POSSIBILITIES OF RUBBER CULTURE IN HAWAII

But Four Varieties of Any Commercial Value.
Seeds Obtained By Bureau of Agriculture Do Remarkably Well

SUPERINTENDENT DAVIS RESIGNS.

Head of Education Department Has Some Words With Governor Carter And Throws Up His Office.
Resignation Probably Accepted.

But four varieties of rubber producing trees are of any commercial value, viz: Hevea Braziliensis (Para), Manihot Glaziovii (Ceara),
both native of Brazil, Castilloa (both Lactiflua and Nicoyensis) of Mexico and Central America, and the Ficus Elastica of Assam.

The Ceara is the only one of these planted in Hawaii until within the past year.

In 1898, some seeds were obtained by the Bureau of Agriculture and distributed to various parties
throughout the Islands for planting. In spite of the fact that no care has ever been given them, and varied as the conditions are in the different localities, those which have escaped being eaten by horses and cattle have grown remarkably well.

In one group planted by Hugh Howell at Nahiku, Maui, the trees measure 48 inches in girth at a height of 3 feet from the ground.
They have had one systematic tapping, yielding from 5 to 8 oz. of dry rubber. (They can be tapped twice a year.)

In the State of Ceara, Brazil, the habitat of the species, the tree is found growing at high elevations on the dry, stony, barren slopes of the mountains, which has given rise to the idea that it will only do well under desert-like conditions.

So general is this idea that many thousand trees have been planted in other countries in places so sterile that no other vegetation could exist, with the natural consequence that little or no rubber was obtained after they had struggled along to maturity.

However, when found growing in the same localities with Hevea, as a long the upper Amazon, it is found to yield about one-half as much. The native tappers make no distinction, tapping both kinds as they come to them, mixing the milk and coagulating it in large balls, known to the trade as "Para hams."

Where this tree grows alone it is impossible to coagulate the milk in this form for it coagulates too quickly, so is allowed to run down the tree and coagulate in streaks as runs. This is known as "scrap" or "Manicoba," and is the only form
in which the Manihot rubber reaches the market unmixed with that from Hevea.

The objections to the cultivation
of the Ceara are:

1st. It is quite expensive to prepare the seeds to insure germination.

2nd. The tree has two barks;
the inner one very soft and smooth,
while the outer is hard and shaggy,
and has to be stripped off like birch bark before tapping, thus adding to the expense of collection.

3rd. As compared with Hevea
the yield is small.

The points in favor of it are:

1st. That it will yield in paying much the same size, shape, and color as the mango, growing in clusters of three. The seeds are as large as walnuts and retain their vitality but a short time, making them difficult to transport.

Eighty-five per cent of the world's supply of rubber is obtained from these two varieties. When in its crude state, Para rubber is pure and only needs washing to free it from dirt and particles of bark
when it is ready to vulcanize.

CASTILLOA ELASTICA

There are two kinds of Castilloa,
the Lactiflua of Southern Mexico quantities during the third year
from planting.

2nd. Yielding while very young the trees may be planted as closely as 700 per acre.

3rd. They may be planted on stony ground if other conditions are favorable.

4th. The seeds retain their vitality for more than a year and can be shipped anywhere.

5th. All the trees bear seed, the first crop at two years of age. So much for the variety already grown to maturity, in Hawaii.

HEVEA BRAZILIENSIS.

The most important and profitable variety of all is the Hevea Braziliensis, the habitat of which is from the mouth of the Amazon
to the slopes of the Andes, in Peru.

It is a very tall tree with a single,
soft, smooth bark. The branches are small and high up with leaves and Guatimala, and Nicoyensis of Nicaragua and Panama. It is a large, quickly growing tree yielding at 6 years of age ordinarily.
The branches are very large, growing horizontal and hung with bright green leaves, eighteen inches long as tough and thick as sole-leather.

The milk flows very freely, being 50% water. The rubber is black and sticky with very little elasticity, and owing to the great amount of resinous matter in it, the price has always been about 40% less than that of Para; but owing to the great increase in the use of electrical machinery, the price has risen lately as the Castilloa is being principally used for insulating purposes requiring no elasticity.

It comes to the market in scrap, sheets, and balls. Some planters color it white in coagulating by mixing chalk or whiting with the latex, adding much to its appearance and overcoming the stickiness somewhat, making it more agreeable to handle. Its resinous qualities, however, cannot be overcome, so that it will never bring a price equal to that of Para.

The Castilloa is not likely to prove a success in Hawaii, as it requires at least one hundred inches of rain during 6 or 7 months, and a dry season of at least 5 months. During the rains the tree stores the milk in its bark under no pressure, making the dry season

necessary to shrink the bark, thus giving the necessary pressure to make it flow freely. These conditions are not to be found in Hawaii in conjunction with the other requirements.

