WAITING ON ANNEXATION.

The light which has been cast on Hawaii by the American press since the January troubles began has served to dispel some of the illusions that have kept people from coming here. In times past our Eastern neighbors, generally speaking, have had a vague idea that the islands were occupied by savages, lepers and volcanoes. They know better now and realize that the group is a modern, Americanized domain which people live in: to whom churches, schools and christian homes are staple possessions, and among whom the luxuries of life and the fruits of intellectual progress may be found in widespread distribution.

Ordinarily the correction of the old fancies would be followed by an influx of people who would like to live in a land so different from that which their fancy had painted and so near their ideal of what a country should be. Were there no obstacles in the way, more steamers would be needed to bring the crowds here than the existing lines have at their beck and call. But unfortunately obstacles exist. A permanent government—that one thing which holds out to all new-comers the promise of peace, order and security—is wanting, and until it shall have been established the tide of travel and investment will not roll this way.

We say a permanent government, that does not mean an oligarchy or a republic any more than it does a monarchy. It means a government the flag of which will protect all who come beneath its folds; one that can be depended upon to maintain its character and fulfil its promises; such a government, in fact, as would be established here by the United States. That is what the outsiders are waiting for, and when it is given them they will come and bring their millions with them.

Those who oppose this consummation stand in their own light. They object to their own prosperity and resist the approach of good times. For the chimera of a crown and the frayed and tinsel pagentry of a half barbaric Queen, they would bid the waiting throng of investors and home-seekers to stay away. It is a depressing spectacle, but there it is. Let us hope that, before long, it will give way to enlightened self-interest, and help to open the islands to the era of their greatest fortune.

HOW ABOUT THE BRITISH?

There are those who say that England has no wish to possess the Hawaiian Islands. They argue thus because England does not oppose the existing American movement. But suppose the United States refuses to annex, would not the case then be entirely changed? The refusal of the United States to take the islands as surely gives England the right to accept them whenever they might be offered to her, and the history of England for the last hundred years conclusively shows that she never refuses such a prize when she has a fair chance to obtain it. But some Americans say that then the United States would protest in earnest. By what right or reason? The United States cannot play a dog in the manger game. The public opinion of the world would be against it in such a course. It goes without saying that no nation on earth has the right to make a football of Hawaii. John Bull is not in the habit of dropping a piece of meat when once in his jaws. He is of the bull dog species. He holds on tightly. See what has happened in Egypt within the last twelve years. France had an interest in and a prior claim to that rich country with its six millions of people. She had the chance to improve her opportunity. She could have been at least a joint and equal partner with England, governing and holding that great possession; but the pressure of events came just at the time when the condition of parties in France would not allow the French government to make outside moves. England was not then blind or inactive. She boldly took charge in Egypt with a seeming promise to scuttle out at a later date, but more than ten years have passed and the control of the Nile is still hers. John Bull has not the remotest thought of dropping the country. Neither

Salisbury or Gladstone will agree to depart.
 Apply this lesson to the case of Hawaii, and the logic of history does the rest. At this time the United States is complete master of the Hawaiian situation. Will she ignominiously surrender it? We confidently affirm that the present government at Washington will make no such irrevocable faux pas. We believe that it will in due time prove fully equal to the emergency now before it.

THE FUTURE.

There will be no republic with the consent of the American residents of Hawaii, who, if they have not all the power they need to decide what the future form of local government shall be, have the strength to determine what shape it shall not take.

In case the United States shall, under President Cleveland, decline the proffer of the islands, then the Provisional government will keep its ground until another quadrennial election shall have been held in America, in the hope that annexation will then be granted. If failure should again come no doubt the government, supported by the greater part of the business and property interests, will consider whether or not the welfare of the islands would be served by their proffer to Great Britain.

Talk about a republic is idle. So is the plan to have an oligarchy. The revolution was fought out for the sake of getting decent and stable government and that end will not be surrendered now to suit anybody's whims or add to anybody's wealth. This language may be plain but it is no plainer than the fact.

