KAUAI TEACHERS TO MEET

WILL ORGANIZE BRANCH TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION

Prominent Educators and Business Men Will Make Addresses--Regular Classes in Demonstrating Work
A BASKET DINNER ON PROGRAM
Supervisor Brodie Says "Teachers Should Not Show Indifference"--To Convene At Nine O'clock Sharp

An outline of the teachers meeting to be held at the public school building in Lihue on Friday, January 5th., as provided by supervising principal Brodie furnishes an interesting program. The first part of the program will be devoted to demonstrating lessons chief among which will be a type lesson in reading in the Golden Treasury, a new reader which has made its appearance in the primary grades of our public schools for the first time this year and which is said to have proven just a bit difficult to some of our primary teachers.

Following these demonstrations, remarks will be made by the various speakers who will probably include School Inspector Gibson, Principal Edgar Wood of Honolulu Normal School, Hon. W. H. Rice, Sr., Commissioner of Education of Kauai, Senator Kuonen, Representative C. A. Rice, Representative J. H. Conroy and others.

At the conclusion of the addresses, a basket picnic will be held which will be spread on the lawn. This over, the teachers and guests will reassemble and indulge in a general discussion on school topics, inter-changing as it were, experiences and ideas which will surely prove helpful.

At the termination of this part of the program the work of organizing a teachers' association for Kauai will be taken up. Such an organization has long been the desire of the foremost teachers on Kauai, and there is no question but the entire teaching staff will favor the move. Kauai is the only island of the group without such an organization and the interest which is being taken in the coming movement is indeed very encouraging.

Mr. Brodie has announced the meeting in the following form to the various principals:

To the Principals of Schools of Kauai:

There will be a teachers' meeting held at the Lihue School on Friday, Jan. 5th., 1912.

Briefly, the program will be as follows:

- 1.—Regular lessons will be given in certain subjects.
- 2.—Short addresses by leading visitors.
- 3.—A basket picnic.
- 4.—Organization of Teachers' Association.
- 5.—A general and informal discussion by teachers on educational questions.

In extreme cases, roads and distance may prevent attendance.

We don't wish to longer stand out as the only island without a teachers' association.

For years our friends have fought for generous salaries, and they will have to fight the same fight again.

Least of all should the teachers show indifference.

Again let me call attention that you should have all type lessons and term outlines completed during the first week.

The teachers' meeting commences at 9 o'clock, promptly, Honolulu time.

Principals will please get questions from their assistants for a question box.

Bring good ideas in produced work, or in your gray matter.

H. H. BRODIE,
Supervising Principal.

"HOW WOULD YOU HYDROPHOBIA NEXT LIKE TO BE THE ICE MAN?" SENSATION FOR HONOLULU

A. D. Hills Winner of The Kegel Club's Prize in Bowling Contest After Years Of Unabating Efforts

HIGH SCORES MADE A FAIRVIEW SPREAD

Dole Wins Second and Wishard Third Prizes While Hills Also Takes A Special Prize--A Picture

A. D. Hills, Manager of the Lihue Ice and Soda Water works, a member of the Kegel Club, and fisherman of no mean reputation, further distinguished himself at the Kegel Club headquarters last Saturday night where for the third time he bowled a record score, which gave him permanent possession of the much coveted cup which has been the bone of contention at numerous contests for many years. The cup which Mr. Hills now possesses, was first put up with the understanding that to win it, a member must needs get the highest score three times before he is entitled the trophy. This Mr. Hills has done, pulling off his third high score on Saturday night.

Besides the winning score, there were others made on Saturday evening which might be considered extraordinary. Charley Dole for instance, a member who has never aspired to the winning list, rolled second highest, much to his astonishment. Other high scores were made by heretofore rather obscure candidates.

There were twenty contestants in all, whose scores aggregate an amount equal to an average of one hundred and sixty-five. If this average can be maintained in the next Kauai-Maui contest, the latter won't have a look-in.

Those making the highest scores last Saturday night, and to whom the first second and third prizes were awarded, are as follows:

Hills	Cup and Picture	188
C. S. Dole	(German Stein)	180
H. D. Wishard	Smoking Set	177

Others making commendable scores were Kuhlman, 176; Crawford 175 and Wolters 174.

