Tourist Murder-Suspect Pleads Not Guilty

Friday morning the nude dead body of a young Japanese woman was found floating behind the Carolinian Ut in Garapan. Bruises covered her body, her hands were tied behind her back with a bra, and her skull had been fractured.

By 8 p.m. that evening, Manuel K. Pangelinan, age 23 of Garapan, was arrested by detectives of the Department of Public Safety and charged with the crime of first degree murder.

In a press conference Monday morning, DPS Director Edward Manibusan outlined what information the police had been able to gather of the death of Taeko Ikeda, age 22.

She had arrived on Saipan on Dec. 13, Tuesday, and was accompanied by a friend for her vacation stay at the Nikko Hotel. Her friend last saw her at 11:30 a.m. on Thursday. Once she was reported missing, fliers with her photo and description were printed by the Nikko and passed out around the island asking for anyone who had seen her to call the Nikko or the police.

No one word came of Ikeda's whereabouts until the discovery of her body.

Kyung Suh Not Stopped By Court

By Tom Anderson

In a legal battle which started months ago, another round was completed Friday as Chief Commonwealth Trial Judge Robert Hefner denied an injunction request of House Legal Counsel Ray Smith to stop further development at the Kyung Suh factory in Gualo Rai.

Smith had asked in his injunction for the factory to not begin activities or bring in non-resident workers until an appeal of the decision of Coastal Resources Appeals Board to grant a permit be decided.

Attorney Robert O'Connor, who represents Kyung Suh, followed his success in stopping the injunction with the filing of a motion of summary judgement Friday afternoon.

O'Connor said, his motion argues that the House of Representatives and its Speaker Pedro Guerrero have no standing in the process since they, through legislative action, have delegated their authority to CRM.

In winning his challenge to the injunction, O'Connor said he brought out four main points in his argument before Judge Hefner.

One, said O'Connor, was the House did not show it had a good chance of winning the appeal of the CRM decision. Secondly, the House had to show it would be irreparably damaged if the injunction was denied, and since the House is a constitutional office and not a person, per se, this could not be the case, said O'Connor.

His third point focused on the damage Kyung Suh would suf

U.S. Attorney Pierce Arrives

By Tom Anderson
Managing Editor

Prosecution of federal cases before the U.S. Department of Justice Office should begin to move forward as the next year begins with the arrival of the new Assistant United States Attorney Richard Pierce last weekend.

Pierce, who flew into Saipan Saturday, said in a press conference held Monday that it was too soon for him to make specific comments about the caseload waiting for him when he arrived.

"I have a lot a reading to do," said Pierce. "And I also want to get out and see the island and become better acquainted with it."

Pierce brings with him 10 years experience with the Department of Justice. He has been a trial lawyer in Washington D.C.; an Assistant U.S. Attorney in Alexandria, Virginia; and most recently Asst. U.S. Attorney in Roanoke, Virginia.

While only being a short time on island, Pierce said he and his wife have found Saipan "very attractive." He added, "The job here is a challenge professionally."

Along with his wife, the 42 year old Pierce, brings with him three children, ages seven, five and three.

U.S. Attorney William O'Connor spoke highly of Pierce saying, "I had a number of candidates to consider for the job and Pierce was the best." O'Connor praised the reputation of Pierce also.

Pierce's federal criminal jury trial experience is extensive. He has handled criminal cases involving white collar crimes mat-

New Power Charge Will Start Jan. 1

By Tom Anderson
Managing Editor

Indications from the Commonwealth Utility Corporation are that come Jan. 1, its customers will start paying more for electrical power.

The new rates were proposed by CUC months ago and public hearings were held on the proposal of increasing the residential rate to 11 cents per kilowatt hour and the rate charged the government and commercial accounts to 16 cents.

During the public hearings several residents expressed a desire for CUC to make a smaller jump in power rates and if necessary to seek legislative subsidies in order to make up the difference.

However, during the CUC Board meeting of Friday, no actions was taken to decrease the rates as they are scheduled to go into effect next year.

