The English Language in Japan. In the public schools of Japan the English language is required to be taught by law. One needs no prophet's vision to foresee that the English language will be the ruling language of the Island Empire in fifty years. The brightest and most ambitious of the young men in the open ports and commercial cities of China are all eager to learn English as a passport to wealth, position and employment. The native preacher must needs learn English, or they will have no resources to fall back upon in their preparations for the pulpit.

Another Protectorate. A Washington dispatch of late date states that the United States Minister to Hayti, Fred Douglass, is commissioned by Secretary Blaine to try and impress the powers in Hayti and San Domingo that while maintaining their autonomy it would be to their advantage to themselves under the protectorate of the United States. Furthermore, Minister Palmer is to see what he can do at Madrid in a quiet way to secure the severance of Spain's relations with Cuba.

"A LIE WELL STUCK TO IS AS GOOD AS THE TRUTH," in the opinion of the Bulletin.

The Australian ballot system has been introduced into two States in the American Union,—Montana and Connecticut, and at the recent State elections held in those States the voting was conducted with this system. In Montana both parties were satisfied with it. In Connecticut a modified system was tried allowing the various parties to print their own tickets. This regulation is to be changed, and the State will hereafter print all the names on one ticket.

The free delivery of postal matter is to be extended to towns in the United States having 8,000 population. The system, says the Sacramento Union "instead of entailing great cost upon the Government, has in fact enabled it to show in recent years a smaller margin of deficit than in the years prior to its adoption. Not that the result is to be wholly attributed to free delivery, but it has been an important factor in bringing it about, because it has encouraged the use of the mails, and in that proportion has lessened the cost of handling and transporting them." The time seems to have come when a free delivery and collection of letters should be established in Honolulu. It should certainly would be a great convenience to the public, and would tend to increase the correspondence, and consequently the business and income of the service.

The Bulletin of last evening returns to its attacks and falsifying of the ADVERTISER, by quoting five paragraphs, which appeared in this paper, the first and last having no bearing on the matter in controversy; the three others being from an article which appeared in the editorial column from a contributor, whose language and sentiments were promptly disavowed as not the sentiments of the paper. The Bulletin knowing this fact, dishonorably charges that they were the sentiments of that paper. They can no more be referred to as the sentiments of this paper, than their publication in the Bulletin makes them the sentiments of that paper. If this dishonorable act of the Bulletin is not openly and wilfully bearing false witness against his neighbor, then it is not possible to commit that offense. When the writer in the Bulletin wrote his article of Tuesday and again repeated the statement on Wednesday, he knew of this public disavowal, and therefore knew that he was making a cowardly attack and uttering a base falsehood.

We have nothing further to say on the subject, except that so far from furnishing any proof of his Tuesday's assertions, he stands before this community as a falsifier of what he and the public know to be facts in the case.

The American Exhibit at Paris.

Criticisms of the scope and character of the American exhibit at the Paris Exposition have been numerous. The general tendency of the testimony hitherto submitted has been to the effect that the exhibit fell far short of being one truly representative of this country's resources. Indorsement and praise of the affair has been scarce enough to render it noteworthy. The latest contribution in the latter direction is furnished by Professor C. V. Riley, who has had charge of the agricultural exhibit since the opening of the exposition. Professor Riley, according to press dispatches, evidently considers some of the criticisms of the affair to have been unjust, and says that taken as a whole the exhibit reflects credit on this country. The lack of a sufficient appreciation is remarked upon by Professor Riley, who says: "Almost every one at the exposition agrees that, after France, Belgium took the lead in the quality and quantity of her general display. Then, perhaps, England, America coming fourth in the list of excellence. I believe that the award will confirm this estimate. This standing is very creditable, indeed, when it is considered that Belgium, Spain, Italy, Portugal and other countries voted money to defray the expenses of exhibiting their goods far in excess of that provided for in Congress, which appropriated but $250,000 for the work."

THE HAWAIIAN LEPEERS.

Mr. Manley Hopkins' Reply to Mr. Clifford.