A DANGEROUS SPOT

The curve on the hill leading down to the mill from the Lihue Store is not infrequently the scene of considerable nervousness to autoists who on coming up-hill meet another vehicle at this point. On one occasion, the writer is informed, the only thing preventing the driver from plunging over the embankment to the railroad track below, was the small embankment by the roadside. This condition of affairs might be considerably changed by constructing the road at this point so as to leave the outer side elevated which would prevent sliding and thus lessen the chance of a serious accident.

LIHUE BAND PICNICS

The Lihue Band has made plans for an elaborate picnic to be held at Waiua Falls next Sunday providing the weather man deals out plenty of sunshine. It will be a family affair, a delightful anticipated.

California Dogs Will Have Bars Put Up Against Them Though Entirely Free From the Disease

Elaborate Menu Prepared by Chef Apana Delights A Score or More of Invited New Year's Guests

HONOLULU, Jan. 1st.—Now that the banana scare is subsiding, a new sensation must be sprung, so in casting about for such, Honolulu's hysterical class has decided that an invasion of dogs infected with rabies is about to occur. This notwithstanding that no record exists of any such case on these islands. Furthermore the state of California, against which the quarantine is to be established, has no record of a case of hydrophobia which adds to the ridiculousness of the situation. It is said by some that this latest outbreak is probably a ruse to secure larger funds for certain departments, in order to permit them to carry on special experimental work, funds for which at present are somewhat lacking.

A FAIRVIEW SPREAD

The annual New Year's dinner given by the Hotel Fairview was enjoyed by a score of invited guests Sunday evening. The menu was a particularly appetizing one, being a case wherein Chief Apana simply excelled himself.

The place cards bore the inscription "A Happy New Year, January 1912," printed in gold leaf.

At the conclusion of the sumptuous spread, the guests were invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rice Jr., where bridge and waltz-rarebit occupied the attention of the guests for the remainder of the evening.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rice Sr., Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rice Jr., Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Conroy, Mr. and Mrs. Keightley, Miss Jordan, Mr. Morgan, Charlie Dole and Dr. Putman.

WEBERS ENTERTAIN AT NEW YEAR'S LUAU

At the beautiful home of Manager and Mrs. Weber Sunday night, the old year was most fittingly put to slumber, while the New Year was received in a manner which left nothing to desire in the shape of an appropriate welcome. The occasion was the annual luau which this popular couple gives to those connected with the plantation.

The decorations, which were chiefly the handwork of Miss Lulu Weber, were tinged with just enough contrast to render the whole affair one of complete harmony. Numerous electric bulbs blazed forth their cheerful light from every direction, the band which was comfortably ensconced beneath a large tangle of trees which stood near the house, being directed by a flood of light issuing from many bulbs hidden among the branches of the tree. The approach to the big luau upon which stood the artistically decorated table, was lined on either side by ferns and ti plants. The table stood in the shape of a hollow square on three

PARENTAL NEGLECT

More Interest is Due the Child From Its Parents, Who Generally Display Decided Indifference

Promptly at nine o'clock this morning, every school on the island saluted Old Glory and once more tackled the problems which they had so summarily dismissed at the beginning of the festive season. Christmas is over—so is New Year both, with all their pleasures are of the past, and the young mind, notwithstanding its abnormal condition for the past fortnight, is fresh and ready to take a new lease on work; to grapple with the daily problems in a determined and successful manner.

There are cases, however, where children are rather indifferent and parents who do not care, but it is a pleasure to know that these are rare. As a rule, too little attention is paid to our children's progress in school. So long as the child is attending and no question concerning his daily work reaches the parent, the latter takes no interest in the child. This is criminal neglect and every parent whose child grows up in ignorance has only himself to blame. One father right here in Lihue, is a close observer of the progress of his children, with the result that he it is to whom they come for assistance, and he it is who is thus able to shape their course in studies. They have cultivated a taste for good literature and stand head and shoulders above the poor lad who stands a monument to parental neglect.

