Costume Dance Plans Take Shape Rapidly; More Of Them Told

Announcements as to the plans for the annual costume ball of the Maui County Fair and Racing Association to be held next Saturday night came thick and fast this morning and made it evident that most of the arrangements for the gala affair have been completed, even to the purchasing of prizes for the winners with the best costumes, but the committee is not yet telling what those prizes are to be.

Dancing will begin at 9 o'clock Saturday evening and the grand march, during which the judges will make their selection of winners of the costume prizes will start at 10:30. Mrs. F. L. Hoogs and Caleb Burns are two of the judges and the third will be announced soon. Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Humphrey will lead the march. Music will be furnished by the Mary Hoffman orchestra.

Already the floor managers have been announced, the dance committee having been selected previously, and the work of decoration and all other details have been assigned. The committee expects the ball to be easily the largest social affair of the year and the public is looking forward to it as sure to be the jolliest.

Silver Anniversary And Xmas Combined

On November 25, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Linton were guests of honor at a silver anniversary surprise dinner party as was reported in Maui News shortly afterward. The surprise was on the guests on that occasion but just one month after, the tables were turned and Mr. and Mrs. Linton were the ones to be surprised. They were the recipients of a pair of beautiful silver candle sticks and with it was a card with the names of the donors, all of the dinner guests of just one month before Christmas.

The gift thus served the double purpose of a cherished anniversary remembrance and a most acceptable Christmas gift.

TEACHERS CONVENTION

Others than teachers will be interested in the proceedings of the convention of the Hawaii Education Association which will open in the Territorial Building in Kahului tomorrow and continue with morning and afternoon sessions for two days. In this issue of Maui News there is published the program, the roster of the committees and a digest of the subjects on which each committee is expected to report. A glance through that program makes it clear that the convention is not held merely for the discussion of matters that are of interest to the teachers. Parents will find many subjects on which they should be informed and, as a matter of fact, the proceedings will be of real interest to all citizens and residents of Maui who have the interests of the Territory and its future citizens at heart.

Already delegates have arrived from various parts of the Islands and the remainder will come this afternoon. They are giving up several days of their holidays not so much in the cause of bettering teachers conditions as in the interests of education in the Islands. They do not come together just to "talk shop." The program shows that plans are most comprehensive and a great many widely differing topics are to be considered. The educators who come to Maui for the conventions are entitled to great credit for the sacrifices which they are making in the cause of education.

One cannot but be impressed by the wide range of the subjects that are to be considered and every one should find one or more subjects in which he or she feels a real interest. For that reason the invitation to the general public to "listen in" should be generally accepted. There are speakers of reputation which extends away from the Islands among those who will be heard among them being Dr. Emerson who recently delivered a course of lectures on child nutrition in Honolulu.

Maui is glad to welcome the visiting educators and trusts that in the visit they will secure pleasure as well as profit for themselves as well as that the deliberations will prove of genuine value to the cause in which they are enlisted.

PROLONGING OF LIFE

Though the "fountain of youth" was sought by venturesome explorers and though alchemists vainly sought the "Elixir of Life" and now there is much heard of the restoration of lost youth and vitality and the prolonging of life by gland grafting and inoculation of serums made from glands, it is doubtful whether, after all, the average person would care to have his or her life indefinitely prolonged, even though a reasonable degree of health and vigor went with it.

Even though the body be thus conserved as one advances into life the mental capacity for enjoyment changes. Variety, new sensations, new experiences, are sought for the mind. So it is that the average man or woman, passing through a routine of sameness suffers from ennui. The appetite becomes jaded and one seeks new dainties to tickle the palate. In amusements, too, even though the physical capacity to enjoy remains, those things that pleased best and were most sought for in early youth carry no mental appeal later.

It is true that there are many persons who are in fear of the unknown that lies beyond what is called death but after a certain prolongation of life it is probable that even they would weary of life and be ready to face an unknown future rather than continue on and on going through the same routine, day in and day out, experiencing nothing new, knowing there is nothing new to experience.

If the lives and the vigor of all those who are dear to one could also be prolonged, if one could have the associates he or she cares most for, it might be different, but to see the children of yesterday grow to manhood and womanhood, and their children follow them into adulthood, to have those dearest perhaps pass away through accident or disease and yet to go on with the same routine of existence is another matter. In time death must be looked forward to as a relief.

There are persons who are of so much value to humanity one would desire that they might be given a longer span of life for their usefulness, but the great majority of individuals are not of that type. They live for themselves and for their personal pleasure in some instances with thoughts of others not extending beyond the immediate family circle. Prolongation of such lives would be of little account.

The very aged are apt to look upon their longer stay with little of pleasure. They have lived through the range of experience for them and are but little interested. The capacity to be amused has been exhausted. In vain they seek for something that is worth while to do. There is nothing new under the sun. They have exhausted their capacity for pleasure through constant repetitions of sensations.

