ROOSEVELT GETS WORST OF CONTESTS BAD FEELING DEVELOPING AT CHICAGO AND POLICE CALLED

No Holiday May Mean No Cleanup Day

Cleanup Day prospects are not so bright today as they seemed yesterday, owing to Acting Governor Mott-Smith's hesitation to proclaim the day a legal holiday.

A meeting of Cleanup Day executive committee has been called for two o'clock this afternoon at the chamber of commerce rooms, when the question will likely be considered of whether it is worth while going on if a holiday be not proclaimed. There was a meeting of the executive committee of the central improvement committee this morning, when it was decided to bring that question before the Cleanup Day body at the meeting just mentioned. This was after the acting governor had been communicated with, who stated that he would not announce a decision until Monday.

Mr. Mott-Smith, at the public meeting last night, spoke at length in support of the movement, leaving the matter of a holiday to the last. Although he had before him a petition for a holiday signed by nearly all of the large houses and many of the smaller ones, he stated that he doubted if many of the petitioners realized the full effect of making the day a legal holiday. It would apply to the whole Territory and might be an unwelcome precedent.

Hilo Wharf Contracts Awarded

The contracts for the construction of the wharf at Hilo and for filling in and dredging the wharf approaches and slip were awarded to the Lord-Young Engineering and the Hawaiian Dredging companies respectively by the board of harbor commissioners, who held a special meeting in the Senate chamber this morning.

Owing to the fact that the commission has not enough money at its disposal to construct a concrete wharf, proposal number 3 of the specifications was substituted for number 1. Number 3 calls for Nor-west pile construction, and wood upper structure with nor-west planking. This was awarded to Lord-Young on their tender of $84,000.

The contract for the filling-in work was awarded to the Hawaiian Dredging Company on their estimate of $64,849, the amount to be divided in half for two contracts, one to take effect within five days and other prior to August 1.

The Hawaiian Dredging Company was also awarded the contract for dredging in front of the Hilo wharf on their tender of $17,990. Work on all contracts will commence immediately.

A caucus of the commissioners was held at the residence of Colonel McCarthy yesterday evening and the question then came up of whether to postpone the work until after the legislative session and then call for new bids or whether to go ahead and construct a wooden wharf.

Colonel McCarthy favored the construction of a concrete wharf, but as the appropriation of the public works department has been nearly exhausted it would be necessary to wait for a fresh appropriation from the legislature in order to go ahead with the construction of a concrete wharf.

As the need of a new wharf at Hilo is very urgent, it was decided that it would be better to go ahead with the construction of a wooden wharf and thus avoid waiting for the appropriation and then the construction of a concrete wharf.

The bids were gone over again and it was decided to award the bids formally this morning at the special meeting. The specifications in the contract call for Nor-west planking, which is superior to the ordinary lumber used in construction, as the filtration of the water will not rot the piles.

Honolulu Men Tagged For Charity

"Everybody's wearin' 'em now," and instead put in an appearance at the various tagging posts along the street and appeared to be joyful for the first time in his life.

To say that the "tag day" girls raked the city with a fine-tooth comb as the bromide goes, would be a mild comparison. As a result of the campaign mapped out in advance there was scarcely a house that was not visited and no mere man got more than a block away from his breakfast table this morning without "digging" for a tag. They did it cheerfully, too, and when they got down they acquired more, for no one could withstand that, "O, please buy one from me, too," plea. Some of them carried a morning nap along Fort street

THE FOURTH OF JULY PARADE WILL HAVE FANTASTIC OUTFITS

That portion of the civic parade planned for the Fourth of July celebration, which is to be known as the "unique, ridiculous and horrible" section, will include some features never before seen in a similar parade in Honolulu.

J. Walter Doyle was notified this morning by Commodore Ray Irwin of the "Indoor Yacht Club" that the organization in question would have a "platform" in line. Commodore Irwin explained that the word "boat" was too suggestive of water to find place in the lexicon of the members of the "Indoor Yacht Club," this organization having leaped into immediate existence following a trial cruise of the yacht "Hawaii" prior to the departure of that vessel for the mainland. The present members of the "Indoor Yacht Club" were aboard and suffered, hence the antipathy.

Commodore Irwin did not go into details, merely stating that the club would be represented in proper style. Absalom, Honolulu's "houn' dawg," will make his appearance in the parade for this first time. A float on which Absalom will appear is now being designed, the plan being to show the momentous moments which have marked the career of Absalom.

James Quinn, who is in charge of the horse racing program for the Fourth, has received a number of letters but is desirous of securing more, notably in the cow pony events. It is Quinn's intention to have a number of events to include all classes of horses.

FEDERAL COURT

Lee Wah Chung, indicted on the charge of unlawfully importing smoking opium into the country, this morning pleaded guilty in the federal court. His sentence was continued for four weeks.

The case of Hung Hai Chung, charged with perjury before the grand jury, was today continued by the federal judge for the term. The case of Edward Gerrard, former mate of the ship Erskine M. Phelps, took the same course. Gerrard is accused of having assisted two man-of-war men to desert.

The petition of Ernest Collins to be adjudged a bankrupt was granted this morning by Judge Clemens. Wade Warren Thayer being appointed referee. Collins said in his petition that he owed $1048.23 on unsecured claims and was worth but $340.

RAPID TRANSIT COMPANY GIVEN TIME TO CITE LAW

The Territorial supreme court has given the attorneys of the Rapid Transit Company until Wednesday to find authorities to back their assertion that judgment can be entered by the court in the paving fight. Final decision on the matter will then be rendered by the court.

This morning the argument between Deputy Attorney General Smith and D. L. Withington continued until noon, when Mr. Withington for the Transit company asked for time to find authorities to back his assertion that after a decision in the case had been rendered, although there were certain important facts omitted in the agreed statement, judgment could yet be entered by the Territory and if the Territory would not submit a judgment then the court could enter judgment.

As soon as this is done, there will be nothing for the Territory to do but file a writ of mandamus, according to Mr. Smith, and the Transit company will then be able to appeal to the supreme court at Washington. If no writ is filed, there can be no appeal and the Territory can seek other means to force the transit company to abide by the decision of the court.

The argument will be resumed Wednesday.

THE DIVORCE MILL

Judge Whitney has granted a divorce to Inzo Izumihara from Nakano Izumihara on the ground of adultery.

Judge Whitney this morning ordered Joseph L. Trahan to pay his wife temporary alimony in the sum of $8 a week pending the hearing of her suit for divorce.

A divorce was today granted to Chika Koboyashi from S. Koboyashi on the ground of non-support.

John R. Silva, who is being sued for divorce, was today ordered to pay $4 a week temporary alimony, $25 counsel fee and the costs of court.

Personal Business Brings Him

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8.—Delegat Kuhio is returning to Hawaii on personal business. He will arrive on June eighteenth.

THE MAGIC ROSE GREAT SUCCESS

The younger pupils at the Kaimuki School for Boys presented a playlet called "The Magic Rose" at the school last night, quite an attendance of prominent people being present.

The play was given under the direction of L. Young Carrethers and he is to be congratulated on the successful production which must have taken a great deal of painstaking work.

The electrical effects were brilliant and the incidental music excellently rendered.

SAN CARLOS MILLING COMPANY IS NOW REGULARLY LAUNCHED

With over $300,000 of the $400,000 capital stock of the company subscribed for, and with more than ten per cent of the subscribed amount paid in cash, the organizers of the San Carlos Milling Company, Limited, today filed articles of incorporation with the Territorial treasurer, together with the proposed bylaws and list of subscribers for stock, and formally asked for a charter under the laws of the Territory. The articles are signed by J. P. Cooke, Alfred D. Cooper, Richard Ivers, M. P. Robinson, F. M. Swazy and E. D. Tenney.

The capital stock of the company is divided into 40,000 shares of a par value of $10 each, and the company will be authorized to increase its capital as it sees fit up to a limit of $1,000,000. The articles provide for the following officers and directors for the first term ending September, 1914: J. P. Cooke, president; G. H. Fairchild, vice president; Alfred D. Cooper, secretary; M. P. Robinson, treasurer; R. Ivers, F. M. Swazy, E. D. Tenney and W. Pfothauer, directors. The first stockholders' meeting will be held in September, 1914.

As generally known, the new company is organized for the purpose of establishing a sugar mill to handle cane on contract from a large area of land in the Island of Negros, Philippine Islands, and the enterprise promises to be a most profitable one under the contracts which have been entered into with Filipino growers for a term of forty years. The articles of incorporation, however, do not limit the activities of the company to any particular place, and are very broad, giving authority to conduct almost any kind of a mercantile, manufacturing, or transportation business.

It is understood that a meeting of the directors will be called very shortly, at which time definite announcement will be made concerning the plans for constructing the mill, wharves, railroads, etc., contemplated, as well as the appointment of a manager.

Appended to the articles of association is a list of the charter members of the company, in form of an affidavit of the officers. The list of members follows:

Joe S. Achong, A. A. Akina, Harry H. Allen, W. A. Anderson, Joe Andrade, A. L. C. Atkinson, A. D. C. Atkinson, H. A. Baldwin, Dr. W. D. Baldwin, Watson Ballentyne, C. Bayor, Wm. W. ### EIGHT-HOUR BILL AFFECTS HAWAII

There is a bill now in Congress, which has already passed the House and may by this time have passed the Senate—as it was being vigorously pushed at last accounts, which is liable very materially to affect Hawaii. This is the "Eight-Hour Bill," which limits hours of work on government enterprises to eight hours a day. An amendment to the bill, which has been passed, extends the operations of this law to territories, and consequently makes it apply to Hawaii.

A further amendment makes the application more closely affect this territory. It provides that not only shall the eight-hour law apply to all federal and territorial government work but that no materials for such work shall be bought if such materials have been produced by other than eight-hour work.

The probable result of this bill, if it becomes law, as is expected, will be to increase the cost of public work, including bridges, roads, wharves, and so forth.

United States District Attorney Breckons, who has been reading the debates on the bill, says, however, that it is provided that the law shall not go into effect until January, 1913, so that virtually none of the contemplated public improvements in Hawaii will be affected by its passage.

YACHT SEAFARER DELAYS START OF TRANSPACIFIC RACE

Secretary Vetlesen of the Hawaii Yacht club received the following cable from Captain Stroud of the yacht Hawaii this morning:

"Seafarer delayed, start Sunday four."

The above message evidently means that the yacht Seafarer will be unable to start on the date originally set for the race to commence and that the time of starting has been deferred until a week from tomorrow.

It looks from the message received this morning that there will be four starters, probably the Nattose, Seafarer, Lurline and Hawaii.

SHIPPING AND WATERFRONT NEWS

TROUBLE OVER SHIPPING OIL

British Steamer has no Couplings and Is Held-Up--Mauna Kea Leaves for Hilo This Afternoon--Monster Vessel Building--Harbor Jottings.

Honolulu is not fitted up with all the conveniences a port of its size should have, according to Captain Carruthers of the British tramp steamer Ikala that called in here and wanted 3000 barrels of oil.

It appears that the Union Oil Co. is willing enough to give the oil and Captain Carruthers is willing to take it but there is no method of getting it on board the tramp steamer. When he was in San Francisco someone persuaded Carruthers that a five-inch pipe flange would fit any connection used the world over. He finds, however, that it will fit none of those used in Honolulu.

Now, Carruthers wants the Union company to have a flange made that will fit his while the company wants Carruthers to stand the expense. In the meantime the morning paper has the Ikala on her way to Melbourne.

CANAL DISTANCES.

The Yokohama Economic Association, which has been investigating the effect which the Panama Canal will have on shipping traffic, has come to the conclusion that whereas the distance between Yokohama and New York via the Suez Canal is 13,043 miles, the route via the Panama canal is 9721 miles, the difference between the two routes being thus 3322 miles. Taking the average speed of mail steamers at 12 knots an hour, the Panama route will save eleven days. As compared with the route around Cape Horn, the new route is shorter by 8154 miles and saves 25 days. On the other hand the distance between Yokohama and London via the Panama canal is 12,491 miles as compared with 11,150 miles via the Suez Canal, the difference being 1341 miles, so that traffic between Yokohama and London will continue to take place via Suez, even after the opening of the Panama canal.

TO OUVRAIT TITANIC.

After the Hamburg Amerika line had announced the building of a ship, the Imperator, of greater dimensions than the greatest Olympic of the White Star fleet, the Cunard Company began planning a still bigger steamship, the Aquitania. The Imperator is designed to be 900 feet long and to measure 50,000 tons gross, and the Aquitania, while no longer, will be of greater tonnage.

Shipping folk have been waiting to hear what the North German Lloyd was going to do. They heard today when a cable came to Oerichs & Co., general agents of the line in New York, saying that a new colossus had been ordered from the Schichau Shipbuilding Company of Danzig, and that she will be completed not later than August, 1914. Her tonnage will be about 54,000. The new ship will cost $10,000,000. One of her features will be the substitution of bedssteads for berths in all rooms.

Other ships of similar tonnage, or perhaps larger, will, it is said follow the unchristened colossus. This naturally inspires the question as to the disposition of the ships of the North German Lloyd fleet like the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse and others of somewhat less speed still in the Atlantic service. The probability is, a German steamship man said tonight, that these ships will go into service between Bremen, San Francisco and the Far East by way of the Panama canal.

Philip Heineken, head of the North German Lloyd Company, was in New York several months ago and spent most of his time looking over facilities for docking ships on the Pacific Coast and inspecting the Panama canal. The French line has announced that it will establish a service between Havre and the Pacific by way of the canal.

THE COMING POWER.

The most advanced students of motive power for ocean vessels are convincing many persons interested in maritime affairs that the day of the oil fuel, by use of the gas engine, is at hand, and that the Leviathans of the oceans in the future will be far different from the steamships that are in operation at the present time.

The performance of the Seelandia, driven by gas engines, in her recent voyage from the Orient to England, has attracted the attention of the sea-faring world and has resulted in the ordering of several vessels to be propelled by the same class of engines.

The space given heretofore to the coal bins in the ocean steamships can be added to the cargo space under the new system, while great saving of costs can be effected not only through the lower cost per mile with the gas fuel, but through the dispensity with the service of many stokers and assistant engineers.

As one party puts it, two or three engineers on duty can run an ocean steamship without the aid of firemen and can have ample time to read their books, for the automatic supply to the engines leaves them nothing to do save to attend to the bells as to speed and machinery control.

Vessels equipped with this system of motive power will be ideal for the tropics, and thousands of human beings will be relieved from the suffering occasioned by deadly temperatures in the boiler rooms of steamships of the present type.

Throughout the entire belt of the tropical seas in all seasons, and in those of the temperate zones in the summer season, these boiler rooms of steam vessels have been veritable hells to the men whose duties required them to work in them.

In not only the merchant service, but in that of the navies of the world this newly devised system will be hailed with delight if it is found to be all that its friends claim it to be. The attention of the practical men now being concentrated upon it a few months at the farthest will disclose its points of advantage and disadvantage, and its general adoption is certain if found to be efficient and meritorious.—Exchange.

Bound for Hilo the schooner S. T. Alexander left Eureka on June 6 with a cargo of lumber. The steamer Politikan of the Harrison-Direct line which left Antwerp on May 25 is expected to reach here on July 20.

The Matson steamer Lulline left for Kahului yesterday afternoon with the ship William P. Frye in tow. Although Billy Reid is mentioned as being slated for purser on the Ventura nothing had been decided when the Sonoma left the Coast. So strong has become the rumor, however, that when the Sonoma went on the Panama trip Purser McNulty was hailed as Reid, the idea down there being that Reid was to have the Sonoma.

The steamer Waiatale will arrive on Monday morning with 7500 bags of sugar. The schooner Inca is still unloading sugar at Mahukona.

The Likelike that arrived from island ports this morning brought 2239 bags of Kipahulu sugar, 2400 of Puno sugar, 96 bales of wool, 2 horses, 25 head of cattle and 80 pigs. The steamer Mauna Kea arrived from Hilo and Maui ports this morning and leaves again on the special trip for Hilo at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

She brought 3 horses, 2 mules and 250 packages of sundries. The work of tearing down the old Kaimiloa is going ahead fast.

All Chinese Nine Excites Comment In Gotham Town

NEW YORK, May 23.—One of the most convincing evidences of the prospects which the future holds in store for baseball as an international pastime was the exhibition which the Chinese college team put up against the Fordham nine in the game played at the Polo Grounds yesterday.

Where is the old diamond game to be unknown fifty years from now? Is it visionary to suppose that the time will come when the winners of the big league pennants in this country will have to meet teams from every one of the other three quarters of the globe in order to gain the title of world's champions? Perhaps you would not think so, if you had been at 155th street yesterday.

The Chinese team did not play a brand of ball which makes it likely that the ticket-takers sent wireless messages to John McGraw, telling him that he ought to get scouts on the trail of the little easterners. The Fordham 3-0 victory was deserved. The Chinese were weak in hitting, and their pitching staff did not compare favorably with the work of Walsh, the Fordham slab artist, who really put up a first class exhibition of sending them over the plate. As fielders the Hawaiians did some remarkably good work. The infield was slightly erratic, but, on the whole, the way they covered their territory was better than that shown by the average big college ball team in this country.

The surprising thing about the personnel of the visitors was that the players were so young. It was expected that the students would be very mature in age, but, as a matter of fact, they were younger than the Fordham players. Luck Yee, the pitcher, is a lad only nineteen years old—and it must be admitted that he was a great deal more capable than the majority of twirlers of his age in interscholastic ball circles around this city.

Although the team is listed under the name of the University of Hawaii, more than half of the fifteen men in the squad are students in the high schools of our island possessions. The team is a pickup one, made up of students who wanted to see the world, and the average age of the visitors is not sufficient to get the campaign managers excited, even if they could register at the polls.

Quite a laugh was raised at the expense of a newspaper man who came over to the Chinese bench to interview the players. Walking up to a Chinese in street clothes, who was seated nearest the end, he said: "Me want see manager," and accompanied the remark with gestures which he thought appropriate.

"Mr. Yap has stepped back in the grandstand," said the Celestial blandly. "If you'll take a seat I think that he will be back shortly."

All the Chinese appeared to speak excellent English. Not one who was introduced to the writer but acknowledged the incident in a manner identical with that which would be used by the average American youth.

E. K. C. Yap, the young man in charge of the expedition, speaks such faultless English that he gives the impression of having been educated at an English or American university. He smiled when this was remarked, and said that he had secured his knowledge of American right on the island of Hawaii.

country for three months more, and are in the way to pick up some good baseball experience.

Lai Tin, the third baseman, is the best batter, and showed some lightning work on the bases. He traveled over the ground like a young meteor. When this was commented upon it was explained that the young man held a number of sprinting records, having repeatedly run the hundred in 10 1-5 seconds.

The programme printers made the Chinese names look like anything but the originals. Apparently the printer made a general allotment of Sun and Lung and called it a days work.

"Oh, the boys don't mind that," said Magnate Yap. "It's the writing in the scorer's book that worries them."

Kan Yen, the catcher in yesterday's game, is a remarkable utility man. He is one of the best three pitchers on the team and also plays in the outfield. Nothing to do till tomorrow. Sing Hung, right field, is captain of his school soccer team, and Lang Akana, the left fielder, is one of the best swimmers in Hawaii. Nearly all the players are proficient in at least one line of sport besides baseball.

MAUI HORSES IN TRAINING

WAILUKU, June 8.—About fifteen horses are at the track in Kahului, with the necessary corps of attendants, thus making quite a little city within the high board fence. Every morning the boys get out early, and all during the forenoon the horses are kept at the hard work, in preparation for the big day next month.

Probably the horse which is getting the most attention is the old favorite Maui, and when he comes out, he is watched keenly by everyone. Louis Warren has three likely looking horses, and they are all going well. L. von Tempisky bought two while on the coast recently, and they are some class.

That sterling performer Denervo, owned by Morrell of Hilo, will be here next week, and will be a regular worker on the race track until race day. It is possible that John O'Rourke will send one or two over next week, with more to follow later on.

CORRESPONDENT HAD A DREAM

This from the Hawaii Herald: HONOLULU, June 8.—George Ingle, the young boxer whose work in Hilo was so well liked, gained an easy decision over Ben de Mello at the Athletic Park on Saturday afternoon. Gans was knocked out by Moriarty in the fourth round. The Japanese boxer, Yamogata did not face Young Milne as anticipated, his place being taken by Lyman, who gained the decision over Milne.

The above is correct with the exception that Yamogata did face Milne "as anticipated," and that his place was therefore not taken by Lyman, whoever the latter may be.

Accuracy is generally looked on as a desirable trait in a correspondent but when the latter possesses the imagination with which the Herald's representative is gifted accuracy is relegated to discard and imagination very properly reigns in its stead.

MADAME ABADIE RETURNS. The customers of the French Laundry will be pleased to hear that Madame Jean Abadie returned by the Sonoma. Madame Abadie traveled extensively on the mainland and familiarized herself with the most modern methods of dry cleaning and laundry work.