The Nahiku Rubber Co., Ltd., was incorporated January 24, 1905,
for the purpose of raising rubber trees at Nahiku, Maui. There are at this writing (Sept. 1), about 5,000
Ceara plants from 6 months of age and 10 feet in height, down to seedlings just coming up in the nursery.
Six hundred Castilloa and 17,000
Hevea plants arrived from Ceylon
during the first part of July.

Although it is yet too soon to give measurements of these, the fact that they all started to grow within three weeks of their arrival and have grown rapidly ever since,
would indicate that the locality is as suitable for the growth of Hevea
as for that of Ceara.

The plants were packed dry in kerosene boxes, about eight hundred in each, and as they were over 2 months in transit, their vitality was so low that many were thought to be dead that have grown even when nothing was alive but a portion of the root. These are the results of the work done by the company, and success is now assured.

It should be remembered that available localities possessing suitable conditions are scarce in Hawaii; and those intending to plant should consider the importance of securing a man with practical knowledge of the business, which is of as much importance in planting rubber as in planting cane. Perhaps it would be well to wait until the Nahiku Co. has absolutely demonstrated that the industry is practicable in Hawaii, before engaging in the business on an extensive scale.

The requisite general conditions
are:

1st.—Good, soft, deep soil, containing much humus, well drained either by slope or porosity, preferably the latter, with gravel or ash sub-soil.

2nd.—Continuous rainfall of a hundred or more inches throughout the year,—except for Castilloa.

3rd.—Complete protection from Kona and Trade Winds.

4th.—Elevation should be under 1800 feet, and the temperature should not go below 65.

While it is not absolutely proven that the trees would not do well under more adverse conditions, the industry should be started under conditions as favorable as possible, until it is firmly established as a success under such conditions.
After which experiments will be excusable, and perhaps will prove to be of value.

Head Of Education Department Resigns.

HONOLULU, Oct. 20.—James
C. Davis Superintendent of Public Instruction, yesterday afternoon tendered his resignation to Governor Carter. It was done orally at the close of an interview of less than a quarter of an hour. The head of the educational department
made a suggestion of the advisability of his retirement, to which the Governor promptly agreed.

Superintendent Davis went to Governor Carter in the executive chamber to remonstrate against the reception of complaints by the Governor relative to school matters and their transmission by him to the Department of Public Instruction, instead of directing the complainants to submit their grievances first and direct to the department through its official head.

"So long as I am Governor I shall keep an open door and an open mail to complaints relating to any department of the government," Governor Carter replied to the remonstrance.

"Then perhaps I had better resign my office," Mr. Davis is understood to have rejoined.

"I am agreed," was substantially
the Governor's answer.

Mr. Davis retired and within a few minutes Commissioner W. R.
Farrington of the Board of Education arrived and had an interview behind closed doors with the Governor.

Governor's Donation

Superintendent of Public Instruction Davis and Professor Hosmer, of the Board of Agriculture and Forestry, the committee appointed by Secretary Atkinson to prepare the program for the school celebration of Arbor Day, on November 3, made their written report yesterday to Mr. Atkinson, informing him of a plan that had been evolved to offer prizes to the schools for the best showing.

The same committee was also enabled to report to Governor Carter that they had been sufficiently active to secure enough money to cover the latter's very generous offer of $2.50 to each of the Territory's schools to celebrate the day properly. The Governor, on being shown the subscription list, appended herewith, at once wrote an order on his bankers for $385, which he handed to Professor Hosmer. The committee's report is as follows:

Honolulu, Oct. 24, 1905.
Honorable A. L. C. Atkinson, Secretary of Hawaii, Honolulu.

Sir: We, the undersigned, appointed by you as a committee to arrange the details of the Arbor Day tree planting contest, beg leave to report as follows:

We are heartily in favor of the proposed contest, because we believe it is based on the true spirit of Arbor Day, which is to awaken and maintain a continued interest in the planting and care of trees on school grounds and elsewhere.

To carry out the plan in a successful way, and to arouse the lasting interest of both teachers and children, we recommend:

First, that to every school making application to the Superintendent of Public Instruction, a prize of not less than five dollars in value, consisting of some object of beauty or utility, to be selected by the teachers of the school, be offered in each of the public schools of the Territory, to the grade planting on school grounds on Arbor Day, November 3, 1905, or before November 15, 1905, the tree which as the result of being well cared for is in the best condition on the succeeding Arbor Day, and that the prize be rewarded each year thereafter under the same conditions.

Second, that the prize be the property of the grade winning it for the period of one year, and each year it shall have attached to it the name of the grade winning it, and a record kept of the names of the children in the grade.

