FOUR LIVES IN ONE.

He found himself in a long and rather narrow room, with a high ceiling, dusky lighted by three wide windows that were thickly webbed and dented like antique bottles of fine, crusty port. A veritable den it was, with what seemed to be the wreck of philosophical apparatus tacked back two or three generations—ill-fated ventures on the treacherous main of science. Here a fat-bellied alchemist lolled lazily over in a gummy nest-bath, like a bench-top galloon at ebb-tide; and there a heap of broken porcelain-tubing and shreds of crucible lay, like bleaching-ships on a sullen shore. Beyond, by the minute windows stood a furnace, ironless, and clogged with gray ash. Two or three solid, old-time tables, built when joiners were more lavish of oak than nowadays, stood hopelessly littered with retorts, filtering funnels, lamps, ring-stands, and squat beakers of delicate glass, caked with long-dried sediment, all alike dust-smirched. Ronald involuntarily sought for some huge Chaldean tome, conveniently open to a favorite spell, or a handy cross-staff or two-dangling from the square beam overhead, but saw nothing more formidable than a stray volume of "Kant's Critique of Pure Reason." Taking this up and glancing at the title, he saw a name written in spidery German script, almost illegible from its shakiness—"Max Lebensfunke."

"Your name?" he asked.

"Yes, mein Herr," answered the old man, taking the volume and opening it like a live thing in his fumbling hands. "This book was given to me by the great Kant himself," he added.

"Frequently returning it, he advanced a few steps toward the middle of the room. Ronald followed, and, turning from the windows, looked further around him. In striking contrast to the undisturbed disorder, so recent of middle-age alchemy, was the big table that flanked the laboratory through its whole length. It began with a powerful galvanic battery, succeeded by a wily labyrinth of coils and helices, with little keys in front of them like a telegraph of the retired from business; these gave place to many-naked jars wired together by two and three, like cat-bowling patriotic plotting treason; beyond them stood a great glass globe, connected with a sizable air-pump and filled with a complex of huge wires and glassware; next loomed up a shiny induction-magnet, carefully insulated on solid glass supports; and at the farther extremity of the table lay a corpse.

Ronald Wyde, in spite of his many-sided experience of dissection-rooms, and morgues, and other ghastly scenes which he had long since accustomed him to, felt a certain repugnance at the sight—perhaps because he had come to this strange place to clutch the world-old mystery of the life-soul, and he found himself, so to speak, at the very threshold by the equal mystery of death.

Herr Lebensfunke smiled feebly at this subject.

"A subject received this morning from Berlin," he said, in answer to Wyde's look of inquiry; "a sad piece of extravagance, mein Herr—a luxury to which I can rarely afford to treat myself."

Ronald Wyde bent over the body and looked into its face a rough, red face, that had seemingly seen forty years of low-life dissipation. The bloated skin and heavy eyes told of debauchery and drunkenness, and a slight alcoholic ferment was perceptible as from the breath of one who sleeps away the effects of a carousal.

"I hope you don't think of restoring this soaked specimen to life?" said Ronald.

"That is still beyond me," answered the old man, merrily; "as yet I have not created life of a higher grade than of the lowest zoophytes."

"Do you claim to have done as much as that?"

"It is not an idle claim," said Herr Lebensfunke, solemnly; "look at this if you doubt."

"This was the great crystal globe that rose from the middle of the long table, and dominated its lesser accessories, as some great dome swells above the clustered houses of a town. Tubes passing through its walls met in a smaller central globe half filled with a colorless liquid. Beneath it half encircling it, was an intricate maze of bright wires; and two other wires dipped into it, touching the surface of the liquid with their platinum tips. Within the liquid pulsed a charcoal mass of almost transparent spongy tissue.

"If you see an aggregation of cells; possess of life—of a low order, it is true, but not the less life," said the philosopher, proudly. "These were created from water chemically pure, with the exception of a trace of ammonia, and impregnated with liquid carbon. By the combined action of heat and induction-electricity, in vacuo, they grew."

He touched one of the keys before him. Presently the wires began to glow with a faint light, which increased in intensity till the coal flamed into pure whiteness. Removing his finger, the current ceased to flow, and the wire again rapidly cooled.