Since the publication of Mr. Clifford's letter yesterday, we have been favored with Consul-General Hopkins' reply, for which we are indebted to the Foreign Office, and insert it below. We may add, in this connection, that the remarks of the New York Tribune and Christian Union referred to, were based entirely on the erroneous and mischievous statement of Mr. Ballantyne, in Longman's Magazine:

To the Editor of the Times, Sir: I am glad to find by Mr. Clifford's letter of this morning that he is not aware of any imputations made of neglect or indifference to the lepers by the Hawaiian Government and its Board of Health. I forward his communication to Honolulu.

It is true that at a meeting at the Duke of Newcastle's, and another at Cardinal Manning's, at both of which I was present, I do not remember that any open censures of supineness were made. But it is complained that the large sums which had been collected were sent direct to Father Damien without any consultation with the Hawaiian Government, and that no concurrence was asked about its expenditure. The Government was simply ignored, and the left hand, the Hawaiian Ministers, did not know what the right hand of generous people in England was doing. After those two meetings I was also left out and received no information of the proceedings. I am obliged to disagree with Mr. Clifford on the main point—that of censure. Mr. Ballantyne, in Longman's Magazine, leads the English attack. In unmeasured terms he says, "Perhaps no spot on the face of the earth can equal for concentrated misery and hopeless horror the leper settlement of Molokai."

The New York Tribune, enlarging on the theme, says, "The brutal indifference of the Hawaiian Government had thrust these poor creatures away on a barren peninsula." And the Christian Union (American Christian) asserts that "the Government had adopted the barbarous theory that the lepers could sustain themselves," and it speaks of "their miserable huts huddled together, filled with wretchedness and debauchery." I will only add the comment of the Hawaiian serial, the Friend—"In the foregoing extracts the grossest slanders upon the Hawaiian Government are inextricably mixed with the laudations of Father Damien."

It is not my business nor my wish to detract by one iota from the services and sacrifice of this excellent man. My object is to show the manner in which the Government I represent have been accused and abused by groundless accusation. I am, Sir, &c.,
MANLEY HOPKINS,
Hawaiian Consul.

London, Sept. 24.

LOYALTY.

One prolific cause of confused ideas is the vague and loose way in which words are used. Some words, which really derive their value from the relation they bear to some others, come by careless use to be revered for themselves alone. Such a word is loyalty. No one can be loyal without having something to be loyal to. It may be devoted to a government, constancy to a cause, attachment to a person, fidelity to a principle. * * * Now, if loyalty be thus pitted against all change, it must be a foe to progress, for if no one changed his ideas or methods, if no one lifted his thoughts or his conduct from a lower to a higher plane, the world would stand still, and stagnation would ensue. An obtuse and stolid adherence to things as they are should never be dignified by the name of loyalty. There is an unintelligent devotion to one's country that refuses to see a single imperfection in it, or a single point of superiority in any other. It rather prides itself in despising other nations, and in ridiculing or censuring them for everything in which they differ from one's own.

There is a loyalty higher than any government, any party, any cause, or any friend can claim; it is the loyalty we owe to our own honest convictions of truth and right. Whenever these conflict with lower claims, the latter must give way. In all healthy growth of mind and heart this process is continually going on. * * * A man embraces certain political views or a scheme of social life, which seem to him at the time to contain the best materials for human welfare, and he upholds them earnestly by word and deed. As years bring to him more experience and wisdom, he finds them defective here and injurious there: he sees higher truths and better plans, and transfers his allegiance. Those who remain where he stood sometimes call him disloyal, but is it so? Is not the highest form of loyalty that clings always to the best and truest that can be found? Is it not disloyalty of the worst kind that forsakes the better for the worse—that lets go what is known to be good and right for the sake of clinging to a past and inferior conception, or for the sake of maintaining a nominal agreement with those from whom we differ in reality?

The test of true loyalty which each one may put to himself is, "Am I faithful to truth, to right, to duty, to love? Am I constant to the best methods I can find—to the higher ideals I can form?"

THE RAILROAD OF THE FUTURE.

The practical use of electricity as a motive power during the past few years, remarks the New Orleans Picayune, has demonstrated that in the not distant future it will, to a considerable extent, supplant steam as the principal agent in maintaining and fostering human industry. Although electricity is still but partially understood, and is far from being under the complete control of those who use it, still the full knowledge of its powers has reached a stage where they can be successfully put to a thousand uses.