Third, that the planting be done in strict accordance with the directions prepared by the Superintendent of Forestry and furnished by him to the principal of each school. These directions will be drawn up so as to cover the various conditions existing in the various parts of the Territory.

Fourth, that the trees be judged before hand by the school agent of the district, after an examination of them and consultation with the teacher of each competing grade, and the prize publicly awarded on Arbor Day.

Respectfully yours,
(Signed) RALPH S. HOSMER,
Supt. of Forestry,
JAMES C. DAVIS,
Supt. Public Inst.,
Committee.

Maui Team Played Poor Baseball.

HONOLULU, Oct. 24. — While about 200 baseball fans sat and watched a 9 inning farce of the poorest baseball ever handed the Honolulu public, the whole of Maui were probably awaiting a wireless announcing that the Ilimas had carried off the Hawaiian Baseball Championship for 1905. For one inning only was the game worth watching and that was the first. The sports were then anxious to size up the strangers. It did not take long for the Ilimas to demonstrate that they were in a class by themselves for poor ball playing.

After the second inning the article of ball played by Maui was so fierce that the H. A. C.'s all shifted positions just to make it interesting—outfielders played the bags and the infielders played the gardens. Desha tossed "dew drops" and all the Reds struck left handed. Barney Day bunted just to make the crowd yell.

It looked as though the strangers did not have a single man who knew the game. The pitcher, P. Espinda, in delivering the first few balls, wound up like an automatic machine. He soon gave this up, however, and pitched without the fancy brand.

It took just one hour and ten minutes to play the game. This is the poorest game on record here. Bert Bowers the umpire, and the liberal offering on the part of the Honolulu while at the bat caused the shortness of the game.

The Ilimas rounded the bases in the first inning and they went to the field jubilant to think that they were not going to get the "whitewash." Desha walked the first two men up. They both went up on a passed ball and Ilimas scored on Joy's wild throw to Gleason on first. They scored their second and last run in the third. Desha passed up the easy kind and the champs from Maui batted Moses around for the second time. They could score no more although the Reds gave them all they could.

The H. A. C.'s just to play safe circled the paths four times in the first. Fernandez reached first on an error. He stole second and third and came home on a passed ball. Sheldon walked and went to third on a wild throw to first; he scored on Joy's long drive to center. Joy and Burns made the circuit on hits.

H. A. C.'s brought five men home in the second and two in the fourth. They then tried to finish fast so as to give the few remaining spectators a chance to get to the cowboy show.

Defeat of Maui Champions.

HONOLULU, Oct. 23.—The baseball contest at the League park last Saturday afternoon between the champion team of Maui, the "Ilimas," and a local team mostly composed of members of the champion "Honolulu" club was not marked by any great brilliancy in play nor by a large attendance of spectators. The game was won by the Honolulu aggregation in a score of 11 to 2. The weather was a drawback to the Maui team although they were very kindly handled by the Honoluluites. Bert Bowers was umpire and pleased both players and spectators by his speedy action. The Maui constellation play the Diamond Heads this afternoon game being called at 3:30 o'clock.

Wailuku School Notes.

The pupils who were vaccinated are about all well now. Meta Riedel leaves us next week, and will accompany her parents to Kilauea, Kauai. We shall miss her very much.

We shall enter the contest for the prize offered by Governor Carter in connection with Arbor Day.

Preparations are nearly complete for the Arbor Day work and exercises. Principal Copeland has laid out the driveway and walks through the grounds, so that trees may be planted in proper places.

We have borrowed a flag-pole temporarily, and the Stars and Stripes now float over the school. We hope that the pole promised by the Department and provided for by the Legislature may soon be given us.

Douse Will Be Tried In Honolulu.

HONOLULU, Oct. 23.—Word was received by wireless at the Attorney General's office this morning that there would be a change of venue in the trial of A. Douse, the engineer of the Puunene Plantation who is accused of the manslaughter in connection with the death of the Japanese Yamagata.

It has been arranged that the trial of Douse shall be held here in Honolulu. It is not known so far if the application for the change of venue came from the defence or from the prosecution.

The grand jury has returned an indictment against Douse charging him with manslaughter. It is alleged that he threw burning oil on the Japanese, who afterwards succumbed.

Uncle Terry

By CHARLES CLARK MUNN

Copyright, 1905, by Lee & Shepard.