"I passed the whole strength of sixty cup through it to show you its action. Ordinarily, with one or two carbon cells, and heating the current by the triple induction, the temperature is barely blood-ward."

"Fardon an interruption," said Ronald. "You say of liquid carbon; does it exist?"

"Yes; here is some in a vial. See it—how pure, how transparent! how it loves an incandescent light! The old man held the vial up as he spoke, and turned it round and round. "See how it flashes! No wonder, for it is the diamond fluid, and crystallized. Think how these fools of men have called diamond precious above all gems through these many weary years, and showered them on their kings or tossed them to their mistresses' feet, never dreaming that the life stone they lauded was inert, crystallized life!"

"Can't you crystallize diamonds yourself?" asked Wyde, "and make Freiberg a Golconda and yourself a Croesus?"

"It could be done after the lapse of thousands of years," replied Herr Lebensfunke. "Place undiluted liquid carbon in that inner globe, keep the coil at a white heat, and if Adam had started the process, his heir-law would have a Koh-i-noor to-day, and a nice reward for his possession."

Ronald Wyde bent toward the globe once more and examined the throbbing mass closely, whistling softly meanwhile.

"If you can create this cellular life, why not develop it still higher into an organism?"

"Because I can only create life—not soul. Years ago I was a free thinker; now my discovery have made me a deist—for I found that my cells, living as they were, and possessing undoubted vital circulation, were not germ; and though they might cluster together, like bubbles, to form a foetus, to evolve an animal or plant from them was far beyond me—that needs what we call soul. But, in searching blindly for this higher power, I grasped a greater discovery than any I had hoped for—the power to isolate life from its bodily organism.

"You have to keep the bottle carefully corked, I should imagine," laughed Ronald.

"Not quite," said Herr Lebensfunke, joining in the laugh; "life is not glass. My grand discovery is the life-magnet."

"Which know the poet of honor on your table here, has it not?" inquired Ronald, drawing his hand from his pocket and pointing to the insulated coil.

The old man glanced keenly at his hand as he did so, which Ronald assumed confused, and poked it again abruptly.

"Yes, that is the life-magnet. You see this bent glass tube surrounded by the helix. That tube contains liquid carbon. I pass through the helix a current of induced electricity, generated by the action of these sixty Bunsen cups upon a succession of coil and carbon cores, and the magnet becomes charged, with coilless life. I reverse the stream—what was positive now is negative, and the same magnet will absorb life from a living being to an extent only to be measured by thousands of millions."

"Certainly, otherwise it produced on the boy you put up the life from?"

"Death."

"What becomes of the soul?"

"I don't quite know. I fancy, however, that the magnet absorbs that too."

"Can it give it back?"

"Certainly; otherwise my work would be in vain, and be simply an ingenious and expensive instrument of death. By reversing the conditions, I can restore soul and life to the body from which I draw them; or to another body, even after the lapse of several days."

"Have you ever done so?"

"I have."

"You looked reflectively downward to his boots, but seemed to find nothing there—except a boot-sole."

"I say, my friend," he spoke at last. "haven't you got a pin you can stick in me? I'd like to know if it's raining."

"I can convince you better than by pins," replied Herr Lebensfunke. "Let me see that hand you hide so carefully."

Ronald Wyde slowly drew it from his pocket, as reluctantly as though it were a grizzly charity doll, and extended it to the old man. His little finger was gone.

"A defect that I am foolishly sensitive about," said he. "A childish freak—playing with steel tools, you know. A boy playmate chopped it off by accident; I cut his head open with his own hatchet, and made an idiot of him for life—that's all."

"I could do this," said Herr Lebensfunke, pointing to each word as if it were something heavy, and had to be lifted out of its cramped cell by force; "I could draw your entire life into that magnet, leaving you side by side with this corpse. I could dissect a finger from each corpse, attach it to your own dead hand by a little of that palpitating life-mass you have seen, pass an electric stream through it, and a junction would be effected in three or four days. I could then restore you to existence, whole and not maimed as now."

"It's not quite like the idea of dying, even for a day," answered Wyde.

"You may as well say you are mending my own!"

"You can take that one, if you like."

Ronald Wyde looked once more at the sodden features of the corpse, and smiled lugubly.

"A mighty shabby old customer," he said, "and I don't if I could feel at home in his skin; but I'm willing to risk it for the sake of the novelty of the thing."