DE MELLO IN HOODOO CABIN

HILO, June 6.—Ben de Mello had a just decision given against him at the end of the fifteenth round on Saturday last in Honolulu at the Athletic Park. Ingle was his adversary. Ben put up a good fight, but not such a fight as was expected of him. There was a great crowd to view the afternoon's open-air performance, and, by the way, the outdoor and daylight boxing exhibitions are a great improvement over the indoor and night bouts.

A funny thing occurred to de Mello on the return trip from Honolulu. It seems that the agent in Honolulu who sold de Mello his ticket for Hilo had lost a few dollars on the fight, and, by way of relieving his feelings, he gave de Mello room 23 aboard the Mauna Kea.

Everybody noticed that de Mello was "23" and his kind friends did not avoid remarking on what they called the "coincidence."

De Mello will put up some good fights yet, in spite of the fact that he gave Ingle in Honolulu a comparatively easy triumph.

SPORT NOTES FROM HILO

Hawaii Herald: Last Sunday afternoon, at the Hoolulu traps, the Hilo Gun Club had a fifty bird shoot at unknown angles. The rise was sixteen yards, and most of the gunners made good scores. The full scores were as follows: Bartels, 13; Baiding, 28; Cool, 33; Shoening, 31.

Jack Desha is doing great work on the diamond at Harvard. Theodore Kelsey, son of the well-known Hamakua man, writes his father to the effect that in a game between Harvard and Bowdoin, Desha knocked out a three-bagger and then got home safe. The hit was the best made during the game, and the Kelsey boy was very proud of his countryman. Kelsey adds that every time Desha went up to the bat he made a hit, which is going some for sure. The game was played on May 3, and Harvard won, 4 to 0.

On Tuesday evening there was a meeting of prominent men interested in the formation on this island of a yachting and boating club. H. V. Patten of the First Bank of Hilo being the moving spirit of the whole affair. He gathered around him such men as Webster of Theo. Davies & Co., H. B. Mariner, Attorney Rolph and Schoening, and there were all evidences of something material in the way of success coming through. Another meeting will be held very shortly with the idea of making the venture stick.

HERE'S A GAME WORTH WHILE

The Oahu and Stars will play a game at Atkinson Park tomorrow afternoon, starting at 1:30.

The line-up will be as follows: Stars: T. Kissel, p; V. Nascimento, p; Dimond, 1b; Gus Gomes, 2b; Pete Weikui, 3b; C. Rawlins, ss; J. Silvs, lf; W. W. Ah Sun, cf; Abe, rf; George Lindo, Kael, subs.

Oahu: Willie de Rego, c; Robert H. Okita, p; Johnny Mendonca, 1b; Frank Roman, 2b; Charley Barabozza, 3b; David Phillips, ss; Johnny Souza, lf; Daniel Joseph, rf; August Pereira, cf; Vasco Rosa, sub.

At Makiki this afternoon there will be a cricket match between eleven representing the Honolulu School for Boys and the Honolulu Cricket Club. Play will start at 2 p. m.

The teams: Honolulu School for Boys — H. Blackman, Mr. Withington, Mr. Winkley, I. Tesch, L. Carothers, L. Packett, L. G. Blackman, A. Johnstone, J. Reid, G. Lorrie, C. Osborne, R. A. Anderson (champion of the Philippines).

Australia vs. The Rest will be cricket game next Saturday.

Jack Cordell Is Matched to Box Johnny M'Carthy

Johnny McCarthy's next opponent will be Jack Cordell, the Coast middleweight who arrived from the Coast by the S. S. Sonoma yesterday.

The contest will take place at the Athletic Park on June 29 and the distance will be fifteen rounds.

Cordell agrees to make 155 pounds two hours before the fight.

A go between Cordell and McCarthy will be a great treat for the fans. Both men are willing boxers and hard hitters and both can stand the gaff without flinching.

Cordell has been out of the game for some time and is perhaps not as good as he once was. At that the pull of the weights will give him an undeniable chance with McCarthy.

Should McCarthy best Cordell his stock will boom considerably. The match furnishes a chance for the Coast welterweight to get into the pugilistic limelight and should he succeed in putting Cordell away his services will be in demand wherever he chooses to locate.

The San Francisco boy will enter the ring weighing about 141 pounds. Good Matches Made.

The bout on August 3 will be between George Ingle and Tommy McFarland.

On August 31 Johnny McCarthy will do battle with Kid Miller who arrived by the S. S. Sonoma yesterday. Miller would have stopped off on this trip had he not posted an appearance forfeit to meet Buddy Anderson in a twenty-round contest in Klamath Falls at the end of this month. Anderson is a tough nut and Miller is certainly boxing in good company.

Miller will return to Honolulu to train for his bout with McCarthy on or about August 1.

The card for June 29 is being pieced together and already has a very attractive look.

Denny Lesry and Trooper Bauer-sock will meet in the semi-windup and the winner will be matched to fight Ben de Mello in Hilo on July 4.

Another preliminary will be a six-round go between Kradalac of Schofield Barracks and Williams, the fighting conductor. Both men are already in training for the bout.

The curtain-raiser will probably be a four-round bout in which Yamogata the Japanese and a local lightweight will figure.

The soccer team will play in the colors of the McKinley High School and the game at Hilo will practically be for the inter-island championship.

The baseball aggregation will play under the name of the All-Honolulu. The two teams will all go up together and there may be an unattached runner or two and a couple of boxers go along with them. A distinctive badge is being printed for each member of the party.

The expedition will be the largest that has gone from one island to another in the annals of local sport.

HOLIDAYS AND THE CLEANUP

If Honolulu's Cleanup day is to be a success, either the Governor must declare a legal holiday, which will cover the whole Territory as such holidays must, or the business men of Honolulu should agree to close up voluntarily and release their delivery wagons, horses and men for the public tanks proposed. Otherwise Cleanup day will be a farce or a failure. Every cart, every dray, every draught horse, every workman and every citizen must have nothing else to do at the appointed time but to assist in Honolulu renovation, if renovation is to come at all.

There are, as the Acting-Governor pointed out last evening, things in the way of official action. A holiday, by executive proclamation, stops certain wheels of business everywhere in the Territory, court proceedings, bank business, inter-island schedules, etc., and enables larger wages to be claimed if wage-work is required. If a holiday is enforced on the other islands for the benefit of Honolulu it may be sometimes enforced on Honolulu for the benefit of other islands and mix things up generally. Hilo and the island of Hawaii may next call for the privilege, partly at our expense.

For our next Cleanup day the holiday may be practically localized by joint action of the merchants; but it would be wise, we think, when a purely local segregation of a day is desired, to get the power for it from the Legislature. That is to say, let us obtain for the mayor and supervisors the power to declare a public holiday within their jurisdictions. That would simplify matters a great deal in future, for this port, for its own sake, should have a cleanup day at stated intervals.

Money That Went Begging

Perhaps there is no more curious chapter in the history of the chancery courts than that of two Pittsburg men. The first had a claim to a small estate abroad; but he did not have the money to pay the claim agency to make a search. So he got a friend to back him. This friend's name was Peterman, and the money he advanced was like a grub-stake—he was gambling on his friend's claim proving up. One day, when Peterman was at the claim agency office, he came upon this advertisement in the agency files: "Peterman (Albertus), musician, born in Amsterdam, 1829, son of Charles Frederick and Henrietta Savannah Gasman. Left for Liverpool, 1856. He is sought for inheritance by M. Coniot, avocat, 21 Boulevard St. Germain, Paris." That was the inception of the famous "Kinsey docks" case, the name coming from the fact that the original Peterman was last seen at the Kinsey docks in Liverpool. The claim agency took the matter in hand, traced Peterman's lineage back, and enabled him to establish a good claim to an inheritance of $200,000. That was a case of fortune being thrust upon a man.—Lewis Edwin Theles, in Harper's Weekly.

Are Women Human Beings?

The women of our age in most countries of the same degree of development are outgrowing the artificial restrictions so long placed upon them, and following natural lines of human advance. They are specializing, because they are human. They are organizing, because they are human. They are seeking economic and political independence, because they are human. They are demanding the vote, because they are human. Against this swelling tide stands the mere mass of inert old-world ignorance, backed by the perverse misconception of modern minds, which even science fails to illuminate. "Go back," says this mass. "You are women. You are nothing but women. You are females—nothing but females. All these things you want to do are male things. You cannot do them without being a male. You want to be males. It is abhorrent, outrageous, impossible!" All these adjectives and horrors would be freely granted if women really could become males—or even if they wanted to! But what needs to be hammered into these male-ridden minds is that these things the women want to do and be and have are not in any sense masculine. They do not belong to men. They never did. They are departments of our social life, hitherto arbitrarily monopolized by men, but no more made masculine by that use than the wearing of trousers by Turkish women makes trousers feminine or the wearing of corsets by German officers makes corsets masculine.—Charlotte Perkins Gilman, in Harper's Weekly.

The Greatest Self-Deceiver

I believe Theodore Roosevelt could convince himself, if elected for a third term, that his rule was indispensable, and we have on the authority of one of his chief supporters the doctrine that whatever is right is constitutional. It is but a step to convince himself that anything is right. With that disposition and that theory, government of laws has passed away and with it trial by jury and conviction to his blinded supporters, and a large portion of them gulped it down without a qualm. It was an astonishing piece of effrontery. He simply put his thumb to his nose and wagged his fingers in the face of the American people. And a considerable section of them forthwith burst into cheers. That is the wonderful part of it all; the wonderful part. But the cheers cannot last. The cornerstone of Roosevelt's candidacy is that block of crumbling clay. No lasting edifice can be built on it.—Harper's Weekly.

Problem of Prolonging Life

Over in France there is working Metchnikoff, the winner of the Nobel prize. Metchnikoff believes that the present normal tenure of our lives is unduly restricted, and that it ought to be possible to extend our lives through substantially longer periods. He believes that the cause of sleep is the accumulation during working hours of certain toxic substances which cause the phenomena of sleep, and which during sleep are removed. Similarly, he believes that the phenomena of old age and normal death are produced by certain other toxic substances gradually and continuously accumulated. Starting on this basis, he is devoting his life to the attempt to extend the lives of others. It is true that Metchnikoff is a man of science peculiarly difficult to estimate. He has made mistakes; but he has also done things—and big things, too. Certainly this much may be said: His attempt is absolutely scientific, legitimate, and, from the present standpoint of biological research, entirely sensible. There should be no cause for surprise should he succeed. But what would his success mean? Who can tell? It would transform the world into forms and conditions that we cannot imagine. During the fifteenth century the average length of life was about twenty-three; it was a world of youth. In our day it is about forty-four. It would be difficult for us to imagine the difference in the appearance of a public gathering in our day and in that past Elizabethan era—in the mere age of its members. If science could extend the present average age from forty-four to a hundred, it must be remembered that it would mean a corresponding extension of youth.—Professor Robert Kennedy Duncan, in Harper's Magazine for June.

INDECISION

By WALT MASON.

Old Jasper can't make up his mind; he looks before, he looks behind, and springs a grist of hems and haws and quotes a string of ancient saws, and asks advice from Dick and Tom, and gets no benefit therefrom. He's always on the ragged edge; he makes a plan, and then he'll hedge, discard it for another plan, and then on that he'll tie the can. When Jasper started his career propitious gods were smiling near; he had more chances to succeed than any swayed-back mortals need; but always he would hem and haw, and shy at bogies made of straw, and pause to read the book of rules, and manufacture obstacles. And Jasper, as we go to press, is snorting round in great distress. He's been abandoned by his frau; the sheriff levied on his cow; he has no place to sleep or eat; the coppers shoo him from the street. "I never had no luck," he cries, and with his whiskers wipes his eyes. "By all the fates I've been accursed; the world has kicked me from the first." I see lots more, from day to day, all headed down the same old way. The lane of indecision goes into a region rank with woes.

LITTLE INTERVIEWS

RAY WALL—Tag day we shall always have with us—just like the poor and the Mahuka site case.

A. H. CATHCART—I really believe I broke the record for the hundred yard dash this morning. I was in a hurry anyway.

ED TOWSE—I believe that 25,000 cans and bottles are thrown out in Honolulu daily. That is what makes cleanup day a necessity.

LESLIE SCOTT—I Roosevelt and Bryan should be nominated by their respective parties, we shall have plenty of fireworks during the campaign.

JACK CORDELL—Honolulu seems to be a busier place than when I was here two years ago. What struck me most is the number of soldiers on the streets and in the cars.

FRED WALDRON—I am out hot and heavy to get Charlie Bockus's goat on the golf links. Sure, Bockus is the tennis sharp—that's the reason I'm playing golf with him.

L. G. BLACKMAN—I believe that Joao has the makings of a good long-distance runner. He is only a youngster and is going into the Haleiwa race to do his best. He may create a surprise.

D. H. GILMORE—We are being rushed by people wanting to make a trip on the Sonoma. Lots of people have been on board to look her over and there have been no kicks coming.

INSPECTOR GIBSON—It is not at all necessary to have cleanup day a holiday. The children can spend part of the day cleaning up the school yard, but they can not afford to lose the whole day, as examination time is drawing near.

CAPTAIN RILEY—I am not going to give out any more Little Interviews. The boys up town are always asking me how I manage to work the reporters and I am tired of trying to explain that it is the reporters who work me.

E. M. EHRHORN—Forty-eight packages of fruit and vegetables were taken away the past month from immigrants at the United States immigrant station, which came from China and Japan.

JACK McVEIGH—I have been in town for a week or more helping to get the girls of the Kaplani Home moved into their new quarters on the bluff on the Ewa side of Kalia valley. They are going to have a mighty fine place up there.

WILL COOPER—I hear that Private C. A. Leaster, Co. F, Second Infantry, and an entry in the Haleiwa Marathon, is a good long-distance runner and the most promising dark horse in the race. He is said to be able to jog along at a ten-mile-an-hour clip for a long time.

DR. NORGAARD—We have erected a new lethal chamber along the lines laid down by the San Francisco humane society. We can kill twenty-four dogs in five minutes and none of them feel the slightest pain whatsoever.

RALPH S. HOSMER—It is encouraging to note that the native Hawaiian forest shows every indication of recovery. There has apparently been no setback since the trees started to grow again and undergrowth of cedar.

NO HOLIDAY

(Continued from page one.) There was a good representation of the district improvement clubs present at the meeting, held in the mahai pavilion of the Alexander Young hotel roof garden, and after reports of committees—all of them very cheering—had been received, President I. von Damm called for general remarks, which brought up a lively discussion on the holiday question. J. A. Gilman started it with a strong plea in favor of a legal holiday, without which the volunteer workers of his district, Waikiki, would be unable to turn out. Emil A. Berndt, chairman of the cartage committee, said it would be impossible to get sufficient drays if a holiday was not declared. Ed Towse, captain of the largest district, the business center one, said he had about ninety volunteers already enlisted, with 120 in sight, and he was sure that seventy-five per cent of them would not turn out unless it was a legal holiday. Joseph P. Cooke and Jas. L. McLean favored a voluntary closing of business houses, which they thought fully attainable, in preference to a legal holiday. H. T. Mills moved that it was the sense of the meeting that a legal holiday should be proclaimed. This was seconded and carried with only five voting in the negative. Mr. Mott-Smith asked if there were not enough civic pride to carry out the program even without the granting of a legal holiday. Walter G. Smith observed that probably the horses and drays were without civic pride, yet they were indispensable to the success of Cleanup Day. F. J. Lowrey did not think the meeting had understood the full bearing of the question when it voted, and he would move that an effort be made to have a voluntary business closing if the acting governor declined to proclaim a holiday. A point of order was raised against the motion and a delegate, understanding that the chair had sustained the point, moved that the meeting adjourn which being seconded was carried by the bulk of the assembly rising. The mover was not aware that the silence he broke into was due to the chair's request that Mr. Lowrey put his motion into writing. No discourtesy was intended. President von Damm, in opening the meeting, spoke of the effect the cleaning of Honolulu would have on its reputation abroad. Personal motives or ambitions were not actuating the workers and he regretted the criticism that Cleanup Day placed a premium on official negligence. Its great value was its educative influence. At the same time, if the volunteer inspectors found any evidences of official neglect, there would be no hesitation about criticizing and reporting such. He made a strong plea for a public holiday. Acting Governor Mott-Smith desired to be regarded as a citizen rather than an official in the movement. If he did not believe in the cleanup proposition he would not be present. He spoke of last year's cleanup, which was suggested by an emergency, and said that a citizens' movement for cleanliness gave the city a better name abroad than official reports. After a reference to the work the women were doing in having fences removed and other things to make the city beautiful, he read the program for Cleanup Day with passing comments. In conclusion he dealt with the holiday question as already stated. George W. Smith made an effective speech on the many advantages of a clean city, prefacing his remarks with an appreciation of the readiness of the citizens to come together on any occasion of civic betterment. It was a great thing to be able to inform the traveling public that Honolulu was a cleaner city than Calcutta, Shanghai, Hongkong or even San Francisco. They were their brother's keepers and Americans should teach cleanliness by example. Too often the blame for bad conditions was laid on the governor, the superintendent of public works, the board of health or the supervisors when the citizens were responsible owing to either inaction or obstruction. Major J. M. Kennedy, chief medical officer of the Department of Hawaii, U. S. A., announced that the movement had the moral rather than actual backing of General Macomb. He explained this statement by saying that General Macomb gave assistance to the mosquito campaign, but people here wrote to Washington complaining that soldiers in uniform were imposing on citizens. In consequence the commander was called upon from Washington for an explanation, hence could only now give moral support to this movement. Dr. Kennedy said the local board of health was as active a one as he had ever encountered. He told of the work of Colonel Gorgas in Cuba and the Canal Zone and said equally good results to those obtained in those places could be had in Hawaii if the citizens backed up the board of health. Walter G. Smith spoke of the importance of a clean city to tourist promotion work. Many travelers on transoceanic steamers inquired of the officers if it was safe to come ashore and look around in Honolulu. Hawaii had always had climate and scenery—the believed Captain Cook praised the climate—but it was the cleanliness of Honolulu which induced tourists to come here. "We want the people abroad to know that no epidemic from the Orient or elsewhere can get a foothold that will kill a white man in Hawaii, or any man who wants to live the white man's way." There should be two cleanup days each year. He would like to see Cleanup Day as firmly fixed in the calendar of holidays as Arbor or Floral Parade day, and if it was inserted in the list it would speak well for public spirit, and would be one of the strongest promotional arguments. Instead of being symbolized as a maiden dressed in the garb of one of those "religious" dancers, he would like to see Honolulu typified as a maid wearing working clothes with her sleeves rolled up, a cake of soap in one hand and a scrubbing brush in the other. Mrs. F. J. Lowrey, head of the outdoor circle of the Kiloahana Art League, was the first chairman of committee called on for a report. She told of the work the league was doing to rid Honolulu of unsightly objects, but said before we could have a clean Honolulu we must have a clean Honolulu. W. Wolters for the finance committee reported that about $1550 had been subscribed. He also reported for the labor committee showing its work well in hand. W. T. Pope reported for the committee on schools and boy scouts, that a school holiday was not desired, but the public and private schools would devote part of the day to cleaning up school premises and adjacent lots where needed. E. A. Berndt rendered a satisfactory report for the cartage committee.

ing around the posts and making collections. The staff of ladies included Mrs. W. L. Hopper, Mrs. Sanford B. Dole, Mrs. John Marcellino, Mrs. W. F. Hellbron, Mrs. A. E. Murphy, J. A. Rath, W. L. Hopper, Chester Livingston and James Bisknell. The automobiles bearing "the day" streamers which were used in the work were supplied by W. L. Hopper, W. F. Hellbron, Frank Atherton, C. M. Cooke, John Marcellino and the Rev. David Peters. The amount secured for the old folks' home through the "tag day" campaign will not be known until late this evening, but it is believed the "count up" will show that the fund for the purpose has been largely augmented.