Why do we cultivate and care so tenderly for choice flowers? Is it not to see them open up in all their glorious beauty? Does not the mind of a single child warrant far more painstaking care than a whole universe of the most beautiful flowers that ever blossomed? Is it not the highest gift of our Creator? The proper care and cultivation of the young mind, its quick response to such treatment and its gradual expansion to the stage of "full bloom" surpasses in beauty all else which has ever yet been created, and parents neglecting to make every effort to help

Mr. De Lacy is Handsomely Remembered By Lihue's Religious Bodies On Christmas Day

Wireless press news in so far as this island is concerned, was shut off last Saturday, when the recent order issued by the Wireless Co., went into effect. Were it possible to have a daily service, this paper would probably enter into negotiations with the Wireless Co., to secure special privileges, but under present conditions there is no way in which such an arrangement can be turned into a commercial means of getting returns from the expenditures necessary to get such a privilege.

DE LACY IS THANKED

The members of the Sunday School and the C. E. Societies of Lihue through their committee express their appreciation of Mr. De Lacy's valuable assistance in a generous Christmas present accompanied by the following note:

Mr. De Lacy,
Merry Christmas.
We the members of the Sunday School of Lihue, the Church and the Christian Endeavors Society, present you this Christmas gift as an "Aloha Nui" for the interest and kindness you have shown these many years in Church and Sunday School work. Kindly accept it and may God bless thy way with happiness the next twelve months and all the twelve months of your life.
By its committee W. M. ELLIS,
December 24th, 1911.
The present was in cash.

Mrs. C. B. Hofgaard was hosts at an elaborate afternoon tea Wednesday at two o'clock in honor of her sister Miss Mahlum of San Francisco, who is a house guest of Mrs. Hofgaard. Those participating in the hospitality of Mrs. Hofgaard and enjoying the pleasure of meeting the charming guest of honor were Mrs. V. Knudsen, Mrs. DeFord, Mrs. Hansen, Mrs. E. Knudsen, Mrs. McClaren, M. Aubrey Robinson, Miss Gertrude Hofgaard, Mrs. T. Brandt, M. Gregg, Mrs. Baldwin, Misses Ella and Ella Lee, of Makaweli, Mrs. Jordan, Miss Gardner, Mrs. Alexander and niece, Mrs. Schulz, Mrs. H. H. Brodie and Miss Anderson of Hanalei.

K. C. Hopper manager of the GARDEN ISLAND office is on a business trip to Honolulu.

Richard E. Haggemann, local wireless operator, returned last Friday from a trip around the world, having been absent since August last. He is looking well, and reports having a fine trip. Haggemann had all sorts of distinction thrust at him on his travels. For instance in Tripoli the Turks would have made him a "general" while in China, the Manchun-Liked "Emperor" to him, but Hag would have none of it. He preferred the simple life in Hawaii. Mr. Vincent who has been in charge of the station here during Mr. Haggemann's absence will probably leave for Honolulu to-day where he will be stationed in the central office of the Automatic Station. Mr. Vincent has become quite popular here during his temporary stay and much regret is felt that circumstances necessitate his leaving.

Paul Schmidt with Hakkfeld & Co., came up on the Hall Friday.

SOME PACKARD TALK NORWAY CHRISTMAS

With six months of its 1912 season still to run, sales of the Packard Motor Car Company equal the entire output for the season of 1911. Orders for Spring delivery have broken all records for this time of the year. More specifications were received during the past week than any other week since July 1.

The original line of enclosed bodies for this season is practically closed out and a supplemental factory order is now coming through.

The impetus given by the appearance of the Packard "Six" has been a powerful factor in the increase in sales. Orders now being received call for three times as many "Sixes" as for the well established "Thirties."

A majority of Packard dealers have disposed of their entire allotments of 1912 "Thirties" and there is every indication that the early estimate of a fifteen million dollar output in pleasure cars will be exceeded by a substantial sum.

Sales of Packard trucks for the calendar year 1911 will be just twice the output for the year 1910 and the new truck shops, which will treble the capacity of this division, are being whipped into shape so as to be ready the first of the year.