The philosopher's thin face lit up with pleasure.

"You consent, then?" he chuckled in his womanish trouble.

"Of course I do. Begin at once, and have done with it as soon as you can."

"Not now, mein Herr; some modifications must be made in the connections—mere matters of detail. Come again to-night."

"At what hour?"

"At 10. Mein Vogelchen, show the Herr the way out."

The girl, who had been moving restlessly about the room all this time, with her wild brown eyes fixed now on Ronald, now on the old man, and now on the shivering, shivering stars on the corpse, lit a dusty chemical lamp, and led the way down the awkward passage and stairs. Ronald tried to start a conversation with her as he followed, but she snatched at his hand, and said: "You are too young, my birdling, to be accustomed to such sights as this up-stairs."

"Birdling is not too young, she's almost 14," said the girl, proudly. "And she likes it. Let it make her tire of mother. Mother went to sleep on that table, mein Herr."

"Poor thing! she's half-witted," thought Wyde, as he passed into the street. "By-by, birdie!"

Home he walked, briskly, to be met under his flaming balcony by Lotchen's kindly afternoon greeting. How had mein Herr passed his Sabbath the asked.

"I met an old philosopher on the God's-Acre, and went home with him to his shop. Have you ever heard of Herr Dr. Lebensfunke?"

"Yes, mein Herr. Wrong here, they say," she tapped her wide, round German forehead, and lifted her eyes expressively heavenward.

"Sold himself to the devil!" asked Wyde. Lotchen was not quite sure on that point. Some said one thing, and some another. There was undoubtedly a devil, else how could you Dr. Luther have thrown his inkstand at him! But he had never been seen in Lotchen's medicine shop, and she, who followed the Herr doctor's trouble to an indefinite something whose nature was broadly hinted at by more tapping of the forehead.

Ronald Wyde mounted the stairs, looked himself in his room, and wished himself out of the scrape he was getting into. But, being in for it now, he lit a cigar, and tried to fancy the process he would have to go through, and how he, a nasty and respectable young fellow, would look and feel in a drunkard's skin. His conjectures were too foggy outlined to please him, he put them aside, and waited impatiently enough for 10 o'clock.

A moonlight walk through the low streets, transfigured by the silver gleam into fairy vistas—all but the odor—brought him to Herr Lebensfunke's house. Simple birdling, on the lookout for him, picked him through the unsafe channel, and brought him to anchor in the dimly lit room.

"All is ready," said the philosopher, as he trembled forward and shook Ronald's hand. "See here." Zig-zags of silk-bound wire squirmed hither and thither from the life-magnet. Two of them ended in carbon points. "And here, too, my young friend, is your new finger."

It lay detached in the central globe, and on its severed end atoms of protoplasm were already clustered. "I'll write a second-hand article," thought Ronald; but, not venturing to translate the Latin, he only bowed and said: "Ach, which means anything and everything in German."

The Puritan Beats the Genesta.

SANDY HOOK, Sept. 16.—The start was made amid the whistling of tugs and steamers. The Genesta crossed the line ahead of her rival, but the Puritan quickly recovered her ground and dashed along over the course like a race horse.

SANDY HOOK, Sept. 16.—The Puritan crossed the winning line at 4:09; the Genesta at 4:10:15.

The Puritan wins by 1 minute and 33 seconds after time allowance.

On Friday the Genesta won the Douglas cup, beating the New York yacht fleet of fast schooners and sloops. The schooner Grayling, the second in the race, was twelve minutes actual time and six minutes corrected time, behind the Genesta.

The English yacht Genesta won the ocean race of 300 miles against the American yacht Dauntless in 48h. 7m. 50s., carrying off the Brenton's reef challenge cup.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The Herald's Paris special says of the massacre of Christians in Anam: The Superior of the college and the whole host of Christians have been slaughtered pell-mell.

European and General.

Floods in Spain.

Madrid, Sept. 21.—Disastrous rains have prevailed during the past twenty-four hours in the southeastern part of Spain. The rain came down in torrents and soon the rivers overflowed their banks, causing immense destruction to property and the loss of many lives.

The British Grain Trade.

London, Sept. 21.—The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the British grain trade during the past week, says: Broken weather with occasional rains during the week have tended to delay the harvest.