There are those who would live on for some dear one, who would struggle along to complete a cherished project but in the end those incentives must disappear and death appears as a welcome change. Or still they may fear death and yet be dreadfully wearied with life.

One dead and 24 injured, Honolulu's Christmas casualties remind one of the old fashioned Fourth of July celebrations in mainland big cities. A safe and sane Christmas celebration seems to be the need in the Islands capital.

A while ago the Honolulu Auto Club started a campaign to eliminate "jay walking." For the New Year one directed against "jay riding" would seem to be more in order.

The Des Moines chief of police has ordered every "drunk" to be arrested, photographed and his picture shown him when he has sobered up. There has existed a belief that a man had something to say as to being photographed and it has even been claimed that he has absolute rights in the matter.

One dead and 30 in the hospital as a result of holiday booze in Boston. The Massachusetts red eye is almost as bad as the Honolulu gasoline.

THE HOME IN GOOD TASTE

 No. 70—Personality in the Living Room

The room in which the family lives most should be the most attractive in the house.
 The mistress of the house has the right to make it her especial background, choosing colors and materials as she would were she about to arrange a background for her painted portrait. Her friends will remember her best as framed in this room.
 If she is dark and pale, she should choose warm and soft colors; should she be dark and vivid in coloring, she should choose cooler colors, but dark in tone. A woman with hair such as Titian loved to paint, may choose a warm golden background, a cool green, gray or blue violet or even blue, but should beware of any shade of carmine, rose or petunia.
 A fair woman has the widest choice. She may prove her fairness against any of the pastel colors, or a deep blue or mulberry. The gold colors she will find uninteresting unless she has very dark eyes, and the deep rose possible but trying.
 This color motif in drapery and furniture covering must be borne in mind in choosing the lamp shades for floor lamps, bridge lights and table lamps. These should be so arranged that wherever one may be, an adequate but not glaring light is obtainable without moving the furniture.

The Daily Fun Hour
 The Muffin Man
 This old English folk dance is a favorite during the "Twelve Days of Christmas" from the 25th of December to old Christmas Day (the 6th of January).
 The players form a circle with one of their number in the center as the Muffin Man. He dances up to one of the circle players and sings to the old air:

Oh, do you know the Muffin Man. The Muffin Man, the Muffin Man; Oh, do you know the Muffin Man That lives in Drury lane?
 The circle players dance around in lively steps, singing:
 Oh, yes, we know the Muffin Man, The Muffin Man, the Muffin Man, Oh yes, we know the Muffin Man That lives in Drury lane!
 The chosen player then joins the Muffin Man in the center, and both skip around the circle, hand in hand, while they sing:
 Now, two of us know the Muffin Man, The Muffin Man, the Muffin Man; Now, two of us know the Muffin Man That lives in Drury lane!
 Then the two in the center select two new partners and the four skip around the circle, two by two, singing:
 "Now, four of us know the Muffin Man, the Muffin Man," etc.
 When all have been chosen as partners they dance, two by two, around the circle, swinging hands, and singing:
 Now, all of us know the Muffin Man, The Muffin Man, the Muffin Man; Now, all of us know the Muffin Man That lives in Drury lane!

"REPORTED MISSING"

No better story of motion picture purposes has ever been utilized than the tale which forms the basis of "Reported Missing," the Owen Moore picture now on Maui Circuit.

Richard Boyd (Owen Moore) comes into possession of the Boyd Shipping Company inheritance. This company has an option on a huge fleet of ships which is much sought after by a scheming Oriental shipping magnate. Young Boyd, who has been an idler, does not seem to care whether Oman, the man in question gets the ships or not. In fact he doesn't seem to enjoy anything except a good time. The early scenes showing Boyd after a wild night are full of laughs. Pauline Dunn, who is more than ordinarily interested in Boyd, determines to make him get down to business. She urges him to save the ships for America. Boyd agrees to this and gives his word that he will exercise his option. This infuriates Oman who determines to kidnap Boyd. This he does and is compelled to also kidnap Pauline who raises an outcry when Boyd is spirited away. The two are put aboard a ship which goes to sea, with the intention of keeping Boyd out of the way until the option expires. A storm comes up and the ship is stranded.

Pauline's uncle demands that Oman return the girl. This the Oriental agrees to do. He searches for the lost ship and upon finding it sails for home in his high powered boat with the girl aboard. In the meanwhile young Boyd is rescued by the crew of a battleship. He gives chase to Oman in a navy hydroplane. Oman wins the race, however, and makes the girl a captive, hoping to hold her and in this way make Boyd give him the option.

The young man fearing for the girl, agrees to do this and goes to Oman's house to carry out his part of the bargain. However, on his way he advises some of his friends from the battleship of his intentions. They advise him to fight it out and not give up his option. With their assistance he succeeds in getting the better of Oman. In the fight at the house the Oriental is killed. Boyd rescues the girl and later exercises his option.