Board member Bud White did say CUC would study the situation over a six months period beginning after the rates go into effect to see if some residential rate reduction would be feasible. White said only residential rates would be looked at and that commercial and government rates would stay at the 16 cent mark.

Residential Customers Will Pay 11 Cents Per Kilowatt Hour

Officials of CUC have stressed the rate hike is required because of the mandated under which CUC operates to become a self-sufficient agencies. The rate increase, say CUC officials, will move the utility towards reaching full cost recovery.

Caution Should Not Turn To Fear

Many things must be considered when looking at the murder of a young female Japanese tourist in Garapan which happened last week. A crime such as this immediately strikes a chord of revulsion in the public's mind, and it also sounds a chord of concern for our safety.

We believe the Department of Public Safety should be commended for their quick action in bringing in a suspect in the murder case. And we also believe the public should not over-react to the situation.

One of the common accompaniments to growth is an increase in crime, all kinds of crime from petty thefts to violent crimes. That alone is a sad thing, but something just as sad happens when people begin to lose their trust in persons around them who are strangers.

Villages and towns which were once open and friendly to strangers can become distrustful and paranoid after crime begins to grow in the community.

Strangers no longer greet each other with a friendly nod of the head, women become afraid of smiling at men they do not know, houses are locked tight at all times, as are vehicles and in general an air of tension begins to hang over the community which has become frightened by the prospect of crime.

We hope that does not happen here on Saipan. We hope a balance is found between the exercise of proper caution in order to protect yourself and your belongings and a friendly and open manner with others.

Saipan is a tourist area. It needs to project a feeling of warmth towards those who travel across the ocean to visit its attractions. We want tourists to feel welcome on the island and we want them to feel safe here. There are things tourists must do in order to limit the opportunity of crimes being committed on them and their property and there are things the community can do also.

We urge tourists to take caution and we urge local people to watch over the tourist and aid them in anyway necessary to ensure they do not fall victims to the criminal actions of a very small segment of the local population.

And most of all we hope that paranoid and fear of strangers does not become a reality here and that the friendly way of the people is not lost because of the actions of a few individuals who have no respect for the lives or property of others.

Student Essays On The Question of Alcohol Abuse

By Gina George
MHS 12th Grade

Alcohol/drug abuse is a very serious problem here on our island. To answer the question, "Is there an answer to teenage alcohol/drug abuse?" is very difficult, but I'm willing to give it a shot and hopefully be able to get my message across to anyone in this situation before it's too late.

Alcohol/drug abuse should not be fully blamed on teens. I feel that each individual's character (his personality and capabilities) originates in his home. The way the child is brought up, the environment he grew up in, how his parents treat him, educate, communicate and provide love and attention to the child determines a lot of what kind of teen he'll turn out to be. Unfortunately, this is not what most of our kids are getting here. Most of our troubled (alcoholic and drug abusing) teens come from problem-filled homes and that's a fact. These children need attention. So they turn to alcohol/drugs which is one thing that never lets them down when it comes to catching the attention of others. Other times, they need to "just get away" and once again their "buddy" is there to help them out. This is why I do believe that parents should make an effort to communicate with their child. They must show that they are concerned and that their child means more to them than that million dollar they just received from selling their beachfront property, or more than that poker machine they spend hours with face-to-face every day. Shaping the home/family condition is certainly the first step to take to help minimize or control alcohol/drug abuse.

Educating our teenagers is another way that can help control the drinking problem here. Teens need to realize there is more to life than being a drunkard. They have to break away from that feeling of being insecure and plant it in their mind that alcohol/drug does not prove anything. If you feel that it's a way of running away from your problem, how about when you're sober? Admit it, it only gets worse! That problem is still there just where you left it, untouched. Learning to value your life is another thing. You only have one life to live and can never rewind the clock to erase past mistakes. Make that change for the better now. Don't wait until you've come out a vegetable after that accident last payday, or until your best friend just got buried, or even worse, when you yourself are struggling to climb out of your coffin but can't because you're dead.