Paris, Sept. 21.—Alarming reports have been received to-day to the effect that China is massing a large force of troops upon the Tonquin frontier.

Brussels, Sept. 21.—The Government is preparing a bill to authorize the sending of paupers to Congo as colonists. Provisions are being made in the bill to secure them the means of obtaining a livelihood.

London, Sept. 21.—An enormous Socialist meeting was held yesterday at Lime House. The crowd prevented many attempts of the police to arrest the speakers, but the officers finally succeeded in arresting Mahon, the Secretary of the Socialist League, the steward of a German club and six spectators.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—An immense popular meeting was held here to-night, at which orations were delivered by Bradlaugh, Morely, Chamberlain and others. The hall in which the meeting proper was held was packed by an audience of 7,000 persons, and outside the building fully 20,000 more were assembled.

The Cholera.

ROME, Sept. 24.—During the past twenty-four hours eight new cases of cholera and five deaths were reported in Rome; one new case and one death in Ferrara; three new cases and one death in Massa Carrara, and two new cases in Rovigo.

PARIS, Sept. 24.—The cholera has appeared at a village four miles north of Paris. The disease is not of an extremely virulent type. The deaths so far have been among children only, adults recovering in every case.

MADRID, Sept. 24.—Five hundred and ninety-nine new cases of cholera and 225 deaths from the disease were reported yesterday throughout Spain.

Fatal Accident.

Last Saturday evening about six o'clock, an accident occurred in Nuuanu Valley which resulted in the death of Miss Mary Akona. A picnic and luau had been held at the head of Nuuanu Valley. Among those present were Mrs. Samuel Nowlein, the Misses Akona and a Portuguese boy named Johnnie Frier, who lives at Mrs. Nowlein's.

When they were ready to go home, Mrs. Nowlein got into the brake with her children, but the horse would not start. She had already ordered another horse when Mary Akona jumped out of her buggy, came to the brake, transferred two of the children to the buggy and got into the brake with Mrs. Nowlein and the boy Johnnie. Mary told Mrs. Nowlein she understood the horse and could drive him.

girl's pulse and ordered her taken home telling them he would be there by the time they were. When she was taken to her home on her King street Drs. Brodie and McGrew pronounced that she had been dead some time. Mrs. Nowlein and the boy are getting along favorably.

The funeral of the unfortunate girl took place yesterday afternoon from her residence on King street. Rev. Dr. Walker conducted the services. She has many friends and the funeral was a one, there being over forty carriages in the procession.

Hawaii Notes.

The Hilo wharf is getting deeply imbedded in sand, and the sea farther off than it was a week ago. It has never been known to get so much sand driven on shore. It is supposed to come from the Waialua River.

It would seem as though some men have as many lives as a cat. A Kanaka, at work on the treatle work, at Paipai-kou, fell a distance of one hundred feet and broke his arm. He fell on a rock. He must have been as tough as a pine knot.

On the evening of Sunday, September 20, about two boat loads of goods were left upon the Hilo wharf, after seven o'clock P.M., to be taken off early Monday morning, by either the Kilauea Hou or Lehua. About 8 o'clock the freight clerk was arrested while removing the goods. The next morning the parties who placed the goods there were also arrested. They appeared before Judge Akau the same morning but were not fined. This seems to be a case where the so-called Sunday law works great hardship as the steamers start off early Monday morning, sometimes shortly after midnight. It was easy enough for the officers to arrest in this case, but it seems impossible for them to arrest a thief in Hilo. The so-called Sunday law distinctly says that in case of necessity work may be done. In this case, owing to circumstances, either contracts to ship goods must be broken or the so-called Sunday law violated. If the men who placed the goods on the wharf violated the law, these steamers within the Kingdom's jurisdiction also violated it, and ought to be arrested. No one here wishes to violate a law of this kind if it can be avoided. Mr. Wilder could not allow his steamers to remain six hours for a boat load of freight to be delivered at Honokaa.

VENTURE.

This well-known Trotting Stallion is now standing at the corner of Punchbowl and Queen streets, and breeders, horsemen and stock-owners should take advantage of the opportunity to obtain his blood while they have the chance. He is now looking and feeling nearly as well as he ever did in his life, and moves as lively and his eye is as bright and he is as vigorous as a four-year-old horse.

