THE COUNCIL OF STATE

Will Deliberate on Kaio's Petition for Clemency Until Tomorrow.

Remarks of Some of the Councilors Made at the Session of Yesterday Afternoon—Kaio's Fate Hangs in the Balance.

In addition to the proceedings of the Council of State yesterday afternoon, published exclusively in this paper, the following remarks were made on the petition of Kaio, convicted of murder, and sentenced to be hung on Monday, for executive clemency:

Cecil Brown said the taking of human life was a fearful thing, the taking of another human life by the law to satisfy the taking of the first was another fearful thing. Whether one life should be forfeited or two for the crime was what the council was called on to decide. It was a fearful responsibility which the President had called on his advisers to share. Until the President had made his statement he had believed with many others that Kaio was really responsible for the crime. Since hearing the President's views he could not help comparing the shortness of the term of sentence awarded to Upapa with the death penalty meted out to Kaio. It was a hard matter for the council to give an opinion on offhand and speaking for himself he was not prepared to vote on it at such short notice.

W. C. Wilder said this was the most important matter ever brought before the Council. Other cases had been largely matters of sentiment; this was a matter of life and death. Although the law says this man is as guilty as the one who committed the deed, he could not believe it. He believed that in this case the law should be satisfied with a life for a life, and that justice will be satisfied as well as the community at large. He moved that it was the sense of the Council that the sentence of death imposed on Kaio should be commuted to life imprisonment.

S. K. Kane, in seconding the motion, said he thought the cases of Kapea and Kaio were very different. He could not bring himself to think that their degree of guilt was such as to merit the same penalty.

Minister Damon said: I have thought a great deal about this case and what view would be right for the Government to take on it. It appears to me that not only is this man on trial but the Government also. Since the very inception of the Provisional Government the people have been carefully watching its every movement to see what position it would take on any important matter. As the result of this careful watching and the position taken on important affairs I believe I can safely say that in most instances, especially the more important ones, the course of the Government has the approval of the majority of the people. Indeed, I think I may say that the people think the Government as a rule have been in the right and that it stands on a firmer basis today than ever. In this way the people at large have been gradually led up to the great fact that the republican form of government is the best for the country. The being the case we should be more careful than ever to guard against mistakes, more careful than ever to retain the high position we have gained.

In the consideration of the case before us I am not lawyer enough to enter into its legal merits and it is unnecessary for me to do so after what has been said by the President and Mr. Robertson. What effect will this decision of the Council have on the prevention of crime? The government is strong enough to do what is right. What is the right thing to do in this case? My firm conviction is that the ends of justice will be served by the sacrifice of one victim only. Let us commute the sentence of this man to life imprisonment, and have it understood as the fixed intention of the government in all such cases hereafter that where mercy can be given mercy shall be granted. I believe clemency in this case to be not only the right thing to do but that it would still further strengthen the government in the hearts of the people.

J. A. Kennedy said: This is too serious a matter to take a vote on hurriedly. So far he had never given the case a single thought beyond glancing at the newspaper reports. It could not be expected of him that he should vote on a matter of life and death offhand. This was a matter of serious consideration. The man had been tried before a jury of his peers, had been able to defend and had had every opportunity to present his defense. Interference with the course of justice was a serious matter and he was opposed to it as a rule. When such interference was had, neither sentiment, policy, expediency nor anything of the kind should come into the consideration of the case. The speaker cared not whether the action to be taken strengthened the hands of the government or not, that should not be taken into consideration and would not influence him either way. Justice should be done and everything else should give way to justice. At the present time he did not care to vote without further considering the case.

President Dole said he had been impressed with the remarks made by the last speaker and Mr. Brown. He himself thought it was hardly fair that the Councilors should be called on to vote so hurriedly. How would the Council receive a suggestion to refer the matter to a committee to report on Saturday?

P. C. Jones thought very much as Mr. Kennedy. To come up to a meeting without any previous knowledge that such an important matter was to be decided and be called on to decide in an hour's time on a man's life was more than he cared to do. The Council had to consider what was best for the community. Upapa's sentence should not enter into the case at all. Each man's case stood on its own merits. Now what is my duty as a Councilor? Frankly speaking I cannot now say. I don't want to be in haste. I don't think I should be influenced by a committee. I want to think over what has been said by the President and others. The great influence to my mind is that the men have been able to defend and impartially tried. I am sorry the matter has been brought before us and would like to get out of voting on it but anyway I propose to do my duty. I am not prepared to vote now.

Cecil Brown thought the President's suggestion to take time a good one. He did not know how he should vote. He had given the case no consideration, supposing that the decision of the Court had ended it, although he was aware that a petition was being gotten up for clemency. He wanted time to satisfy himself and be sure that he was voting right.