Bonds To Stabilize Philippines Currency

MANILA, P. I. (By Associated Press Mail).—The period of uncertainty in local exchange transactions and of fluctuations in the rate of exchange against the Philippine peso will be over by next January if the proceeds of the sale of $13,500,000 worth of insular bonds, which are to be sold in New York, in December, are received here in time to enable the government to resume the permanent sale of exchange on January first, 1923, according to B. F. Wright, special bank examiner for the Philippine government. By that time it will be possible to put the new currency system into operation and the parity of the peso will be maintained from then on, Mr. Wright believes.

First Impressions

By Laszlo Schwartz

Ever since I have grown from my teens I have been touring around the globe. Among those twenty years of travel I have never learned to debate with myself as well as my numerous author friends about the literary value of first impressions. It is only since I have been roaming about these wonderful islands, that a conviction has been crystallized within me, one which has finally brought peace to my mind. It has dawned upon me that these first impressions are to be valued like so many rough sketches that I draw of fascinating faces I pass here and there and everywhere. I found this thought as a Prelude to my article so the kind reader may judge the following verbal sketches from a similar angle. Like with the learning of good music, so it is with the unfolding of scenic beauty, or a glimpse at a backyard, or a peep into a garden, a wistful glance into the heart of the forest, back and everyone of us sees and feels something else. Beauty and tragedy may awaken similar feelings, but never the same. Following are the emotions and thoughts awakened within me by "First Impressions" on my way to Wailuku.

Wild Ride In The Night
After the peaceful lulling sea journey, the gently rocking boat that brought us to shore, followed a wild wild ride through the peaceful tropical night. Time I have been landed here safe and sound, with my ribs, legs, nose, and other bony part of my anatomy in good shape, I have become convinced, that the man who whisked me here is no daredevil—no exception to the rule. Nor will I believe boastful Hawaiians hereafter who will tell me fables about this island being void of snakes and epidemics. It may hold good to snakes to roadside of centipedes and scorpions, I only had mosquitoes mungling close to me at night, but as to the fairy tale about "no epidemics"—well I'm immune to believe that sort. There is an epidemic and its scientific name is Hawaiitis Speedophobia. Should the kind reader fail to find it in the Dictionary it is only because Webster died too soon to learn about it as I did.

The moment we snorted away from the boat landing, the steel monster began to plunge ahead. Until we reached the Pali Road, all I had was a fleeting glimpse at giant palms that soared about us. I had a peep at the moon hiding behind a cloud so as not to see what will happen to our car when we take the next turn, and I heard the sea sighing with fear and whispering to me how much safer we would be in her lap than on that madly bouncing and plunging auto. If there is anyone on the island who can manage to extract the elements of lyric poetry from a Maui night while his driver is flirting with death, I would appreciate all the dope on the method.

On The Dead Dragon
All I know is, that I sighed with relief, when with the beginning of the Pali Road, noisens volens, our car settled down to a more moderate pace.

With better regulated breathing came more rational seeing and thinking.

As we slowly made our way up along that serpentine highway, my imagination took a dizzyingly swift flight, and took me back 25 or 30,000 years (few thousand one way or another matter little in this hand of plenty) when a huge lash serpent wriggled his fiery way from this crater lair to the very edge of the gha blue sea. It fought the onslaught of the persistent waves for a long long time, but finally it gave up in disgust and turned rigid with a paroxysm of fury.

So as not to cause an argument with grouchy geologists, from my part, I'm perfectly satisfied to have them ascribe other less poetical reasons for the harding process. At any rate, the Lava Dragon is a dead one, and now into its rigid brown body little human ants have built frail road ribbons over which they send a spinning tiny steel toy monsters with eyes that pierce sharply the dark veils of the night.

Instead of the huge fiery column of smoke and hissing steam that blurred the beauty of the night when Mr. Lavadrakon reigned supreme. Now these little monsters puff and snort less viciously and vomiting only smells that swell the millions of J. D. Strange old world says I to myself as we dashed down from the ribs of the dead dragon, "the struggle is changes" 25,000 years ago the Lava

Dragon struggled against the pitiless blue sea, and now the modern monster over the way body of the dragon of old struggles against the high grade and gravity in order to whisk me into Wailuku.

From beneath the palms came the echoes of tinkling ukuleles and guitar as they gently accompanied the singing of a few serenading Romans. The simple melody, like the magic of the night seemed to embrace me—to caress me, and my beautiful trance only came to a sudden end, when the "Distance Murderer" tapped me on the shoulder, saying with a kindly smile—Wailuku, "Grand Hotel."

GIFT BRIDGE EARNS FORTUNE. BALTIMORE, (By A. P. Mail).—Twelve years ago the Pennsylvania railroad gave away an old bridge over the Susquehanna River at Payre de Grace to private interests; the building of a new bridge had made it, apparently, valueless. Automobiles ever since have been crossing the structure in increasing numbers, and the men who got the bridge for nothing in 1910 recently sold it to the state of Maryland for $585,000. And in the 12 years it was in their possession, they pocketed $370,000 in dividends, all in toll charges collected from motor cars.