It does not require a great horseman to discover great points of excellence in VENTURE. The ordinary citizen, upon beholding him, will be impressed immediately with his grand make-up, magnificent length, and elegant finish. If he is not the greatest horse that ever came to this country, he is surely one of the greatest, and as a turf performer, he towers as far above them all as he does above a sucking colt in stable.

A great deal of importance has lately been attached to the value of a horse that is being kept for stock purposes, whether he is standard or not, and the President of the National Association of Trotting Horse Breeders in America strongly advises people not to patronize stallions that are not standard bred, and he also advises them to select one not only standard bred, but if possible one that is standard by his own performance, which is a public record of 2:30, or better, and even more than this by the performance of his get also. Now, if this rule was rigidly applied it would exclude all such great horses as Electioneer and the sires of Maid S. and Jay Eye See, etc., for while they have become greatly renowned by the performance of their get, they never were turf performers themselves.

Now, we will see, for curiosity, how near VENTURE comes to possessing these three qualifications, namely: Breeding, performances and performances of his get.

As to breeding, he is the peer of any horse on earth, and I don't except the great Hermit, who is the most popular stallion in England, and whose service fee is £200, he being the sire of three Derby winners.

As to his own performances, he meets the requirements, having a public record of 2:17 1/2—2:30 being the standard of admission.

His get are now just beginning to be appreciated in California, one of which (Vengeance) won a good race quite lately in Sacramento, in straight heats, making a record of 2:34, and is said to be able to trot close to 2:10, when called upon to do so.

With these facts before us, VENTURE looms up as one of the greatest horses, not only in this but in any country, and it is not surprising that the strength of his being the sire of Jay Eye See. His stud fee is $200. He is also ten years younger than Volunteer (sire of St. Julien), whose fee is $500. All things taken into consideration, I cannot see why VENTURE is not as desirable a horse to breed from as any of them, or why he is not as worthy of the patronage of the public. Below I will give his pedigree, of which I write a comparison with that of any other horse in the country:

VENTURE, chestnut horse, 16 hands, foaled in 1864; sired by Belmont, he by American Boy, he by See Gull, he by Imp. Expedition.

1st dam, Miss Mostyn, by American; 2d dam, by Belmont's Gray Mare; 3d dam, imp. Lady Mostyn, by Ten 4th dam, Invalid, by Whisker; 5th dam, Helen, by Hambletonian; 6th dam, Susan, by Overton; 7th dam, Drowsy, by Drone; 8th dam, by Old England; 9th dam, by Calves Arabian; 10th dam, Miss Cade, by Cade; 11th dam, Miss Makelona, by son of Greybe; 12th dam, by Partner; 13th dam, Miss Jones, dam by Woodcock; 14th dam, by Croft's Bay Barb; 15th dam, Desdemona, dam by Makelona; 16th dam, by Brimmer; 17th dam, by Dickey Pierson; 18th dam, Barton Barb. The band will play this evening at the Hawaiian Hotel in honor of the captain and officers of the H. B. M. S. Satellite. The following will be the programme:

1. March: Old England. 2. Overture: Struggle for Fortune. 3. Waltz: My Queen. 4. Selection: Pinafore.

They say: that some of the Australian passengers were looking for the "Sunrise" Hotel last Sunday morning; that the author's carnival will be literary butchery if the boys and girls don't read up; that the latest thing in sprinkling carts will be one with an automatic driver that won't wet every body on the sidewalks;

Two passports were stopped last Saturday of persons to sail by the City of Sydney. One of the passports stopped was that of Mr. E. C. Thompson who lately gave a supper at the Hawaiian Hotel to a number of citizens who were his special friends at that time.

Last Saturday morning an official search for opium, painful as it was to all the parties engaged in it, was compelled to be made at the Oceanic wharf. Suspicion, it seems, was entertained at San Francisco that a coffin containing the remains of the mother of Mr. Robert More of this place, which was shipped by the Consul, contained opium also.

Saturday afternoon about five o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Peacock were driving a light buggy along Emma street on the turning out of Boretania street one of the hinder wheels suddenly dished and threw Mrs. Peacock out on one side of the buggy, while Mr. Peacock jumped out on the other side.