Educating the teenager is the next best step to take. But after they've realized the problem and decide to change, then what? This is where providing recreational facilities for teenagers comes in. The reason why kids here go out into the streets, drink and drive, and cause all sorts of trouble is because there is absolutely nothing around here to do. Parking at the beach to break open a can of Bud is the only

By Elaine Inos
MHS 10th Grade

Yes, there are answers to teenage drinking and driving. There are many people that encircle a teenager in need. When he is troubled by his problems, he often leaves everyone out of it and takes it upon himself to pick up a can or two and then has the urge to go for a drive and ends up endangering not only his life, but the lives of innocent people. An answer to teenage drinking and driving is love and support from all the people surrounding him, including his parents, family members, peers, teachers and the government itself.

The parents are the main support of the teenager. Where learning starts at the home, so does the love and affection we all grow up to receive. It is the job of the parents to see that the teenager is secure and that all evidence that will lead him to drink and drive is eliminated. It is their duty to discipline their children and support them when they are in the best or worst of times. In a case where it happens that the teenager gets drunk, there is still time to save not only him, but other people around him. They could at least keep him from driving under the influence and from hurting himself and others.

Then, there are the family members. Their job is to support the teenager in need and even counsel him with a few points. Family members are looked up to by the younger generations of the clan and with the encouragement and confidence one can give to a troubled teen, at least he'll know that there are other ways out and other hobbies to pursue.

Peers and teachers can also be an answer to this problem. At school, a teenager is surrounded by friends and different types of people. Is it who he hangs around with that will determine what his habits are? Not really. Sometimes a teenager can hang around those who drink and still be clean, and sometimes hang around well-behaved friends but still drink. If his friends and teachers convince him of the dangers of the disease and show him other ways out, he can still be "cool" without even using alcohol as a solution. Last but not least, we have our government. Our leaders are trying their best to stop this problem which is beginning to get out of control. In a way, they can help teenagers by enforcing stricter laws that will make it hard for teenagers to get their hands on beer or any alcoholic beverages. Drinking and driving has become a real problem in our society today. The basis of the problem starts with drinking. Driving is not a problem, but driving under the influence is and there are no buts to it. With all these people surrounding a teenager, he will be able to realize that there are a lot of people who care about him and that there is no need to turn to alcohol which will lead to all sorts of disasters, not just driving under the influence and causing collisions with others. Our time will come when we will be old enough to take a drink, but it can wait because what is worse than killing yourself is killing another innocent human being.

Majority of the police reports on DUI are teenagers, many of whom end up crippled by the disease, lose their lives or endanger the life of an innocent victim. Yes, there are answers to teenage drunk driving. First of all, under the CNMI law, no individuals under the age of 21 have the right to buy alcoholic beverages nor are they to be sold or distributed to them. Unfortunately, this law is hardly recognized and therefore alcohol is found in the hands of teenagers. There are many ways to prevent teenage drunk driving. For one, the law which states that no minor under the age of 21 should be allowed to purchase alcohol, must be taken as a serious action. Secondly, there are many reasons that force a person to drink. Parents should have an open relationship with their children and thirdly, teenagers drink to look macho. Older people should have respect for young adults when drinking.

More Student Letters On Alcohol Abuse

In the CNMI, minors are not allowed to purchase any alcoholic beverages. How then do young teens get a hold of the liquor? Is it our fault? This lies in the hands of the distributors. Alcohol is one of the fastest way to get money. Most retailers don't care who they sell it to as long as it is bought. That's just it! This kind of attitude has a positive outlook on the teens. They are going to have big smiles on their faces knowing they can get alcohol. Now that there have been so many accidents, the law is enforced again. In a couple of months, it will be forgotten again. This time, our leaders should make a law that everyone should follow. Retailers must be kept a sharp eye on. They shouldn't be just given something to do but to enforce the measures given to all of them. If the government could provide a way to find these retailers who purchase beer to teens, teenage drunk driving would be no problem or little at all.