TAG DAY

(Continued from page one.) so many tags that they looked like a patch of cotton in bloom as they peered along the streets and the more they bought the more they had to buy, for a showing of more than one tag indicated that the possessor was "easy." For every tag sold there was a tinkle in the tin box carried by the fair vendor, said noise being caused by pieces of currency ranging from one dime to one dollar. Six automobiles piled back and forth among the posts all day, collecting from the overflowing banks and bringing fresh supplies. At 10 o'clock all the printed tags had apparently been sold, for a makeshift card made its appearance with just the word "Tag" stamped upon it. This latter afforded another excuse for selling the person with a printed tag, "one of the new kind, you know." The girls of the Juvenile Bostonians were much in evidence and they proved excellent vendors. One of the "littles" girls of the company, who was "working" Bishop street, did a land office business with a number of the "littles" boys of the community who would have appeared to have broken into their savings banks, judging from their tag decorations. The waterfront was duly visited to gether with the immigrant station, the naval station, the marine barracks and the wharves and warehouses. In defiance of regulations the enlisted men from the various forts decorated their blouses with tags and paraded the streets in squads to show their sympathy with the cause. At the headquarters of the campaign in the Odd Fellows' hall the noise resembled a mint. Money was being resorted and counted as the coins were shaken from the boxes under the direction of Mrs. Jas. Bicknell and Mrs. H. E. Webster. The headquarters staff was busy in sending out details to places which might have been overlooked, and in traveling around the posts and making collections. The staff of ladies included Mrs. W. L. Hopper, Mrs. Sanford B. Dole, Mrs. John Marcellino, Mrs. W. F. Hellbron, Mrs. A. E. Murphy, J. A. Rath, W. L. Hopper, Chester Livingston and James Bisknell. The automobiles bearing "the day" streamers which were used in the work were supplied by W. L. Hopper, W. F. Hellbron, Frank Atherton, C. M. Cooke, John Marcellino and the Rev. David Peters. The amount secured for the old folks' home through the "tag day" campaign will not be known until late this evening, but it is believed the "count up" will show that the fund for the purpose has been largely augmented.

HAWAII SOCIAL NOTES.

Mrs. Delbert E. Metzger and Mrs.

Edna Metzger have just returned to Hilo from a trip around the island.

Mrs. Wm. McKay and her house guest, Mrs. Charles Fairer, were weekend visitors at the Volcano House and are enthusiastic over the wonderful entertainment Madam Pele is offering.

Mr. Ralph Richards returned on the Honolulu to spend his summer holidays with his family. He returns to Stanford in the fall, there to resume his studies.

On Monday afternoon the ladies of the Eastern Star gave an elaborate tea to celebrate the thirteenth anniversary of the organization in Hilo. The affair was well attended and was a great success.

Miss Annabelle Low deserves the thanks and appreciation of the Hilo people for carrying through to successfully the very artistic entertainment given by her class in fancy dancing at the Masonic hall on Saturday evening, June 1. To single out any special feature, would be unfair in a program so uniformly good. The little people showed the result of careful training and reflected great credit on their teacher.

Miss Annabelle Low, one of our charming brides-to-be, was the honored guest at a handkerchief shower given in her honor by Miss Moir at her pleasant home at Peppakou. The afternoon was spent at cards, the prizes going to Mrs. Harold B. Elliot and Miss Low. Delicious refreshments were served at small tables and all enjoyed a delightful time. The guests were: The Misses Shipman (3), Hapal (3), Porter, Moir (2), Chalmers, Williams, Smith, Lennox, Spalding and Meadames Forbes, Shipman, Moses, Patten, Hieserman, Silver, Wright, Forrest, McGuire, Castendyke, Elliot, Bartels, Beamer, Webster, Ross, Lougher and Pullar.

Mr. L. A. Thurston, as the guest of Mr. R. W. Piller, spent several days at the mountain home of the Pillers at Twenty Nine Miles.

A reception at the Hilo High school was given on Friday at which the parents of students were agreeably entertained. Delicious refreshments were served.

Miss Henrietta Smith of Honolulu was the honored guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. C. Campbell at dinner at the Hilo hotel last Thursday evening. Those who were bidden to the feast were: Mr. and Mrs. C. K. McGuire, Miss Low, Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Jaton, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Austin, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. O'Neill, Mr. Geo. Cool and Mr. Ruddle.

FOREIGN LOAN STIRS CHINESE.

PEKIN, China, May 28.—The feeling is gaining ground among the Chinese that the international bankers' demands are too great. The entire Chinese press violently opposes the foreign loan, holding that the supervision demanded by the bankers is a disgrace and danger to China's sovereignty.

The opposition to the foreign loan is rapidly taking the form of a great wave of patriotism. It is affecting all classes and is unparalleled in Chinese history. Officials agree to receive salaries barely sufficient for a livelihood. Meetings are held in all the large cities and speeches are made exhorting the citizens to contribute to a national fund. The chambers of commerce in various cities receive subscriptions and house to house canvassing is going on. Women are giving jewelry to the cause and women's, boys' and girls' funds have been started. Some cities are raising funds by means of bazaars and exhibitions. In Hanchow the military staff contributed 30 per cent of their salaries; in Honan the officers have agreed to accept half pay, while in Wuchang the soldiers have decided to receive only three Mexican dollars ($1.50) a month. Thousands of soldiers in every province have agreed to take half pay.

Despite the popular enthusiasm financial authorities doubt the people's ability to raise a sum sufficient for the country's needs. Yet the movement is highly significant. It shows that the Chinese are no longer indifferent to their nation's wants, and thus it marks the beginning of a new era of patriotism, which may make China a world power like Japan.

FOURTH OF JULY PLANS FOR HILO

HILO, July 7.—On Tuesday last, in Judge Wise's office, there was a meeting of the executive committee of the Fourth of July celebration managers.

Many matters were taken up, and reports from the committees in charge of the doings for the great day, were read. Everything went off well, and the opinion of those in charge of the full program is that the coming Fourth will be the greatest ever celebrated in Hilo.

The committee took up the matter of appointing a marshal of the day, and R. T. Forrest was the man selected. It was felt that Mr. Forrest could fill the bill properly, and he will have full charge of the parade and other doings.

The matter of a salute was also taken up and, as it was found that the N. G. H. had to fire a salute anyhow, the committee left it at that. The Guards will fire one gun for every State in the Union, and the effect should be good.

The decorating of the chairs at Mookau Park was discussed, and the general opinion was that the seats should be draped with flags and other bunting. The special committee was put in charge of this matter.

The decorating of store windows in the town was also talked over, and a committee consisting of Mrs. R. T. Moses, Mrs. E. N. Holmes and Mrs. P. C. Beamer, was appointed to look after the matter.

Then the selection of an orator to deliver the patriotic address on the big day, was taken up. It was decided that Judge Parsons would be the one most likely to induce a good speaker to come from Honolulu. The matter was left in the judge's hands and he will write to several prominent Honolulu men about the matter.

The desire of the committee is to have the Hilo band lead the parade on the Fourth. R. T. Forrest was named as a committee of one to ask the supervisors for the use of the band. The matter of a reduced rate on the Hilo Railroad Company's lines and the Inter-Island steamers, was left to Judge Wise to look after. It is thought that cheap rates will be allowed by both concerns, and that in this way many country people will be attracted to Hilo.

Mr. Southworth was asked by the committee to take charge of the proposed cowboy carnival. The stunts are to be pulled off on July 5-6, and the cowboys will take part in the parade of the Fourth.

Southworth was instructed to go ahead with his plans as outlined by him at the parade committee meeting last week. It was felt that the county engineer is the right man for the job, and that he will bring the affair to a successful issue.

The plans of the ranchers were to have a cowboy carnival at Waimea, but it is hoped that the change will be made to Hilo. By June 15 definite word should be had about the proposition, and Mr. Southworth will report to Secretary Deyo by that date.

Those present at the meeting of the executive committee were: Judge Wise (chairman), R. T. Forrest, H. V. Patten, G. H. Vicars, Ah Hip, C. Shimato and E. N. Deyo. Another meeting will be held in the near future and progress will be reported.

THE THEATERS

Pretty and Effective.

Tonight is the last night of the "Dream Girl," the pretty little two-act operetta staged by the Juvenile Bostonians at the Liberty theater. Last night Dodie Canfield scored another big hit with her rendering of the famous Houn' Dawg song. This clever little girl is making a big name for herself in Honolulu and deserves all the praise she receives, for in addition to being a clever little actress, she shows originality, which enables to break away from the stereotyped lines of the piece.

THOM HELEN,

Thom Helen is worked hard in the "Dream Girl" and the fact is much appreciated. Miss Helen has a good voice and knows how to use it. Her rendering of "Mop Amour" last night was particularly pleasing. Dixie White has also made good in Honolulu and during the second act of the "Dream Girl" she catches the idea of the devil-may-care yachtsman in a way that adds greatly to the success of the piece.

One of the notable successes of the chorus has been the opening chorus of the second act, entitled, "Blushing Moon." This is by far the best effort the company has made as a whole and won several encores last night. There is not a dull moment in the "Dream Girl" and the attendance last night showed that it is being appreciated.

On Monday night the company will stage "Tips," a racing drama that is full of interest. The plot hinges around a famous racehorse. At the last moment the villain drugs the jockey and the hero rides the horse to victory. One of the features of the piece is the way in which the race is run around the theater.

A yodel quartet will be one of the features of the new piece and will be led by Lois Mason who has already made good in this kind of singing. Another of the song hits will be "If We Hadn't Any Women in the World." Lizzie Weller, the little trick pianist, pleased the audience during the interval with her many ways of hitting the ivories.

MALTA MEETING IS FOR PEACE

LONDON, May 28.—"Council of war" does not describe tomorrow's important and unprecedented meeting at Malta. "Council of peace" is the true designation, said an official of the foreign office today, speaking to the correspondent of the Daily News of the forthcoming conference of Premier Asquith, First Lord of the Admiralty Churchill, Gen. Ian Hamilton, Vice-Admiral Prince Louis Alexander of Battenberg and Lord Kitchener at the chief coaling station of the British Mediterranean fleet.

"The meeting is significant of two facts," went on the man of the foreign office. "The first is that the present is a look about you government. The second is that the chiefs of the empire finally realize the necessity of abandoning attempts to check German naval development. The corollary is that Britain must strengthen its defenses in the Mediterranean. From the start the idea of a limitation of German sea power in accordance with the needs of British security has been wholly beside the mark. Naturally Germany will build ships to meet the requirement of its own growth."

"It remains for Britain to divest its thoughts of all hopes of a compromise and proceed to make its armaments sufficiently great to render it practically impossible to rupture the peace. The Mediterranean is now our weakest spot. We made ourselves weak there in order to make ourselves strong on the North sea. The navies of Austria and Italy obviously stand with Germany. Presumably we can count on the navy of France, but it has never been the way of England to trust its fate to its neighbors, however friendly and powerful.

"Before us lies a great period of shipbuilding and fortification. One of today's papers describes the Mediterranean as the jugular vein of the British empire. Such it undoubtedly is and we are bound to see that no hostile combination has the power to cut our throat. It was a great day for us when Gen. Kitchener went to Egypt, for while Kitchener has little faith in soft words he has plenty of faith in sharp steel."

NEW NATIONAL ANTHEM PLEASES MUSICIANS

The need for a real national anthem so long felt and so recently voiced by President Taft in a message to the public schools, has stimulated many musicians to renewed efforts to write one. Among the most interesting of these recent attempts is one by Alexander Maloof, a young Syrian resident of New York, to words by Elizabeth Ferber Fred. It is entitled "For Thee, America."

Many musicians have heard this and expressed the opinion that its stately simplicity, the ease with which it can be sung by ordinary voices and picked up even by those who are not musicians make it fulfil the essential requisites of a national anthem.

ARMY POSTS BEING FENCED

Cows and other peaceful quadrupeds which stray within the bounds of military reservations after nightfall in search of food, will no longer face Quartermaster Edwards.

It is the intention to fence both the Lilehua and Fort Ruger reservations. The wire will be strung on concrete posts.

In the past the military authorities have had to settle a number of claims for cattle slain by sentries and have had some trouble with squatters on the reservation. The fencing is expected to do away with all this.

The Mutual Telephone Company has adopted the "Noiseless" typewriter as the most serviceable machine for its wireless telegraph department. As the typewriter makes no noise, the operator is enabled easily to copy sounds from the telegraph ticker as messages come into the office, without trouble and accurately. With a typewriter making as much noise as the ticker itself, this, of course, would be impossible. The "Noiseless" fully solves the problem.

TURKISH MINISTERS FIGHT AT A CABINET MEETING

LONDON, May 31.—A news dispatch from Constantinople says that the Minister of Marine and the Minister of the Interior had a stand-up fight at yesterday's cabinet meeting, as a consequence of the severe strictures appearing in the newspapers, which charge the Turkish fleet with cowardice for remaining in the Golden Horn instead of putting out to offer battle to the Italian fleet.

PAINLESS DEATH FOR STRAY DOGS

The famous Houn' Dawg song will soon become a thing of the past as far as Honolulu is concerned anyway, for there will be no dogs to "kick around." Or rather all of them will have a license and will be looked after by their owners.

Julius Asch, keeper of the government health resort, has been busy with hammer and saw and has erected a new lethal chamber, capable of holding twenty-four dogs. It is constructed from plans furnished by the San Francisco humane society and is looked on as being the quickest and at the same time the most humane way of killing off the strays.

There is a big wooden box, four feet by four feet by five feet. This is built very solid and has big heavy doors like an ice chest which make it absolutely air tight. A wire cage, fitted with rollers, is placed inside the box and holds the dogs.

When the animals are inside the box is filled with ordinary illuminating gas, 150 feet being sufficient to kill twenty-four dogs. "In two minutes," stated Dr. Norgaard this morning, "the dogs start to lie down as though they were going to sleep. In three minutes they are all dead. There is not a whimper from any of them, the gas making them feel sleepy. It is the most humane and at the same time the cheapest method that has yet been devised. The gas costs only two cents, whereas under the old method general information to the addresses mentioned."

DEFECTIVE WRIT OF ATTACHMENT

In the case of Mary J. Davis vs. Harry T. Mills, the supreme court in an opinion by Justice Perry sustains the exception of defendant to the circuit court's denial of a motion to dissolve an attachment. Other exceptions are overruled.

In the syllabus of the law of the case is set forth in effect thus: An assertion by the debtor that the indebtedness "will be fully and satisfactorily met later on" is sufficient as an acknowledgment and new promise to take the case out of the operation of the statute of limitations.

Parol evidence is inadmissible to explain or vary the plain meaning of the language of a written agreement.

The statute on attachment requires that the affidavit in support of the application for the writ show on its face that the indebtedness specified is "over and above all just credits and offsets."

The suit was on a demand note for $210 dated July 1, 1898, on which two years' interest had been paid and on October 3, 1902, the additional sum of $20 on account of interest. W. W. Thayer for plaintiff; C. F. Peterson for defendant.

WOMAN HIKES FROM NEW YORK TO CHICAGO TO PROVE HER THEORY OF LIVING

CHICAGO, May 28.—Mrs. David Beach stepped into the office of The Daily News at 10:10 a. m. today, having walked 1071 miles from the office of the New York Globe to Chicago in forty-two and one-half walking days, and on a diet of raw fruits and vegetables exclusively. Mrs. Beach murmured "Hurrah!" when she entered The Daily News office and completed the severe test she began April 19 in her contention that a vegetarian diet is best for those under severe physical strain.

The woman, who Mayor Gaynor of New York said would "not live to see Albany unless she drank something," came into the city from Windsor Park this morning with a fast, springy stride and a cheerful smile. Her face was tanned a dark brown and the sun had peeled her nose, but the raw food diet she had used left her strong after the long grind.

By MOLLIE MORRIS.
It was still early dawn and a part of the carefree world was yet asleep today when a jubilant alarm clock gave notice that it was time to start from the far north side to the equally far south side of town if Mrs. David Beach of New York, en route afoot to The Daily News office in Chicago, were to be met at 63d and Michigan at the appointed hour—7 a. m.

"Br-r-r! Get up or she'll beat you to it," was the warning and "I got you Steve," was the answer, and even as the slang phrase shaped itself in a drowsy mind the thought came that the tireless woman pedestrian was probably already abroad and trudging, having passed the night in Windsor Park ready to press onward today.

Corner Failure as Gateway.
Michigan avenue and 63d street present no adequate setting for the scene of a reception to a notable guest, and as a gateway to the city it is a failure, having train yards in the rear, a cow lot on one corner and excavations along 63d street. However, the rock pile of the road menders afforded an easy resting place for the photographer and myself as we waited for the walking party and speculated on the looks and feelings of a woman who had walked every step of the way from the Globe office in New York on a diet of uncooked vegetables, fruits and nuts. Would she be fagged and hungry? Right here it may be said she was not, and the reason I'll tell later as she did herself.

Shortly after the hour of 7 down 63d street, walking west, appeared three figures—a woman in a white sweater and gray skirt stepping briskly, and with her the expected newspaper men.

How Mrs. Beach Appeared.
As the photographer adjusted his plates the little party approached and instinctively the woman's hand reached to her cap and brushed back the little black curling lock of hair that strayed from beneath. The cap was a soft gray felt hat that had been provided with strings that held it in place in defiance of wind. The dark hair in the morning's dampness curled of its own accord and the face, deeply browned and burned by the sun and wind on the journey, looked fresh and happy and in nowise furrowed or lined as one might expect from so strenuous an undertaking.

The dark eyes were as bright as a child's, the figure, of medium height, spoke first of symmetry and agility. The white sweater was of silk knitted and the skirt a gray brilliantine that showed the hard usage it had received. One of the noticeable things in the costume were the shoes. They were built for comfort, thick soled and broad toed, high and laced in front. Twelve pairs, Mrs. Beach said she started out with and she had not needed all of them—four pairs properly chosen, she admitted, would have been sufficient.

"Well and Not at All Tired."
"Perfectly well and not at all tired," was the assurance the traveler gave of her fine physical condition. About nine pounds of flesh had been lost on the way, but she was better rid of that, she declared.

"But aren't you hungry? Wouldn't you like a real meal?" I couldn't help asking.
"Why, no, indeed?" came the answer quickly. "Don't you see I am better fed than if I had eaten of the usual things? The food I take gives me the utmost nourishment with the least possible work for the digestive organs and I never get hungry as do people who eat a lot of meat and pastry and drink coffee and tea. They are slowly starving themselves, for such things do not nourish, they simply please the palate and stimulate."

The Onlooker

By the Man at the Tailor Shop

The majority of tradesmen don't know how to advertise, but if they would look at the matter from the point of view of helping themselves instead of helping the paper, they would soon learn.

For instance: I saw in a dietetic magazine the other day a paragraph about a certain green food which was medicine for most folks and a delicious product for the table. It could be gathered fresh, if one knew precisely what to gather, but the author said the canned article was just as tasty and, besides, was free from grit. I had never heard that they canned it, so I went to a store to see. "Yes, sir," said the pleasant clerk; and after fumbling on a top shelf, in back, he brought a can of a standard brand, weighing a full pound. I gathered it in and a lady near by bought some also. That afternoon I was out walking with my undertaker and said I should dodge him for a good while yet, because I was able to get just the thing I wanted for my health in a convenient canned form. He wanted some too. He didn't know he could get any. So did my dentist. It was plain that the sellers, if they had advertised it a little could have sold out their stock. But it was less trouble to let the customer find out for himself.

This firm has advertising space in all the papers, and uses it to make the old-time formal and general announcements. Suppose it had taken out that enticing paragraph from the health magazine, reprinted it and followed it with this announcement: "We sell this product canned. It is as good as the magazine says." Don't you think they would have got up a lively trade for so popular a food? Why, for one, I'd have bought it weekly for a year past if I had only known.

Another point: Seeds are offered all over town, but the people don't know in what months to plant them with the best results. They ought to be told in the fashion of a Pittsburg nursery company which advertises in the Literary Digest in an attractive way, with a picture at the head of the story and the head: "From now until July 1—Not Later," then giving a list of seeds and bulbs, with prices.

Flash from the Coast is never properly advertised. Shad is one of the finest fishes in the world, and when it was being imported I heard lots of people say that they did not know such fish could be had here. If I had been selling them I'd have advertised where they came from and how to cook them, especially with a plank, and stirred up a gastronomic interest in them right away. But nobody dwells upon or recalls the mere announcement that somebody has a consignment of shad. It was the same way with a consignment on ice of those admirable Coos bay clams in soldered cans—a splendid addition to the menu. Most of them, for want of proper advertising, were finally thrown away.

Our tradesmen should see how the magazine ads read and follow suit. If they did they should have no time to grumble about dull trade.

The best Titanic poem I have seen is William Hardy's, read in London the other day in the presence of the King. Here is the concluding verse:
In the solitude of the sea,
Deep from human vanity,
And the pride of life that planned her, stilly couches she.
Over the mirrors meant
To flash forms opulent,
The sea-worm creeps—grotesque, unweaving, mean, content.

Few people know the dog Absalom as a genuine bloodhound, but he is. Where he came from nobody tells, but he is now as much of a character here as San Francisco's "Bum" was in the time of Emperor Norton. Innumerable Uncle Tom shows have made the public believe that the great Dane is a bloodhound, but the real chaser of Eliza, in slave days, was as lap-eared as Absalom. The Dane is preferred for stage purposes. He looks fierce, but he generally lies low when a burglar is in the house and he eats more than a growing boy.

