SLINGS AND ARROWS

By HUGH CONWAY.

Author of "Called Back," "Dark Days," "A Family Affair," Etc.

"Yes; but, for mercy's sake, let me hear what happened!"

"On Viola's twenty-first birthday," he began.

No; I will not give his story in his own words. I should be bound to break it a hundred times by the insertion of my speculations and expressions of wonderment. When ended, it left me as completely in the dark as before. If I cleared Viola from the accusation of vulgar infidelity, it placed me in tenfold perplexity as to the motive which induced her to fly from me. This mystery is what Grant told me: Upon receiving the solicitor's report, according to appointment, he found that Viola had already arrived, and was waiting for him in the room into which I was afterwards shown. Grant exchanged a few words with her, then went back to Mr. Monk and spoke about details of business. Everything was in order and ready for my inspection when I should arrive; so Grant rejoined my wife. He had much he wished to say to her, many questions to ask, and as he hoped, congratulations to offer.

She appeared nervous, absent-minded and depressed. He thought she must be ill. Suddenly, to his bewilderment, she fell at his feet, and in a passionate way besought him to take her away at once. "Take her away where," he asked. "Take her from my wife's hands," she said. "Let her never know where she was; never see her again. At once—this moment—before she arrives, she must go, and leave no trace! All this she said, Grant to do—besought it absolutely on her knees.

The man's blood boiled. Here, a fortnight after her marriage, was the woman whom he loved begging him, in wild accents, to save her from her husband. He could jump at only one conclusion. I had in some way maltreated her. I was an utter villain! My wife had found out my true nature, and her only refuge was flight. Was it for the man who loved her to neglect her return to what, from her wild and despairing prayers, he gathered must be absolute misery? No. She besought his aid. Let him fling prudence to the wind, and do her bidding. It cost nothing to do what she wished. There was no time to spare for questions. Viola seemed in an agony of fear. At any moment my step might be heard. Grant, who believed that I had in the course of my days, turned my wife's love into hate, felt no inclination to show me any mercy. He raised Viola, and promised to save her. He led her out through the door which opened to the outer world, and placed my wife in his arms, and drove off, without troubling as to direction. Her only wish at the moment was to avoid meeting me.

Once within the city, Grant tried to induce Viola to return to me, to give some reasons justifying the rash step. His efforts were unavailing. All she would say was that never could she meet me again. She must fly—she must go alone. Finding her so firm, and not doubting that my conduct had brought all this about, he consented to do as she wished. They drove straight to the city, and he took the first train to Honolulu. Here he left her for the night at a quiet hotel, returned to town, made his preparations, and had the encounter, which I have already described, with me. The next morning, as my spy informed me, the fugitive crossed to Boulogne. At this point Eustace Grant finished his tale. As I have said, it incensed my indignity tenfold. Until the moment when Grant told me what he both thought a dying avowal of his innocence, Viola's flight admitted of a natural, if shameful, explanation. Now that the elements of faithfulness and prudence have been removed, the matter was simply inexplicable. Eustace Grant might have thought, might even now think, that my ill-treatment of my wife had forced her from my side; but I knew better—she knew better.

But Grant had not revealed all. "Go on," I said; "tell me more."

"I have told you all I can, Julian. I have explained the matter as rightly or wrongly, I acted. I promised nothing more."

"Tell me where she is, that I may see her, and learn all from her own lips."

"She is with good friends, who love her. I can say no more."

"Is she happy? Tell me the truth."

"He hesitated. 'I dare not say she is happy,' he answered; 'but I believe she is as happy as she can be in this world.' These unsatisfactory answers were simply maddening.

"Grant!" I said, fiercely, "for some reason you are concealing the truth from me. I cannot force it from you. The reason is right or wrong; but I will work until I find out everything. But tell me this: Do you now believe that my wife left me on account of wrongs which I did her?"

Not he. The next day I once more attacked him. I implored, I begged, I threatened; not one word would he speak. I was on the verge of quarreling with him; but as I fancied it was only by his direct or indirect aid I could find Viola, I restrained my very natural wrath, and on the subject of Viola a sullen silence succeeded my useless questions.