John Phillips said that in Great Britain no further back than the reign of George III men could be executed for no less than 130 offenses; to lay under the influence of an enlightened civilization there were but four crimes for

FOR CHARLES L. CARTER

Work on Memorial Fountain Begins This Afternoon.

Some Opposition to Location—Executive Grounds Suggested—President Dole Holds to Palace Square Idea.

A gang of workmen under W. A. Mutch will put up the fence around the site of the Carter Memorial fountain on Palace square this afternoon. This is the preliminary work of installing the memorial at once. All the stone is out and trimmed. There only remains the putting it together. Another week will probably show the handsome fountain in place.

An expert opinion against having the fountain on Palace square, and in favor of the neighboring corner of the Executive building grounds, has been filed at a late hour and is being considered. Since the lines of the fountain were marked out this morning, it is seen that it takes up a very large section of the square, and the opposition argues that it will seriously discommode vehicles in times of our or tennis entertainments. Military maneuvers will be impossible and there will hardly be room enough for the large political gatherings at times held on the square.

The new proposition is to take off the corner of the Executive building grounds, almost to the bend stand, giving a triangular plot. In rear, on a line with the Angus residence and the Opera House, would be a road and side walk from King to Richards street. Below this, toward the corner and in the center of the plot, would appear the fountain.

President Dole states that he is opposed to the latter proposition for the reason that the strong trade winds would blow a shower of moisture from the fountain over the King street sidewalk almost constantly. Besides, the President thinks the fountain would be a decided relief to the barrenness of Palace square, which is a sufficient reason to put it there.

Coming Annual Meeting.

Secretary H. E. Coleman and Arthur B. Wood are arranging the program for the annual public meeting of the Y. M. C. A. next Thursday evening. Besides reports of officers and committees there will be installation ceremonies, addresses and an excellent music list. Near the close of the evening 50 American paintings, donated by a member, will be sold at auction. The proceeds of the sale will go into the building fund.

Uniforming the Band.

James D. Triggan is hard at work upon new uniforms for the band. From Professor Berger down all the men will be given complete outfits. The new uniforms will be of the same general design as the old, but of much better material.

BRIDGE DAMAGE ON KAUAI

Complete Result Official Investigation by Superintendent Rowell.

Two Lawai Bridges Gone—Hanapepe Bridge Badly Injured and Needs Extensive Repairs—Damages Foot Up $7000.

W. E. Rowell, Superintendent of Public Works, returned by the steamer Kauai this morning from Waimea whither he went last Tuesday to investigate the damage to roads and bridges by the recent storm. Though he made a flying trip the whole of the flood district was gone over. To this paper the Superintendent made the following concise statement of the situation:

"LAWAI. On the new road lately constructed from Lawai to Honea a 20 foot bridge with one abutment was washed away. A 6 foot culvert was washed out and about 60 feet of 10 foot filling was carried off. The last is the most serious damage, and will probably make it necessary to change the location of the road for one fourth of a mile and put in a 40 foot bridge wherever a solid foundation for abutments can be found. I estimate the cost of the new road and bridge at $16,000.

"On the new road through Lawai a 40 foot bridge was carried away and considerable of the approach to it was heavily filled. A 60 foot bridge will be necessary to rebuild the abutments in a more substantial manner. The entire cost I estimate at $2000.

"WAIKOA. Four spans of the Hanapepe bridge were carried out, but the abutments were not injured. It would be advisable to put in two spans 75 feet each and to raise the bridge two feet. This will cost $2000. The damage to the Waimea bridge is already repaired. I think it advisable to replace five piers of the bridge with masonry. The cost will be $3600 instead of $2000 asked for renewing pile piers.

"The total appropriations for Kauai for this matter will have to be:

"Road and bridge work Koloa, $3600;

"Road and bridge work Waimea, $3600;

"Waialua. The Waialua bridge is all right. As far as can be seen now the stream did not cut away its banks and the bridge was not endangered by the flood."

Mr. Rowell is preparing an official report of the facts given above, which will be submitted to Minister Cooper, Acting Minister of Interior. It will probably be ready by tomorrow morning. The appropriations asked for will likely be inserted in the current accounts bill and made immediately available.

TOMORROW'S RACING EVENTS.

Track, Horses and Horsemen in Pink of Condition.

Since the entries closed yesterday matters among the horsemen have been a whirl. The relative merits of each racer have been discussed from a thousand standpoints and, as usual, every sporting man knows exactly how things are going. Unfortunately for some they will wonder tomorrow night where they got their information.

Weather at the beach is good and the track is in fine condition. The light showers in town have not affected it at all. Only a heavy downpour at the park can injure the races, and that is not expected. The opening hour of the races is 1 p. m. sharp.

AFTERNOON HOUSE SESSION

Arrangement Made for Visiting Public Institutions on Monday.

Unpaid Claims Bill Passes—Act Providing for Temporary Circuit Judges—House Takes a Rest.