SYNOPSIS

Chapters I and II—Uncle Terry is the keeper of the Cape light on Southport island. He has an adopted daughter Telly (Rtelka), grown to womanhood, who was rescued when a babe from the wreck of the Norwegian ship Peterson. C. III—Albert and Alice Page are two orphans with a heritage of debt, living in the village of Sandgate. Albert is a college graduate, and through the influence of his chum, Frank Nason, gets a position in the law office of "Old Nick" Frye in Boston. C. IV—Frye is a scoundrel and is the attorney for Frank's father, a wealthy Boston merchant. He wants Albert to keep up his intimacy with Frank, who has a yacht, plenty of money and nothing to do but amuse himself. C. V—In an evening's outing with Frank, Albert fritters away $20. At the same time Alice is walking four miles a day to teach school and supporting herself and Aunt Susan. C. VI—At the same time Alice is walking four miles a day to teach school and supporting herself and Aunt Susan. Frye increases Albert's pay from $75 to $175 a month as a bribe to spy upon the Nasons. C. VII and VIII—Albert tells Frank of his debts, Alice's struggles and his dislike of expensive follies. Frank confesses his disgust with an idle life and induces his father to make Albert his attorney in place of Frye. IX and X—Albert has $2,500 a year to attend to Nason's affairs. He takes Frank to his village home for Christmas, with an inevitable result that his friend is smitten with Alice. XII—Frank is delighted with the country holiday of sleighrides and skating. Alice keeps him at a distance and tells her brother that his chum ought to work for a living. XIII and XIV—A notice appears in the papers calling for the heirs of Eric Peterson of Stockholm, whose son and his wife and child were wrecked on the Maine coast. Frye is the attorney. Uncle Terry goes to Boston and after telling his story in full gives Frye $200 to recover the estate for Telly. XV and XVI—Frank takes a hint from Alice and studies law. Lord's blessing, as the widdie believes, why are so many only born to suffer or be crippled all their lives? An' why are snakes an' all sorts o' vermin, to say nothin' o' cheatin' lawyers, like Frye, ever born at all?

Albert smiled at the coupling of Frye with vermin. "There are a good many wiser heads than mine, Uncle Terry, that have never been able to answer your question," he replied, "and I doubt if they ever will. To my mind the origin of life is an enigma, the wide variations in matters of health and ability an injustice, and the end a blank wall that none who scales ever recrosses with tidings of the beyond. As some one has expressed it: 'Life is a narrow vale between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities.' We strive in vain to look beyond the heights. We cry aloud, and the only answer is the echo of our wailing cry."

"An' right that," put in Uncle Terry earnestly, "is whar I allus envy the believers, as the widdie calls 'em, fer they are satisfied with it beyond an' have it all pict'rd out in thar minds, even to what the streets are paved with an' the kind o' music they're goin' ter have. It's all guesswork, in my way o' thinkin', but they are sure o' it, an' that feelin' is lots o' comfort to 'em when they are drawin' near the end. I've been a sort o' scoffer all my life an' can't help bein' a doubter, but there are times when I envy the Widdie Leach an' the rest on 'em the delusion I believe they're laborin' under."

"But do you believe death ends all consciousness?" asked Albert seriously. "Have you no hope, ever, of a life beyond this blank wall?"

"Sartin I have hopes, same as all on us has, but I wish I was more sure my hopes was goin' ter be realized. Once in awhile I git the feelin' thar ain't no use in hopin', an' then a little anthin' keeps sayin' 'Mebbe-mebbe-mebbe'-an' I feel more cheerful again."

Albert looked at the roughly clad and withered old man who sat near, and in whose words lurked an undertone of sadness mingled with a faint hope, and in an instant back came a certain evening months before when the Widow Leach had uttered a prayer that had stirred his feelings as no such utterance ever had before. All the pathos of that simple petition, all its abiding faith in God's goodness and wisdom, all its utter self-abnegation and absolute confidence in a life beyond the grave, came back, and all the consolation that feeling surely held for the old and poverty envied soul who uttered it impressed him in sharp contrast to the doubting "mebbe-mebbe" of Uncle Terry.

As Albert looked out to where the waves were breaking upon a ledge, and back again to this old man sitting with bowed head beside him, a sincere regret that it was not in his power to utter one word that would aid in dispelling the clouds of doubt came to him. "Since I lack in faith myself," he thought, "all I can say will only increase his doubt. I wish I had as much faith as the widdie, but I have not, and possibly never shall have." For a long time he sat in silence, living over the years during which skepticism had been slowly but surely growing upon him, and then Uncle Terry suddenly looked up at him. It is likely the old man's keen eyes read at a glance what was in Albert's mind, for he said: "It don't do no good ter brood over this matter o' believin', Mr. Page; I've wished I thought different many a time, an' more so now I'm gittin' near the end o' life, but I can't, an' so thar's no use in worryin'. Our pinions 'bout these matters are a good deal due to our bringin' up an' the experiences we've met with. Mine, connected with those as has perished religion, has, to say the least, been unfortn'it, but, as I said afore, I wish I believed different."