Speaking of Uncle Tom I don't know whether that lively old barn-stormer play was ever given here or not, but I'd like to see it again. A few years ago when the town was full of amateur theatricals I thought it would reappear in Honolulu, especially as it had so many star parts—Uncle Tom, Eva, Aunt Ophelia, Legree, that New Orleans society father, Eliza and Topsy. But the amateurs preferred the topflop dramas and Uncle Tom's Cabin was left in lowly obscurity. I don't think any mainland company ever came with it. Perhaps they thought Honolulu was so far south as to attract southern Americans only; and it is a stage legend how, when the play of Uncle Tom first went south of the Mason and Dixon line, they had to leave out Legree and Eliza when they got to Richmond; leave out Eva and Topsy when they reached Charleston, let go of the bloodhounds when they got to Atlanta and Uncle Tom himself when they reached New Orleans.

I guess the only way to keep Kuhio from coming back here every few weeks will be to elect him to some home office, like mayor of Honolulu, and then he will go in the other direction to escape his official duty. We should probably succeed in keeping him on the mainland so long as he was paid a salary for staying here. As a critic of white and dependable officials, Kuhio is about the rawest example of the absentee salary-drawer I ever saw. I don't know what his real excuse is for coming home now; but his subterfuge one is decrepit enough. It may be that he is again weary of earning a little of his pay. Or he may be afraid to be confronted by Frear as to those Democratic "charges." He may want to pick up another secretary. But his pretended excuse is that he is tired of the Taft-Roosevelt row. But suppose he is? That shouldn't count against his fulfillment of a duty to Hawaii he was chosen to perform. It does not justify him in deserting the firing line of his party at Chicago nor in giving place to an alternate who may claim that he was not bound by the Delegate's instructions.

Johnny Martin is interested in spreading the white light of truth about Hawaii and in heading off scares and slanders. Sitting on the roof garden last night dissipating on lemonade and a poi cocktail and almost tempted to smoke, he and I had an earnest talk about it, which led to a reminiscence of Johnny's own.

"When I wuz over to San Francisco durin' the Midwinter Fair, I wuz walkin' one day down the Pay Streak, when I 'eard a feller barkin' in front of a tent with an 'Onolulu sign on it. I joined the crowd around 'im and 'eard 'im say: 'Ladies an' Gents, innib you can 'ave livin' p'cters of 'Onolulu which is a place where the cannibals come from. It's so 'ot there that they wear no clothes exceptin' a fan.'"

"I wouldn't stand for the likes of that, so I 'opped up an' said, 'That haint so! I jest come over from there. Everybody wears clothes in 'Onolulu.'"

But that didn't feaze that ere barker a bit. 'E looked at me an' sort of started back. 'This ere' said 'e, 'Ladies an' Gents, is one of them 'alf civilized, bleached cannibals that's just learned to wear clothes, such as they is; but, Ladies and Gents, 'e always eats 'is meat raw.' 'Say!' he yelled to me 'just come over 'ere an' lay down on that mat in front of the door and show this intelligent public as 'ow you gnaw a bone.' An' on that he fished out a soup bone from an old bag, which he 'ad got for his dog, an' laid it down on a dirty mat an' whistled to me. 'Wasn't that an 'ish way to treat a respectable Methodist? I tell you that was a good text in the Bible 'bout not stoppin' to take a dog by the ears an' goin' on about your business, servin' the Lord. You bet, after that, I knew when to let them sideshow barkers alone.'"

HILO TO VOLCANO RATE WAR IS ON

(Special Correspondence of the Star.)

HILO, June 7.—It is possible now to leave Honolulu on the Mauna Kea, arrive in Hilo next morning, take an automobile from the wharf to the crater of Kilauea, return to Hilo, visit Rainbow Falls and other points of interest, take the steamer once more and be landed in Honolulu the next day, and the cost will be only $33 for the whole delightful experience.

Talk about a rate war. Why it looks as if a bonus will be given every traveler before long.

While Superintendent Filler, of the Hilo Railroad Company, declares that his concern has started no rate war, and that the only object of the Kilauea Volcano Hotel Company is to enable poor people to visit the volcano, the rival transportation company says that it is out for gore, and that they think the general public would rather travel in an automobile from the wharf to the crater, instead of traveling per rail and then autobus.

Whichever way it goes, it is certain that the old days of expensive trips to the volcano are past. One company will do the whole business from Honolulu and return to that city, for $30. The other concern will do the trip, and throw in side shows besides, for three dollars more. That is going some, to use a sporting expression, and the result should be a rush of tourists and Honolulu people to the big island.

The new service of the Mauna Kea makes the cheap trips possible, and the Inter-Island company should reap a harvest in consequence of the innovation.

SENATE PASSES EIGHT-HOUR BILL

WASHINGTON, May 31.—By the decisive vote of 45 to 11 the senate today passed the house bill extending the eight-hour principle to contracts involving labor on government work. The negative votes were cast by Senators Bradley, Dillingham, Dupont, Gallinger, Heyburn, Oliver, Page, Root, Sanders and Wetmore Republicans, and Percy, Democrat.

The measure had been before the senate on several occasions and had been fully debated. On this account the discussion today was brief, consisting of statements by Senator Borah, in charge of the measure, and by Senator Bailey of Texas and Senator Sanders of Tennessee.

Borah and Sanders opposed the bill, the former on the ground that the government has no right to restrict any man in the matter of labor, and the latter on the plea that private concerns could not continue to take government work with the time limit imposed.

The principle involved in the measure has long been contended for by the labor interests. It provides that every contract hereafter adopted for the government requiring the employment of laborers or mechanics shall contain a provision that no laborer or mechanic doing any part of the work contemplated by the contract shall be required or permitted to work more than eight hours in one calendar day. A penalty of $5 is imposed for every violation of the provision.

STUDENT'S NIGHT

The Sunday evening service at Central Union church is to be a student's night. The address of the evening is to be given by the Rev. Akako Akana, who recently returned from completing his five years' course of study in Hartford Theological Seminary and who only a week ago was ordained to the gospel ministry. This will be the first opportunity for the general public to hear Mr. Akana since his ordination. Several schools have accepted the invitation of the church to attend in a body and a special invitation is hereby extended to all young people, especially to the English-speaking Hawaiian, Chinese and Japanese young people of the city to attend.

SHERIFF PUA PUTS REFORM OF THE HILO POLICE FORCE UP TO THE SUPERVISORS

(Special Correspondence of the Star.)

HILO, June 7.—At a meeting of the board of supervisors on Wednesday, a letter was received from Sheriff Sam Pua replying to a resolution criticizing the police force and their management. The sheriff claims that the police of Hilo "is above par, taking into consideration the amount of money the said police receive for salaries."

The sheriff goes on to show how limited in number the force is in proportion to the territory to be covered. He describes the three watches of the twenty-four hours and their duties, and in conclusion says in part:

"I will however admit that the said police could be made more efficient and I am glad to say that the resolution just quoted has pointed out the means and by whom such efficiency could be brought about. The resolution suggests two ways of obtaining improvement and efficiency:

"1. By transferring the incumbent of the office of captain of police of the said department who draws a monthly stipend of $100 to another position in the department, and

"2. By appointing another gentleman who you consider to be competent and efficient in his place at a salary of $150 per month. There's the whole thing in a nutshell. Improvement and efficiency in that particular office is to be had by increasing the salary from $100 to $150 per month. That has been my contention right straight along, gentlemen, if you want efficient men you must provide for good salaries. The same thing applies to the rest of the police officers or in fact to anybody in any walk of life. All over the world efficient men require good salaries. What can be expected of a police officer who gets from $40 to $45 per month for salary when the Japanese stevedores loading ships and to whom competency and efficiency does not apply receive more money per day for their services than the policeman does."

"Efficiency, I say again, can only be had by paying for it. Take the county engineer's office for instance; when that office was created you attached to it a salary whereby efficient men would be induced to take the office, and you did get a man whose capability, competency and efficiency can not be questioned. When he took over the office he likewise asked you for an appropriation with which to hire a capable, competent and efficient force of assistants. You gave him what he asked for without any restrictions as to how he should use it, you put no obstacles in his way and he is allowed to pay his men whatever he sees fit. What is the result? We have today a county engineer's department that any county, city, territory or state in the whole of the United States would be proud of, and energy, competency and efficiency rules supreme. Such is what sufficiency of funds can do. Did I have a fair show, gentlemen? Time and again I have asked you for additional officers; time and again I have asked you for better pay for the police officers; but all my requests and all my appeals have flown to the four winds. You gave me what you thought was good for my department and let it go at that. In other words you practically tied my hands behind my back and expected me to rear an efficient police force. When the crisis came and public sentiment was aroused over the state of affairs the police department was in, did you give me your right hand of fellowship? I must say no. Your very resolution voiced the public criticism that was hurled at me from all directions although I was doing the best I could under the circumstances. Gentlemen, all I ask of you is, that you give me your right hand of fellowship, give me the help necessary to put the police department in that state of efficiency which the community demands. It is within your power and within your power alone to do so, and it is therefore up to you gentlemen to make good."

TWO NOTABLE MAUI SEMINARIES TO HAVE GRADUATING EXERCISES

(Special Correspondence of the Star.)

WAILUKU, June 7.—The Lahaina seminary and the Maunaloa seminary will graduate classes on the 20th and the 19th respectively. Rev. Akako Akana, the brilliant young Hawaiian minister in Honolulu, who graduated last year from Hartford Theological seminary, will deliver the address on both occasions. There is unusual interest this year in both these Maui schools. It is expected there will be large audiences present.

On the 19th a Sunday School Teachers' institute will be conducted at Lahaina by Revs. Henry P. Judé of Kahului, R. B. Dodge of Wailuku and Collins G. Burnham of Lahaina. The meeting promises to be one of unusual interest, and it is expected there will be a good attendance. The increasing demand on the part of the Hawaiian ministers and Sunday school teachers makes Mr. Judé, the superintendent of the Sunday school work in Hawaii under the Hawaiian board, feel very much encouraged.

Union Church Notes.

The ladies of the Wailuku Union church met this week with Mrs. A. J. Gossin at the Library rooms. There was a large attendance, as it was the annual meeting of the society, and business of importance came up in reference to the reorganization of certain departments of the work. The officers of the society will be four instead of three as heretofore. They were elected as follows: Mrs. O. J. Whitehead, president; Miss Carrie Scholtz, vice president; Mrs. V. A. Vettesen, secretary; Mrs. D. H. Case, treasurer.

On Wednesday evening the choir of the Union church was definitely organized. Rev. R. B. Dodge was as usual present at the meeting, and presided when the matter came up for discussion. It was unanimously voted to elect Hugh Howell leader, and Miss Carrie Scholtz, secretary. Hugh Howell, Mrs. D. H. Case and Chas. E. Copeland were appointed a committee of three to draw up a simple set of bylaws for the conduct of the organization of the choir.

Person and Social.
James Kirkland and his daughter, Mrs. D. H. Davis, returned to Honolulu in Saturday's Mikahala. They have greatly enjoyed their stay on Maui. While here they were guests of Mrs. Davis' sister, Mrs. Wm. Walsh of Paunene.

Rev. C. G. Burnham of Lahaina was a visitor to Wailuku last Tuesday. The week before he took a flying visit with Mrs. Burnham into Kula and as far as Ulupalakua. They had never seen the country before and were much pleased with it.

Tennis Cup Match.
D. C. Lindsay won the Paia tennis cup this week from A. W. Collins. The game was a hard-fought one and three out of five sets determined the victor. A large number of entries have been made for the cups offered by Mrs. Harold W. Rice in doubles to be played off on the Paunene tennis court.

Link on the Stump.
Hon. L. L. McCandless was accompanied on his trip to Maui by Paul Hokii and G. K. Keawehaku. He is stumping the island in his interests in the coming campaign. The trip is largely one of organization this time. The addresses will be along the broadest lines of the Democratic party, and the candidate for delegate to congress will undoubtedly have a large hearing, if his previous visits to Maui are any indication of what may be expected this time.

Chinese Women Entertained.
The annual reception to the Chinese women of Wailuku was held at Alexander House Workers' home, May 29. There were twenty-two women and

Delafield Family Incorporates for Mutual Benefit

The recent act of several leading members of the Delafield family in incorporating the Delafield Family Association has aroused no little general interest. The fact that such organizations are not of everyday occurrence, that it implies certain features of purely family interest and of no vital public concern, and that to fully discern its meaning some deep inquiries are needed—these with other things have stimulated public curiosity to pry into the reasons that should lead a family to file papers of incorporation.

The members of the family, to their credit, it may be said, are self-respecting citizens, engaged in various professional and business duties, calling no attention for themselves by sensational methods and desirous of continuing in the American interest in public affairs and lending a helping hand to some of the many objects which tend to the betterment of civic and humanitarian conditions.

They have shown a natural hesitancy to talk about their family association, for the wide publicity has given them much surprise. It is no family trust, as was implied in one case, nor does it partake of the features of a club, or even of a social organization. What, then, it may be asked, is this organization that seeks to include in its fold all the members of the Delafield family in America?

To make a brief definition, it is virtually a mutual benefit association, formed for the object of assisting, whenever occasion may require, needy members of the family, caring for neglected burial places and assisting in educational facilities. In other words, it embodies the belief of the founder of the family in this country, John Delafield, who came here from England in 1783, and who considered that a good education, combined with a reasonable amount of energy, was a sufficient equipment in life for success. The founder of the family lived long enough to see his ideas fulfilled in his family, for of seven grown sons, every one attained positions of responsibility, among them being a general of the United States Army, a distinguished physician, merchants, bankers, lawyers and scientists.

In the incorporation papers of the Delafield Family Association it is stated that the organization "wishes to assist in giving collegiate or professional education, or other suitable education to such members of the Delafield family as may be designated or approved by a majority of the directors."

The second object is "to furnish pecuniary aid other than loans to such poor and needy members of the Delafield family as the directors may select, including the wives, widows and daughters of the lineal Delafields," and the third object is to preserve heirlooms "of that family of which John Delafield of Aylesburgh, Buckinghamshire, who married Mary Headage and John Delafield, who settled in New York in 1783, were members."

"There is nothing radically new about such a family organization," remarked one of the members. "A few years ago the Reekman family was incorporated under, I believe, much the same auspices and purposes. The Grant family also has such an association, while in Europe there are a great many family associations."

"A family association can do much more for its worthy members than could be accomplished in any other way. Trust funds and specific bequests cease to exist after a time. Wealthy members of the family may leave funds to the association, knowing that they will be wisely used, and there is no other way in which all of these things can be satisfactorily accomplished except by means of such an incorporated body."

There are probably 200 members of the Delafield family in different parts of the country. The association membership at present consists of barely more than thirty. The five directors named in the incorporation papers are Richard Delafield, who is president of the association; Maturin L. Delafield of New York, whose home is at Riverdale; Edward Henry Delafield of Norton, Conn.; Wallace Delafield of St. Louis, and R. C. Delafield of Riverdale.

Richard Delafield is, perhaps, the best known member of the family in view of his banking and financial connections. He has been president of the National Park Bank of New York city since 1900, and is a director of the Plaza Bank, the Yorkville Bank, the Mount Morris Bank, the American Surety Company, the Westinghouse Electric Company and other organizations. He has also been for years a trustee of Trinity corporation. Among his clubs are the Tuxedo, Union League and Racquet and he is a member of the Sons of the Revolution.

Mr. Delafield was born at the country home of his father, Rufus King Delafield, at New Brighton, Staten Island, and early in life organized the mercantile firm of Delafield, McGovern & Co., one of the largest American houses dealing in Pacific slope products. Mr. Delafield in his banking activities has followed the traditional bent of the family, one of his uncles being president of the old Phoenix Bank, while others were directors of banking and insurance companies and prominent merchants.

Maturin L. Delafield is the son of Maj. Joseph Delafield, the second son of the founder of the family in this country. He retired from mercantile life many years ago and resides on the old family estate, Fieldston, at Riverdale. Edward Henry Delafield is a brother of Dr. Francis Delafield; their father was the eminent physician, Dr. Edward Delafield.

Although the Delafield family has only been represented in America for little over a century and a quarter, its history can be definitely traced back to the middle ages, before the times of William the Conqueror. The original name was de la Felde and the family is descended from the ancient Counts of la Felde, in Alsace, who long resided at the chateau which still bears the family name. Pope Leo IX, a native of Alsace, is said to have been entertained at the castle when he visited Straasbourg. Previous to 1533 there were two monuments to two of the counts de la Felde in the cathedral.

About the time of William the Conqueror, one of the members, Hubertus de la Felde, went to England, and he appears as the owner of an extensive estate in the County of Lancaster. Later, another member, who is mentioned in the early records as the queen's servant, obtained a large grant of land in Ireland. One of the younger sons, about 1370, in the reign of Edward III, returned to England to better his condition and bought a large estate in Buckinghamshire. This descended by inheritance to the eldest sons until the time of Henry VIII, when the head of the family divided his estate into three parts, giving one to his daughter and one to each of his two sons.

The land was cut up later into small parcels, thus giving no member of the family an ascendancy in wealth. About 1700 one of the Delafields went to London and became a prosperous merchant, practically founding the present English family, of which John Delafield, who chose America for his endeavors, was a member.

This, in brief, is the genealogical history of the early period of the Delafield family. The more interesting history, as it is connected with the family association movement, is embraced in the 129 years during which the name has been a prominent one in New York city.

John Delafield, the founder of the family in this country, came to America in 1783, at the age of thirty-five years. He was born on the family estate at Aylesbury, Bucks, England, March 15, 1748. His older brother, Joseph, in accordance with the ancient inheritance custom, was the head of the family and the owner of the estate. It was probably due to a desire to acquire an independent fortune in a new land, which at the close of the revolution, offered peculiar opportunities for commercial expansion and growth.

John Delafield, the author, who wrote a life of Gov. Morgan Lewis, to whom a later generation of the family became affiliated by marriage, says that "an affair of the heart" was believed by many to have been the reason for John Delafield's leaving his native country, but of this nothing more definite was ever known.

The ambitious immigrant arrived in New York under happy auspices. His voyage across the Atlantic in the British letter of marque ship Vigilant was enlivened by the capture of a Dutch vessel, for which in recognition of his aid during the fight, which today might be termed piracy, he received as his share of the prize money £100. John Delafield brought to America the first copy of the treaty of peace which formally closed the revolution. His sister had married William Arnold, the grandfather of the celebrated Matthew Arnold, and a close friend at the time of William Pitt, the prime minister.

Pitt learned, so it is said, through Arnold, that young Delafield was about to sail for New York, and the prime minister gave Arnold a duplicate copy of the treaty, with instructions to intrust it to Delafield, an honor which evidently indicates that the family held a position of some distinction in English circles.

He at once entered mercantile life and succeeded so well that fifteen years later in 1798, he was able to retire as one of the wealthiest men in the city. He was the founder in 1787 of the Mutual Insurance Company, the first fire insurance company organized in New York after the revolution. In 1792 he was elected a director of the branch bank of the United States, and in 1796 he was one of forty merchants who subscribed $10,000 apiece to found the United Insurance Company, of which he was president for some time. He was also one of the founders of the famous Tontine building in Wall street.

Mr. Delafield was known as one of the merchant princes of New York city when he retired, but reverses overtook him in insuring the losses of American shipping during the troublesome times when the navies and privateers of both England and France were capturing American vessels and striving to destroy her commerce, an oppression which was not wholly eradicated until the close of the war of 1812. Mr. Delafield was for some time the head of the private underwriters, and in order to make good the losses he had insured he

EX-SHAH TURNS PIRATE KING AND ROAMS THE CASPIAN SEA

BAKU, Southern Russia, May 26.—lacking in courage, for in his recent Mohammed Ali Mirza, who succeeded attempt to recapture his throne he led his father, Muzaffar-ed-din as Shah of Persia in 1907 and was deposed in 1909 has become a pirate king upon the Caspian Sea.

The Medjlis (Parliament) at Teheran offers $200,000 head money for him, dead or alive.

At the present moment he is occupying an impregnable position on the coast to which he recently returned from a cruise with two vessels laden with priceless booty. He has in his command two hundred desperadoes fully equipped and eager for prey.

In company with his uncle Malik and his brother Rezad, the former Shah recently captured personally a party of Persians. For one of them, he exacted a ransom of $100,000. The others were burned alive.

Despairing of receiving any financial assistance from the Persians or from the Russian Government, Mohammed Ali accepted from Kniaz Lianozoff, the "Fish King," an immensely rich man of barbaric tastes, the offer of a fleet of boats commanded by a widely known pirate named Ismail Bey, whom every sailor and fisherman in the Caspian region fears more than death, so terribly does he torture those who cross his path.

Among these pirates the deposed Shah has set up a regular court, his ministers and associates being robbers who have spread terror in the Caucasus for years.

His so-called Minister of the Interior is a robber named Zaurbek Boroff, formerly a Russian police spy who was condemned to hard labor for robbery under arms. He fled to Mohammed's court and the police are not likely to get him easily, as the part of the coast frequented by this pirate band is infested with freebooters, who are formidable antagonists. This man Boroff wears a Persian uniform and covers himself with medals given to him by the ex-Shah.

Another man high in favor at this strange court is Boroff's brother, an equally desperate character. The Cabinet is formed of people of the same calibre, but the portfolio of Minister of Finance has not been assigned. Mohammed Ali looks after that department himself.