The Holomua takes occasion to say that "a continuance of the Provisional government is impossible;" that it is being "tolerated" and that people will soon refuse to pay taxes to it. "Tolerated" is good, as coming from an editor who is so much in fear of the government that he dare not put his own name above what he writes. "Tolerated" forsooth! There was a time when the Holomua exile tolerated the police in the same way.

Puck hits the annexation nail on the head when it says:

By taking a good thing when we can get it, we only pay a delicate tribute to the worthy English idea of good form. So, if it be found wise to put a few more pages of United States into the geography book, we shall order it done; and the order will be carried out with that promptness and efficiency which have secured respect for American decrees in the past.

True for you!

A ROYALIST organ in this city announces that "all prospects for annexation are virtually at an end." Indeed! No one else seems to have the news, but as the same paper foresaw the early arrival of the Australian fleet and the prompt restoration of the "Queen," perhaps it will be as well to take its present statement with the usual sack of salt.

THREE of the press correspondents left for the States this noon, and the remaining one, Mr. Naughton of the Examiner, will soon go to visit his old home in New Zealand. All these journalists have done acceptable service to their papers and have told the story of Hawaiian life and politics with skill and picturesqueness. The STAR wishes them bon voyage.

THE Adams started for Honolulu just too late to bring returns from the reception in the United States of the flag-lowering news. One week more will tell the story which, we premise, will be worth reading. The correspondents all made the most of their opportunities on April 1st.

THE BERING SEA COMMISSION.

The high court of arbitration which has just begun its sittings in Paris, and which will determine the merits of the controversy as to the jurisdiction in the Bering Sea, and the right to regulate the killing of seals in the waters and on the islands of that sea, is an imposing body. The questions that will come up before the Court seem simple enough in their statement. The rights of the United States in the Bering Sea are the rights which Russia ceded to the United States with Alaska. What Russia owned, the United States owns—no more, no less—and whatever rights England recognized as belonging to Russia the court will recognize as now belonging to the United States. It cannot recognize that the United States has greater rights, because the present claim must rest solely upon the cession from Russia, and that country cannot have transferred more than it possessed. The United States contends that the Bering Sea is not a part of the Pacific Ocean, and that in acquiring Alaska the United States acquired jurisdiction over the waters of that sea. The United States further claims that it has such a property interest in the herds of seals that it has the right to protect that property even on the high seas. England, on the other hand, maintains that the Bering Sea is an open sea, in which all nations have common rights and none exclusive rights. England says that when Russia claimed jurisdiction over Bering Sea this claim was opposed by both England and the United States. England affirms, however, a willingness to enter into a convention by which sealing shall be regulated and their extermination prevented. This is the official list of the members and officers of the court.

Arbitrators—on the part of the United States, Associate Justice John M. Harlan and United States Senator John T. Morgan; on the part of Great Britain, Lord Hannen and Sir John S. D. Thompson; on the part of France, Baron de Courcel; on the part of Italy, Marchese Emilio Visconti-Venosta; on the part of Sweden, Judge Gregoro W. W. Gram. These are the Judges of the court of arbitration, while the commissioners are these: For the United States, Professor T. C. Mendenhall and Dr. C. Hart Merriam; and for Great Britain, Sir George Baden-Powell and Dr. George M. Dawson. The officers of the court are as follows: For the United States—agent, Mr. John W. Foster; counsel, Messrs. E. J. Phelps, H. W. Blodgett, and Frederic R. Couderc; assistant counsel, Messrs. William Williams and Robert Lansing; disbursing officer, Major R. W. Halford, U. S. A. Besides these there are a number of secretaries, clerks, and stenographers. On the part of Great Britain the agent is Mr. Charles H. Tupper, and the counsel Sir Charles Russel, Sir Richard Webster, and Mr. Charles Russell, the latter having been appointed to take the place of Mr. W. H. Cross, who recently died.

The present interest in this country in the personnel of this court of arbitration centres about the American members. Associate Justice Harlan is a large fine-looking man, a native of Kentucky, and now in his sixtieth year. He has been a member of the Supreme Court since 1877, when he was appointed to the place by President Hayes, after serving on the Louisiana Commission. Previous to this he had been the Colonel of a Kentucky regiment on the Union side during the war, a judge of a county court, and Attorney-General of his State. He first attracted national notice at the Cincinnati Republican Convention in 1876, when he appeared as the chief advocate for the nomination of General Benjamin H. Brewster, whose law partner he was in Louisville.