He paused a few moments and then added sadly, "This hopin' ain't allus with except father and mother and Aunt Leach and Mandy Oaks."

Albert's heart began to beat with unusual speed. Never in his life before had he felt the impulse to utter words of love to any woman. "Telly," he said, "I promised to tell you a little story here today, but it's all said in a few words. I love you, and I want you to share my life and all that I can do to make you happy." A trifle incoherent, but expressive.

"Libby an' me sorter 'spected that Telly was the magnet."

best fer some on us either, fer it's hopin' fer some one to cum year after year thar's made Telly what she is an' grieved Libby an' me more'n she ever knew."

Albert looked curiously at the old man beside him, and a new feeling of trust and affection came to him. In some ways Uncle Terry seemed like his own father. Then, following that, came a sudden impulse to be frank with him.

"Uncle Terry," he said, "I have a little story to tell you, and as it comes close to you, I believe it's right that you should know it. The first time I saw Telly I said to myself, 'That girl is a prize any man may feel proud to win.' I asked her if I might write to her, and what with her few letters and the little I have seen of her I feel that she is the one I want for a wife. I have not even hinted it to her yet, and before I do I would like to feel that you are satisfied with me. May I have your consent to win her if I can?"

Uncle Terry reached out and grasped Albert's hand and, shaking it cordially, answered, "Ye hev my best wishes in the matter, an' I wouldn't say that if I didn't think ye worthy o' her!" Then he added with a droll smile, "Libby an' me sorter 'spected that Telly was the magnet that drew ye down here!"

"I thank you for your confidence and consent," replied Albert gratefully. "I am earning an income that is more than sufficient for two, and if Telly will say 'yes' I shall be the happiest man on earth. And now," he added, "let's go fishing, Uncle Terry."

"I guess it's 'bout time," was the answer, "fer thar's two schools workin' into the cove, an' we'll have some fun."

Three hours after, when they landed at the cove fairly sated with pulling in the gamy little mackerel and happy as two boys, Telly met them with a smile and the news that dinner was ready.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

"We'll go in my boat," said Telly the next afternoon when she and Albert were ready to start on their trip to the cove, and, unlocking a small annex to Uncle Terry's boathouse, she showed him a dainty cedar craft, cushioned and carpeted. "You may help me launch the Sea Shell," she added smiling, "and then you may steer."

"No, that is the lady's privilege in all voyages," he answered, "and we must begin this one right."

It was a good four mile pull to the mouth of the inlet, and when he helped his fair passenger out he said: "Do you mean to say you rowed up here alone every day to work on that picture, Telly? You will let me call you Telly now, won't you?"

"Why not? All my friends do, and I feel you are my friend." Then she added: "Now I am going to have my revenge and make you pose while I sketch this time. It was the other way before."

"I am glad it is," he said, "for my arms are too tired to use for an hour. How do you want me, flat on the rock fast asleep, the way I was when my boat drifted away?"

"Oh, no, that would look as if you were dead, and as this is to be my reminder of you I want you very much alive." As for the pose she wanted Albert to assume, she could not determine which she liked the best.

"I want to sketch you in the position most natural to you here," she said finally, "and must ask you to choose that yourself."

"Let us trim the boat the way mine was that day, and I will sit beside it and smoke while you work."

The idea was adopted, and while Telly sketched he smoked, contented to watch the winsome face, so oblivious to his admiring glances.

"There," she observed, after a half hour of active penciling, "please lay your cigar aside and look pleasant. I want to catch the expression of your face."

When the sketch was completed she asked if he had any suggestions to make.

"Only one. I would like you in the picture and sitting beside me."

"I would rather not be in it," she replied soberly. "I only want to see you as you are here today. It may be a long time before you come to the Cape again."

"Would you like me to come often?"

"Of course," she answered, turning away her face. "It is so lonesome here, and there is no one I care to talk eyes, and, as on the evening before, both he and Aunt Libby retired early.

"They wish me well," Albert thought. The next day Uncle Terry proposed that Telly should drive to the head of the island in his place.

"I'm sorry ye must leave us, Mr. Page," he said when Albert was ready to bid the old folks goodbye. "I wish ye could stay longer, but cum again soon, an' remember our latchstring's allus out fer ye."

When the old carryall had made half its daily journey Albert pointed to a low rock and said, "There is a spot I shall always be glad to see, for it was there Uncle Terry first found me."

Telly made no answer. In fact, she had said but little since they started. When they reached the little landing no one else was there. No house was in sight of it, and the solitude was broken only by the tide that softly caressed the barnacle piles of the wharf and the weed covered rocks on either side. No boat was visible adown the wide reach that separates Southport island from the mainland, and up it came a light sea breeze that barely rippled the flowing tide and whispered through the brown and scarlet leaved thickets back of them. Over all shone the hazy sunlight of October. Telly stood listening and hoping that the boat would be late. A look of sadness came over her face and a more than usually plaintive appeal in her expressive eyes. "I am sorry you are going," she said. "It is so lonesome here, and it will seem more so now."