Unless Russia gives Mohammed enough money to live comfortably elsewhere, he doubtless will stay where he is, for he claims to be quite happy and there is plenty of scope on the Caspian Sea for his fleet to replenish empty treasure chests.

This new King of Pirates is not quite forty years old. He was born June 22, 1872, and succeeded his father when thirty-five years old, becoming the first monarch of Persia to rule under a constitution. On his deposition in July, 1909, after two years of sovereignty, he went to Russia and lived in Odessa until June, 1911, when he foolishly returned to Persia and attempted to regain his throne. He fought several battles and had some small successes, but his supporters were not numerous and he soon found himself in danger of capture and imprisonment. Russia and England discussed the advisability of giving him a pension, and Persia was authorized by these powers to offer the deposed Shah $100,000 a year as a pension if he would keep out of Persia.

But there was a good deal of delay in settling this matter and Mohammed Ali took steps to assure his own future. He has shown that he is not lacking in courage, for in his recent attempt to recapture his throne he led his troops with bravery and skill.

There is a romance in that forlorn attempt to overthrow his enemies. A mysterious French woman was the principal financial backer of the deposed shah. She is Countess Henriette de Clermont-Tonnerre, a very wealthy spinster of about forty-five, belonging to a historic French ducal family. Not only did she finance the recent invasion, but she accompanied Mohammed and was present at several engagements, remaining with the troops until the final defeat. It was believed that she had been killed or captured, but it is possible that she has joined the piratical party now operating on the Caspian Sea.

Unlike his father and others of his twenty-two ancestors in direct line from the Prophet, Mohammed Ali appears to have had moderate views in regard to marriage. Muzaffar, his father, had 800 wives but Mohammed Ali contented himself with one.

INCORPORATES

expended the greater part of his private fortune.

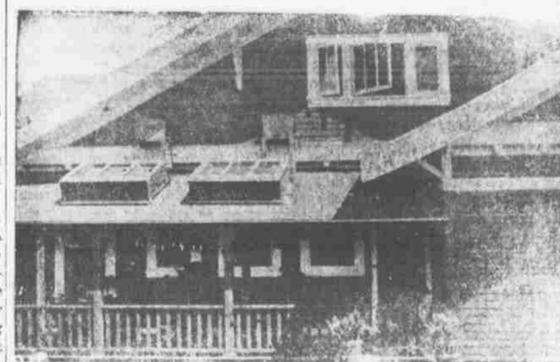

John Delafield was married in 1784, one year after his arrival here, to Ann Hallett, the daughter of Gen. Joseph Hallett, one of the early members of the Sons of Liberty and a member of the early Provincial Congresses. The Halletts had a large country estate, embracing the greater part of what is now Astoria, on the Long Island shore, opposite Hell Gate, and Hallett's point, which jutted out into the sound, was fortified with a blockhouse during the war of 1812, being a part of the fortifications to ward off the British ships should they attempt to approach the city by way of the sound. Mr. Delafield soon after built his elegant summer home at Ravenswood, just below Astoria, calling his estate Sunswick, and up to the time of his death, in 1824, it was known as one of the handsomest private mansions in the vicinity of New York.

When John Delafield died he left seven sons and four daughters. He had in all thirteen children, but two of the sons died in infancy. He had recovered some of his fortune previous to his death, but it was not sufficient to make any of his children rich.

He did leave them, however—and it was a more goodly heritage—an ample share of his own determination to succeed and progressive spirit. Every one of the seven sons attained positions of worth and some distinction. It was an unusual family, and the heritage of good living, manly character, public spirit and broad-minded interest in the world's affairs has been handed down through successive generations.

The seven sons, in the order of their birth, were: John, 1786, merchant and banker; Joseph, 1790, lawyer, soldier and scientist; Henry and William, twins, 1792, merchants; Edward, 1794, physician; Richard, 1798, general, and Rufus King, 1800, merchant, named in honor of Senator Rufus King, an intimate friend of John Delafield.—The Washington Star.

AUTOMOBILE AND GARAGE NEWS

New Machines For Von Hamm-Young Company

The 1912 announcements for Packard cars will be made within a week or two, and deliveries will be made on the well known Packard schedule to commence during the month of July.

The von Hamm-Young Co. have already booked a number of orders for 1912 Packard six cylinder cars including phaetons and touring cars. The purchasers of these cars have not received any particulars yet concerning the specifications for the 1912 Packards, yet they are willing to buy their cars in the dark, paying a deposit on same, which shows the great confidence which the public has in the Packard product. The most level headed business men, financiers and bankers are amongst the purchasers of Packard cars.

The von Hamm-Young Co. packed this week for three 3-ton Packard trucks, all of which have been sold to arrive. One of these trucks will go to the Hawaii Preserving Co. to handle their large output of pineapples, the season commencing in July, another one will go to Hilo to be put in the drying business, and the third one is also booked for the pineapple business.

Among the cars received by the von Hamm-Young on the "Sonoma" this week was a handsome Kissel Model 30 semi-racer, which is a very attractive looking 2 passenger runabout, finished in grey and black with nickel trimmings, and built on the popular "semi-racer" lines. From this it must not be inferred that it is a car for racing purposes, or constructed any less substantially or less comfortably than any other type of body or model.

The Kissel Kar semi-racer "30" makes an exceptionally handy business runabout. The sturdy construction, economical motor, and light weight body result in an extremely low operative cost. The semi-racer design, low body, with rakish fenders, is very effective and snappy. In runabout and business service no other type of body quite equals the adaptability and economy of the Kissel Kar semi-racer runabout.

The von Hamm-Young Co. also received five of the well known Buick cars, including small runabouts and medium sized and light weight touring cars, ranging in price from $1100 to $1450 complete, f. o. b. Honolulu.

The Buick car has made for itself an enviable reputation in the automobile world, even the light runabout, Model 36, will stand more hard use and abuse than any other light roadster ever offered. It is an ideal car for the doctor, lawyer, architect, contractor, or in short for any business man. It is the best finished body built, and the simplest and strongest car of its class.

Though just arriving, half of these cars have been sold already, one of the runabouts going to George Chalmers, Jr., a touring car to Dr. E. C. Waterhouse, etc., etc.

Among other sales booked during the week was a beautiful 6 cylinder Stevens-Duryea Model AA touring car to David Rice, of Marion, Mass., and delivered to him in the East. Mr.

Rice is a great admirer of the Stevens-Duryea cars, having owned several of the models made by the Stevens-Duryea Company.

Mr. Rice is well known in Honolulu being an old kamaaina who left the islands some years ago to take up his residence in the East. Hardly a year passes, however, without Mr. Rice spending a few months in Hawaii and he always makes it a practice to bring his own automobile with him.

Other sales made by the von Hamm-Young Company include a Cadillac semi-tonneau sold to the Hawaii Preserving Company, a pretty little Maxwell runabout to Major Wm. B. Wooten, a reliable touring car for business purposes to George Ouderklirk, and a 40 h. p. touring car to S. Nasooka, who intends to put same in the rent service.

The ground was broken this week for the construction of the von Hamm-Young Company's garage in Hilo, which is being erected by Mr. Chas. H. Will, the well known contractor of Hilo, who was the successful bidder. The construction work is being rushed along as quick as possible, the garage to be completed and ready for occupancy by August 1st.

REMARKABLE GROWTH OF AUTO TRUCK BUSINESS IN AMERICA

According to an Eastern authority, there now are 30,000 motor trucks in use in the United States, as compared with 600,000 pleasure cars, showing that in the past few years the use of motor trucks for commercial purposes has attained a great deal of popularity.

During the past year, in twenty-five large cities the increase in the number was 5000, or an average of 209 for each city. In New York City the number is now 4060; in Chicago, 1800; Philadelphia, 1000; Boston, 900; Los Angeles, 760; Detroit, 400; St. Louis, 400; San Francisco, 310; Pittsburgh, 300; Indianapolis, 270; Washington, 200.

It is estimated there are 260 concerns which are either building trucks or have made them which have turned out 37,500 power vehicles, of which 7903, it is estimated, are not now in use.

Statistics compiled from 350 concerns enables the Eastern authority to estimate that there are 6810 trucks used for miscellaneous purposes. In the express and transfer business there are 2615, the breweries use 2548, department stores 2403, sight-seeing and bus lines 1960, gas and electric companies 1475, general manufacturing 1320, while the rest of the 30,000 is divided among fifty-one other classes. It is interesting to note that there are about 1260 pieces of motor driven fire fighting apparatus.

Many Millions Invested. It is figured that the value of the trucks will amount to $64,800,000;

MAIL MAN DISCARDS HORSE AND CART FOR AUTOMOBILE

Uncle Sam's post office department has a reputation of being unprogressive; but be that as it may, it has an employe in Honolulu who is not.

John F. Silva, a mail collector, who at the present time gathers up twice a day all the mail deposited in the drop boxes between Emma street and Diamond Head, is about to discard his horse and cart and replace them with an automobile. In fact he has already purchased through the Schuman Garage a neat little Brush runabout, which arrived by the Lurline this week. He will probably not put it into commission until the first of July, in the meantime spending his spare time in getting familiar with the new machine.

Mr. Silva's position requires him to furnish his own equipage, and a horse and cart forms the time honored combination in this service. Many foreign governments have long ago installed autocars in this service, but your Uncle Samuel is conservative, not to say downright backward in a good many things, and the auto has not yet appealed strongly to him, and Mr. Silva's enterprise is entirely of his own volition. He figures it that the little Brush will not cost him as much to keep as a horse; that it will be less trouble to care for; and that it will give him more leisure and a new means of enjoying it. The other employes at the post office are watching the result of the experiment closely.

ported to be getting excellent satisfaction from it.

Harry A. Baldwin, who bought a Pierce-Arrow "Forty-eight" to take with him on a vacation to the Coast, has written E. O. Hall & Son from Southern California, where he and his family are touring, that the car reached San Francisco without a scratch, and that it had been doing great work ever since. He stated that on the first day out of San Francisco they had made 180 miles, and 130 the second.

Frank E. Howes, manager of the Associated Garage, will return tomorrow from Kauai where he has been for some time adjusting the affairs of the Coney Garage, which recently were placed in his hands as receiver. The garage was sold during the week to C. W. Spitz, and the details of the transfer are being put through by Mr. Howes.

During the present week, E. O. Hall & Son sold two twin cylinder Indian cycles to the U. S. Army Engineer's office. These are only a two of the many which are now being used by officers in the different branches of the service here in Honolulu. The agents also sent another Indian up to Maui this week, consigned to W. C. Crook, of Pala. Over thirty of these popular little machines have been sold in the islands during the past year, or year and a half.

OCEAN TO OCEAN ROAD SEEMS SURE

NEW YORK, June 1.—That a great ocean to ocean highway, extending from Los Angeles to New York, will be a reality in the not distant future, now seems assured. The Ocean to Ocean Highway Association has taken an active hand in pushing the matter before the various state legislatures, and automobilists everywhere are doing all they can in aid of the scheme. The portion of the highway that lies through the states of California, Missouri, Ohio, and Pennsylvania and Maryland is already under construction; and the four states of Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado and Kansas will commence work in June.

Harvey Herriek, the famous autoist who will take part in the Sweepstakes race at Indianapolis on Memorial Day, recently made the trip from Los Angeles to New York along the line of the proposed highway, a distance of 4000 miles, in 42 days.

AMONG THE GARAGES.

By the Wilhelmina next week, John A. Scott, of Hilo, expects to receive one of the beautiful Pierce-Arrow "Forty-eights." This car is making a hit on the Big Island, and in the line of higher priced cars has few rivals in popularity in the Territory. Only last week W. H. Shipman, of Hilo received one of these cars, and is received one of these cars, and is re-

Every Buick is a Buick Through and Through

Much has been said by automobile manufacturers about the greatness of their factories, but few people realize that the greatest of them all is the BUICK PLANT.

The reason for the greatness of the Buick plant and why it has not been necessary to exploit it, has been the ever-increasing quality-value of Buick Cars. For seven years they have been known as the "un-advertised" Cars—the Cars which have sold on merit alone. Now that the Buick organization and constructive facilities have been so vastly strengthened, it seems only right that all who are interested in automobiles should know all about Buick Cars, the Buick Plant and the Buick Organization.

Every Buick is a Buick through and through. Practically every part is made at this great Buick plant. Engines, Transmissions, Gears, Bearings, Frames, Bodies, Wheels, Axles, Radiators, Castings, Forgings—even the bolts, nuts and cap screws, in fact, everything excepting lamps, carburetors, coils and magnetos. The Buick Organization is a unit which represents the highest degree of efficiency in Motor Car production. That is why the Buick not only maintains its world-wide reputation for great power, but has combined with it the stability of every part to support this power. And yet so perfect is the harmony of all operating parts that, with all its power, the Buick is one of the most silent-running cars made.

A carload of Buick Runabouts and Touring Cars has just been received. Prices, with complete equipment, ranging from $1150.00 to $1450.00, f. o. b. Honolulu.

Before you decide on a purchase be sure and inspect this wonderful line which is on exhibition in our garage.

An Iceberg Detector--How Kaiser is Influenced--Vesuvius's Bottom Found--Tribesmen Attack Seaport.

NOVEL CHANGED HIS MIND ABOUT BIG NAVY

BERLIN, May 28.—While the proposition to increase the German naval program was in the balance, Emperor William felt inclined to sympathize with Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg's opposition to it.

Then Admiral Tirpitz, the head of the navy department, took to the emperor, the story goes, elaborate plans and sketches drawn to show how England had planned to capture him last July during his cruise in Scandinavian waters.

Having just been reading Louis Tracy's novel in which it is related that he had been made prisoner by some rough riders, the emperor was impressed by the admiral's arguments and threw the weight of his imperial influence on the side of a bigger navy.

The emperor has been in one of his excitable moods of late and plunging into indiscretions.

It is said that the transferring of Baron Marschall von Baberstein from the embassy at Constantinople to be ambassador in London was done by the emperor himself without consulting with the imperial chancellor or anybody else. The present German ambassador in London, Count Wolff-Meternich, had been reporting that Germany's naval program was the real cause of British unfriendliness for Germany, and that there could be no hope of better relations until a naval agreement was reached. Thereupon the emperor decided to send Baron Marschall to London, believing that his diplomatic skill would be equal to the task of soothing British feelings while the German fleet goes on increasing.

Just at present the emperor is busy explaining away his impetuous declaration to the Strassburg Burgomaster that he would smash the Alsace-Lorraine constitution and annex the province to Prussia if the pro-French manifestations on the part of the newly created diet continue. The emperor is powerless to carry out such a threat. Only the reichstag could withdraw the constitution, and, if Prussia should annex Alsace-Lorraine, all South Germany would revolt against the seizing of territory gained by united Germany.

MAXIM WORKING ON ICEBERG DETECTOR

LONDON, May 28.—"I am working hard on an idea that, when perfected, will render a disaster like that to the Titanic impossible," said Hiram Maxim to the World correspondent.

"It is not beyond the realm of science to provide a ship with the means of ascertaining if any icebergs are within ten miles, even in dense fog, rain or snow storms.

"I am not a Spiritualist and I don't believe in any humbug of a superstitious nature, but I do know that there are certain animals in the world, having no religion and therefore no superstitions, which can form a very clear opinion and you might say have definite knowledge of objects in their vicinity without seeing or hearing them—that is, they possess the sixth sense. I know the whole philosophy of how this sixth sense acts, just as I know how my own eyes act. I believe that will be the plan on which mariners will have to rely hereafter some time or other.

"I can't tell you more now. When people find out what I am doing there will be a number working on the same idea. I am working now eight hours before noon and eight hours after noon.

"My apparatus will indicate the distance of an object very exactly. It depends upon what sort of luck I have how long it will be before I can disclose my secret. I have filed a patent protecting myself everywhere so far as priority is concerned, and all the drawings are finished. I shall make private experiments. It won't matter to any one if they don't succeed.

"I wonder if Edison is working at this too. He is a wonderful man."

Discussing the effect of "Morganization" upon the White Star line, Mr. Maxim said:

"I don't know that the combining of interests has done any harm, but its effect is to remove responsibility from individuals to some extent and it is quite possible that the management won't be so thorough, being concentrated in one head, as if each particular company played a lone hand. The management of the White Star line is something I know nothing about but the captain certainly showed lack of judgment and caution."

FAIR'S ENVOYS IN BUDAPEST.

BUDAPEST, May 28.—The members of the Panama Pacific Commission arrived here this evening. They left Vienna after taking luncheon with the municipality. The Burgomaster, who presided, made a speech in which he expressed the hope that it would be possible for the city to have a separate representation at San Francisco.

John Hays Hammond, the chairman, toasted the Emperor, the Empress and the capital and expressed the hope that San Francisco would have an opportunity to reciprocate their hospitality. He recalled the fact that there had never been the slightest friction between Austria and the United States.

Richard Korens, the American Ambassador to Austria, and his wife and the members of the embassy staff accompanied the commission to the Hungarian capital. The Government furnished a special car for the party and many officials met them on their arrival. The Skoda Steel Works announces definitely that it has decided to exhibit at San Francisco. The Skoda works recently secured some great contracts in China.

NIP PLOT IN RUSSIAN NAVY.

BERLIN, May 28.—A special despatch from Helsingfors, the capital of Finland, says that a prospective mutiny in the ranks of the Russian squadron lying there was frustrated by the arrest of forty sailors. The arrests followed the discovery of a revolutionary plot to murder the officers of the fleet and seize some of the ships—a plot similar to the Black Sea mutiny. The man who betrayed to the police the plans of the revolutionists is said to have killed himself, fearing their revenge.

SOLD TONS OF "OLD MASTERS."

LONDON, May 28.—In Old Bailey today James Castiglione, a picture dealer, was convicted of perjury and sentenced to six months' imprisonment. He was an employee who helped to dispose of tons of spurious old masters. Robert Porteous, another picture man, who had been convicted twice previously for perjury and for procuring others to commit the crime in the picture game, was sentenced to twelve months imprisonment.

The modus operandi for the gang was to auction old masters which had been manufactured for Castiglione as pictures which had been seized by the sheriff under an order of court. The sales attracted great attention and the pictures realized big prices. The fraud has been going on for a number of years.

STARVING ON BARREN ISLE.

GLASGOW, May 28.—The island of St. Kilda, in the outer Hebrides, has been cut off from the world for months. No Christmas mail has yet been received there. The inhabitants, who number eighty souls, were starving when the trawler Strathmore touched there. They had only a handful of flour left and their only source of food was seabird eggs. The trawler's crew gave all they could from their own meagre stores and then reported the desperate plight of the islanders.

The government is busy now and is sending help in a hurry. First Lord of the Admiralty Churchill ordered the fleet to despatch a warship to the spot at once and the relieving ship should reach St. Kilda on Sunday.

BACON'S ESSAYS TITANIC LOSS.

LONDON, May 28.—Clement King Shorter, the author and editor, says it is not true as suggested by Sir Edmund Gosse that George Widener, who perished on the Titanic, had Robert Louis Stevenson's autobiography in his possession. He carried however, according to Mr. Shorter, a rare second edition of Bacon's essays of date of 1598.

It was a small octavo which he acquired at the dispersal sale of the Huth collection. It was rarer than the first edition because it was one of the only two known to exist. The Duke of Devonshire has the other.

Before sailing Mr. Widener told Quarante, the collector, that he would keep the Bacon book in his pocket and if he were drowned they must try and recover it.

FIND BOTTOM OF VESUVIUS.

LONDON, May 28.—Scientists today are discussing the remarkable claims of Prof. Malada of the Royal Observatory at Mount Vesuvius and an assistant named Varvazze that they descended 1000 feet to the floor of the great volcano's crater yesterday.

Prof. Malada declared that the trip consumed over nine hours, during which time the two men were nearly overcome with gases. He says they made remarkable photographs of avalanches and showers of red hot ashes which were taking place in contiguous parts of the crater.

After planting a flag in the centre of the crater's floor they made the return climb, which took them nearly three hours.

GREEKS APPEAL TO ITALY.

ATHENS, May 28.—The newspaper Acropolis today appeals to Italy to see that the Turkish garrisons on the Turkish Islands are not reinstated.

The newspaper in making the appeal states that the Greek population is sorely oppressed by the presence of the Turkish troops on the islands.

The paper asks Italy to cease occupying the islands unless she undertakes to see that Turkey, previous to any peace arrangements, undertakes not to put the garrison back.

TITANIC BANDMASTER BURIED.

who went to his death valiantly leading his musicians to the end, were held today. Thirty thousand people formed the procession that followed the remains to the little chapel in the nearby village of Colne.

It was an impressive sight, with the almost endless procession of mourners paying a homage that could not have been greater had the dead musicians been of royal blood.

In the chapel the dead musician's companions joined the organ as it played "Nearer, My God, to Thee," the hymn which Hartley led as the great ship sank.