The other American arbitrator is Senator John T. Morgan, of Alabama, who has served long on the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs, and has always taken a prominent part in the debates as to measures affecting the relations of the United States with other governments. Mr. Morgan is nine or ten years Justice Harlan's senior, and is a native of Tennessee, although he has lived in Alabama since he was a child. He was a Breckinridge Presidential elector in 1860, and a member of the session convention in 1861. During the war he entered the Confederate service as a private, and rose to be a Brigadier General and the commander of a division. After the war he practised law in Alabama, till his election to the Senate in 1876. He has been a member of that body ever since, and of recent years has been a prominent debator on the Democratic side.

The senior American counsel is Mr. Edward J. Phelps, of Vermont. Mr. Phelps is in his seventy-second year, but he does not look nearly so old. He was Second Comptroller of the Treasury during the administration of President Fillmore. He was President of the American Bar Association in 1880, and was chosen Professor of Law at Yale the next year. This professorship he has held ever since and still holds, though he did not officiate during the four years of Mr. Cleveland's first administration, when he was United States Minister in London, where he succeeded James Russell Lowell. Difficult though it was for any one to fill such a post with credit after so gifted a predecessor, Mr. Phelps succeeded entirely, bearing himself with so much tact, and speaking with so much eloquence and wit, that many Englishmen, through the native disposition to generalize, came to the conclusion that all Americans were learned and witty and eloquent. Judge Henry W. Blodgett, of Chicago, the second of the American counsel, has long presided over the United States Court for the Northern District of Illinois. Mr. Frederic R. Couderc is a prominent lawyer in New York, of French extraction. Mr. Couderc is President of the Manhattan Club and an active Democrat.

Mr. John W. Foster, the American agent, prepared the case on the American side. He is a native of Indiana. During the war he served in the army under General Grant, and became a Colonel. After the war he was an editor in Evansville, Indiana, and then postmaster of that city. He has served as Minister to Mexico, Minister to Russia, and Minister to Spain. While in Spain he negotiated a treaty, which was never ratified, as Mr. Cleveland withdrew it from the Senate. During the last Democratic administration Mr. Foster practised before the State Department as counsel for foreign legations in Washington. When Mr. Blaine retired from the State Department, Mr. Foster was appointed to the post, which he held until his departure for Paris.

Of the British counsel, Sir Charles Russel and Sir Richard Webster are both leaders of the English bar, and there are few cases of note in which either one or both do not appear. Lord Hannen, the senior British arbitrator, began to practise law in 1848, and has been on the bench for twenty five years. In 1872 he became a member of the Privy Council. His most conspicuous service, perhaps, was as president of the Parnell Inquiry Commission. Sir John S. D. Thomson, the other British arbitrator, is a Canadian, and was born in Halifax in 1844. He has been a member of the Dominion Parliament, and was attached to the British Commission which arranged the fishery treaty in Washington in 1888.—Harpers Weekly.

This vigor-making, fat producing preparation is Absolutely Tasteless, in so far as Cod Liver Oil is concerned. All you notice is a delightful flavor of Wild Cherry and Anise.
 But the purest Norwegian Cod Liver Oil is there all the same. It is a great blood enricher. Best of all it is a natural food that in its stomachic effects, actually assists its own assimilation.

AT KILAUEA.

Two Notable Visits to the Crater.
Christianity versus Paganism.

Who, in all Hawaii, has not heard of the great Kapiolani? Not the present Queen-dowager, dear to the hearts of the Hawaiians for her goodness of nature, but with no ancient high lineage to command their honor and reverence—Kapiolani the great was a daughter of the famous High Chieftain Keawe-mauihi of Hilo, and by her deeds proved herself the greatest chiefess of her time—greater even than that other remarkable heathen woman, Kaahumanu, who did so much to emancipate Hawaiians from the thralldom of superstition. At one time intemperate and dissolute, upon embracing Christianity Kapiolani became a shining example of civilized virtue and propriety. To her, of all the natives, came the conception of the great deed for which her name is worthy of most honor. The tabus were thrown down, the divinity that hedged the King had been shown to be of earthly origin, and the gods were relegated to oblivion, but on the far mountain height, in her temple of the eternal fire, Pele still reigned supreme, feared by all alike.