THE HUDSON "30"

At Sioux Iowa, Saturday Oct. 21, a Chalmers "30" driven by H. A. Wetmore, won the fifty-mile free-for-all event in the Sioux City mile track, defeating a Buick 49, a Cutting 50, a Moon 45, a Moon 30, an Abbott 30 and a Page-Detroit, all of which were special factory racing cars; and also a Jackson 50, and E-M-F 30, a Maxwell, two Michigans and a Ford, all of the latter being Sioux City cars driven by local drivers.

The winning Chalmers took a cash prize of $150., a silver cup and a trophy offered by the Sioux City Journal for the fastest time made in the race by a local car and local driver.

An English gentleman, traveling through Norway during the winter, observed that at each farmhouse there was a pole, to the top of which was fastened a sheaf of wheat. He could not understand why this custom prevailed, and, since he could not speak the language of the country, it was a long time before he learned why sheaves were tied to the poles.

But meeting a Norwegian who could speak English, the traveler asked the reason for the strange custom.

"It is a Christmas offering to the birds," said the Norwegian. "So fully do the hearts of our people respond to the gentle influence of the season, that we desire even the little feathered creatures to rejoice with us and to share in the treats of the day."

Is it not a pretty custom? Norway is a northern country, where winter begins early and lasts long. Snow and frost reign for nearly three-quarters of the year, and during this long period times are hard for the birds. Not only is it cold there, but Norway being near the Arctic circle, the winter of that country is so divided that by far the greater part is night.

So the birds as well as the children welcome Christmas. It is a pretty sight, on Christmas morning, to see the winged singers flocking about the poles, nestling in the straw, twittering their joy as they feast upon the grain.

Would it not be a good custom to establish in our own country? If our city boys and girls could not get sheaves of wheat, they could obtain loaves of bread; and surely the sight of dozens of little birds, pecking away at the food and then flying off with little bits of it, would well repay the trifling cost and trouble attending so gracious a custom.

Echoes From Christmas

If there is one time more than another in all the year when children enjoy life it is on Christmas Eve when they have a Christmas tree which they have been planning for during the exciting weeks and days before Christmas, and which they have helped to decorate.

To see the culmination of this childish happiness one should have had a peep into the large beautiful room at the Deverill home upon which the carpenters had just put their finishing touches the day before. The scene was a perfect vision fresh from fairy land. The room was gorgeously decorated with flowers and all the creations of the fairies; and right in the center on a pedestal stood, in all his majesty, one of the most beautiful Christmas trees that it has been the fortune of child-eyes to behold. The tree was growing in his own soil with the prospect before him of doing similar loving service in the years to come. His twigs and his branches were so lavishly bedecked with his myriad of lights and his own dazzling array that there was not room for all the presents, so they were heaped in a great pile at his feet and on a table at his right.

At the sound of music, rendered by Mrs. Menefoglio, the children came into the room and marched around the tree again and again, singing their Christmas carols. Even Santa Claus was attracted by the child voices and appeared upon the scene with a hearty greeting for each member of the choir.

Then there was a general distribution of gifts. Every one present was remembered, and remembered most liberally. To see the delight and rapture manifested by the children, even to little Jack Sanborn, was a sight well worthy the admiration of the gods.

And Santa Claus had not forgotten the helpers, whose willing hands so cheerfully prepared and served the bountiful repast, but they were called forward and presented with the generous gifts which were so gratefully received.

An elaborate dinner was served to the guests. The large dining room was decorated with an abundance of fruits and flowers. The elder guests were seated at the large table enjoying a good social time in general; but the center of attraction was the low table at which were seated the children, whose laughter and merriment was as beautiful in its sweetness and innocence as the music of the cherubs.

Herbert Deverill presented the guests with a souvenir of the evening, a pin, on which was the word so appropriate to the occasion "Aloha."

The festivities closed with music, and a beautiful display of fireworks on the lawn.

Those present were Helen, Walter and Jack Sanborn, Imogene and Conrad Menefoglio; Annie, Stanford and Herbert Deverill; Mr. and Mrs. Menefoglio, Mr. and Mrs. Sanborn, Mrs. Deverill and Miss Florence Deverill, Mrs. Newman and Mr. Haynes.