Electricity now moves all classes of small machinery, such as fans, elevators, printing presses, street cars and other mechanical triumph of man's ingenuity. Judging from the progress steam has made since its introduction less than a hundred years ago, there is every reason to believe that electricity will reach even a greater degree of development.

According to the Baltimore Sun there is a company incorporated in that city which proposes to construct an electric railway that will run at the great speed of three miles a minute or 180 miles an hour. While it is intended that this railway will carry only mail and light freight it is the purpose of the managers to ultimately adapt the system to passenger traffic as soon as the success of the enterprise gives the public sufficient confidence in its feasibility.

The guns of the Vesuvius have nearly doubled contract requirements. This completes her test and the American Navy now has a vessel as unique and formidable relatively as the Monitor was in 1862. It is understood that several European nations are awaiting the results of these gun trials to order duplicates of the Vesuvius, and another vessel of the same type was authorized at the last session of Congress.

The Duke of Connaught has been up at Esquimaux and along the Vancouver coast inspecting British fortifications, and is to report on the facilities for getting coal from the interior to forts and stations on the coast. The recent journey of the Governor-General, the Duke and other functionaries is expected to result in the creation of some new Pacific fortresses.

American naval commanders are not the only ones who get into trouble in trying to pilot their own vessels into strange harbors. The Anson of the British navy is stuck on a rock in the harbor of Kiel, Germany, with a hole in her bottom. She is one of the latest and most powerful additions to the British list of ironclads.

HART'S PATENT

"Duplex" Die Stock

For Pipe and Bolt Threading.

Both Guides and Dies Instantly Adjustable.

No Wrench, Thumbscrew or Collets, tool complete in itself, and will do more and better work than any other Hand Die.

Dies easily sharpened on a Grindstone.

LIGHT, STRONG, COMPACT, SIMPLE, and Very easily operated.

A Word About the Bolt Die Stock.

No turning back over the threads after it is once cut, is a prominent feature of the "Duplex".

All mechanics agreeing that the turning back against the cutting edge injures the dies much more than the actual cutting. When the "Duplex" dies become dull by cutting, they can readily be renewed by sharpening on a grindstone. Thus making the life of these dies longer, at least by four fold than any other made, and at the same time avoiding the common occurrence of stripping or weakening the thread and rendering the work worthless.

This tool, when set to any desired size, can instantly be released and lifted off and reset to same size without trial, thus insuring all the threads uniformly alike. It adjusts to all the variations in iron—rough, oversized iron is shaved to standard size and threaded at the same time. This cannot be accomplished with any other Die Stock. The "Duplex" being the only tool made allowing one set of dies to accurately cut two distinct sizes—in the adjustment no wrench, screw driver or any extra tool being used—and when adjusted is as rigid as a solid die, and will do at least one-third more work in the same space of time. We solicit a comparison with other makes, both as to range of sizes each tool cuts, and prices, as well as price of extra dies.

FACTS ABOUT CATARRH.

A DISAGREEABLE DISEASE WITH WHICH MANY ARE AFFLICTED.

It Originates in Different Causes—Not as Serious as Often Represented—Easily Cured Under Proper Conditions and Treatment.

The term "catarrh" is from two Greek words meaning "I flow," and has its seat in the mucous membranes. Speaking generally, the mucous membrane is structurally the same as the skin. Its office is similar, being a lubricator, excretor and secretor in the functions of the body. The disease catarrh is one which, as before remarked, finds its expression in the mucous membrane and the extent of this tissue shows at once to what an extent the disease can exist, as there is no part or locality of mucous membrane which cannot and is not affected by the catarrhal condition.

The regions of the mucous tract most prone to catarrh are those of the nose, mouth, upper and lower pharynx, or back part of the nose and mouth; the larynx, or voice organ; the bronchial tubes, the stomach, intestines and gall passages. These several regions give names to the existing catarrh, as nasal or nose catarrh, bronchial catarrh, pharyngeal or laryngeal catarrh, stomacal or intestinal catarrh. In these different regions we find the catarrh acute or chronic.