I lingered on at the farm long after Eustace Grant was well enough to dispense with my services. Where else could I go? From whom but Grant had I chance of ascertaining my wife's present abode? I must wait and watch. A chance word, a letter, anything, might put me on the track. Moreover, I had a presentiment that Viola was not far away. People, when driven to their wits' end, put a vast amount of faith in presentiments.

Much as I had learned to love him, severe as were the twinges of remorse still felt for my murderous act, it was all I could do to force myself to believe that Grant was single-hearted in his determination of keeping me in the dark respecting my wife. The more so, as it was my conviction that, could I once meet her, my pleading would be eloquent enough to bring her back to me, to begin once more the happy life so strangely cut short. Only let me see her once more, take her by the hand, gaze into her eyes, call up the memory of those few short days when we were all the world to each other; surely I must then be told the truth, and conquer.

One morning Eustace seemed distracted and ill at ease. He answered my questions absent-mindedly. Presently he said: "Do you mind making a short journey for me?"

"Certainly not. Where to?"

"I want several things not procurable here. Will you go to L'Orient for me?"

"Of course I will. But how am I to get there? The diligence does not run to-day. The more so, as it was my conviction that, could I once meet her, my pleading would be eloquent enough to bring her back to me, to begin once more the happy life so strangely cut short. Only let me see her once more, take her by the hand, gaze into her eyes, call up the memory of those few short days when we were all the world to each other; surely I must then be told the truth, and conquer.

It was a blinding hot day, so hot that I blamed myself for not having started on my ride earlier on in the morning or later on, when the power of the sun began to wane. I wondered that Grant had not suggested the latter course.

That wonder came coupled with another thought, as I thought which made my heart beat. I remembered how anxious he had been that I should make the journey to-day, and contrasted that anxiety with the importance of the errand. Could it be that he was for some purpose sending me out of the way? I rode slowly on, giving this question full consideration; and the more I considered it the more I became convinced that my errand to L'Orient was a ruse. Having determined this, my mind was at once made up. I halted at the next farmhouse, and stating that the horse was lame left him in charge of the good people until I could send for him. Then rapidly I retraced my steps, until I reached the top of the cliff from which once before I had gazed at the house which held the man whom I had come to wreak vengeance on.

From I had come to wreak vengeance on, I saw Grant come out and assist some dark figures to alight. I saw them enter the house. I saw the carriage and horses taken to the stables at the back of the farm. Then I rose and went to meet what fate had in store for me.

I descended the one hill, climbed the other, and walked briskly toward the farm. I felt sure that the carriage seen by me had brought Viola to my temporary home. Grant knew that she was coming; hence the errand on which I had been sent. I chafed at the thought of how nearly I had fallen into his trap. About a hundred yards from the house I saw on my left hand, seated on a large stone on the edge of the cliff, the form of a woman. My heart beat so violently that for a moment I was forced to stand still.

Changed as was her dress, unfamiliar her attitude, I should have known her among a thousand. At last, after an interval of two years, I saw Viola! She was clothed in black—she, who formerly debauched the somber hue! She was sitting with her hands clasped round her knees; her head bent forward in a sad, thoughtful attitude. She seemed to be gazing at the sea below, yet seeing or hearing nothing. Noisily I swept over the soft turf until I was close to her.

Now that the moment for which I had longed had come, what should I do? Cover her with reproaches? Coldly demand an explanation? Instantly upon her returning at once to her duty? No; none of these. My only thought was to throw myself at her feet, to clasp her in my arms, to cover her face with kisses, to swear that, notwithstanding all the past, I loved her as of old. In another second I should have done all this.

Baptism of Fire!

From Queen To Beretania And From Nuuanu To The River.

ORIGIN AND PROGRESS OF THE FIERY ELEMENT.

Thrilling Scenes And Descriptions.

A Full Report. Notes, Incidents, Etc., Etc., Etc.

At five minutes of 4 P. M. yesterday a fire broke out in the building opposite Anin's coffee shop on Hotel street. China Co. No. 5 was almost immediately on hand, and got first water; No. 2 got water next and No. 1 was unable to get water for some time.

VAIN ATTEMPT. Water but added to the fuel and the street was stiflingly hot. Citizens of all degrees, gallant tars from our visiting ships, officers and marines, worked shoulder to shoulder. Grapnel hooks and ropes at which all tugged with a will, came into free play.