Mr. Kawai offered the following: "Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-arms be instructed to provide carriages for the Representatives of the House for the purpose of visiting the Queen's Hospital, Oahu jail, the Insane Asylum, the Reform School and Kapiolani Maternity Home, this visit to take place on April 9 at 10 o'clock a. m."

On motion of Mr. McCandless the time was changed to 1:30 p. m. so as not to interfere with the morning work of the House. The Senate will be invited to join the party.

Mr. Smith gave notice of the following bills:

"An Act relating to Circuit Judges and providing for the appointment of a person to perform the duties of the office during the absence or temporary disqualification of a Circuit Judge, etc."

"An Act relating to the Penal Code and Penal Laws of the Republic of Hawaii."

Reading of the appropriation bill for unpaid claims, Senate 3, was continued. After all the amendments recommended by committee had been inserted the bill passed second reading. Third reading Monday morning.

Senate amendment to House bill 15, release of dower, was concurred in.

Mr. McCandless' bill repealing informer's reward in opium cases went over to Monday.

House bill 58, Hilo electric railway, went to the Electric Committee.

House bill 63, school tax, went over to Monday.

Adjourned to Monday morning.

Will It Be War?

The majority of opinion is that the Belgic tonight will bring news of war between the United States and Spain, and perhaps a very serious situation in the Orient. In event of both or either, there is a feeling that important developments may follow immediately here. It can hardly be called encouragement of sensationalism to say that the Islands are perhaps nearer an American protectorate this afternoon than since the flag raising in February, 1893. At least this is a strong official and street opinion.

W. H. Cummings for the past two years shows in detail the amounts expended on each street or road in this district for construction, repairs, culverts and bridge work.
There is also appended a statement of the purchase and repairs of crushing and rolling machinery, live stock, wagons, carts and implements required for road work.
The total amount expended under the Bureau on street work has been $80,164.92, of which $68,986.42 was for labor and $11,178.50 for material. On sundry account there has been spent $46,499.08, of which $13,652.67 was for labor and $32,846.41 for material. The whole expenditure footed up $126,664.00.

Following is a recapitulation showing the proportion of street money spent for different purposes:

Total, $46,499.08.

The report gives an itemized account of the amount of labor and material put on each street in the city, which covers many pages, but a careful reading fails to disclose any statement of the receipts of the Bureau from the sale of crushed rock, rent of steam roller, etc., to private parties. These appear, however, in the main report of the Minister of Interior in the detailed statement of government realizations in the aggregate.

A BUSINESS PARABLE.

You Cannot Fail to Appreciate the Point in This Story.

Once a farmer had 1,800 bushels of wheat, which he sold not to a single grain merchant, but to 1,800 different dealers, a bushel each. A few of them paid him in cash, but far the greater number said it was not convenient then; they would pay later. A few months passed, and the man's bank account ran low. "How is this?" he said. "My 1,800 bushels of grain should have kept me in affluence until another crop is raised, but I have parted with the grain and have instead only a vast number of accounts, so small and scattered that I cannot get around and collect fast enough to pay expenses."

So he posted up a public notice and asked all those who owed him to pay quickly. But few came. The rest said, "Mine is only a small matter, and I will go and pay one of these days," forgetting that though each account was very small, when all were put together they meant a large sum to the man. Things went on thus. The man got to feeling so badly that he fell out of bed and awoke, and running to his granary found his 1,800 bushels of wheat still safe there. He had only been dreaming. Moral.—The next day the man went to the publisher of his paper and said: "Here, sir, is the pay for your paper, and when next year's subscription is due you can depend on me to pay it promptly. I stood in the position of an editor last night, and I know how it feels to have one's honestly earned money scattered all over the country in small amounts."—Union Signal.

His Alibi.

Once upon a time the late Sir Frank Lockwood, while attending a police court, noticed that the magistrates were performing their duties in a very expeditious manner, and he commented on the fact to a superintendent of police. "Yes," answered the superintendent, who was pompous and none too well educated, "their worships always dispenses with justice very fast." Some years ago he got a prisoner off by proving an alibi. Some time afterward the judge met him and said, "Well, Lockwood, that was a very good alibi." "Yes, my lord," was the answer. "I had three offered me, and I think I selected the best."

Evarts and Mark Twain.

At a New England society dinner some years ago Mark Twain had just finished a piquant address when Mr. Evarts arose, shoved both of his hands down into his trousers pockets, as was his habit, and laughingly remarked, "Doesn't it strike this company as a little unusual that a professional humorist should be funny?" Mark Twain waited until the laughter excited by this sally had subsided, and then drawled out, "Doesn't it strike this company as a little unusual that a lawyer should have his hands in his own pockets?"—Exchange.

How Indian Relish is Made.