It was in December, 1854, the story runs, that Kapiolani determined to break the spell of native belief in Pele, to visit the goddess in her temple and defy her power. Husband, friends, even the missionaries, attempted to dissuade her, but the great chiefess was firm in her resolve to show her faith in the God of the Christians. Those who remember the trials and fatigues of the trip to the volcano, to day, by steamer, train, carriage and on horseback, will understand something of the personal cost at which Kapiolani traveled, on foot, the distance from Kealahou to Hilo, 150 miles, to visit the crater. There was no Volcano road in those days; no Fern trail; no pathway over the lava bed; but over ragged volcanic rocks that tore her hands and feet, through the dense tropical undergrowth of the forest and across the turbulent mountain streams, the great Queen forced her weary way to fulfill her noble mission. Arriving at the volcano, Kapiolani met the priestess of Pele, who warned her not to go near the crater, and predicted her death if she dared violate the tabus of the fiery goddess.

"Who are you?" demanded Kapiolani. "One in whom the goddess dwells," was the reply. In answer the chiefess quoted passages of Scripture descriptive of the greatness and power of the supreme God. A pretended letter from Pele was brought to her, but her reply was only to quote other passages and to speak of the true God, until the priestess was silenced and confessed that Keakua, the deity, had left her. Kapiolani then went forward to the crater, where she was surprised to find Mr. Goodrich, the missionary, who, hearing of her expedition, had come to meet her. On the eastern edge of the crater a shelter was built for her, and there, looking toward the flaming lake, the chiefess spent the night. I venture to say that there are few men or women living to-day who would care to do the same, alone and ignorant of the possible dangers of that awe-inspiring region. But this poor, half-civilized, wholly uneducated woman had the blood of many generations of great chiefs in her veins, and her soul was fired with the spirit that makes martyrs. Who can tell what thoughts were hers as she lived through that night? Did she sleep at all, one wonders? Did the matchless nerve that had sustained her falter at all? No one can say, for she was alone in this brave deed.

The next morning, with a company of about eighty of her people, she descended over 500 feet to the "Black Ledge," where, in full view of the boiling, raging crater, with its many darting tongues of fire, she ate of the sacred ohelo berries, the luscious little red fruit that grows up in the lava and sulphur beds, and were consecrated to Pele, and threw stones into the burning lake, saying, "Jehovah is my God! He kindled these fires. I fear not Pele. If I perish by her anger, then you may fear Pele; but if I trust in Jehovah, and he preserve me when breaking her tabus, then you must fear and serve him alone." Then they sang a hymn of praise to God, and kneeling upon the brink of the "everlasting fire," they prayed to him. In all the annals of history occurs no sublimer example of high moral courage.

Now for another royal visit to the crater.

This one occurred early in 1890. The islands had enjoyed sixty-six years of culture, educational and civilizing influences since the great chiefess broke the tabu of Pele. Queen Liliuokalani, having ascended to the throne, was making a tour of the islands, and visited Hilo, going thence, as she herself has written in the record-book of the Volcano House, "to pay due worship to Madame Pele." Of course she had no fear of the dismantled goddess for Liliuokalani is (or was) a Christian ruler. She is said, moreover, to be an enlightened and cultivated woman, and of course as such could never be subject to the doubts and fears that must have preyed upon the untutored mind of poor semi-benighted Kapiolani. As might be expected, therefore, the visits of these two great personages present a marked difference in detail.

The Queen sailed from Honolulu with a large retinue, including many of the court ladies and gentlemen and a varied assortment of baggage, among which were two small sucking pigs, who made the journey, each in his own private conveyance—a wire bidgeage. A kahuna (sorcerer) or two were also of the party. The Christian Queen, who is a member in good and regular standing of the Union Congregational Church, does not, of course, believe in kahunas, and doubtless these were taken along, "not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith," and to carry the birdcages containing the little pigs.