A WILD SCENE. The most intense excitement prevailed. Half-frantic Chinamen were working with the most desperate energy to save their little all. The street was full of a jostling crowd carrying every conceivable article, from a mattress to a tom tom.

HIS MAJESTY forgetting for the time his royalty and remembering only his humanity was actively superintending the transfer of prisoners and effects from the Station House on King street.

A SERIES OF EXPLOSIONS, testified to the fact that China bombs formed part of the stock in trade.

THE EMPIRE SALOON, and about a dozen men were on top of the building working the hose. At 5:40 flames were noticed through the closed shutters of the old Hollister building.

BRITISH TARS demolished Tong Hop's building. The fire had now foreclosed its mortgage on the Empire Saloon, but it became evident that the line of devastation would be drawn at the alley way of the International Hotel.

when all at once the hose sprang a leak, and was rendered useless for a time. At 4:30 more bombs burst and accelerated the conflagration; at 4:34 the flames on both sides of Hotel street were beyond control.

MAUNAKEA STREET. At 4:37 a strong gust of wind carried cinders and even fire brands to assist in the destructive march of the flames which were also making headway up Smith's Lane.

RAFFLES DESCRIPTION. The instinct of self-preservation seemed to have bereft the dwellers of Maunakea street of all presence of mind. Terror and despair seemed to have added years to their age.

AN IMMENSE CARAVAN was now in procession across Smith's Bridge. At 4:45 the wind went down. Maunakea street was flooded with burning debris, and passage beyond Hotel street was out of the question.

MARSHAL PARKE was working with the coolness and decision which characterizes him, to confine the fire to the west side of Nuuanu street when the PRESS reporter arrived.

A "MOVING SCENE" was taking place on Beretania street which could discount the first of May in New York. Queen Emma's yard was also a confused jumble of humanity and goods.

THE TRUE CAUSE OF THE FIRE is as yet unknown. It is impossible at this time to adequately estimate the loss, but it will probably exceed $1,000,000.

INCIDENTS AND NOTES. Several arrests were made for plundering. The cylinder blew out of No. 2 fire engine.

THE CHINA CLUB BUILDING on King below Nuuanu was afire inside and the flames were already menacing the brick building where Nowlein's Saloon is located.

ALONG THE RIVER people stood guard over their wares with apprehensive glances at the oncoming desolator. The river itself was one seething mass of human beings, tables, beds, boxes, dogs, etc.

THAT OLD LANDMARK, the Bethel Church, around which clusters so many historic associations, was now enveloped in flames.

A GREAT EXPLOSION told the assault of dynamite on the walls of the Sailors' Home. At 7:48 Castle & Cooke's sign fell with a loud crash on the awning below and the buildings toward the street fell, being assisted to their descent by the united efforts of our weather-beaten friends from the Satellite and Heroine.

AN EXCITING SCENE was going on at the old Hollister building. Dauntless firemen penetrated the building and threw cold water on the performance, and intrepid natives, directed by Mr. Dodd, darted in and emerged bearing sheets of corrugated iron and merchandise.

the visiting men of war, for their generous assistance.

Merchant vessels, steamers and schooners moored along the wharves above the Oceanic wharf hauled out into the stream.

Squads of firemen under the supervision of the Chief and Assistant Engineers were throwing water on the smouldering embers.

A later account of the origin of the fire is furnished by an eye witness, who says it started in a China cook house, back of the building before mentioned.

It cannot be ascertained at present writing how much of this great loss is covered by insurance, but an early statement is promised, and a schedule will then be published.

Special praise seems invidious where all worked so nobly and untiringly. It is an impossibility for a reporter to see everything, what he did see reflected credit on all participating.

It is rumored that a dead body was extracted by Dr. Emerson from a building on Hotel street. A Chinawoman and a Chinese doctor are also reported dead—the latter from fright. These reports need confirmation.

One of these men performed an act of daring that borders on recklessness. The explosion had taken place at the Sailors' Home, when an officer asked him if he could stop another charge. For reply he darted forward and cut off a piece of fuse close up. He returned and showed a piece measuring about two inches!