Then, as if that was a confession he might think unmaidenly, she added, "I dread to have the summer end, for when winter comes the rocks all around seem like so many tombstones."

Albert put out his hand as if that would aid his appeal, and as his fingers closed over hers he said: "I am going away with a heavy heart, Telly, and when I can come back is hard to say. Will you not promise me that some time, no matter when, you will be my own good and true wife? Let me go away with that hope to comfort me while I work and save for a home for us both. Will you, Telly?"

But the plaintive face was turned away, perhaps to hide the tears. Then an arm stole around her waist, and as he drew her close she whispered, "When I am no longer needed here, if you want me then I will come to you."

She was sobbing, her head resting on his shoulder, and as he kissed her unresisting lips a boat's sharp whistle broke the sacred spell.

"Go a little way back, my darling," he whispered, "until the boat is gone. I do not want any one to see you have been crying."

When her misty eyes could no longer see the boat that bore her heart away, she turned, and all the long, lonely way back love's tears lingered on her lashes.

Broker Pollitz and Local Silk Culture.

HONOLULU, Oct. 20.—Mr. Pollitz, the San Francisco broker, has been investigating the silk worm industry and states that he will put $10,000 into it. Silk worms have been tried on these islands and their product is excellent. As there is a duty of 65 cent. on raw silk, Mr. Pollitz believes that the local article would sell at a large profit. Silk culture would utilize a great many of the Japanese women and children.

Planters Support Cane Land Settlement.

HONOLULU, Oct. 20.—One of the most weighty problems at present confronting the administration of the public lands of the Territory is the disposition to be made of leaseholds upon which large corporations are now raising sugar cane, but of which the leases are approaching their termination.

The Organic Act provides that no corporation shall acquire and hold real estate in Hawaii in excess of one thousand acres, also that no lease of any public land shall be granted for a longer term than five years.

Applications for cane lands on which leases are running out are being received in considerable numbers by the Commissioner of Public Lands. As at present there is no other crop that is raised so profitable as sugar cane, it is the policy of the government to have the lands in question settled by people who can give assurances that they will be kept up to the present state of cultivation in sugar cane the understanding being that the corporations owning the sugar mills now grinding the cane from such lands will pay the best contract price going on their own holdings for the cane.

What is sought to be guarded against is letting people have the lands who will hold them only for speculation or who will try to evade the residence condition and merely place Asiatic labor on their holdings on shares with themselves. Actual settlers who will cultivate as much land as, and no more than, can be cultivated by themselves and members of their families are wanted to take up the lands.

"This is a matter that affects the whole community," Commissioner Pratt said yesterday as he outlined the policy in substance as above.

"At least one settlement association has given assurance of having the capital behind it to keep up the present state of cultivation.

"In trying to obtain actual cultivators as settlers on cane lands we have the backing of the largest planters in the country. They assure us that they will not endeavor to block the settlement of land if it is to be maintained in the present state of cultivation."

Mandamus Battle Comes on Monday.

HONOLULU, Oct. 20.—Abram Lewis Jr., of Smith & Lewis, has been retained by County Attorney J. D. Willard of Kauai to assist in conducting the appeal of the County of Kauai from the decision of Judge Hardy, dismissing the mandamus suit against Assessor Holt of Oahu and Assessor Farley of Kauai to compel the assessing of income taxes on Kauai plantations in that taxation division instead of the first division (Oahu).

The case is set for Monday next in the Supreme Court. Deputy Attorney General M. F. Prosser will represent the assessors as Territorial officials and oppose the appeal. Probably County Attorney Douthitt will appear on the same side to represent Oahu's interests. D. H. Case, county attorney of Maui, made common cause with Kauai at Lihue and will probably at least "watch the case" for his county before the appellate court.

Mr. Lewis' engagement on behalf of the writ of mandamus, at all events, indicates that an exhaustive presentation of law on the question will be made. Yesterday Mr. Lewis buckled down hard to the work of preparation.

Small Demand For American Literature.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Only 25 per cent of the books used by readers of the New York Public Library during the past year belonged to the department of English and American literature, according to the report made by Director Billings. The 75 per cent most in demand included either foreign books or had to do with subjects that occupy the student.

The cosmopolitan character of the students, the directors says, was thus shown. The books consulted numbered 615,454, and were read by 200,233 persons.