Something Pretty in Shoes

Always invites inspection, and judging from the amount of inspection we are arousing, one would suppose we were showing something unusually pretty. The supposition is entirely correct, for that's precisely what we're doing. Our stock of footwear is not only exceedingly pretty, but it's also pretty extensive, and what's more interesting still, it's more than pretty cheap. It's the buyer's season now. Winter is slipping right along as though on ice, and we don't want to be caught in the Spring with any remnants of winter goods. The stock is well up now in all styles and sizes, and you can get a first choice as well as a low price. Don't wait until the stock's faded away to the last end of nothing before buying, but buy now.

The party did not all go up to the volcano. Only the faithful made the pilgrimage, the scoffers being left behind at Hilo. The pilgrims proceeded by carriage and upon horseshack, perhaps whiling away the hours of the journey as did Kapiolani in days gone by, by the singing of pious anthems and songs of faith. It must have been an impressive sight, the royal train en route. I was so fortunate as to secure an excellent photograph of the party just before it left Hilo. Arrived at the Volcano House the weary pilgrims sought rest, but Liliuokalani rested not. Like Kapiolani, the royal worshiper had preparations to make for the morrow's solemn occasion. She slept not until she had sent for the proprietor of the Volcano House and inquired into the state of his wine vaults. "How was he off for gin?" was the first anxious query. Unfortunately the genial Peter Lee was badly off for gin. In fact he had no gin at all, not a bottle, not a drop. Her Majesty's dusky countenance assumed an additional shade, from anxiety. She expressed her sorrow in unmistakable terms. "It was too bad," she said. "Pele liked gin." Then a happy thought occurred to her. She would substitute brandy. Accordingly she at once bought all the "Three Star" brandy on the premises, several cases of Hennessy's best, and ordering it placed with the rest of the contraband being long to the party, she retired to rest; secure in the consciousness of having done her best, and trusting devoutly that Madame Pele would see the matter in that light.

Early next morning, having first issued her royal command that no white people were to be allowed to approach the crater until her return, the Queen and her party descended the hill, with a native guide, and wended their way on foot across the black abyss to Hale-naumau, the burning lake. Not a loud word was spoken from the time the party left the Volcano House until they returned. Slowly and devoutly the pious throng of enlightened Hawaiians performed their pilgrimage, and reaching the old shelter on the western side of the black ledge they halted. With appropriate prayers and ceremonies red handkerchiefs were cast down upon the lava floor of the second crater; they strewed the cliff for weeks after the party left. Then all the "Three Star" Hennessy was poured forth upon the hissing black lava bottom as a libation to the great goddess, and finally the little black pigs were thrown over for a meat offering. The poor little wretches grunted and squealed piteously in their dreadful fright, but salt itself could not have saved them; over they went, down the cliff, and all their tiny legs were broken by the fall at the bottom. There they lay upon the hot lava until they were thoroughly roasted, after which the goddess doubtless ate them with a keen relish.

Prayers were then offered up to Madame Pele for the prosperity of the kingdom and the security of Liliuokalani's reign. Then the party returned to the Volcano House in like manner as they went, and over Liliuokalani's signature in the big record appears, under date of March 17, 1893, as I said before, a chronicle of the fact that they visited the volcano and paid due worship to Madame Pele.

It was a truly noble expedition to be undertaken by an enlightened monarch in the nineteenth century. How the noble spirit of the great chiefess must have rejoiced to see that, plebeian though she is, the ruler of Hawaii yet had the royal courage to undertake this perilous trip and show herself worthy of the great woman who went before her.

The fact that the kingdom has not prospered and the reign of the ex-Queen has ended in disaster is unquestionably to be attributed to Liliuokalani's fatal mistake in substituting brandy for gin in propitiating the goddess.—S. F. Call.

TAKEN BY SKYROCKETS.

Novel Method of Photographing the Camp of an Enemy.