Chop fine a small head of cabbage, 6 onions, also 12 green peppers and 2 quarts green tomatoes. Sprinkle over a cup of salt and let stand till next day, then drain off all the liquid and put the vegetable in a kettle. Barely cover with vinegar. Add half a cupful mustard seed, a teaspoonful celery seed and half cupful of sugar. Boil 5 minutes. Remove from fire and put into glass jars or in a stone jar. If you like this relish sweet, add a cupful of sugar. Add finally a tablespoonful English mustard.

How to Freshen Black Gloves.

If you will daub ink or liquid shoe dressing on the bare spot, you will restore the color, but you will not restore the glossy, fresh look of the departed newness. For this quality you must put on a piece of clean flannel a touch of sweet oil and rub the dull black spot until it shines like the surrounding leather. Under this treatment the black kid glove is an economy and will last longer than any other in spite of the fact that other colors may be cleaned and reclaimed almost indefinitely. Of course the suede or undressed kid does not need the oil rub—that is confined entirely to the glove. The ink or blacking is all that is needed for the softer leather.

Queer Freak.

Dr. Donaldson is an ardent anatomist. His house is packed full of skeletons or bits of such, all articulated by his own hand.

He has a paper knife much admired. "Yes," he said in explanation, "I kept that for cutting the comic papers. You see, I made it from the funny bone of my first wife."—Pick Me Up.

In the Bird Store.

"Well, I find $20 for that parrot too high. You say he can't talk." "No, he can't talk, but he understands everything that's said!"—Fleegande Blatter.

More Wharfage Needed.

The need of more wharfage is clearly shown when ver a steamer from Seattle ties up. The large cargo of Rainier beer discharged takes up all the available space, leaving no room for what little other freight is left. The Crittendon Saloon is headquarters for this justly celebrated beer.

FRIDAY, APRIL 8, 1898.

The Konia street paper has established in Honolulu a branch of the infallible intelligence bureau it has for five years maintained in Washington. Anything that is in the mind of any representative of the United States stationed here will appear in the Independent whenever the management deems that occasion warrants it.

President Smith takes exception to remarks on the Board of Health that appeared in yesterday's paper. In defending the action on the Kau matter he makes a personal reflection on Dr. McMillan, which without specifications does not have any concern for the general public. It may be remarked, however, that the people of the Kau community—those who are not getting medical services free—know a good doctor when they see one just as well as the Board of Health. The other branch of Mr. Smith's defense is that the Board is right in resenting the sale of a government physician's place. As to this matter, it was not put that way by either of the two papers reporting the meeting. Members of the Board were represented as being angry because Dr. McMillan had taken the private practice of one who had been a government physician. Their wrath on this account the BULLETIN held, and does not change its opinion, was a childish display of impertinence. It is to be presumed that all of the medical gentlemen of the Board took up private practices, or tried to get such, before they suited themselves to public bills. However, the President of the Board may here be informed that the Kau incident was only the immediately exciting cause of the remarks to which he objects. Frequently, for some years, the BULLETIN has had conveyed to it murmurs from members of the medical faculty at large, which, though not formulated for publication, showed a bureaucratic tendency of the Board toward domineering, favoritism, and selfish acquisitiveness on the inside. Some evidence of the unpopularity of the Board with the profession may be found in the record of instances where doctors settled in country districts could only at almost desperate solicitation of the Board be induced to accept its commission. Physicians newly arrived in the country, of whom the names of several could be given by the BULLETIN, have, moreover, complained of scant courtesy received from medical members of the Board. This has indeed been manifested to the extent of appearing quite like a disposition for adopting a freeze-out policy to arrivals who had not heralded their intention of coming with a message of "By your leave, gentlemen," to the comfortably installed bureaucrats. Mr. Smith says nothing of the suggestion that the medical members of the Board should be entirely disinterested directly or indirectly. Perhaps he might be induced to break silence on that point by a legislative "If not, why not," as to the amount of public money paid, say for the past biennial period, to members of the Board for professional public and quasi public services.

John M. Horner of Hamakua has for many years been a leader among the sugar planters of the Hawaiian Islands. He is the Nestor of their Association. Reports on practical matters written by him for that body receive profound attention from its members, as does anything he has to say upon the reports presented by others. Mr. Horner is, moreover, one of the pioneers in the successful cultivation of coffee since the industry has risen above the rank of merely picking berries off trees growing wild. With these facts presented, it goes without saying that he has had an extensive experience with the labor system of the country. It is therefore a most notable incident when Mr. Horner comes out unreservedly in public as an advocate of abolition of the contract labor law. This he does in the Advertiser of this morning. He argues from the viewpoint of the planter, showing that the penal clause is largely in effective for preventing desertions, and costs more to enforce in some cases than it is worth. And, citing the example of the United States and other countries, Mr. Horner deals with the question on high moral and religious grounds, with this conclusion: "There are so many people who exist without penal labor laws, I feel we could do the same, and no longer live in disgrace before the Christian world as at present, and no longer enlist the services of courts, sheriffs, policemen, and juries to enforce penalties against our employes, who create most of our wealth and daily comforts." Mr. Horner also uses an argument that has been put forward by the BULLETIN when he says: "Our master and servant penal law has been used to some extent against annexation in the United States. How far it affects it, it is difficult to determine, but whether it affects it little or much, it should be repealed for that cause alone." Mr. Horner's advocacy must be regarded as a tower of strength to this just and honest cause, especially in view of the lofty disdain for intelligent public opinion which is habitually displayed by some sugar factors, who owe both all their knowledge and all their profits of the sugar industry to workers like Mr. Horner.