TRIBESMEN ATTACK SEAPORT.

LONDON, May 28.—The British tribesmen in the province of Fars, in Persia, in resenting British interference with their gun running have caused a nice row. They have attacked the Persian seaport of Bandar Abbas and the British cruiser Persus has landed sailors there. The British cruiser Fox is also on the way there from Karachi. It is believed the trouble is serious.

TREAT YOUR HEART WITH GREAT RESPECT

"The death by heart failure of Gen. Frederick D. Grant," says the Medical Record, "emphasizes the repeated warnings of the medical profession that we should treat a senile heart with respect. As far as we know there is not the slightest disagreement on this one point—every human heart over fifty, and perhaps over forty-five, cannot stand much internal pressure without being ruined or at least damaged. A very slight man may go through severe muscular exertion with but little damage, but a heavy man, like the General, places on the heart and arteries a hydrostatic pressure beyond the safety point and it never recovers.

"The pitiful feature of this deploable death is the fact that Gen. Grant in his last annual report had called attention to the opinion of life insurance examiners that army officers were becoming poor risks on account of the increasing strains of their profession. It is safe to predict more deaths like Gen. Grant's unless we treat the heart of a man over forty-five with more gentleness."

VARIOUS SCHEMES OF WILY GRAFTERS OF THEIR MEALS

A man who has managed several popular restaurants in New York lingered over his cheese and coffee and talked about the arts of the wily meal grafter.

"The man who expects to make money in the New York restaurant game will find that, just as important as artistic surroundings, a capable chef and that indefinable atmosphere of prosperity and good fellowship which the New Yorker demands, is a member of his staff who can spot and outwit a meal grafter. And the smarter his establishment, the greater the need for cannon. As the result of my first few seasons in the business I have an interesting collection of worthless checks, some of them signed by men whose names you would recognize instantly, and no end of 'phony' jewelry. Today it takes a smooth one to get past me.

"Only the other day one of my keenest captains let a grafter turn a clever trick. It happened during the luncheon hour on a day when our most popular room was crowded with men and women. At a table near the door sat a couple who had nearly finished an elaborate meal, including cocktails and wine. Suddenly they fell into a dispute, not noisy, but just keen enough to attract the attention of neighbors and waiters.

"Apparently the discussion put an end to their desire to eat. They merely toyed with their dessert. Finally the woman leaned across the table and said something in a cutting undertone, rose abruptly, grabbed her furs and almost ran from the room.

"The man looked after her blankly, then dropped his head. Everybody in the vicinity, including my worthy captain, turned sympathetic. Any one hates a woman to make a scene in public.

"For a few minutes the chap sat perfectly still, one hand in his pocket, the other turning the menu card over and over. Then an expression of determination settled on his face. He pulled himself together, sprang to his feet, squared his shoulders, and moved swiftly toward the door. Some of my regular patrons told me later that then and there they laid wagers as to whether he would bring her back or send her packing in a cab.

"Now, in my cafe, one waiter serves two, if not three tables. The boy who had been serving this couple had gone to the kitchen to fill another order, before bringing their finger-bowls and check. On his return the vacant table struck terror to his soul. A waiter who lets a grafter get the best of him loses the amount of the check. This boy fairly flung himself at the captain, who woke up to the hideous financial possibilities of the situation. Both of them dashed into the corridor, only to learn that the man had checked his hat on the floor below, had redeemed it with a nickel and had vanished. A clever bit of acting by those two had earned them an eight-seventy-five luncheon for five cents.

"Then one evening a man whom almost any New Yorker would tag as a substantial out-of-town business man, with money to burn on Manhattan friends, entertained three good-looking women at his expense. They were all in evening clothes, apparently bound for the play after dinner. The check ran a trifle over $50, and the man offered the waiter in settlement a hundred-dollar bill. Just as he laid it on the silver tray he bent over and glanced at it sharply.

"'By jove,' he said to one of his guests. 'I believe some one has given me a counterfeit.'

"The quartet studied it with interest, the waiter looking over the man's shoulder. Then the host arose and said he would see what the cashier thought about it. I happened to be standing at the desk, and we all examined the bill.

"Sure enough it was counterfeit, and a mighty good one. The man opened his wallet and found a five-dollar bill. In his pocket there was some small change. He seemed more embarrassed over the situation than troubled over the loss of a hundred dollars, which in itself should have aroused my suspicion.

"But he bore every earmark of the substantial out-of-town business man, and sure enough he offered to write me a check on a St. Louis bank. Better still, he said, if I would send one of my men to his hotel—one of the 'most conservative in the city'—after the play, he would settle for the check in cash. In the meantime he would gladly leave his watch—and the five-dollar note as guarantee.

"He was so simple and straightforward that I didn't like to see him starting to the theater with three good-looking women and less than a dollar in cash.

"When I sent my man to the hotel he learned that no such person had registered, and the man never showed up.

"Sore? Well, rather, especially as I had no one else to blame.

"That 'phony' hundred-dollar bill came very nearly getting me into the sort of row no restaurant man likes to have. It happened that at this time I was running an inn in Westchester county that was very popular with motorists. I ran out there one afternoon to find my cashier in trouble over a hundred-dollar bill that to appearances was perfectly good. Only in this instance it had been offered in payment for a $4.65 check, and the cashier hadn't the change. It was a dull time of day, and he had just sent a man to the village, five miles away. The cashier explained that the patron was an actor, who wanted to hurry back to town for the evening performance. Now, the combination of an actor with a hundred-dollar bill and my experience with the other hundred note made me suspicious.

"I crossed to the table to see what could be done. The actor I recognized instantly as a popular Broadway leading man. His guest was a stunningly gowned woman. He explained that in leaving his hotel in haste for this run he had glanced into his wallet to see what he supposed was a ten-dollar bill. It was not his fault that it turned out to be a hundred, or that my cashier was short of change. And he couldn't leave his watch as security because he had already left it with a jeweler to be registered.

"But one thing was sure—he intended to start for town in precisely five minutes. No manager had ever held a curtain for him.

"At this moment the woman offered to leave her gold mesh purse, which she admitted contained 19 cents in real money. This offer seemed to annoy the actor, and he turned on me sharply.

"Do you think I have worked eleven years to build up a Broadway reputation only to risk it on a $4.65 luncheon check. Here's my card. I will mail you a check tonight."

"Like a flash I caught his viewpoint. I took a chance, and received his check next morning."

HAY AMENDMENT TO ARMY BILL MAY COST GEN. WOOD HIS OFFICE

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Major General Leonard Wood's office as chief of staff of the army is believed to be endangered by an alleged joke inserted in the conference report on the army bill. The amendment was presented at the eleventh hour by Representative Hay of Virginia and provides that after March 4, 1913, no officer shall be eligible for the post of chief of staff who has not served ten years in the line of the army with rank below that of brigadier general. The measure, it is charged by General Wood's friends, is aimed at him.

THE BLESSING OF MOTHERHOOD

Healthy Mothers and Children Make Happy Homes

Motherhood is woman's highest sphere in life. It is the fruition of her dearest hopes and greatest desires; yet thousands of noble women through some derangement have been denied this blessing. In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong. San Antonio, Texas.—"To all women who desire to have children in their homes and to be well and happy I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered from a displacement and other female weakness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was the only remedy that ever helped me, and now I am a happy mother and highly recommend your medicine to all my friends."—Mrs. A. B. MARTINEZ, 121 S. Laredo St., San Antonio, Texas.

Brooklyn, N.Y.—"I was ailing all the time and did not know what the matter was. I wanted a baby but my health would not permit it. I was nervous, my side ached and I was all run down. I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was good and took the medicine. I have now a beautiful baby and your Compound has helped me in every way."—Mrs. J. J. STEWART, 299 Humboldt St., Brooklyn, N.Y.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A Glorified Boarding-House

(Literary Digest.)

Women are reaping fame in so many fields that feminine success has become an old story, but it remained for Miss Margaret Murray of Chicago, to achieve distinction as a boarding-house keeper. Miss Murray retired the other day at eighty, after successfully conducting a model boarding-house for fifty years; and fourteen men, all of whom had been with her for periods of from fifteen to forty-five years, left her little brick house in the heart of the manufacturing district without the slightest hope of finding another place anything like as satisfactory as hers. She gave a little farewell banquet on the night before the departure of her boarders, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger, and was toasted as "the paragon of boarding-house keepers," "the most wonderful boarding-house keeper in the world," and "the best boarding-house keeper in all history." Of course it is possible that their praise was exaggerated, but her career has its lessons, and the great army of boarders and their landladies may find in it a hint or two. Says the Philadelphia paper:

There are no statistics on boarding-house keepers to test the exact truth of these encomiums. But the facts in the case would seem to prove beyond cavil that even if Miss Murray were not the best boarding-house keeper in history, she at least is to be numbered among the chosen few.

One may best judge the hold she had upon her boarders by the term of years each one has been with her. Here is the list of her boarders and the number of years each stayed:

Cass Stewart, official of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, who became a boarder with Miss Murray before the Chicago fire, forty-five years.

Inspector John Wheeler of the Chicago Police Department, who became a boarder when he was a patrolman, thirty-four years.

Neil McIntyre, architect, twenty-nine years.

Edward Cooney, policeman, twenty-six years.

John Cassidy, of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, twenty-two years.

Daniel O'Connor, broker, twenty years.

Timothy Daley, policeman, eighteen years.

Michael Daly, his son, seventeen years old, fifteen years.

Edward Beal, buyer for a department store, fifteen years.

Dr. W. A. Quinn, eighteen years.

Dr. William H. McCarthy, sixteen years.

Frank Hor, fifteen years.

Samuel Wilson, fifteen years.

Dr. Charles W. Inwall, fifteen years.

One perhaps might wonder why there was no boarder who had been with her throughout the full fifty years she kept a boarding-house. Miss Murray explained this at the banquet.

"Michael O'Flaherty," she remarked, feelingly, "was my first boarder. I never knew a man who liked good coffee so well or could eat so much boiled ham as O'Flaherty. He sat at my table three times a day for thirty years. It was through no fault of his own that he quit me. He died, poor man."

The food served at Miss Murray's table seems to have woven a sort of hypnotic spell about her boarders. Some of them went away—or tried to—and in every instance they came fluttering back like fascinated birds. Some of her boarders used to say that once a boarder with Miss Murray, always her boarder.

There was Officer Timothy Daley, for instance. He began boarding with Miss Murray eighteen years ago. He didn't want to leave her, but he fell in love. The big policeman knew that if he married he would have to leave the boarding-house because his bride had declared flatly that she would not marry him unless he set up housekeeping. For a long time Officer Daley debated with himself, matrimony pulling on one side and Miss Murray's cooking tugging on the other.

In this battle his heart finally won. He married and left Miss Murray's boarding-house to live in a cozy flat of his own. A little son, Michael Daley, blessed his union. But in a few years his wife died. Right after the funeral Officer Daley took his baby and went back to Miss Murray. He has been there ever since, and so has his boy.

Then there was Inspector Wheeler. Several years ago the inspector's brother built himself a new house, and thought it would be fine to have the inspector live there with him. The inspector liked the idea of living with his own kin, but he put off going as long as possible.

Finally he packed his belongings and stole away to his new home.

But he was ill at ease in his new quarters. His brother and his brother's wife and his gay young nieces and nephews wondered to see him sit in moody silence and to hear him pace the floor of his room until far into the night. Then one morning his room in his brother's luxurious home was found empty. The inspector had packed his things and gone back to Miss Murray's in the night. Now, and to relate, these fourteen steady boarders—all bachelors—who, one may say, never have known any home but Miss Murray's boarding-house, have been left orphans by her retirement from business. Some have tried other boarding-houses; others have moved into hotels. For them the future looks dark.

The beginning of Miss Murray's career as a model boarding-house keeper was by no means accidental. She fitted herself by patient study, experiment and hard work. Her preparation for the undertaking was as systematic and methodical as her work in after years. In her old age she is able to formulate certain rules which, she claims, will, if lived up to, enable other boarding-house keepers to achieve success. Many of the rules are merely what would occur to any one of sense, but some others are a little out of the ordinary. For example:

Don't run too much to style. A man would rather have a thick, juicy beef-steak than cut glass and fancy silver.

Put everything on the table at once and let the boarders help themselves. Cater to individual appetites. If one man wants his steak well done and another wants it rare, cook their steaks separately.

Bad coffee has been responsible for more boarding-house failures than any other one thing.

Do your own cooking. Have all men as your boarders or all women. Never try to mix men and women. As boarders they won't mix. Men are preferable.

Mother your men. Darn their socks and sew their buttons on, keep their clothes in repair, and attend to their laundry.

Let your boarders play poker if they want to, but stop the game at midnight, and don't let them play for high stakes.

Be an easy boss. Make your boarders your boys. Listen to their roubles. Give them advice when they ask it. Remember the boarding-house is their home as well as yours.

"Most people," she said, "think men are hard to cook for. They are not. I have had no difficulty in pleasing my men."

"Cooney liked his steak well done; Inspector Wheeler liked his so rare that the blood followed the knife. Dr. Quinn liked it pounded before cooking; Beal liked it with just a little melted butter for gravy; Tim Daley liked brown gravy and plenty of it. It didn't take much longer to send the meat to the table the way they wanted it, and it didn't cost any more."

"Why didn't you take in women as boarders?" Miss Murray was asked. "Men and women don't mix well in a boarding-house," she replied. "If men don't care for the women they don't like them around, and if they do care for them there are sure to be unpleasant complications. I decided at the outset to have only men as boarders. They are not so fussy as women."

Miss Murray prepared many appetizing dishes from recipes all her own. Her boiled ham and corned beef especially had a wide reputation. She tells of a casual beggar who called at her back door twenty years ago, got a taste of her boiled ham and has been coming regularly once a week ever since for a feast of ham. Cass Stewart, her oldest boarder, says that the first cup of her coffee he drank was the best he had ever tasted in all his life, and it got better every day through the forty-five years he lived with her. For enthusiastic praise of her, listen to this from Inspector Wheeler:

"She is the most wonderful woman that ever lived," he said. "She has a great business head, but when it came to charging for board she always has been altogether too easy. The boys used to insist upon paying more than she asked, but she wouldn't hear of it."

"Every one of us was so proud of our boarding-house we were always taking our friends home to dine with us. I have taken as many as five to dinner at a time, but not one cent would Miss Murray take for them. She insisted on considering them her guests."

"She is the best-hearted woman in the world. No tramp was ever turned away that visited her. I think every tramp in the United States had her address. The boarders used to feel that she was being imposed upon and many times have headed off the beggar and sent him away, but invariably Miss Murray would interfere and summon the vagrant back and set him down in the kitchen to a hearty meal. She used to say she didn't have much, but no needy person should ever be turned away from her door."

"Many a time ten or twelve tramps have knocked at her back door of a morning. If she fed these vagrants her boarders had to clothe them. She would levy upon us for all our old suits, hats, shoes and overcoats, so she could give them to any 'needy' person who came along."

"She was particularly fond of cats and dogs, and we generally had a cat and four or five kittens in the boarding-house in various stages of growing up. One winter day a long time ago a tramp dog came to the window and shivered and shuddered and looked appealingly into the warm room. Miss Murray let him in, and when we came home to supper that evening we found him occupying a cushion behind the stove. He was the most God-forsaken ornery, dirty cur I ever saw. But he was fed and cared for during twenty-five years."

"And here we old orphans are out in the world and helpless," added Inspector Wheeler. "Not one of us ever is going to be satisfied anywhere else."

BATTERY TRUCK CRANES THAT SERVE AS LOCOMOTIVES

They have a new way of handling freight at the Bush Terminal in Brooklyn. They have installed what are called battery truck cranes, which consist of a flat car with a swinging crane, operated by a one-ton electric hoist at the forward end, while a storage battery supplies current both for driving the vehicle and the hoist.

For simple hoisting the machine is brought into position, the brakes are set, and the vehicle remains stationary as the boom of the crane moves back and forth between the picking up and depositing points. By this method 300 castings, aggregating 65,000 pounds, were unloaded from a gondola car in five hours; a box car was loaded with sixty-four 800-pound barrels of plumbago in twenty-five minutes, and four cars were loaded in two and one-half hours, the latter work of including spotting the cars.

When material has to be moved less than 400 feet, or in small quantities, the article is lifted by the hook, conveyed to its destination by the vehicle and placed wherever desired. By this pick-up-and-run method sixty 800-pound barrels of plumbago were moved 300 feet in one hour, one helper only being required, and one hundred and fifty 300-pound boxes of rubber were conveyed seventy-five feet and loaded into a box car in fifty minutes.

For shifting large quantities of freight over great distances the truck is used as a locomotive, drawing a train of flat cars, on which the material is loaded. The train consists of from two to four trailers.

THE HALEIWA MOON.

The moon is just past full and the attractions at Haleiwa in the scenic line multiplied. The week end may be spent there at a cost of $6.50, paying all expenses, the passengers leaving the city at 3.20 P. M., returning Sunday evening, by the limited, arriving in Honolulu at 10.10 P. M. There is golf, tennis and bathing for the guests to indulge in and a fine chicken dinner is served Sunday evening. An inexpensive trip with lots of pleasure thrown in.

Why Look Older Than You Are?

The gentleman to the right of the reader (sketched from life) is wearing old style or pasted double-vision lenses. The lines of the reading wafers are noticeably prominent and he has difficulty in adjusting his eyes to the lenses. The cement used to join the two lenses has become clouded and has made his glasses misty.

The two figures to the left (sketched from life) are wearing Kryptok double-vision lenses. There are no seams on these glasses, because the reading lenses are fused invisibly within the distance lenses. These latter two persons are at ease, look dignified and comfortable.

BATTERY TRUCK CRANES THAT SERVE AS LOCOMOTIVES

They have a new way of handling freight at the Bush Terminal in Brooklyn. They have installed what are called battery truck cranes, which consist of a flat car with a swinging crane, operated by a one-ton electric hoist at the forward end, while a storage battery supplies current both for driving the vehicle and the hoist.

For simple hoisting the machine is brought into position, the brakes are set, and the vehicle remains stationary as the boom of the crane moves back and forth between the picking up and depositing points. By this method 300 castings, aggregating 65,000 pounds, were unloaded from a gondola car in five hours; a box car was loaded with sixty-four 800-pound barrels of plumbago in twenty-five minutes, and four cars were loaded in two and one-half hours, the latter work of including spotting the cars.

When material has to be moved less than 400 feet, or in small quantities, the article is lifted by the hook, conveyed to its destination by the vehicle and placed wherever desired. By this pick-up-and-run method sixty 800-pound barrels of plumbago were moved 300 feet in one hour, one helper only being required, and one hundred and fifty 300-pound boxes of rubber were conveyed seventy-five feet and loaded into a box car in fifty minutes.

For shifting large quantities of freight over great distances the truck is used as a locomotive, drawing a train of flat cars, on which the material is loaded. The train consists of from two to four trailers.

For Good of Humanity.
 This gives the keynote to Mrs. Beach's unique undertaking. In answer to the question, "What is she doing it for?" There are people who will not believe that she is not ultimately going to advertise a breakfast food. Her motive, she asserts is purely altruistic. For the good of humanity she has made this long journey afoot to prove that any one may perform severe physical labor and remain in the best of health on a strictly raw food, meatless diet. "I had begun to write a book setting forth my theories," said Mrs. Beach, "when all at once I realized that my readers would be skeptical. 'How does she know that it would be practical?' they would ask. 'What does she know of real physical exertion?' and so, as I did not think it would be quite the thing for me to saw wood or chop down trees, I decided to do the hardest work I could—to walk, and walk such a long distance that nobody could doubt the test on my physical strength. I am anxious to get my theories before the public because I wish to help humanity.

Sickness Due to Wrong Eating.
 "To be well means happiness and success in life, and in order to be well a person must eat properly. People do not eat properly, hence the sickness. No one need be ill who keeps his stomach in good condition. Nature provides the simplest and best foods—vegetables in season and when these are not to be had then the cereals taken with plenty of oil and made palatable with dried fruits." Stored in her pocket for an emergency were two little round cakes about the size of a man's watch, not baked but rolled together—rolled oats, prunes and nuts. They were appetizing in appearance and Mrs. Beach vouched for their taste.

Weather Greatest Hardship.
 "What were the greatest hardships you met on the journey?" I asked as we jogged down Michigan avenue together, the expert walker moving along with a peculiar lightness that I confess I could not imitate. "I have learned to put my feet down as gently as possible," she explained. "The greatest hardships were the weather we encountered and the being unable to get the food that I required in the towns through which we passed. My maid prepared all my food, mixing salads of cabbage, tomatoes and the like with French dressing, using lemon instead of vinegar, but sometimes it was impossible to get these vegetables. Last night, for instance, I knew that I needed cucumbers. Cucumbers are cooling and I asked for them, but the stores were closed and I was obliged to do without them. On the diet I follow one soon learns to know what foods the stomach craves, what is congenial to it and what one should avoid."