An exceedingly interesting English invention consists of a camera combined with a parachute, especially designed for obtaining photographs of fortifications and of the camps of the enemy, although pictures may also be made for general surveying purposes. This parachute is snugly folded in a thin case at the end of a rocket, which is fired to the required height and burst open by means of a time fuse. The explosion sets free the parachute, which is protected from injury by means of a casing of asbestos. The parachute has a number of thin umbrella ribs, and these are forced outward and kept in that position by means of a strong spiral spring.

From the parachute a camera is suspended and a string held by the operator is attached by a universal joint to the bottom of the device, for the purpose of pulling the parachute back. The camera is fitted with an instantaneous shutter, operated by clockwork, so as to give several exposures at intervals. At the back of the box is an arrangement by which the plates can be manipulated the same as clockwork. A swinging motion can be given the camera by the operator, and this will enable him to obtain successive pictures over a wide area.

The whole arrangement is exceedingly ingenious, and if it can be employed practically it marks an important step in the science of modern warfare.

A Very Sad Affair.

Mr. Oldchappie—You are looking very bad.

Vanderchump—Yes, I know it. I went to a dinner party on Washington's birthday and drank a little too much wine. When I went to bed I forgot to take off my boots, and I went to sleep with my feet on the pillow, and consequently I dreamed all night I had toothache, when it was nothing but my tight boots hurting my corns.

M. McINERNY.

Are we to be, or not to be, a part of the Great Republic, seems to be the burning question of the day, and one we had rather leave to wiser heads than ours to solve; and while great statesmen are wrestling with this momentous question, we want to have a little "pore-wore" with you on some other subjects, that concern you as well as ourselves.

Has it not occurred to you that you've been wearing that old hat long enough! In these progressive times if you intend to be "in it," you've got to keep pace with fashion. No matter how otherwise well dressed you may be, unless your hat is the correct thing you bear a shabby appearance.

We have already laid in a stock of the Latest Hats of the coming Spring and Summer styles, in hard felts, soft felts and straws, and including a line of the celebrated "Fidora" Hats, at present all the rage in the United States. There is therefore, no necessity for you to hang on any longer to that old Tile that bears such a strong resemblance to the hat "your father wore."

Believing that business will be better in the near future, we have not hesitated to keep our stock full in all lines. Take collars for instance: We have almost everything you could wish for. If you wear a standing collar, just come in and take a look at our "Narenta" or "Ardonia;" or if you prefer a turn down collar, try the "Winnipeg" or "Goswell;" we have have lots of others, and can't fail to suit you. Cuffs in abundance, links or otherwise.

Neckwear in profusion, scarfs windsors 4-in-hands, and a special lot of "Boys' Bows;" suspenders in great variety, leather and woven ends, good strong, serviceable goods.

We might go on indefinitely, but space is valuable, and to enumerate everything we carry would fill a pretty fair sized Book. If there is anything you want in the men's line, just drop in and see us, and if we can't suit you, we don't believe any one can.

If you should want a pair of nice shoes, let us try a hand at fitting you. Did it ever occur to you

How much a man is like his shoes; For instance, both a soul may lose. Both have been tanned; Both are made tight by Cobblers; Both get left and right; Both need a mate to be complete; And both are made to go on feet.

They both need healing; oft are sold, And both in time will turn to mould. With shoes the last is first; with men The first shall be the last; and when The shoes wear out, they're mended new; When men wear out, they're men dead too.

They both are trod upon, and both Will tread on others nothing loth. Both have their ties, and both incline When polished, in the world to shine; And both peg out. Now would you choose To be a man, or be his shoes.

THE CUSTOMS REVENUES.

REPORT OF THE COLLECTOR GENERAL.

Statement of the Seaboard Revenues—Exports and Imports—Comparative Statistics.

The report of the Collector General of Customs has been issued. It gives the total value of domestic imports as $7,959,938.05, and that of domestic and foreign imports as $8,181,687.21. The total value of domestic imports for the year just ended shows a decrease of $2,147,377 as compared with 1891.

Sugar has fallen off, not only in the number of pounds, but in the total value as well; rice has increased $200,196.00; hides and bananas have decreased; wool has increased from $8,000.00 to $32,185.00; goat skins have decreased from $3,212.00 to $1,422.00; sheep skins have increased slightly; tallow has decreased to almost nothing; molasses shows a slight increase; betel leaves have decreased; coffee increased $2,221.00 in value and in quantity 10,517 pounds; and guano has fallen off.