THE KAU CASE.

EDITOR EVENING BULLETIN:—In reply to your editorial attack on the Board of Health, and on just insinuations and reflections on the medical members of the Board in the matter of Dr. McMillan's application to be appointed Government physician at Kau, I would state:

The Board has not refused to appoint Dr. McMillan, but has deferred action in the matter, for the following reasons:

First—An experience which the Board had had with him raised questions as to his qualifications.

Second—The Board had information that the former incumbent had traded on the government office, selling his private practice and government office to Dr. McMillan.

The Board does not propose to be party to any such transactions.

WILLIAM O. SMITH,
President Board of Health.

MUD IN THE HARBOR.

Vessel Stalls in Debris from Nuanu River Overflow.

An authority estimates that the west side of the harbor was filled not less than two feet by the wash of mud and debris from Nuanu stream during the late freshet. The mud is banked deeply against the Queen street wall, the lines of the railway improvements, the wharves and even against vessels lying in port.

A rather startling instance of the latter came to light yesterday afternoon when the Harbor Master attempted to remove the Arago from Sorenson's wharf at the old fishmarket. The vessel was found to be grounded in the mire which had accumulated on either side. The tug tried to draw her around in the stream, but she could not be budged. At last the tug fastened a line to the vessel's stern and drew her straight out backward. Several times in the removal it looked as if she would again stall in the mire.

At the time of this occurrence it was high tide and the vessel was drawing only eight feet of water. It is believed that other vessels in the same locality will encounter the same trouble. A vessel heavily loaded simply could not reach Sorenson's wharf at all.

THE HAWAIIAN THIS WEEK.

Will Be Issued Tomorrow Morning With Very Interesting Contents.

An intensely interesting article is printed in the Hawaiian of this week, which will be out in the morning. It is one from the pen of Rev. Selah W. Brown, a celebrated traveler and lecturer of the United States. It will be especially interesting to the Japanese residents of these islands to be again reminded that, although they are comparatively near their mother country, there is the difference of a whole day's time between Honolulu and Yokohama. By a reference to the map it will be seen that the 180th degree of longitude, where the magical change in time is made, is nearer to the Hawaiian Islands than to any other country, and so Hawaii may justly claim to be the Sunset Land.

F. Souza, a coffee expert of many years, contributes an article on "Coffee Growing in the Hawaiian Islands as an Investment." Religious anniversaries of the season are explained in an editorial. There are attractive poetical selections and other literary features.

LINK WITH THE PAST.

An Island Resident Was at St. Helena When Napoleon Was a Prisoner There.

EDITOR EVENING BULLETIN:—In one of your contemporaries of this date allusion is made to three persons now living and all of whom have seen Napoleon the First, they having been at St. Helena after the great soldier and king-maker had taken up his enforced residence there.

In a copy of Professor Seeley's Short History of Napoleon, I find the following memorandum written by me on the 82nd anniversary of the battle of Waterloo: "Talking today with Dr. James Wight of N. Kohala, Hawaii, he told me that, born in India he was taken home to England in 1819, Napoleon then having been four years at St. Helena. The ship on which Dr. Wight sailed called in at the now historic island, so that, very likely, there is no other man living who is able to say with Dr. Wight, 'I was at St. Helena during Napoleon's enforced residence there.'" In this I was evidently mistaken, but it is interesting to know that in our midst is one, a part of whose life's record is as I have related it.

ROMANTIC AND BRILLIANT CAREER OF COLONEL JOHN PELHAM, C. S. A.

Run Away From West Point to Fight For the South—Helped Across the Lines by a Yankee Girl—Won the Favor of John Stuart, Stonewall Jackson and Lee.

(Copyright, 1898, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.)

THE London Times, when chronicling the death of Colonel John Pelham, commander of Stuart's Horse artillery, in 1863, said: "For his age no soldier on either side in this war has won such fame as has young Pelham." Pelham was killed in a chance cavalry action at Kelly's ford, on the Rappahannock. His artillery battalion was not present, but he happened to be near the scene when the sound of a chance battle summoned every true soldier to the front. Riding to the point of danger, he saw a regiment wavering and, with sword flying, shouted: "Forward, boys! Forward to victory and glory!" At that moment the guns of Stonewall Jackson's Federal batteries were shelling the rebels who, the Confederates were gathering to dispute the crossing of the river. A fragment of shell struck Pelham and pierced his brain. Amid the roar of battle his young life went out, and most extraordinary circumstances and exploits attended his removal to the camp. Stuart took a general order announcing his death and requiring that the military band play mourning music for 30 days out of respect to his memory.