The Christmas dinner given by Mrs. Deverill was the occasion of much joy and merriment to her guests, especially the children who partook of her generous hospitality.

The dining room and tables were uniquely decorated with everything suggestive of Christmas. Festoons extended from the center of the table to each corner of the room, composed of maile leis entwined with silver tinsel, from which were suspended silver Christmas bells alternating with crimson balls.

The center piece consisted of an artistic arrangement of poinsettia and maile green, and over this, hanging from the chandelier, was a large Christmas bell. The center piece for the children's table was a beautiful little Christmas tree ar-

His Wasted Efforts

Short Story Series

If Pearlle Pattershall had told him to shave his hair in tufts and to walk down Main street on his hands and his heels in the air Tom Flanz would have obeyed her.

At least that's what everybody in town said. They also said it was perfectly ridiculous what a slave a man could make of himself just because he had fallen in love with a girl.

That fall Pearlle began raving over the football players on the state university team, whose pictures were in all the weekly papers, and what made it more serious was the fact that Ben Tirlit, one of the town boys and a rival of Tom's, was on the team. Tom shivered to think of the holiday vacation, when Ben would be home and Pearlle could worship him in person.

Tom realized to the full the vagaries of the feminine heart. He knew that mere worth did not count against brass buttons or brawn and Ben Tirlit certainly had plenty of the latter. He looked like a young ox, Tom bitterly reflected, gazing at the football team as pictured in the window of Peterson's drug store.

Every time he went to call on Pearlle nowadays she recited the football scores to him and inquired if he didn't think the run that Ben Tirlit made in the last game was perfectly wonderful! She said she just loved athletic men.

That settled it. Tom Flanz was built on fat and bulky lines, but if Pearlle liked 'em athletic, why raved in all its Christmas glory. Both tables were generously strewn with maile and red rose petals.

The dinner was a bountiful feast of roast pig and apple sauce, with all their accessories, the final dish being a n old-fashioned English plum pudding.

On Monday evening the beautiful and hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Makee was the scene of a most delightful Christmas dinner. The decorations were ideal, and artistic in every detail. Everything was done in green and red, resulting in an effect most pleasing to the eye. The whole dining room was festooned with wreaths of evergreen, from which were suspended red Christmas bells alternating with loops and streamers of red; while the entrance to the room was draped with a profusion of green, and hanging from the center was a large red Christmas bell.

Leis of Christmas holly here and there served as finishing touches to the beauty of the scene. At each plate lay a beautiful red bonbon, and a place card on which stood a miniature Christmas tree. A bouquet of red lilies served as a center piece for the table over which was suspended an exquisite wreath of Christmas holly.

The dinner was a sumptuous feast of good things, consisting of a combination of the old-fashioned Christmas dinner of turkey and roast pig and the numerous delicacies which modern culinary art has invented.

An interesting feature of the service was the plum pudding source, being not only a delight to the palate but a feast to the eyes as well. The lights were turned low and the pudding made its appearance wrapped in flames. Like Moses' bush, it burned with fire, and yet it was not consumed—not with the fire.

But the most beautiful feature of the evening, and that which graced this Christmas festival with a crowning glory, was the geniality and the warm-hearted sociability which was so characteristic of Mr. Makee and his charming wife, and which will always remain fresh in the memory of those who partook of their hospitality.

athletic he would be. There was something heroic about Tom Flanz's whole souled sacrifice of himself. What he really liked was a big plateful of buckwheat cakes for breakfast and an easy chair and riding instead of walking, but he held grimly to his diet, religiously swung his Indian clubs, painstakingly worked his patent exerciser and walked five miles a day.

"I'm training down," he told Pearlle Pattershall with pride. "I really have got a lot of muscle!"

"Have you?" she asked, absently. "I shouldn't have thought it. Did you ever play football when you were at college?"

What chance, Tom Flanz, fretted desperately on the way home, had a fellow tied down by business against a great lazy loafer at school, who did nothing but chase a football over the ground? Then he redoubled his exercise.