Three new Carnegie libraries have been opened during the year, and the total of books in them and other branches of the new public library amount to more than four millions. Among the gifts acknowledged by the annual report was the catalogue of a collection of Chinese porcelain, owned by J. Pierpont Morgan.

Gen. Kondratenko Is Given Last Honors.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 8.—The arrival of the body of Major General Kondratenko, commander of the Seventh East Siberian Rifles, who was killed last December at Port Arthur, and its interment in the venerable Alexander Nevsky Monastery today, were marked by the most impressive military and civil spectacle witnessed here since the early days of the war. For once all classes of the population of the capital awakened from that apathy which was untouched by the news of the battles of Mukden or the Sea of Japan or the announcement of the conclusion of peace.

Thousands of spectators, standing silent and uncovered in a drizzling rain, walked the board Nevsky Prospect from the Moscow station to the gates of the monastery, while Grand Dukes, Ministers of State and the highest officers of the army and navy, many of whom had won distinction at Port Arthur and in Manchuria followed the coffin through the muddy streets as common mourners with the widow and son of the dead general.

In the procession could be seen the uniforms of every order of the Russian military. Each regiment of the St. Petersburg garrison sent a detachment of veterans, many bearing the thirty-year-service medals to form the military escort.

Conspicuous among the clergy were two militant priests from Port Arthur, wearing the board yellow and black ribbons of the order of St. George awarded them for gallantry during the siege.

Many cities were represented by deputations. The Emperor had expected to attend, but, as he was unable to do so, he was represented by Grand Duke Vladimir. Metropolitan Antonius, assisted by the choristers, celebrated the "Panicheda" for requiem and eulogized General Kondratenko as "the soul of the siege, for when he died the fortress fell."

Tobacco Prospects.

Hilo, Oct. 19.—Tobacco is a decided success in Hawaii and a movement is underway to establish a company with sufficient capital to develop the industry.

Out in Hamakua the Government under Director Jared Smith, started an experimental station about three years ago and the result has been highly satisfactory in every way. There was some difficulty experienced at first in securing the proper seed so that the result was not what it should be. Last year there was a crop of Sumatra leaf and this year it will be still larger. The gentleman in charge of the station, C. R. Blacow, was in town on Tuesday on his return from Kauai and he showed that he had lost none of the enthusiasm he displayed when he first assumed the duties of guardian of the Government tobacco crop on this island.—Herald.

Banker Now Pauper.

New York, Oct. 9.—Jefferson P. Raplee, once a wealthy New York banker and business associate of Jay Gould, Commodore Vanderbilt and John P. Blair, went to the poorhouse here today.

Raplee was one of the best known men along Broadway in his day. His father, who was Judge Raplee of Yates County, New York, left him a large fortune. In 1856 he opened a banking house at 137 Broadway, which was capitalized at $200,000 and did a yearly business of $500,000, which was a large sum at that time. Since 1867, when this bank made an assignment after some unfortunate speculation, Raplee's fortune, although invested in a banking venture, steadily diminished. Three years ago he closed his last office at 136 Liberty street and began to live on the remnants of his former wealth. He was unmarried.

All Over.

"No more will I hear his footsteps on yonder walk as the clock strikes the hour of 8."

"Gracious, Jeanette!"

And the old parlor light will never burn low for him again."

"You don't mean it?"

"I do, and furthermore he will never sit on his sofa three nights a week and call me pet names as he has been doing for two years."

"I am astonished."

"And tonight I am going to burn all the old love letters in my trunk."

"B—but why are you going to discard him?"

"Discard him? Why, you goose, I am going to marry him!"—Chicago Daily News.

'It's the Oil' Says the Painter

If you could put a coating of pure, raw linseed oil on your house, and that oil would stay there, it would protect your house from the elements; and preserve the material underneath. Any honest painter will tell you that oil is the life of paint and that the pigment mixed with the oil is put there to prevent the oil from drying out and dropping off, and to hold the coloring matter. Therefore to have a good, durable job of painting, you must have pure linseed oil.

Kinloch
READY TO MIX OR READY MIXED
HOUSE PAINT

is the old-fashioned thick pigment that you mix gallon for gallon with raw linseed oil—mix it yourself (or let your ten-year-old boy mix it) and you know what you are getting. Kinloch Paint will preserve the lasting qualities of linseed oil and produce the most durable and economical job of painting possible to procure.

Buy Kinloch Paint, the paint that "likes" linseed oil—the paint that does not fight the oil and destroy all its protecting and durable qualities—the paint that you mix yourself and know what you are getting

The Paint that Saves you Money.

For every gallon of Kinloch Paint buy a gallon of fresh, pure, raw, linseed oil in bulk of any reliable dealer, get a good painter to apply it and you can have a job lasting four or five years for a smaller outlay in the first cost of materials and a saving of one-third to one-half in the per year's wear cost of the job.