John Pelham was born in Alabama in 1838 and was in the middle of his twenty-third year when the war broke out. He was then in the graduating class at West Point, where he had earned small fame during the five years of his cadetship. It was a saying that when Pelham started to go anywhere or to do anything he would never turn or look back, no matter what the temptation or provocation. In fencing and boxing he excelled, and his skill in horsemanship, especially in tests of extraordinary daring, became a tradition of the school. The Prince of Wales singled him out as a wonderful horseback rider when he visited the academy in 1860.

Like most great soldiers of the civil war, Pelham stood low in his class, yet a high career had been prophesied for the young Alabamian because of his general bearing at West Point. A week before commencement, in 1861, with his commission already made out in the United States army, he resigned his cadetship and threw up all his chances, to fight for southern rights.

Young Pelham set out in his cadet uniform, but as he neared the southern border he found himself an object of suspicion, which he tried to elude by passing himself off as a courier in the service of the United States. At New Albany, Ind., the cadet was intercepted by the Federal authorities, word having reached there that he had left West Point, intending to go south and fight in the Confederate army. He was placed under surveillance and not allowed to cross the river to Louisville. However, at Jeffersonville, above New Albany, he found his project favored by fortune in the shape of a true Yankee maiden who so deeply fell in love with the gallant adventurer that, although her principles would not allow her to urge him onward, would not balk his honest ambition to fight against her people. Little by little she had learned his story. She urged him to give up the idea of going south, and he listened kindly if not earnestly.

One day the couple, who were much together, went out rowing on the river and on nearing the Kentucky shore young Pelham gave the swift jumping out, he pushed the boat back into the current and waved a farewell to the astonished girl who had unwittingly helped an enemy and sped the departure of a lover from her side.

From Louisville Pelham hurried to Montgomery, then the capital of the Confederacy. He was commissioned first lieutenant in the regular Confederate service and assigned to duty with the artillery at Lynchburg, Va. At the First Bull Run the boy fought with a battery which he had drilled and handled the guns so skillfully that John Stuart, then commanding the First regiment of Virginia cavalry, helped him raise a new six gun light battery for service with his own command. Recruits for the battery were quickly gathered in Alabama and Pelham himself raised a detachment of creoles from Mobile to man one piece. Being of French descent, these creoles were named the "Napoleon detachment." They went into battle singing the "Marseillaise" and clung to their boy leader as did the Old Guard to Napoleon. If not always first into battle, they were invariably the last to leave.

Pelham's six gun battery became the nucleus of the famous battalion of horse artillery which helped to make Stuart's corps a terrible thunderbolt of war. At the battle of Gaines Mill, in June, 1862, Pelham advanced one gun a mile to the front of the general Confederate line and drew the fire of several pieces of Federal artillery. Stuart was fighting with Stonewall Jackson that day and the conduct of the boy artilleryman did not pass unnoticed by that shrewd commander, ever looking for hearts as bold as his own. At the Second Bull Run, where Stuart and Jackson were again fighting in unison, Pelham rushed his whole battalion to the front and tore the enemy's columns with awful effect. Jackson said to Stuart, "General, if you have another Pelham, give him to me."

Stuart did not give the Murat of his corps to Jackson. His was the talent needed in the kind of fighting which the jolly sabreur instituted in the east. There is a story of every battlefield from Bull Run on until his death, but one or two will suffice to show the temper of the hero and that his laurels were won by merit, not by favor. When Lee retreated from the Potomac down the valleys toward the Rappahannock, after his defeat at Antietam, Stuart's column was rear guard of the army. The Federals followed up and every hour had its skirmish, enough to amount to a battle. Pelham, as usual, staid by one gun and that gun was always last to retire. Once when he was far out to the front with his forlorn hope Stuart came alarmed for his fate and ordered him to retire. Pelham was then a major and he begged his chief to allow him to remain a little longer. Stuart consented. All the other pieces of the battery had gone to the rear and one by one the cannoneers serving the piece with Pelham took advantage of orders and skipped away until the brave major stood alone. He loaded and fired in the very teeth of the enemy crowding upon him, and then, mounting a lead horse, began to gallop away with the gun.

After going a few paces the horse Pelham rode was shot. Cutting the traces so as to free the team from this extra load, the brave fellow mounted another horse, which soon shared the fate of the first. A third horse was shot and cut loose in the course of a few rods, but Pelham rode into the battery with his gun, to the astonishment of his men and his superiors.