Her Eye for Color.
 As we passed a gray stone house with only green grass around it the clever woman's eye cried out for color. "There should be pink geraniums in that yard," she said. "Gray calls for pink."

"What did you think about on those weary stretches of roadway?" This because she seemed to note every thing that was at hand, not to plod doggedly along as it might be supposed she would.

"Oh, I planned how I would do my country house over when I returned. I thought of a lot of things I am going to do for my two kiddies and I concocted more plots for my plays." The country house she spoke of is up on the Hudson river. The Beaches also have a town house in New York, the "kiddies" are two little girls and the plays Mrs. Beach intends to write are to bear a special message to the world. She has a vibration theory that she expounds eloquently and in dramatic form she hopes to make it clear to a waiting world.

Thinks Most of Music.
 Perhaps it is of her music that Mrs. Beach thinks the most. "When I passed a house where some one was playing the piano, my heart fairly ached for my own piano and my music. There were times when I almost felt that I must stop and hear some good music, but I braced myself and marched on." She sings and is fond of writing. Her mental energy is inexhaustible, as one can tell by talking to her for a short time. Dozens of ideas on all sorts of subjects jump out like popcorn in a pan.

MEXICO CITY, June 8.—The appointment of Gustav Madero, brother of the president, as Mexican ambassador to Tokio, was announced yesterday. The news has created more or less of a sensation, in view of the frequent American reports that Madero was very much in touch with the government of the mikado.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Secretary Knox issued a warning direct to President Gomez, to the effect that any further continued failure to protect foreigners and their Cuban interests would inevitably result in intervention by the United States.

The situation in Santa Clara province is reported to be steadily becoming worse, while large bands of negro insurgents are pillaging throughout Oriente province, the rebels threatening to converge upon Guantanamo city.

Simon Armenteros, the leader of one of the largest negro bands, has notified Havana that he intends to make American property the especial object of his raids and that he will do his utmost to destroy as much foreign property as he can.

Secretary of the Interior Bru from Havana states that there is no doubt about the widespread racial insurrection, but assures the state department here that the Cuban government will do its utmost to protect foreigners and foreign interests and will deal drastically with the rebels.

WHY LOVE PASSED BY.

In the June number of Harper's Bazar a very intelligent spinster tells readers why her life is empty, notwithstanding her professional success. Her words should give pause to some of the ambitious girls pining for careers. Read these, for example:

"Even intellectually I became somewhat of a mental outsider. While other women chatted of opera, dress, and current happenings, I sat in a corner minus any conversational equipment. For I had nothing in my head except my business, and how could I manufacture interesting chat out of the auditing of the month's books or the delinquencies of my stenographer? If I had only realized how richly a few magazine subscriptions and a few theater tickets would have repaid me I would have invested therein. But I was blind to everything except my goal of business success.

"Another thing—rather hard to own—but since I have begun confessing I might as well go on. Although I did not look for love—Love has passed me by. And I sometimes wonder, as I glance at the left hand resting ringless on my desk, if the reason has been that I allowed myself to be altogether too much of a 'good fellow' among the men I met. Oh yes, it was necessary to be jolly and good-tempered and able to see a joke, but I think sometimes I allowed myself to be—well, a little bold. And it is my belief that many a bright, earnest, affectionate woman eats her heart out longing for love and home without a bit realizing that her own frank, chummy, 'don't-let's-stand-on-ceremony' attitude has kept men from ever thinking of her except as a 'good sort.' Oh yes, I know it's the fashion to pretend that every woman could marry if she wanted to and that all lonely spinsters are independent 'bachelor girls' by choice, but that isn't life as I have found it."

TO THE GIRL WHO SINGS.

The girl who goes to study music in a European capital should not neglect the art galleries. She will get from the old pictures ideas for her costumes, aside from the culture that will come from familiarity with the great art of the past. She should read the literature that is connected with the stories of the operas, that her friends who are studying some other branch of art, rather than that she should all day long breathe the atmosphere of the conservatory or the opera-house. If she is first and above all a thing for the music student to have musician, she will not waste time or lose anything by taking some hours to acquaint herself with other forms of art. If Wagner had had only the purely musical interest, he would never have founded the music drama.—Harper's Bazar.

Road near Hamilton

If you can picture in your mind's eye a coral capped mountain rising nearly fifteen thousand feet from the bottom of the sea, but protruding less than three hundred feet above the surface of it, and reaching out for nearly twenty miles like the half closed claw of some monster bird, you can form a rough idea of that ocean oasis, Bermuda. While discovered in 1515 by Juan Bermudez, a Portuguese in command of a Spanish expedition, it was colonized and settled by the British in 1612. The consensus of opinion of early chroniclers appears to be that the Spaniards entertained a superstitious belief that the spot was the abode of devils, and abandoned it in fear and dread. This conclusion, however, is not compatible with the character of the early Spanish explorers, who, fired by the wonderful tales of Cortez and Pizarro's discoveries of new Eldorados, made good the prize sought in all their adventures to strange lands. Early records relate that Bermu-dez after the custom of explorers of the period, to provide for possible shipwrecked countrymen, landed a herd of hogs which so multiplied that when the half starved, disaster stricken expedition landed by Sir George Sommers in 1609, they found sustenance not only sufficient for themselves, but for the members of their party who had become detached from their fleet of ships and landed starving on the main land over six hundred miles away in the spot that is now Virginia. St. George, which was the original capital of the island, is named after Sir George, and the beautiful little park in its centre was created around the spot where the heart of this gallant and intrepid admiral lies buried. The early colonists who existed as component parts of The Bermuda Company, operating under charter from the King, passed through the usual vicissitudes of the pioneer, tilling the soil and finding in the more serviceable form of agriculture, the wealth that the Spaniards in their good missed. Frequent changes of Governor, many of them despots, followed, until the colonists petitioned to the Crown for relief from the espionage of the company that controlled them, and were finally created an independent colony.

During the Revolutionary War the colonists proved valuable allies to the Cause of Independence, furnishing General Washington with powder at a most opportune time. In the Civil War, however, the Union was hampered to a considerable degree by the practice of blockade running engaged in by the Bermudians, who rushed ammunition and supplies to the Southern forces, taking in exchange cotton, which was shipped to England. A gradual metamorphosis appears to have followed the footsteps of the orderly and industrious early settlers, and the dense groves of cedars, the most conspicuous indigenous growth, began gradually to give way to fields planted with tobacco, potatoes, corn, etc. So important a product did the tobacco become that for years it was a staple article of export to England, and for a period was the only "coin" of the colony. Today, while it may be found in places growing wild, almost none is cultivated, owing to its claim to the difficulty encountered in "curling." The "Bermuda Clear" is made from leaf brought from Jamaica. The famous onion associated for years with Bermuda, was introduced from seed brought from the Canary Islands, and is today one of the most staple and valuable articles of export. The Easter Lily, the blooms and bulbs of which are shipped to New York has of recent years added another industry to the islands, and the "Garden" potato brings a fancy price. Prominent, however, among all the products, the Bermudian arrowroot still holds its own, and admits no equal. The cultivation of fancy fruits for export is all but abandoned, because of the ravages of parasites, but wild lemons are still to be picked and diminutive banana groves dot the landscape. Even coffee in its savage state may be found. Of all introduced growths, however, none excel the oleander, brought from the Mediterranean. Immense rows of these are planted along the roadside, and bounding the tiny farms to serve as "wind-brakes," protecting the tender shoots of growing crops from destructive gales. When in bloom these "South Sea Roses" present a spectacle of ravishing loveliness, their perfume laden the air like incense.

Among all the glorious flora of the island—and there are over two hundred species—none presents a greater effect of elegant effulgence than the bougainvillea trailing its graceful vine far up into the cedar tree tops and bursting with a copious cascade of purple bloom like a forest Niagara against a background of green. The royal poinciana, flamboyant poinsettia, mangrove, fig tree, the clean cut pawpaw, a great variety of palms and hibiscus hedges, all combine to present a striking variety of growths.

When it is considered that the soil of the island varies from only a few inches to about a foot in depth, the profusion of vegetable life is amazing. Often to create a garden the native must first chop out his plot from solid rock and fill the excavation with soil. It is a common thing to see a landholder sawing great blocks of limestone from a ridge in his back yard, to be used for building an addition to his house. Even the roofs of the buildings are constructed of limestone. The same material is used for the substantial hedge-like fences which for miles border the well-kept roads. When burnt it forms quicklime with which all of the roofs are white-washed. Crushed into small pieces this calcareous rock makes the finest of roads which absorb and drain off water almost as rapidly as it falls.

For centuries the Bermudian has depended upon the rain for his water supply, and has never experienced a serious water famine. To guard against such a contingency, however, the government is drilling an artesian well in a spot near Hamilton, where engineers believe fresh water may be found.

While it is estimated that there are over three hundred islands in the Bermudian Archipelago, only six of them are important and these are connected by bridges and ferries affording easy access. The country is divided into nine "Parishes," originally termed "Tribes," and each has its own church and postoffice. The highways are dotted here and there by so many "general" stores that the visitor is apt to wonder if the islands are entirely dependent upon the outside world for their supplies. The explanation is simple. The arable area of Bermuda is so small that only crops of high quality rather than quantity are raised. The fancy brands are sold at high prices in the New York markets, and products of the same species, but of a cheaper grade are imported for home consumption. Notwithstanding the fact that this necessitates paying duties going and coming, a large profit is shown on the transaction. Another reason is that many things which could be raised here not because the native negro prefers to drive a hack or wear a hotel uniform instead of tilling the soil. While the balance of trade is against the country, since they buy more than they sell, this is more than offset by a comparatively new but ever increasing crop—the tourist, who probably pays better than all the other crops combined.

The country seems to have lost step with the world's progress, and in some respects has thus preserved its individuality and charm. A recent effort to install a trolley system was defeated by a large majority, and a company formed to run automobiles was dissolved by the government. The picturesque donkey cart, and "sea roving" open hack hold supreme sway, and a line of stages which carry passengers, white and black, and a cargo of miscellaneous freight all piled together, is the usual method of transportation for the natives. The one feature of the country that probably impresses the visitor is the immaculate cleanliness of everything. There are no ramshackle negro cabins and no evidence of pinching poverty. While the country presents a decidedly hilly aspect the highest elevation is only two hundred and sixty feet. Trailing over, between, and even cut like canyons through the hills, the white limestone roads glisten in the central sunshine like a streaming white satin ribbon, flanked on either side by substantial stone walls beyond which may be seen well kept hedges and snowy white roofs standing out sharply against the green background of the ever present cedars. Negro women and children are seen working in the fields, and in the case of the Portuguese farmer, the whole family. The natives are mild mannered, in harmony it would seem with the mildness of the climate. Even the onions are unaggressive, while the fragrance of a lily field in bloom is a thing to be remembered.

The climate of Bermuda may be described as essentially marine, and the atmospheric conditions similar to those surrounding a ship anchored in mid-ocean. Being in the latitude of Charleston, about six hundred miles from the mainland, its position is most unique. The position of the gulf stream precludes the possibility of frost, and explains the remarkably extensive formations of the wonderful little coral insect which is not found so far north elsewhere. The winter temperature ranges from about 50 to 75 degrees and in summer rarely exceeds 85.

The tourists in search of natural wonders will find many among the coral arches, the "Sea Gardens," where the wonders of the deep are to be viewed through glass bottom boats. "Devil's Hole," a partly submerged grotto, seems to be a misnomer since it is full of beautiful specimens of the opalescent angel fish. The wonderful stalagmites and stalactites of the caves, some of which have met and joined together, forming ponderous columns, many of fantastic shape, are a source of never ending wonder. One monster stalactite is estimated to be over eight hundred thousand years old and its existence has created the belief in some quarters that the Bermudian atoll may be a remnant of the "Lost Continent of Atlantis."

Much speculation is centered upon a curious inscription found upon a formation known as "Spanish Rock." The letters "F-C" are divided by a cross and bear the date 1543. One theory is that it was made by some shipwrecked mariner, another that it was a sign of buried treasure hidden by buccaneers, but the sign of the cross would appear to dispel this belief.

While Bermuda is an independent colony, the Governor is appointed, and one-half of his salary paid by the Crown. Other officials, however, are elected by the people. In consideration for the protection afforded by the British army and navy the colony contributes to the "Powder Penny." With the exception of one or two endowed institutions the schools of the islands are not free, a fee of six pence per week being collected from each pupil. Two-thirds of the population is colored but the schools are not "mixed." The percentage of illiteracy is not large considering the preponderance of the blacks, and the good effects of education, industry and cleanliness may be observed on every side.

The street scenes of Hamilton, the capital, present a bright picture with the smart red coat uniforms of the "Tommy Atkins" carrying their dinky little "Swagger Sticks" and chatting in almost unintelligible Cockney English dialect. Here and there bright bandaged nannies and black boys in donkey carts, the ever present bicyclist, the open Victorias and many equestrians, all form an interesting kaleidoscope, passing the well-kept hotels and interesting shops and tea rooms.

"A coral cameo, clean cut upon an opalescent sea"—it inspired Shakespeare's "Tempest," and many of the beautiful verses of Tom Moore, a one-time resident. Its beauty is the beauty of the miniature, and its atmosphere tranquil. There is an old quotation, "Our Enchanted Isles will wrong no friend nor foe, but yield to all men their expectations." This proverb is quite true even now in this entrancing realm of day dreams—this land of "Dolce far Niente."

HOW WOOL TRANSPLANTS SEEDS FROM AFAR

They have been discovering some extraordinary plants in England, plants which puzzled botanists, to whom they were either utterly unknown or known as growing only in far distant lands. One naturalist picked on the grounds of the Bradford sewage works 160 species of foreign plants. Among these were several Australian burrs, jimson weed, prickly poppies from Mexico, others native to Peru, Siberia and the Azores. All were of a prickly nature. Investigation proved that the dust from wool combing establishments was being used as fertilizer and the washings of wool were run into the sewers. The burrs of these foreign plants had come in the wool and had grown. Other plants had sprung from seed in rags and others been brought in soil on foreign timber.

OVER $1,000,000 IS SPENT IN THE FIGHT FOR ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON May 19.—More than $1,000,000 has been expended in the campaign to procure the Republican presidential nomination for Theodore Roosevelt, and the daily expenses are increasing as the time for the assembling of the Chicago convention approaches.

The headquarters in Washington is costing about $5000 a day. There remain thirty days before the convention will meet.

Each Roosevelt delegate has cost about $3000. If the Colonel should obtain 540, the number needed to nominate, and the average cost should remain the same, the total would be $1,620,000.

Special Trains and Other Items of Expense. The items of expense include everything from a postage stamp to a special train, and from an office boy to a general manager.

It cost $78,000 for stamps to distribute circulars in eight states. The telegraph tolls have been about $15,000 and the telephone bills as much.

Roosevelt speakers have cost an average of $100 a speech. The weekly "plate" service to newspapers runs up an expense account of $75,000 or $100,000 for the campaign. Printing and lithographing will cost $200,000 before the last delegate is elected.

It is estimated that about 1200 workers were in the field in the Illinois, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Maryland, Nebraska and Missouri campaigns. At St. Joseph, Mo., workers were paid $25 a day. For several days 1200 Roosevelt men were at work in two of the Maryland districts. There were 147 in the Seventeenth ward of Baltimore. The Maryland men, it is estimated, were paid at least $5 each a day.

There have been no signs of poverty about the headquarters of the National Roosevelt Committee in Mr. Munsey's building since the night that George W. Perkins made the trip to Oyster Bay to carry a message from Senator Dixon, manager of the Roosevelt campaign, to Col. Roosevelt, who had just thrown his hat in the ring. Before that time the open space on the fourth floor of Mr. Munsey's building looked like a deserted dance hall, but within two hours after Mr. Dixon's return to the city from New York the song of the saw and the ring of the hammer were heard, and soon partitions, doors and private rooms were erected for the great army of Roosevelt boosters.

The Roosevelt committee offices have been alive day and night for three months. Tons of literature have been sent out in every direction. The express bills for incoming and outgoing matter have run up to nearly $25,000.

Elaborate Headquarters and System of Red Tape. The Roosevelt committee headquarters here is elaborate and up to date. The office system is as full of red tape as the White House. The caller is met at the outer door by a negro usher and is given a seat to await his turn. At times the vestibule to the offices has been literally alive with colored Republicans eager to make trouble by starting contests. One day eleven negro preachers swooped down on the committee from West Virginia.

The first room after entering the door is occupied by Senator Dixon, who sees but few callers, but is busy with the ones that count. Mr. Dixon works behind closed doors, and the strip of red between him and the average caller is miles long.

O. K. Davis, managing director, comes next to Mr. Dixon. He has clerks and stenographers at his beck and call. There are expert contest men, typewriters, copyists and dozens of helping girls. Everybody labors behind doors. The only persons with in sight of the ordinary caller are the negro doormen.

Col. Roosevelt announced his candidacy February 24. Immediately his supporters began to organize. Ormsby McHarg, Gifford Pinchot and hundreds of leaders who had been advocating Senator La Follette began to work for Roosevelt. Thousands of copies of the Columbus speech—"A Charter of Democracy"—were circulated. The Carnegie Hall speech was sent broadcast throughout the country. The newspaper syndicates were given large contracts to print advertising matter.

Three headquarters, in Washington, New York and Chicago, were set in motion.

The first great fight came in Illinois, where more than $250,000 was spent in vote getting. The Flinn scrip, something new in political methods, was issued in a $100,000 lot. More than $55,000 was spent in New York, $50,000 in Massachusetts and many thousands in Maryland for advertising space in newspapers and other publications.

Good and Bad Foods to Eat in Combination---And Why

By a Health Expert.

It has been said that all foods agree with the consumer, but they do not agree with one another. To a certain extent this is very true; it is the process of mixing together foods of all kinds and qualities which usually causes the trouble.

The story is told of a young man who followed a typical gourmand about all day and placed in a glass vessel a pinch of everything which the gourmand ate. Toward the conclusion of the day the glass vessel exploded with a loud report--as the result of the formation of gases which had been formed within it! True or not, the story illustrates a great truth, and it is that too many foods should not be combined in a single meal; or, if they are, trouble is almost sure to follow!

Certain foods combine well together and others do not. Our object should be to ascertain those foods which do combine together and eat them at the same meal. One authority upon this subject says:

"Fresh fruits all combine well with one another. As a rule, fruits, fresh or cooked, combine well with bread or cooked cereals and nuts or nut foods. Fruits do not, as a rule, combine well with cooked vegetables, nor with meat, eggs, cheese, milk or cream. Milk or cream, with cereal, fruit, sugar or cooked vegetables, is apt to cause difficulties."

The reason why raw fruits and cooked vegetables do not combine well together is partly because of the fact that they do not digest in the same length of time, so that one is unduly retained or the other unduly "hurried along" in its passage through the stomach.

Fruit and grains, grains and meat, grains and eggs, grains and nuts, grains and vegetables, are fairly good combinations, while fruits and vegetables, milk and vegetables, sour fruits and milk, and milk and meat are particularly bad combinations.

The reason why good food combinations are important is that if foods do not combine properly gases are formed which are absorbed through the walls of the intestinal canal into the blood stream and partially poison the body. The way to evade this is to eat only those foods which are known to combine well together, or to simplify matters, by eating only two or three articles at each meal.

The fewer foods we eat together at a single meal the better, for the health standpoint; of that there can be no reasonable doubt. The poor man who can afford but a few simple dishes is far better off, in reality, than the rich man with his extensive "course dinners"--as many millionaires have found out when they are reduced to living on milk for a while. The question of the quantity of food we should eat is also very important. We should all of us have enough good food. But the tendency is to eat too much instead of too little, and we all suffer more or less from constant overeating.

A little fasting would do all of us good; it would give the machine a chance to rest and give itself a "housecleaning," which is very essential every now and then.

The result of overeating is to stop up and obstruct the small vessels in all parts of the body, ultimately causing much trouble in consequence. If a human body is suffering from too much food no possible harm but much good will result from eating considerably less for several days--that is, a partial fast. (Water should be drunk at all such times, needless to say.)

Not only do those in middle life overeat, but babies and very old persons also eat too much. It has been calculated that if an adult were to drink as much milk, according to his weight, as many babies are made to drink, he would consume daily more than twenty-two and a half quarts! This is surely excessive. True it is that the baby is growing rapidly; he is gaining in weight every day. It is for this reason that babies and young girls and boys are allowed and often made to eat one or two pounds of food extra each day.

HEART AND HOME TALKS BY BARBARA BOYD

HAPPINESS AS NECESSARY AS BREAD

One of our country's foremost physicians, widely known also for his writings on health subjects, said in an address to a gathering of leading business men and educational and welfare workers, "Happiness is as essential to human beings as bread is."

Coming from such a source, that statement should command more than the usual attention. We all crave happiness. We all try to get as much of it as we can. But we look upon it somewhat as the desert of life. If we can have it, all well and good; but if we cannot--well, we must make the best of it. The bread and butter things of life must be attended to first.

