about door yards, where favorable conditions for the propagation of the fungus can be created with comparatively little effort. I therefore take pleasure in inserting below the instructions from the most expert authority on the subject on

"HOW TO INOCULATE JAPANESE BEETLES."

By B. M. Newell.

"Take a box about six inches deep, and fill about one-half with damp soil. Keep this soil moist, not muddy, by occasionally sprinkling with water. Dry soil will not work. Collect a lot of beetles and place them in this box. Be sure to feed the beetles for they must not starve. The best time to place the food in the box is during the day, because then the beetles are mostly hidden in the ground. If the box be opened in the evening they will try to escape.

"Valuable plants need not be taxed for their food, for anyone may have noticed that even certain weeds are eaten by them. The so-called 'honohono' grass is found in many places and beetles eat it readily.

"Keep the lid of the box well down. No special precaution need be taken about air holes. Keep the box in a dry, shady place.

"Beetles placed in such a box and properly cared for will die of the fungus, for the fungus which destroys them is now found in all localities.

"A whitish substance grows out of the joints of the dead beetles, which after a few days turns green. The substance is the fungus. When a number of beetles have developed the green fungus, mix them well with some dry or nearly dry earth of fine sand, and scatter this mixture over and around the plants attacked."

THE PROFESSOR'S SECRET

By TROY ALLISON
Copyright, 1904, by Troy Allison

There was something on the professor's mind. Every young woman in the senior Greek class realized it. He had shown symptoms of it for three weeks, but this morning it had assumed the form of an undeniable fact. When the shy girl of the class got rattled and construed a present infinitive as a past participle he did not even notice it.

This same shy little Ruth Payne had assumed the proportions of a problem to Professor Claxton. The girl never gave a decent recitation, yet passed her examinations with the highest marks. He had tried not to harbor a suspicion that she resorted to unfair means on examinations, but he could think of nothing else that would solve the mystery.

The professor's mind, however, was agitated by a more complicated problem than Ruth Payne's poor recitations in Greek. He had a guilty conscience. He felt that each and every pair of feminine eyes before him were searchlights turned upon his secret. He was convinced that each young woman knew there was a package of letters in his vest pocket. Of course letters are commonplace in a way and something any man might innocently possess, but these were anonymous. That he had enjoyed reading these letters and moreover had actually mailed answers to the address given hung over him like a shadow. He knew there had at various times in the world's history been other anonymous letters. Really to receive them was a different matter. Ownership leads a certain definite interest.

The professor constantly remembered the first of these letters. He had walked leisurely to the postoffice after the early supper, unconscious of impending fate. The college town was a small one, and it lent variety to life to own a postoffice box and go for one's mail rather than have it sent by the college carrier.

On that memorable night he had taken his letters and looked them over listlessly until he came to the one that was the proverbial bombshell in his experience. He read it over three times before his astonished faculties were able to grasp the fact that there was a woman, an unknown woman, who professed an admiration for him. He was not quite sure that it was exactly respectable to have an unknown woman write him a letter, and his pedantic soul knew that if it did not go beyond the bounds of respectability it at least must be called an impropriety. The first letter troubled his peace of mind for days. It was witty and bright and contained just that delicate suggestion of flattery that charms the man who believes he abominates flattery.

Had not she insinuated that she had struck him occasionally and had been struck with the idea that he possessed a depth of understanding it would be interesting to fathom?

She further stated she was at that time leading so quiet and restricted a life that she was at a loss for some real intellectual interest. His mind immediately pictured the sister of the president of the college, who was spending a quiet winter in the small village for the sake of her health. Yet it seemed impossible that a woman of so much dignity and reserve could take such a step even for amusement. After pondering over the matter several days carefully and methodically, according to his custom, he had hesitated and been lost. He had answered that letter. The address given was in a neighboring city, and he had found himself going to the postoffice afterward under the stimulus of an unusual excitement. He had really been curious to see the second one.

He had a hazy recollection of an adage that the second step in wrong doing had won renown as being less difficult than the first. He felt positive symptoms of pleasure in answering the second letter. He knew that the dignity of his position would fall flatter than the western Roman empire if the girls in his class once got an inkling that he was a factor in an anonymous correspondence. Nevertheless he grew more absentminded every day, and every day his curiosity increased, this pedant of thirty-five who had all his life refused to take an atom of interest in any woman.