PREDISPOSITION TO CATARRH.
There seems to be a certain predisposition or structural development of the individual prone to catarrhal attacks. These conditions are characterized by poverty of blood and nutrition, in which the walls of the capillary or minute blood vessels have a feeble tone or power of resistance, while the tissue through which such vessels pass are at the same time soft and yielding. This predisposition to catarrh is strongly marked in scrofula and rickets, and as in bronchial catarrh, the morbid condition is a frequent attendant on typhoid fever, measles, whooping cough and smallpox. Effeminate habits also augment the liability to catarrhal affections.

In a consideration of the reasons why any one should suffer from a catarrh, acute or chronic, this condition of the system or susceptibility is the important and determining factor without its presence the existence of catarrh is an impossibility. As in consumption, so it is in catarrh, this predisposition is the result of original organization of the individual, or can be acquired.

DANGERS GREATLY EXAGGERATED.
The flaming advertisement setting forth the horrors of catarrh is a familiar object, and our ideas of catarrh are more largely influenced by what we read than what we know. While some forms of catarrh are truly of grave consequence and should receive intelligent attention, if this was true in the majority of cases, probably a large part of the population of the large cities would be patients of some physician or specialist. The truth is, outside of the common cold, there are many forms of what may be termed mild catarrh, which are not incompatible with a state of health, and we can probably take the majority of the people in any city and by examination demonstrate that they have, in fact, a mild catarrh. These people are subject to taking cold, easily get a cold, and it is somewhat stubborn. They are usually afflicted during the spring and fall; steady warm or cold weather is beneficial to them, and only when they have a cold are they much inconvenienced. Their general health is good, and influences brought to bear on the general health usually meet with a prompt effect on the catarrh. It is safe to say that, directly, a fatal result from catarrh is a bugbear and finds no foundation in fact. That much suffering and disability is due to the graver or more chronic forms of the disease is true. The commonly received belief among the laity that chronic catarrh is the forerunner of consumption, and is only a question of time, is pure nonsense. If a consumption does follow a catarrh we are safe in saying that the catarrh was consumption from the first, and that either the individual had the consumptive taint through hereditary influences, or his habits and surroundings developed it in him and the catarrh was only the first local expression of the consumption. In that form of catarrh in which the disease extends to destruction of tissue and death of bone, we must not saddle the result on the catarrh; while this unquestionably was the immediate exciting cause, there was present and ready for the development of the result a soil so bad and vicious, either by heredity or acquisition, that the death of tissue and bone was perfectly rational and legitimate.

VALUABLE HINTS TO SUFFERERS.
The results of a chronic catarrh are many and varied, and while marked by a high degree of persistency and stubbornness, relief can and should be attained. This is to be accomplished not by local measures alone, but more especially by attacking the individual and relieving the condition which makes the development of the catarrh possible.

Treatment locally might be pursued for a lifetime and nothing but relief of temporary character gained. Correct all that is wrong in habits, surroundings and occupation, and you gain a potent influence for recovery.

One of the most common causes of catarrh, especially of the nose, is defective nasal breathing or respiration. Again, the structural changes which usually develop in time from long continued and neglected catarrh are other reasons why catarrh is not readily relieved. Notwithstanding these obstacles, relief can and should be attained. The most necessary factor is an intelligent conception of the condition which is the foundation of the disease. Relief for this in most of the cases means relief from the disease.—Cor. St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Dumas and the Cabman.
My father had inherited from my grandfather remarkable strength, of which I had the first experience when I was 14 or 15 years of age. One Sunday he had taken me to the Gymnasium. At the end of the play it rained in torrents. He moved toward a fence stationed on the boulevard and signaled me to follow him. He gave an address to the cabby, who stood upright beside his vehicle, into which we were prepared to mount. The coachman put his hand on the door, saying: "I don't move a step for less than five francs for the journey."

"Will you not move?"
"No."

"Once, twice, three." Cabby did not respond, but remained with his hand on the door. Then my father seized him round the waist, lifted him up from the ground, and planting him on the seat said, "Go now." Then taking his place in the cab, he said: "Bear in mind always how to do with an obstinate coachman." I have not forgotten the procedure, but I have never put it in practice—not that cabmen have become more civil, but that other things are different.—Alexander Dumas fils.