A visit to the scene of desolation at 1:40 A. M. showed that the track and area of the burnt section was nearly as before described. Commencing above Hollister's old building on Nuuanu the boundary line runs north-westerly to Maunakea at a point 210 feet from Beretania. A number of houses remain standing along the river's bank to King. On King street itself, mauka side, one house stands in its entirety next to the bridge, and the walls of one adjoining partially burned.

On the other side of the river the banks are strewn with many forms—homeless and with no roof above them save the vault of heaven, courting forgetfulness of what will recur to their waking moments with bitterness and grief. Here and there are some cheerful spirits who try to infuse their own happy feelings into their desponding companions, with the tinkling accompaniment of the inspiring guitar.

No cloud can obscure their sun, and no fire can burn out the hope which animates their whole existence.

As we go to press the engines are still playing on the expiring embers.

LOCAL NEWS. The steamer Iwalani arrived from Kauai early yesterday morning. The S. S. Marara has not been telephoned up to the time we go to press. Judge Bickerton opened a new record in the Police Court last Saturday.

The steamer Kinau sails on the Volcano route at four o'clock this afternoon. The Y. M. C. A. book-keeping class meets at seven o'clock this evening.

The steamer W. G. Hall sails for Maui and Hawaii at three o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The streets were crowded with excited people of all nationalities up to a late hour last night.

A very beautiful oil painting of the Volcano, while active, is on exhibition at the store of T. G. Thurm, on Fort street.

The ladies of the Fort-street Church will serve free breakfast in the vestry this morning at eight o'clock to all who were burned out and desire it.

For want of space the full report of the base ball game last Saturday afternoon, has been crowded out of today's issue, but will appear tomorrow.

Detachments from the men-of-war came on shore yesterday to attend service. They presented a fine appearance as they marched through the streets.

We learn that Drs. G. L. Fitch and F. B. Carpenter, both former residents of Honolulu, are practicing medicine together at number 32 Geary street, San Francisco.

At ten o'clock next Thursday morning, Messrs. E. P. Adams & Co. will sell the entire household furniture at the premises, corner of School and Emma streets, consisting of bedroom sets, etc.

Dr. Tucker drove his little mare down King street Saturday, after the ball game. He passed several teams, but allowed no one to pass him unless going the other way. If he is ever sent for he will surely "get that."

Our Kahului correspondent writes: The schooner J. C. Ford arrived from San Francisco April 16th in ballast, and will leave April 20th for San Francisco loaded with sugar. The brigantine Selina arrived from San Francisco the same day, takes sugar and will leave for San Francisco April 23d.

A white man known as John, was committed to the Insane Asylum on the testimony of Dr. Webb, in the Police Court last Saturday. He has lived in the mountains for the last thirty or more years, picking up his living as best he could. Lately he was noticed to be acting queerly, and when examined was found to be insane.

The telephone wire throughout town were in bad working order last evening owing to the damage done by the fire. Mr. John Cassidy, Superintendent of the Honolulu Bell Telephone Company, wishes to state that all wires belonging to that company that were damaged will be repaired and in working order within forty-eight hours.

The prize shooting match will be opened at the new gallery to-day. Seventy-three names have already been entered for the match. Persons intending to shoot in the match can do so any time through the day and evening their scores be taken by the judges. To assure the participants it is well to say that Mr. Frank Higgins, the local champion, has been barred out. The prizes for the match can be seen at Mr. J. J. Williams' photograph gallery, Fort street.

About eleven o'clock last Saturday night, the residents in the vicinity of Fort and Beretania streets were awakened by hearing loud shouts and curses. It was caused by a number of sailors who had been drinking together throughout the evening, and on their way to their ships, became involved in a fight. The police were called, and after a hard tussle succeeded in arresting three of the men, two of whom were charged with drunkenness and the other with assault and battery.

Yesterday afternoon shortly after five o'clock while Captain Freeman of the steamer Iwalani was riding a spirited horse down Fort street, the animal seized the bit in his teeth and ran away. Fort street was crowded with 'buses and hacks in front of Dodd's stables at the time. The horse dashed into one of the big 'buses, nearly upsetting it. The horse was thrown down and Captain Freeman fell heavily to the ground cutting a bad gash in his left leg above the knee. The horse was stunned and bruised about the shoulder. The plucky captain remarked that the horse was up to such tricks and after a few minutes, remounted and rode away.