So the girls nudged each other and giggled as much as they deemed it permissible for members of the senior class to giggle, and little, fair haired Ruth Payne read her Greek, hopelessly involving all parts of speech. He was walking on the college campus one afternoon meditating with much satisfaction on the fact that he had at last gathered courage to beg his anonymous friend to disclose her identity and let him call the next time he went to the city. The professor was a shy man and had found it required all the nerve he possessed to make this request. He was thinking it could not be many days before he received an answer when he noticed Ruth Payne walking in front of him, poring over a book in the manner of a schoolgirl who goes up for examination the next day.

A tiny green snake ran across the path, and the professor caught the girl in his arms as she screamed and reeled toward him.

While he stood gazing helplessly at her white face other girls rushed to his assistance.

"It was an awful snake!" Ruth gasped when she opened her eyes. After the girls had taken her to the house he picked up the Greek Syntax she had dropped in her fright.

A sealed letter, ready for mailing, dropped out. The address was plainly "Professor R. G. Claxton," and the writing was in the familiar hand of the anonymous lady.

He sat down limply on the nearest iron bench. There seemed something awry with the universe. Was it possible that this pretty child had written such letters—a little blond girl who blushed furiously and stammered every time she was spoken to in class!

He opened the letter eagerly. Its superscription gave him that privilege. He noticed, too, that the girl's name written on the fly leaf of the Greek syntax was identical with the writing on the envelope. He read on to learn that he could call on her at the end of the college year when he passed through the city on his way home—if he still cared to meet her.

The professor went to his room, his thoughts in chaotic condition. That night he followed her to the corner of the veranda, where she sat gazing abstractedly on the moonlit lawn.

"So I have met you," he said quietly. He sat down beside her and looked at her intently. "And—so—you—are—the—woman?" he added slowly.

She gave a frightened gasp and looked at him with terror and shame in her eyes.

"It was—awful of me, I know. It was a dreadful thing for me to do." She turned away from him, and he could see she was trembling with nervousness.

"It has given me more pleasure than anything that ever happened in my whole life," he said simply.

She gave him one quick glance and hurried into self justification. "I have always been timid," she said in an intense whisper, "and I was so mortified when I would get nervous and fall in my recitations. The minute you asked me a question every thought seemed to leave my mind. I got more embarrassed each day. I got desperate. I determined you should know I was capable of having a thought. That wild scheme of writing you anonymous letters came, and—I wrote them. I'm so—very—sorry." And the professor heard the sob in her voice.

He answered earnestly: "I'm glad—I shall be eternally glad—if you tell me I need never give up those letters. They have become part of my life." The girl's eyes grew wide with emotion. He gazed at her wonderingly, trying to understand how he had failed to recognize her before. Now she seemed some one that had been in his life forever. He had been lonely, and he remembered that she herself was an orphan, that after the close of the term she would take up the burden of teaching.

"I—you mean that you want me to keep on writing to you?" she asked shyly. "I mean that I want to teach you how to talk to me," he said, smiling. "I want to keep with me forever the womanly companionship of my letters." She gasped in astonishment.

"But I thought you believed me stupid. I couldn't recite my Greek to you decently to save my life." The professor looked into her startled eyes and laid his hand on hers. "I don't care if you couldn't tell Greek from Chinese," he said solemnly, "deriding the hobby of years."

"But don't you think me a frivolous, doll baby kind of a girl?" she questioned timidly. He leaned over and touched her fair hair with all the reverence of a child who has never before owned a golden haired doll.

"I think you are the sweetest thing on God's earth," he said, pressing his lips to her hand.

The First English Regatta. T. Doggett, the comedian, has been regarded as the founder of aquatic sports in England, since he first instituted, in 1716, annual prizes for rowing, and these rowing matches have been continued until the present day. But in the winter of 1774 Lord Lyttelton and the Savoir Vivre club determined to hold in the following year a "regatta" which should rival any ever held at Venice.

This was arranged for June 23, 1775, and on that day the whole river from London bridge to the Ship tavern at Millbank was covered with pleasure boats, both sides of the water assuming the appearance of a splendid fair. Two races were rowed, and at the conclusion of the sport the invited guests proceeded to the rotunda at Ranelagh, where supper was served at 10 o'clock, after which a ball was given in the Temple of Neptune, a temporary structure erected near the rotunda, the company including the Dukes of Gloucester and Cambridge, the lord mayor and several ambassadors.