Important Memorandum.—The painter is the most important factor in painting. A job complete, done by a good painter with the best quality of paint, costing say $20.00 ($40.00 labor $20.00 paint), will last five years. The same paint applied by a dabbler ($20.00 labor $20.00 paint) will last only two years. Thus the "per-year-cost" of the good painter's job is $12.50—the poor painter's $20.00.

See your dealer to-day about this and if he does not yet have Kinloch Paint in stock, write us for complete booklet on paint and painting, with color card. Sent free.

California and Hawaii Cooperate.

HONOLULU, Oct. 20.—Arrangements have been completed to bring about a combination between the California Promotion Committee and the Hawaii Promotion Committee. H. P. Wood, secretary of the latter organization, and formerly working with the California Promotion Committee, has carried out plans for cooperation in the development work of the Hawaiian Islands and the Golden State. One plan of campaign is to convince tourists that in Hawaii they are near certain wonders of California not to be missed, and that in California they are near certain wonders of Hawaii not to miss. The mountains and volcanic cliffs of Hawaii will be used to balance the Yosemite and the great Sequoia or semi-tropical groves of California.

Maui Civic Pride.

HONOLULU, Oct. 23.—The dispute of Maui as to whether the location of a new court house should be at Makawao or Paia has caused considerable strife. The Makawao people want the new building at Makawao while the Paia people want it in their locality. The latter some time ago submitted a petition pleading their cause.

Referring to this Wm. Copp of Makawao writes to the Governor, declaring in a hot outburst of civic pride that if the court house is not erected at Makawao it will be better to have none at all. Copp's second alternation will probably be granted, as it is understood that the new building will not be erected at present.

Did you ever move?

And if so didn't you feel like selling off everything and starting new with the new place?

Claudine Here From The Coast.

HONOLULU, Oct. 25.—Looking as trim and fine as a yacht the steamer Claudine, the rejuvenated vessel of the Inter-Island Company, arrived at 12:30 o'clock today from San Francisco. The vessel returned from receiving a thorough overhauling. She left here July 1 and during practically all of that time has been in the ship yards. She was given new boilers and was rebuilt so far as the superstructure is concerned. Her upper deck is similar to that of the steamer Kinau. The vessel left San Francisco October 17 and, although this was later than any previous boat the mail was not put aboard her. Her time was 7 days, 21 hours and 57 minutes, including an hour's stop to repair a small pipe leading to one of the pumps. She has been fitted with bilge keels. Captain Bennett who went up with the vessel returned in command of her. The families of a number of the officers of the boat returned on the vessel. The vessel has about 600 tons of freight for this port. She is to go on the Maui run.

Not Fighting For Oahu County.

HONOLULU, Oct. 25.—Governor Carter has written a letter to the Hilo Board of Trade on the income tax proposition. He refers to the case brought by Kauai county, to force collections of income taxes there instead of here, so that Kauai would get half instead of Oahu, and says that the Territorial attorney general did not appear in the case in behalf of the county of Oahu, but to defend the Territorial tax assessor, who was sued. The matter of apportioning the taxes to the different counties is one for the legislature, says the governor, and he concludes his letter as follows:

"Now, rightly or wrongly, Oahu had previously received the bulk of the income tax, and the representatives from Hawaii, Maui and Kauai who could have controlled the matter, so far as I am aware raised no objection to such method of proportioning the revenues. The proportion proposed was agreed upon and carried out, and now it appears that their constituents are dissatisfied.

"This does not surprise me, for not one of the islands would care to have the exactions or contributions taken from its wealth spent for the benefit of any other county. But instead of complaining against the Territory or its attitude of the matter, it would appear only fair that they should blame their own representatives.

"I have always endeavored to the best of my ability to act justly and fairly between the islands, and I hope that perhaps some day this will be realized and appreciated.

"Very sincerely yours,
"G. R. CARTER,
"Governor."

Atkinson's Mission East.

HONOLULU, Oct. 25.—For the purpose of investigating the immigration laws and the desires of immigrants landing at New York from Italy and elsewhere, Secretary of the Territory Atkinson will leave for the mainland next Friday on the S. S. Mongolia. He will go first to Los Angeles and afterwards go direct to Washington, D. C., where he will study the immigration problem at first hand with the government officials who are fully conversant with it.

He will also try and secure the approval of President Roosevelt to the issuance of bonds for a $750,000 loan—an entirely new issue. This sum was finally decided upon by the Governor, reducing the proposition from $1,377,000.

It is Secretary Atkinson's purpose to take up the immigration matters first on arrival at Washington and as soon as he has definite information he will cable here, and the Board will then proceed to actively engage in seeking immigrants.