But there is a practical man of affairs, a man who considers life scientifically and not sentimentally, who says happiness is as necessary as bread. He is not saying this with the idea of uttering a pleasing platitude. He is not addressing a religious meeting and after the manner of some speakers at some of these gatherings painting a rosy picture of life, that, somehow, never fits reality. But he is just stating a hard, common sense fact which he has discovered from actual contact with it.

And by happiness he means change, amusement, pleasure--getting away from the regular, monotonous work-day life, saying the little things or doing the little things that will lift the spirit and bring a glow to the heart.

And isn't he right? If we live to a treadmill of thought, speech or action, our step gets heavy, our blood sluggish. We deteriorate physically, we do not do our best work. Our spirit has no bread, and it grows weak.

Three Delicious Compounds

Directions for making delicious sauces are given in the Pictorial Review as follows:

Mousseline Sauce—One half gill of cream, yolks of four eggs, three crushed, whole peppers, one tablespoonful of butter, salt, nutmeg, lemon juice. Put the cream, egg yolks and crushed peppers in a saucepan. Place this in a double boiler half filled with boiling water and beat up with a whisk for a quarter of an hour. Then add small pieces of butter, one at a time. Stir constantly, but do not add any more butter until each piece has been thoroughly worked in and is absorbed in the gravy. The sauce when finished will have the appearance of a frothy cream, and should then be passed through a sieve. Just before serving add a few drops of lemon juice, a pinch of salt and a grate of nutmeg. Serve with souffles, filets of veal or fowl, asparagus or artichokes.

Green Mousseline Sauce—One gill of mayonnaise, one half gill of cold bechamel sauce, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, few springs of tarragon, few sprigs of chervil, two tablespoonfuls of cooked spinach, yolks of two hard-cooked eggs, two anchovy filets, one half gill of cream, seasoning, one teaspoonful of made mustard. Wash and pick the herbs; soak them in boiling water for a few minutes, drain well, pound in a mortar with the spinach, and rub through a sieve. Pound the yolks of the eggs and anchovy filets together. Mix with the green puree, add the cream and rub the whole through a sieve. Then put in the mayonnaise and bechamel sauce. Add a little seasoning and the mustard. Serve cold.

Sauce Tartare—Yolks of two eggs, one teaspoonful of salt, pinch of white pepper, pinch of red pepper, one teaspoonful of made mustard, two cupsful of salad oil, one quarter gill of tarragon vinegar, one tablespoonful of cold bechamel sauce, two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped gherkins, one tablespoonful of chopped capers, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, one half teaspoonful of finely chopped tarragon and chervil, lemon juice. Cut the yolks of the eggs into a basin. Place this in a shallow pan containing cold mixture, and add the salt, white pepper, red pepper and mustard. Stir well together, and gradually add the salad oil and tarragon vinegar. When the sauce is smooth and creamy stir in the bechamel sauce, gherkins, chopped capers, chopped parsley, chopped tarragon and chervil. Do not mix the gherkins, capers, etc., until the sauce is finished, as they are apt to cause the gravy to curdle if put in too soon. A few drops of lemon juice may be added if the sauce is found too thick.

Preparing Sea Food

Curry of Lobster in Rice Cups.
Fill cups with warm boiled rice, pressing down close and firm. When cold scoop out the middle of each cup, leaving a wall substantial enough to preserve its shape. Have ready a kettle of boiling fat, drop the cups in carefully and fry until brown. For the filling, put a tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan and when hot add a tablespoonful of minced onion. Cook until a light yellow, then add one tablespoonful of flour. As soon as frothy, pour in one cup of hot milk or water, a teaspoonful of curry powder and salt and pepper to season. If you use water instead of milk, a teaspoonful of lemon juice is an improvement. Cook until the mixture thickens, add one cupful of diced lobster, then fill into the cups and serve.

Broiled Lobster.
For broiling the lobster is usually killed and split open by the fishmonger, who will remove the intestines and "lady in green." If forced to be your own executioner, select a good-sized, lively creature, sever the spinal cord by running a sharp-pointed knife between body shells and tail, then with a heavy knife or cleaver split from stem to stern. The claws may be cracked now or after broiling as preferred, and a nut cracker is best for this purpose. Place two lobsters at a time, backs down, on a buttered griddle iron, but a good distance from the coals, first, however, brushing the flesh over with olive oil. Baste occasionally with more oil and a little salt. At the end of twenty minutes turn the lobster over long enough to mark the shell, then place on a hot platter, spread with butter, dust with paprika and send to the table with a small heat of melted butter or maitre d'hotel sauce.

Lobster Pan Broiled.
After splitting the lobster, place in a flat pan flesh side up, brush with olive oil or melted butter, dust lightly with salt and paprika, and put into a very hot oven for fifteen minutes. Serve with melted butter.

To Smoke Eels.
Clean medium-sized eels, leaving the skin on. Wash, dry and rub each one lightly with salt. Set in a cool place for twenty-four hours, turning twice during that time. Put a stick through the eyes and hang about ten eels on the stick over a barrel that has had the bottom removed. Set the barrel over a pan of burning charcoal with enough sawdust sprinkled on top of the coals to make a good smoke. Cover the barrel with linen sacking and smoke about three days, according to the size of the fish.

Salmon Salad.
Arrange the pieces of salmon on crisp lettuce leaves, sprinkle with capers, cover with mayonnaise, arrange slices of lemon and quarters of hard-boiled eggs over it and serve. Have it as cold as possible. All fish salads are improved if marinated with a little lemon juice a half hour before serving.

Codfish Pie.
Add one cup shredded codfish to two cups mashed potatoes. Mix with them a heaping tablespoonful of butter, a beaten egg, a half cup milk and pepper to season. Put into a well buttered deep earthen dish, spread a beaten egg over the top and dust with buttered bread crumbs. Bake in a quick oven, slip from the dish onto a hot chop dish, garnish with curled parsley and serve.

EMMA PADDOCK TERFORD.

EMMY DESTINN ON SINGING.
Emmy Destinn, the great singer, has been giving some advice in Harper's Bazar to girls who would follow in her footsteps. In the June Bazar she says, among other things:

"To know more than one language, for example, aside from the fact that it is necessary in these days for an opera singer, is a matter of culture as well as a practical advantage. Here in America you have less need to use and less opportunity to practice foreign languages than we have in Europe, but you should not neglect them. I, as a Bohemian living in a German-speaking country, was naturally born to the literature of two races; also all well-educated Austrians know French. I did not, therefore, have to acquire these things when I came to prepare for my profession, but the girl who expects to sing in opera cannot begin too soon to utilize all her opportunities in this respect. She should not be satisfied with enough knowledge of German, French or Italian to sing in those languages. It will make it a thousand times more easy for her to learn her lines if she really knows the language."

"There are girls studying for opera, I am told, who are not familiar with the lives of the composers or with any of the things that are associated with their art. But in what a way will we live our lives if we think only of the things of the operatic life! I cannot tell you how much happiness I have had from my books which I have long been interested in collecting. I even being an inconvenient number of them to America with me, and there are hundreds more in Prague."

OUTFIT OF WELL-DRESSED GIRL.
The taffetas with hair line cheeks or stripes, in fresh color on a white ground make up into very girlish frocks with collars and cuffs of embroidered batiste and trimming of the silk itself in cords, bouillonnage, ruchettes, etc.

These cordings, ruchings, etc., are much used for trimming sheer evening frocks, too, being made in taffetas, in net or in lace, and narrow picot edged taffeta ribbon is very smart used in this way. Still narrower ribbon, picot edged, too, and often shaded in color from edge to edge, is made with a draw thread along one edge, and drawn up into tiny frills in set or in trimming designs, a revival of a trimming once popular, which has returned with the taffetas and paniers and their attendant details.

Of linens the well-dressed girl is sure to have a supply, the simplest of one-piece linen morning frocks, tailored linen coat and skirt suits, dressier afternoon frocks of linen that still are cleverly simple in air. Among the latter, says the New York Sun, there are delightful models this spring with short coats of the Eton or bolero type, loose and jaunty, accompanying one-piece frocks or skirts and sheer, dainty blouses.

Sometimes linen, eyelet embroidered, may have a full length front panel of linen or batiste finely tucked and inset with valenciennes, and almost the entire bodice may be of this cool sheer material, while the little coat and the skirt, aside from the front panel, are of the heavier linen. The little coat does not close in front, being merely held at the throat by a colored cravat and open below to show the fine tucked bodice front.

Where linen is too warm, there are plenty of lighter cottons which may take its place, and never was there a season when more modish little tub frocks were offered ready made at absurdly low prices. The finer grades of toweling are much used for tailoring tub suits and for trimming cotton stuffs and the cotton corduroy for men for summer sporting wear.

Plain mannish shirtwaists of linen, fine linen, etc., are always correct for sporting and morning wear, but there are many likable blouses severely simple but very fine in material and made with turnaway collar and short-cuffed sleeves, which are tremendously comfortable for hot weather, tennis, golf, etc., and look well with the cottons, corduroy or pique skirt.

Norfolk suits of toweling or of light weight woollens are exceedingly popular with girls for general rough and ready wear.

USE PASTRY FLOUR.
Pastry flour should be used for all purposes in cookery except bread and doughnuts, as it requires less shortening and moisture than bread flour and makes better pastry at less expense, says the Commoner. Pastry flour comes in cartons or small packages, as it does not keep well, and is sold at nearly all first-class groceries.

FOR GREASE SPOTS.
For very bad grease spots on the front of a light blue cotton dress sprinkle plentifully with finely prepared starch and cover with brown paper; iron with a hot iron for a few moments, then wash in the usual way in warm soapuds; no trace of the grease remains.—Minneapolis Tribune.

WITH ROAST VEAL.
A novel accompaniment to roast veal is made of one pound of oatmeal, two Spanish onions, one ounce of butter, one half teaspoonful of salt, chopped parsley and mixed herbs, one egg, one quarter cupful of milk. Chop the onion fine, cut the butter in dice, mix all together, tie up in a cloth and boil two hours. Serve piping hot.—Toledo News Bee.

Fashions and Fads

Low-heeled pumps are coming back into vogue.

Novelty suit features consist of shirred and belted effects.

Soft milans are a charming though not a cheap millinery fad.

The pannier is being used to a considerable extent and many variations of this form are seen; but the pure directoire styles are now forcing most attention.

More of the heavy crash suiting in colors is sold these days than any other type of linen.

Changeable silk stockings are now tempting the feminine purse, in three or four color schemes.

Bright-surfaced leathers make up most of the new belts, and on some of these flexible buckles are employed; on others pyroxylin and galath buckles and ornamentations are introduced.

Unquestionably the pleated skirt is the season's novelty which many leading makers will emphasize.

Whole dresses are being made of striped Japanese habutai, frequently with a lingerie collar as trimming.

Fetching automobile hats may be made of a remnant of bordered foulard draped over a narrow crown band of buckram for foundation, with pleating or knot of the silk at the left side.

A popular summer fancy recently seen is a belt of pink moire with a buckle composed of rosebuds and leaves in ribbon work, thickly incrustated in the style of a prim old bouquet.

A chic hat ornament is the spray of waving and iridescent "spun glass."

Jaunty tailored suits in serge and in worsted show the pleated skirt falling from a deep yoke, over which is a sort of tunic blouse, which in no small degree suggests the myra effect.

The newest slipper touch is ostrich feather pompons in colors or black and white--dainty things that cost little.

June roses, American beauties, lilacs, bluests, wistaria and pansies are the millinery flowers of the moment.

Novelty features are the order of the day in undermilliners. Attractive new trimming effects are everywhere in evidence.

Crashes, striped linens and novelty weaves make up the light summer suits, and these fabrics are being varied most effectively.

Taffeta continues to have a great vogue, especially in navy blue and black. The newest feature, however, is brocaded and chine-printed taffetas.

New neck fixings combine fine Irish lace and velvet in all sorts of ways--bolls, balls, dangling ends, loops and we roses all playing their parts.

Long suede gloves are very much in favor this spring among well dressed women.

Iridescent enamel under a delicate silver tracery forms the newest slipper buckles.

Lines of suits are to be slightly more shaped, following the silhouette of the figure.

Double ruffles of pleated tulle often finish the long sleeve of the one-piece dress.

Cut steel and rhinestone buttons and buckles are popular ornaments for all gowns.

Newest sleeves are short, loose and flowing, and everywhere the ruffle appears.

The tailored straw hats are very acceptable to the throngs who prefer plain styles.

Brocaded silks, not in the large, but in the small and delicate figures, are to be in great demand.

Exquisite trimmings in crystal, pearl, steel and gold are noted on many new evening gowns.

Violet velvet faces some of the graceful hats of amethyst straw.

Touchees of cerise appear in many of the dark gowns to relieve any possible note of somberness.

The shirred back is much in evidence in coat suits, the fulness being gathered into a belt at the waist line.

Saucy little touches of black set off some of the new lingerie waists.

Graceful picture hats of straw are large as to brim as well as crown.

Puffed taffeta crowns are in vogue on small hats, and huge ribbon bows of shirred cabochons are extensively used.

Double tunics fall over satin skirts, the top tunic showing the lightest color.

Most of the new panniers are frankly over the hips, but some are smooth puffy, and may become more so.

For use between seasons and for harmonizing with all colors, the black-and-white alliance is almost indispensable.

The all-enveloping and disguising bell shapes in hats have given place to other hats of entirely different form, the broad, flat, picturesque hat being undeniably popular.

While the train has quite establish-

Why the Pacific Is Fresher Than the Atlantic

As the salt in the Atlantic and the Pacific has no effect on navigation, some may not see why a Russian scientist should devote his time to investigating the comparative saltiness and freshness of these and other oceans. But in the world of science every truth is considered important. We may not see its value now, but the future will find a use for it. So Prof. Alexander Woelfkow of St. Petersburg has made a careful study of the salinity of sea water in different parts of the globe, and has written an article about it for Petermann's Geographische Mitteilungen (Berlin, January-February). He finds that the geographical distribution of salinity is dependent on the relation of the two factors of precipitation and evaporation. Thus, in the zone of the trade-winds, where there is nearly constant sunshine, with little rain and comparatively dry winds, the percentage of salt is very high, while it is very low in the equatorial regions and the higher temperate latitudes. Landlocked and bordering seas are less salty at the surface than the oceans because of the fresh waters poured into them by tributary streams. The freshening is greater where the coastline is very irregular, and winds and currents further complicate the matter. Says this investigator: "The Red Sea is saltier at the surface than any of the oceans, but in this instance there are no water-basins to be reckoned with, since the climate is so dry that no permanent rivers exist. The salt contents can be lessened only by a surface flow from the Indian Ocean, and are therefore greatest at the northern end, in the Gulfs of Suez and Akaba. "The Mediterranean Sea is also saltier at the surface than the oceans; it has tributaries, indeed, but on the one hand their surface is small in proportion to that of the sea, and the largest one, the Nile, has a very low percentage of run-off to precipitation, under five per cent. The dilute surface current from the Black Sea, however, prevents the salt contents becoming as large as those of the Red Sea." Professor Woelfkow finds most interesting of all the question why the Atlantic—particularly the North Atlantic—is saltier than the Indian and Pacific—a fact the more remarkable because it receives the waters of the mightiest rivers in the world. Into it are poured the floods of the Mississippi and the St. Lawrence, the Congo, the Amazon, the La Plata, and the Orinoco, as well as the rivers of Europe. Moreover, the influence of the Arctic Ocean, which modern geographers regard as a tributary sea of the Atlantic, tends to sweeten its waters, partly through the southward flow of its dilute surface waters and partly by the melting of the great icebergs which it sends down to lower latitudes. It is estimated that the Arctic annually gives to the Atlantic about 20,000 cubic kilometers of ice, and since this contains only 1 per cent of salt, instead of the normal ocean content of 3.5 per cent, its freshening influence is considerable. The other oceans have no such ice contribution, and yet their surface salt content is smaller. What is the explanation of this apparently anomalous fact? Professor Woelfkow finds it in the physical geography of the surrounding land, and shows its intimate relation to the vital questions of rainfall and food supply in Europe and America. He bids us look at the map of the world and says: "Nowhere do we see long, high mountain chains in the vicinity of the Atlantic coast; where mountain chains are present, as the Appalachians and the Brazilian mountains, they are not high. America is very open to the influence of the Atlantic, its high mountains being mostly in the west; the high mountains of Eurasia are distant from the Atlantic. Europe, Northern Asia, and a part of Central Asia are not cut off from the Atlantic by mountain chains and hence are open to its influences. "In the United States the influence of the Appalachians is not great, because the Gulf of Mexico lies southwest of them. Moist west-southwest winds prevail throughout the year between the Mississippi and the Appalachians, and in the summer a damp, laden monsoon is drawn into the interior, bringing copious rains even far west of the Mississippi. This moisture is drawn ultimately from the Atlantic. In the eastern part of the United States relatively dry winds prevail in the interior, but the very frequent cyclones with south to southwest winds bring plentiful precipitation. The east of the United States, from about 95 degrees west longitude, is the most extensive generally flat region in the middle latitudes where there is an annual precipitation of more than one meter (39.2 inches). The next largest is in eastern Asia, but is less level. All other such regions are narrower coast-zones between the ocean and mountains, as in Norway, Great Britain, North and South America, New Zealand, and the east coast of the Adriatic and the Black Sea. "Of the water drawn from the Atlantic by evaporation and carried into the basins of its tributaries by winds and diffusion, a portion is returned to it as river-water, but by no means all. "It is local conditions which carry the vast quantities of moisture from the Atlantic to the middle latitudes of the United States. In Europe and Asia, on the other hand, north of 30 degrees north, it is the 'planetary relations' which, in the absence of mountain chains running north and south, carry the moisture of the Atlantic even to the shores of the Pacific. "To prove this striking statement, Dr. Woelfkow adduces facts regarding meteorological conditions obtained by observation of clouds, experiments with balloons, and kites. Thus he finds that the Atlantic distributes fertilizing showers over Europe and Asia, only part of which find their way back into the parent ocean, part going to the rivers, glaciers, and snow-fields which feed the Arctic. Furthermore, the Atlantic contributes to vast regions which have no outlet to any ocean—the Sahara, without rivers, and the basins of the Caspian and the Aral, whose rivers flow into inland seas. So there is a steady loss of vapor by evaporation without an equivalent return of river-water from the regions supplied, and to this circumstance is due the high percentages of salinity in this ocean. Finally: "The Pacific is bordered on the east by high mountains, over whose crest much transportation of vapor is impossible. In the middle latitudes, where west winds are prevalent and strong, there is copious precipitation. "The rivers are short and of large volume, and the percentage of run-off to precipitation is great. Moreover, there are large glaciers and snow-fields in the mountains. Hence loss of vapor in the middle latitudes of the Pacific is small."—Translation made for the Literary Digest.

A BUSINESS WOMAN CONFESSES. My head bookkeeper, a girl who has been with me for eight years, left me last Saturday night to get married. Without warning? Why, of course. What had I ever done to deserve her confidence. For eight years she worked for me at the lowest salary I could afford to pay for her work. Beyond a casual "good morning" and sundry directions about the work I never spoke to her. What encouragement did she have to tell me of her love affairs? When I heard about the marriage I was hurt—but what right had I to be hurt? How could I have expected anything else? The fault was mine. Until today, though, I didn't quite realize the opportunities I have missed all these years with my office-girls. I came in this morning a little before our usual opening time and found two of my girls already in the office, the table spread with a lot of little white samples of wash goods. As I passed them I stopped and, pointing to one of the samples, said: "Don't get that, Hattie; it doesn't wash nicely. I know, for I had a waist of it last year." But oh, how the girls' faces hurt me—they could not have been more surprised if the ceiling had fallen. And all because I had shown a little human interest.

WOMEN AS AFTER-DINNER SPEAKERS It is always the plaint of every generation of diners that after-dinner speaking is on the decline. In this day and generation, however, the Eternal Feminine has come to the rescue. At recent dinners, where both men and women have spoken, it has been common comment that of the two the women were the better speakers. One clever man, after a dinner in New York where the women carried off all the post-prandial honors, explained it thus: "The women are not such egotists. Every man felt himself the star of the evening. So he insisted on talking for twenty minutes and more, till the whole table was weary of him. The women had sense. They got up, talked brilliantly for just five minutes, and then sat down, leaving everybody anxious for more."

Age-long training tells. For generations the women in every normal family have sat and listened to the favorite stories of their fathers, brothers, and husbands. They have learned the long, irrelevant preludes to an anecdote, the dreary delays and advances up to its point, the boring, flat epilogues. They have been told patronizingly that "no woman knows how to tell a good story." And meanwhile, in their gracious, gentle role of audience, they have laid to heart that precious knowledge "how not to do it." The result, while temporarily astonishing to man, makes woman smile—and understand.