Finnan Haddies. "The great American public is often hoodwinked in buying finnan haddies," remarked a man in the fish business. "When you buy finnan haddies nowadays you may get a finnan haddie, which is a smoked haddock, or you may not. You may get a smoked cod fish instead, but you will pay the real finnan haddie price for it just the same."

"The haddock is a fish of the cod family and resembles the cod very much. But the haddock has a black lateral line, while that of the cod is white, and if you will only look for the color of these lines, which is not changed in the smoking, you can tell readily enough whether you are getting what you want or something 'just as good.' For myself, when I buy finnan haddie I want finnan haddie. It may be no better than finnan cod, but I like to think I am getting what I want."—Providence Journal.

Whitman's Candies—L. Turner Co.

A photograph taken in 1880 of the corner where the L. Turner Co. store is situated illustrates how Hilo has built up since that date. The corner was then occupied by a store owned by A. Cleghorn and J. H. Mabey, the proprietor, appears in the picture. The waters of the bay came up to the street's edge in front and spray would occasionally sprinkle the store, while behind the store appears to be continuous woods, except for St. Joseph's Church. Hilo was already a business point of importance and had changed considerably from the days of the 60's when all the whalers used to drop in before going north.

Question of Materials.

Regarding the proposition to put up a high school building and the intention of the authorities to use brick or stone, and old resident expresses doubt as to the wisdom of using such materials. In his long residence here he has seen some of the exhibitions afforded by Halemau-man. These performances of the volcanoes give old timers a feeling of uncertainty as to what they may do and of expectancy that they may sometime repeat their performances. Among the stunts performed was, years ago, giving the earth a shaking such as would injure a stone building. Twenty thousand dollars, this gentleman argues, would put up a magnificent wooden building that could not be injured by possible earthquake and that would be more comfortable in this climate. It might be said on the other hand that brick or stone buildings are more enduring, more imposing in appearance, somewhat less liable to destruction by fire, better in sanitary respects. Few localities take earthquake possibilities into account, as, for example, San Francisco, where great damage was done to brick buildings by an earthquake in its early history.

United States Court.

Henry Isles and Frederick W. Bartels were admitted to citizenship and court adjourned till 10 a. m. Thursday. On reconvening, James M. Henderson was granted naturalization. In adjourning court the judge expressed pleasure at the duty devolving upon him of coming over and naturalizing citizens, but giving it as his opinion that a regular, statutory, prescribed session was unnecessary inasmuch as the federal judge had authority under the law to convene court in special session at any time.

KAMAAINA DEAD.

After Brief Illness Mrs. R. A. Lyman Passes Away.

Mrs. Rebecca A. Lyman, wife of R. A. Lyman, departed this life at her late residence in Hilo Thursday at 10:40 p. m. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. W. Hill, Rev. S. L. Desha and Rev. C. E. Shields, and took place at the house and the Haili church Friday afternoon.

The community was shocked when it learned of the death of Mrs. Lyman, who had not been confined in her bed for longer than 24 hours. Although she had been ailing for the last two months, yet with great determination she kept up and ministered to the wants of others.

Mrs. Rebecca A. Lyman was born in the City of Honolulu on the 19th day of February, 1844. She was educated at the Royal School under Mr. Morice Beckwith. After graduating she became the first principal at Milliani School in Honolulu. She was married to R. A. Lyman in Honolulu on January 8, 1866, and came to Hilo in April of the same year. She had lived in Hamakua and Puna and her good Christian work in those districts as well as in Hilo, lives to show what she has done for her people and those who came to the islands. She was one of the prime workers in obtaining funds to buy the present cemetery for the Haili Church, the Lyceum at Honokaa and the Pasuhau Church, which is only a short distance from what used to be the Lyman Home at Hamakua.

She, with Mrs. F. S. Lyman and Mrs. Abbie were the originators of the Waiakea Sunday School, which is doing such good work in that settlement. She was president of W. C. T. U. in Hilo for a number of years and just resigned in December, 1905, owing to ill health.

She had her home open to strangers as well as to kamaainas, to those in low standing as well as to those of high standing.

The last two family gatherings before her death were on Christmas day, 1905, and on January 8, 1906, the 40th anniversary of her married life.

Mrs. Lyman leaves a husband, a daughter and ten sons, and with the exception of four sons, the whole family were at her death bed before she departed for the better land.

The sons absent were Lieut. C. K. Lyman, U. S. A., at Port Riley, Kas.; Albert Lyman, at West Point; Chas. B. Lyman, at Oahu College, and Captain David Lyman, of the Salvation Army at Wailuku, Maui.