It was a bit of practical Christianity on the part of the Fort-street Church pastor and people to throw open their buildings as a place of refuge for all who wished. The ladies of the church assisted by some of the Bethel ladies, served coffee and lunches to all who came, and the young men of the Fort-street Church carried coffee by the pailful and served it to the hard-working firemen and others. This morning the same good work is continued with a free breakfast at the church for all in need. The Catholic Cathedral and Chinese Church were also open for all who wished to take refuge in them.

They say: That Saturday last was a dull day; that the raising of sugar cane on the shares as reported for fact a short time since turns out to be a sharper trick; that the volcano is still inactive; that the cakes made out of the taro flour by Mr. Barber are the finest things out; that the new laundry is running all right this week and will turn out first class work; that the political leaders are at cross purposes; that the wonder is how people are continually gulled by the promises of reform in the Government; that the base ball game was largely attended Saturday last; that Judge Bickerton opened a new Police record book last week; that the lei makers still occupy more than half of the sidewalks which they frequent; that the band will help the base ball boys out this season; that the cigar stand on Merchant street has a new and handsome attendant; that the Advertiser's "great suggestion" takes especial delight in throwing mud at Rev. S. E. Bishop over the shoulders of the Press; that the Marara will bring word when the next steamer mail leaves for the coast; that the skies were illuminated last night by a bright meteor; that much political afterthought needs no comment; that the corner of Nuanu and Hotel streets is getting lively again since the sailors arrived; that the Palace Square ought to have a fountain placed in it; that the best answer to a political position is to have the whole truth told no matter which side gets the glory; that the taro factory is turning out the genuine article; that the Campobello concert will be the best ever given in Honolulu; that the loss by fire yesterday was in the neighborhood of $1,500,000; that the men-of-war's men deserve great credit for their work yesterday; and that a good many of the Chinese will return to China within a few months.

Death of Mrs. Kapena. The sad news of the death of Mrs. Kapena startled the community in the early part of last evening. The report was confirmed later in the evening when a Press reporter called at the residence of Mr. Kapena. The deceased lady had been troubled for some time with heart disease, but yesterday she was feeling well and in good spirits. At half-past four o'clock in the afternoon while visiting at the residence of Prince Kuniuakea, at Palama, she dropped dead without speaking a word. Mrs. Kapena was thirty-nine years of age at the time of her death, and she leaves many warm friends and acquaintances to mourn her loss.

Lihue Notes. Plenty of rain so far this month. Miss B. F. Herrick of Oakland, Cal., is the guest of Mrs. Rice. A select party picniced on Thursday last at the Waialua Falls. A pleasant time is reported. Mr. Forbes, of your city, has been enjoying the exhilarating atmosphere of Kauai the past week. Mr. Mitchell and lady of New London, N. Y., are at present rusticated on the Garden Island. Miss Hines, one of Lihue's popular "schoolmarm," is spending her vacation at the metropolis. Mrs. Rice gave a candy pulling in honor of the rising generation of Lihue on Thursday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Dayman have met with some encouragement during their six weeks' work on this Island. Chinese gamblers and opium smokers are constantly being ousted by our efficient sheriff and deputies.

Lihue, April 17, 1886. Hilo Notes. The schooner Lottie Fairfield sailed for San Francisco, April 16th, with 300 tons sugar from Laupahoehoe. The schooner Canute came very near going ashore near Paukaa during the 14th inst. The steamer Ivy Holmes came to her rescue, for which she was well paid. The Haili Church and Gleamers Society of that church wish in this public manner, to express their great thanks and aloha nui to His Majesty, King Kalakaua, and the gentlemen who accompanied him, who contributed so liberally of their money at the festival at the Court House hall, Hilo, a short time ago, and wish also to express many thanks to Geo. C. Beckley, the gentlemanly purser of the steamer Kinau. In a former notice in the Press it was stated that the amount netted was $338.75. Mr. Beckley was the means of the amount being raised to $400. The amount will be used to best advantage. J. A. M. Hilo, March 15, 1886.