The entire importations for the Hawaiian Islands classified under their general headings shows that the amount of goods paying duty is comparatively small. Comparing the same with that of 1891, it will be found that there has been a falling off of over 50 per cent. in that class of goods; goods free by treaty have not fallen off so much.

The goods imported from the United States amounted to 81.04 per cent. of all imports; while it was 71.16 per cent. in 1891, showing an increase of 10.78 per cent.

The imports from other countries have decreased in instance, except in the case of China, which shows a slight increase.

There have been collected and turned into the Hawaiian Treasury $494,385.00 for the year just ended, which exceeds the estimate of receipts for the same period by $118,385.00.

There has been, as will be observed, a falling off in nearly every item of receipts.

Compared with the receipts for any period prior to 1882, the receipts exceed those of 1881, the largest year, by $71,000.00.

THE PLANTERS MEET.

A Harmonious Gathering at Hon. W. O. Smith's Office.

A meeting of planters and plantation agents was held yesterday afternoon at the office of W. O. Smith on Fort street. There were fourteen present besides Claus Spreckels, at whose request the meeting was held.

The meeting held yesterday was entirely harmonious and while the question of annexation was not directly touched upon, it is understood that the meeting was generally favorable there to. As soon as conclusions are reached they will be embodied in a statement which will be laid before Commissioner Blount.

RETURNS TO OAKLAND.

E. M. Walsh Will Not Settle Permanently Here.

E. M. Walsh, who returned to Honolulu a short time ago, goes to his home at Oakland, Cal., to-day. Mr. Walsh came to the islands first in 1878 and began work as a luna on the Naahehu plantation on Hawaii. He was afterwards made manager of the plantation, and at different periods was manager of the Pahi and the Hamakua plantations on Maui.

Officers Make Unavailing Quest for a Missing Prisoner.

Captains Juen and Schlemmer boarded the Australia this morning at half past six o'clock and began a search for the prisoner Broet, who broke jail several days ago. A most thorough investigation was made of the entire vessel from keel to

MISS SCIDMORE'S PARLOR TALK LAST EVENING.

How the Occidentals are Deceived by the Depth of the Yellow Mind—Arnold's Foolish Play.

Miss T. C. Scidmore, who came to the islands on a recent China steamer and has been staying here quietly with friends delivered a parlor talk last evening on Nuanuu street upon the Mikado's empire. The "talk" was highly interesting and instructive.

"Every tourist," said Miss Scidmore, "discovers Japan for himself—a Japan of his own, different from anything he had imagined, from anything that books could tell, and every time he may visit it will strike him afresh and shine in clearer light. I have discovered it in that sense myself, and every day of the six weeks I spent there last autumn was a day of novelty and charm as the first days of my first visit years ago."

THE ADAMS ARRIVES.

She Brings no Late News and No Fresh Papers—Her Officers.

The U. S. S. Adams arrived this morning 14 days from Mare Island navy yard. She crossed the S. F. bar at 12:30 o'clock on the 12th instant and dropped her anchor in Honolulu harbor between the Naniwa and the Boston. She carries six guns, two of which are rifled, and 153 men.

Ensign G. R. Marvell, officer of the deck, was seen this morning by a STAR reporter, who amid the confusion of putting the Adams in ship shape order, learned that she brought no late files of newspapers and little news. All aboard were anxious to learn the latest Honolulu news, though every one was too busy to listen to more than a word at a time. In fact the news of the lowering of the flag seemed to be not nearly so great importance as setting the ship to rights.

"When?" exclaimed Ensign Marvell as he was relieved of duty for a few minutes to give the STAR man a list of officers, "this is the first rest I've had since daylight." "No, there is little news," he continued, "except that the U. S. S. Ranger was ready and was to leave for Behring Sea the same day we left. The Alliance is in dry dock and the Monterey is lying at Mare Island. Lieutenant Coffin of the Adams will transfer to the Boston as navigating officer and Lieut. Norton is to come out from the New York navy yard to take his place. We had a very pleasant trip down and came under both sails and steam. I do not know how long we will stay here, and in fact we know absolutely nothing of the future movements of any of the American ships."