This deed with the rear guard and others like it were mere exploits, likely to give a soldier camp notoriety. Pelham crowned them with feats equally magnificent yet more mighty in results. Take his work on the Confederate right at Fredericksburg on the 13th of December, 1862. It is customary to look upon Fredericksburg as an easy slaughter for the Confederates, attended with little and no actual danger. With Pelham out of the case all is changed. The night before the battle Jackson's column arrived on Lee's right below the city, expecting to guard that flank while the center and left defended Fredericksburg proper. On the morning of the 13th, when a fog obscured the field, Stuart's roving horsemen carried to the chiefs the news that a heavy Federal column had crossed the river below the town and was preparing to attack Lee's right flank or to pass it, the leaders not counting upon Jackson's presence. Neither side was prepared for the collision which resulted and is known in history as the battle of Hamilton's Heights. Stuart held the key to the position, yet he was there only as a cavalry picket. On the extreme right Pelham's guns were parked. When word of the Federal advance across the river was sent to headquarters, Lee, Jackson and Stuart rode across the plain, which was covered with a dense fog. Stuart whispered to Pelham and instantly the order was given to the batteries to move down to the plain among the cavalry pickets. Pelham, with the one single gun of the "Napoleon detachment," dashed down the heights, halting at a fork in the road coming up from the river. Before the other guns joined the Mobile creoles the mist slowly cleared, and

COLONEL JOHN PELHAM, C. S. A.

Pelham's gun looked into the faces of a column of bluecoats marching confidently toward the heights, which they had been told to seize. Tossing a shell or two into the blue ranks in hopes of scattering them, Pelham awaited his other guns. They did not come, but the Federals charged his Napoleon, and he hurled them back with canister. The battle was opened, but the Federals supposed they had only a chance enemy, a stubborn picket force, to deal with. They opened on the lone sentinel first with a single piece, then with another and ended with bringing a whole battery to bear. Still Pelham's cannon roared its thunderous monotone and cut gaps into the line pressing on for those coveted heights. In the lull of the cannonade "The Marseillaise" rose from the throats of the Frenchmen who stood by Pelham, although at last several Federal batteries concentrated their fire upon him.

More of Pelham's pieces rushed to his support at last, and when the crisis was hottest he had 12 to 15 guns contending with twice that number of enemies. Finally the tide turned. The Federals advanced, but were repulsed and slowly retreated back over the plain, which had become an open panorama by the lifting of the fog. Keeping pace with the rearward march of the Federal ranks, Pelham moved his cannon forward and harried the retreating troops with shot and canister until they reached the cover of their reserve batteries.

Fredericksburg was thus Pelham's greatest as it was his last with his noble horse artillery. Before the corps was united in another pitched battle the boy had met the coveted end of the true soldier, death amid the roar of arms. A commission as colonel was under consideration when he was killed and speedily acted upon the moment the wire carried news of his fate to the Confederate congress.

the time they were broken in they were broken out also, and that broke pocket books.

Was a Great Success.

The Myrtle dance last night was one of the most successful given in a long time. About 50 couples were present. In the early evening the weather was anything but encouraging. Later, however, the clouds disappeared, the moon came out bright and the night was perfect. An orchestra from Hall & Son's store furnished music.
There were 16 numbers on the program and two extras. At 12:20 the party broke up. All took buses and had a real jolly time returning home, joining in a number of popular songs by vocalists aboard.

THE COUNCIL OF STATE.

which a man forfeited his life in England, and for three of these it was not enforced. There was but one off-ense punishable by death and that was murder.
The tendency of the age was more and more pronounced against capital punishment. In the States the sentences of murderers ten times more guilty than the one whose case was under consideration were almost daily commuted by the Governors and Parson Boards in response to this growing tendency. Within the lifetime of many of those present he firmly believed that capital punishment even for murder would be unknown. The Jewish doctrine of "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" had given way to the more humane teaching of Christ who proclaimed the new law of forgiveness and mercy.
With regard to the degree of guilt of this party I care not. Here is a chance for us to show mercy and I believe in exercising mercy on every occasion. I am just as well prepared to vote now as on Saturday and just as conscientiously. Laying aside my views on capital punishment it is plain that this man was but an accident and as long as the principal to suffer death the law should be satisfied. I believe this to be one of those cases which calls for the exercise of mercy.There being no further remarks, President Dale called for the vote on Mr. Wilder's motion to commute the sentence to life imprisonment and five members voted in the affirmative and none in the negative.The President said that the five members did not constitute a majority and he should call for a full vote, to which there was no further response.Mr. Winston then moved that the petition be referred to a committee of three to report on Saturday at 2 o'clock and the motion prevailed by a vote of 6 to 4.President Dale appointed Messrs. Jones, Kane and Winston as such committee, and stated that all the records of the case were in his room and would at once be accessible to the committee. The latter at once went to the President's room and commenced its labors.