It was such a serious matter with him that his friends began to take an interest. They all knew that Tom was immolating himself because Pearlle Pattershall liked athletic men. They took a personal interest in his cutting out Ben Tirlit, and when that young gentleman came home at holiday time and took Pearlle to the dance they were indignant. They considered that she was playing unfairly.

But Tom kept on with his exercise and the diet. He began to grow thin, naturally, but that did not satisfy him, for he yearned for the bulk and brawn of Tirlit. However, he could not have the bulk without achieving it by fat, and this worried him.

He read all the sporting pages of the city newspaper in order to enliven his conversation by scores and gossip and thus prove to Pearlle that he took an abiding interest in athletics.

"People do like sports and athletics," she sighed. "Did you happen to notice what the last football score was?"

"I can lift ten pounds more than any other man in town," Tom told her one day late in the winter. "Can you?" Pearlle asked politely. "What's the use?"

Tom Flanz's jaw dropped. "I—I thought you like athletic men!" he stammered out. "You're so crazy over the football news and Ben Tirlit and things like that,

I—I've been trying to qualify. Pearlle. I knew you wouldn't like me just for myself and I've been working hard at athletics this winter. I can't play football, but I do lots of other things!"

Pearlle Pattershall looked at him with startled eyes. "Do you mean to say," she began, indignantly, "that you've deliberately gone about getting thin and scrawny and like a pickled chicken, as you have been lately because you thought I'd like you better? My goodness, Tom Flanz, I like you heaps better when you are fat and comfortable, and I don't care if you're athletic or not! Why, you—are you?"

"Pearlle," breathed Tom Flanz in a voice broken with emotion, "why the dickens didn't you tell me that early last fall?"

"Think of all the buckwheat cakes I've missed!"

"Did the 'Man Eating Turk' really come from Turkey?" asked the stranger at the wrestling bout.

"No, pal," whispered the diamond bedecked promoter, "he came from Beef Corners. Me."

"Then how in the world did he get the name of Hain?"

"Why, his first name was Uriah, but he turned it around backward to give it an oriental flavor."

She—But, George, you could never support two.

He—Well, I'm only looking for one.—Newark Star.

GERMAN AUTO RULES SEVERE

An American who recently passed his chauffeur's examination in Germany spent three days in the motor-testing department of the factory in which the machine was made, although as a rule customers spend from ten days to two weeks in such establishments to qualify. He spend the fourth day in the department where the motors were attached to their chassis. The fifth and sixth days were spend in learning to steer in an automobile supplied by the factory under the guidance of a factory chauffeur.

The seventh day he was ready to take his examination, and a paper was made out by the factory and sworn to before the local police authorities in which it was stated that the person in question had spent a week in the factory and that he was capable of running a certain type of machine.

This paper, together with the applicant's birth certificate, photograph and certificate from one of the doctors appointed by the State saying that the sight and hearing were normal, were all handed to the police in the town where he desired to be examined, with an application to the police that the necessary steps for his examination be proceeded with. These papers were all sent to the examining engineer, who thereupon named a time for the examination to take place.

The route chosen for the trip is usually through the hilliest part of the surrounding country. After an hour's drive, during which the examiner asks no question, the machine is stopped on a fairly narrow road by the applicant, who is then required to show how skillfully he can turn the machine around. A halt is made here, the hood of the car is raised and he is required to name each part of the motor—in German, of course—and describe its working; how the breaks work and act; how the power is transmitted to the rear axle; how the machinery is oiled; how much oil is used, and how full the tires are pumped, etc. Questions are also asked about the police regulations, regarding lighting, speed laws and so on.

The journey is then continued back to town, where an hour is spent driving first through the narrowest streets and then along the busiest streets, where electric cars are running. If the examination is passed satisfactory the examiner informs the police of the fact and the papers are then sent to the police department in Berlin, where they are carefully examined and if satisfactory and the applicant's record is shown to be clean, returned within ten days. Upon receipt of the papers the police make out the necessary permit and stamp it on one side. On the other side the applicant's photograph is attached and he is required to sign his name under the same. The cost of the permit is $1.19 and of the examination, $3.57.