The following is the list of the Adams' officers:

- Commander, Thos. Nelson.
Lieutenant, J. H. C. Coffin.
Lieutenant, W. P. Elliot, Navigator.
Lieutenant Henry Morrel, Ordnance Officer.
Lieutenant, F. S. Carter.
Ensign, Edward Moadle Jr.
Ensign, G. R. Marvell.
Ensign, C. T. Vogeleesang.
E. A. McGee, Chief Engineer.
M. C. McDonald, Past Asst. Paymaster.
F. J. B. Cordeiro, Past Asst. Surgeon.
T. P. Kane, 1st Lieut., U. S. M. Corps.
Win. C. Waldmann, Pay Clerk.

OFF FOR THE COAST.

The Australia Goes to Sea with a Big Load of People.

The Australia sailed to day at 12:15 for San Francisco. She carried away one of the largest passenger lists that has ever left Honolulu. There were 212 passengers aboard when she steamed from the wharf, 114 of whom were in cabin. At the last minute James Low boarded the steamer without a ticket and threw himself upon the mercy of the purser for accommodation. Among the passengers were many tourists, including the Raymond party, besides a large number of Honoluluans bound for the Columbian Exposition and a tour of the States.

Early this morning the lei makers could be seen gathering in groups along Nuanuu street, most of them with their Sunday clothes on, and by eleven o'clock the Oceanic wharf was fragrant with the flowers which scores of native men and women offered. By half past eleven the decks of the Australia were crowded, and a constant stream of passengers and residents flowed over the gangway.

Among the outgoing passengers, Dr. Bowen of the New York World was a prominent figure. He could hardly be recognized through the leis which covered him, placed there by his many friends and acquaintances. But every body was enveloped with leis, and when the band was playing the last time and the big ship was swinging away from the wharf, good-byes were repeated by flinging handfuls of leis from ship to shore and back again. It was, on the whole, as large a farewell demonstration as any vessel ever received at the Oceanic dock.

MR. EMMELUTH REPLIES.

He Takes Issue With the Statements of Vivas and Camara.

EDITOR STAR:—Having presented the petition of Portuguese residents to the Councils on Monday, I wish to give the lie to the statements made by Mr. Vivas in your issue of yesterday and by Mr. Camara in a letter to the Advertiser this morning. I am neither against Portuguese representation in the Council nor did I instigate action of any kind by Mr. Dias, Gouveias or any one else. My whole conviction with the matter is as follows: I received a telephone message Sunday morning stating that a number of Portuguese wished to meet me at 4 p.m. that day at a store down town. I met the gentlemen and they, through the chairman, handed me the petition previously prepared, which as above stated was presented to the Council on Monday.

Following up the story of their communication they stated that quite a large number of the colony are out of employment and that if possible they would like to see some of their people in the different bureaus of the government. I advised them in effect to organize an employment committee of representative Portuguese, and through such committee endeavor to solicit employment not only from the government but from anyone requiring help, and in that way assist in relieving the distress which is found by the government to exist quite extensively among all nationalities and which has already claimed the attention of the Councils in the way of devising remedial measures. In conclusion I would commend to the Portuguese colony the spirit of the motto "United we stand, divided we fall."

Purging the Services.

Marshal Hitchcock has sent letters of instruction to all sheriffs to investigate charges against deputies informed against as having signed the roll of the royalist leagues. The marshal informed the sheriffs to invite all deputies to sign articles of disavowal, but not requiring it in cases when the royalist leagues have been signed, the ratification of that fact and the signing of avowal rolls, or resignation must be required.

These supplies came from California, where the industry is growing in the ratio of the increasing demand. While hemlock bark does not contain more than 8 per cent of tannic acid, and the best oak more than 18 per cent, it has been demonstrated that the palmetto yields from 11 to 12 per cent. Thus the forests of the South have an exhaustless supply of tanning material. White oak and hemlock bark must be peeled in a certain season, the palmetto can be worked all the year round. Tanning, which has heretofore been a Northern industry, can thus become equally native to the South.