Coming Waverley Reception.

The Waverley Club is making laborate preparations for its entertainment to be given one week from Tuesday evening. On the special entertainment committee are: W Horace Wright, Prof J W Yarnley, Dr James T Wayson,
Captain J A Mehlten and W L Grieve. The musical committee consists of the following: Rev V
H Kiteat, Prof J Lightfoot, Prof
J W Yarnley, A St M Mackintosh, H L Herbert and Mrs C B Cooper. Among those who have consented to sing on the occasion are: Mrs C B Cooper, Mrs R D Walbridge, Mrs E D Tenney, Mr
Woodward, Miss Clymer, Miss Rosina Shaw and Mr A Davies.
Mr Yarnley will officiate as violin accompanist.The Waverley Club will hold its first quarterly meeting at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening, when it is hoped that there will be a large attendance of members to receive the first report of officers, which will be full of interest showing the solid development of this cosmopolitan club.There is a movement on foot to considerably increase the accommodations of the club in order to have a room especially devoted to the purposes of the library, chess and meeting.

The Anchor.

William C. Rytle, who formerly assisted P. F. Ryan in the management of the Anchor, has succeeded him in the management, assisted by Charlie Andrews. He continues to deal out the cheerful which the Anchor is noted for. Seattle beer on draught can always be had, as well as the best brands of whiskies, etc., including John D-war's Scotch whisky. A full stock of other liquors, wines, etc., is kept on hand also.

The High Reputation

Of the Criterion Barber Shop, since the advent of the introduction of the individual cups, is constantly increasing. People, who formerly shaved at home, now patronize this shop.

TENANTS AND OWNERS.

EDITOR EVENING BULLETIN:

Certain statistics referred to this morning by your contemporary the Advertiser, as being quoted by you to show the soundness of Hawaiian social conditions, and the unsoundness of the Advertiser's views thereon, evidence a practise on a par with that paper's ofttime acumen and fairness. You, sir, wrote not on the subject of tenants and land owners! 'Twas I, to whose letter you con-teously gave place in your columns, that quoted the statistics referred to by the Advertiser, and more-over, not only did I not give them as showing the soundness of Hawaiian conditions, and the wrong headedness of the "leading journal," but I expressly stated that the Advertiser's writer was probably correct when he assumed that a land system, based upon the ownership of the soil by the tillers thereof, was at the foundation of good government and civilization. I attempted to show that the Advertiser's assertion that "every boy in America grows up with a hatred of the tenant and lessee system," might be as hard to prove as it was unimportant, seeing that the men adapt themselves to it, and I further suggested that other factors besides land owning and form of government enter into the stability and prosperity of nations, not the least of these being a fair treatment by the press of all matters touching a people's wellbeing.
In its latest issue this morning, your contemporary shows, as it has so often shown, a marked want of appreciation of fair play, supposed generally to be a characteristic of those "Anglo Saxon" races to which the "leading journal" so often alludes.Perhaps, Mr. Editor, you will further allow me to say that the statistics I quoted, as from the American Magazine of Civics, were published five years after the taking of the Census of 1890, and in alluding to them the following paragraph appeared:"Is it not startling that in the greatest republic on the earth, whose free institutions and free homes have been its boast for a hundred years, the percentage of its dependent population should be greater than even in the members of Europe? This startling diminution of the number of free home-owners is an indication that points to a dark future for our country unless something is done to stay the tide of land-orism and the greed of speculation that, like an octopus, has wound its deadly tentacles about the American home."I have not presumed, and do not now presume, to speak either of the correctness of the statistics or of the views enunciated, but, as they appeared in a respectable American magazine whose raison d'être is the investigation of the bearings of kindred subjects to the now spoken of, I concluded that I might fairly trust myself to appeal to them as correct.

KAMAEINA.

Honolulu, April 7, 1898.

Lack of System.

An unfortunate lack of system was developed by an urgent request of a Board of Health member at the Interior Office yesterday for a complete list of the licensed physicians of the islands.
The information simply could not be vouchsafed. There was a list of hundreds and hundreds of names of physicians licensed in the past 30 years, but no record of cancellations, deaths, or of holders who have left the country.
The fault is not with the Interior department, because it has complied with the law; but is with the system, which gives part of the work to one bureau, part to another, and omits altogether a most important feature.

Wanted Captain Rice.

Captain Shorey, who was here in his whaler last week, called for the special purpose of securing the services of Captain J. H.
Rice, late master of the tug Elen, on his present cruise in the Pacific. Unfortunately he found the old man very ill at his home, and went away greatly disappointed.
Shorey has a number of new men on his vessel and needs a man like Captain Rice to trim them down to the business.The death is announced of Sir Henry Bessemer, the eminent civil engineer and inventor, aged 85.