People say that the learning process of a child begins at home. This process includes the open communication of a parent and child, discipline and manners. A child has a need for love like anyone else. Without the feeling they are lost, confused and don't care about anything. That's when the drinking comes in. They have a tendency to drink hoping that maybe someone will notice their existence. To prevent these things from happening, parents should get to know the true person inside their child. There should be a special bond created, especially now that their son/daughter is no longer a child. Growing up is not easy. Teenagers need all the attention they can get. The only true people that they can reach out to is their parents. Although at times teens feel pressured to be like someone or act like this and like that. What about what they want? Too much pressure causes anyone to change into a totally different person. When it does happen, drinking and getting drunk may be their solution. They tend to give up on things, ruin their lives, most of time taking someone else with them. If it isn't so difficult to communicate with parents and gaining security and strength from them, teenager's would have no trouble growing up. Drinking would be the last thing on their minds. They'll be smart enough to know that drinking would only ruin their lives. Unfortunately, many teens are in secure and lack self-confidence in themselves. The time to reach out to growing youths in the community is now.

Another reason why a teenager would drink is that they want to look "cool". They probably got the idea by observing how the adults drink. Usually when adults drink, they get drunk. Naturally, they get into a fight and prove their strength. Teenagers, looking at this, encourage them to drink too so they could be strong. Adults should be responsible enough to respect the younger generation. Drinking beer could never enhance the strength of a person, it should only ruin their brain cells. Drinking alcohol does no good to anyone. It only ends up ruining a person's life. Teens don't care about this because all they have in their heads is that it will make them strong and popular. What good is your strength without a brain? Childish and immature behaviors from adults are taken seriously by the young adults growing up.

This is the new generation. There are many things happening everywhere, most affecting the youth society. They will do anything that will make them feel fit into the growing community. As a teenager, I believe that if everyone really cared about teenagers and most of all show it, the DUI reports will drop tremendously on teens. The alcoholic disease has a good target on the teens. It shouldn't be a target if the law was taken into a more serious

For every locked door there is always a master key. Yes! I strongly believe that there is an answer to teenage drinking and driving. There is an answer to every problem. The problem lies in how the answer is carried out.

Is the pleasure of a drink really worth the pain after it's taken a life? I've seen friends as well as family lose loved ones to an auto crash because someone was under the influence. Have we shut our eyes and ears to the fact that drinking is a problem and will continue to be a problem unless something is done? The best way to attack the problem is to look at the home, society, and teenagers.

The home is very important in shaping a young person's life. If a child is reared in a home where alcohol is prevalent then it is not surprising if the kid will turn to alcohol. Alcohol may be an escape from all the abuse he sees at action, secondly, if parents could give the security and strength that their children need, and most especially if adults don't give the teens any encouragement. With these issues and many others, teenage drunk driving will decrease. Teenagers would be concentrating on their lives today and for the future.

home or it may just be some kind of personal high for him since he sees that it is accepted. It is really a pity to see money wasted on alcohol where that money could have been used for useful purposes. I think family members who set examples to younger generations have a drinking problem should seek help. There is an Al-Anon program on the island.

Good values begin at home. If family could just teach children that alcohol and driving at the same time is bad news - then it would lessen the problem of teenage drinking. Once moral values are set in a person's soul (conscience), it is very hard to defy them.

Another area to address is society and the law. There are not too many recreational activities around the island to keep teenagers from engaging in illegal activity - drinking under the legal age is, after all, an offense. Different businesses could sponsor alcohol-free seminars or even late night bashes without alcohol ters, such as perjury, fraudulent claims, bank fraud and embezzlement and also violent crimes such as armed robbery, assault on federal officers, arson for profit, drug dealing and money laundering.

In addition, he has handled major federal civil prosecutions, and defended civil actions brought against the U.S. He has briefed and argued a dozen cases in the U.S. Circuit Courts of Appeal.

In 1978, Pierce graduated with honors from Mercer University law school and was the editor in chief of the Mercer Law Review. He has an undergraduate degree from the University of Georgia, where he majored in history.

Before going to law school, he taught school in Australia, and traveled and lived extensively in the Far East and South America.

Pierce, who has a three year contract, described himself as a prosecutor who believes in fairness and one who can be tough when necessary but also one who can also be soft when necessary.

Along with the news of the arrival of Pierce, O'Connor spoke briefly Monday of the upcoming arrival of two new FBI agents who will be based on Saipan.

Currently, FBI agent which work on Saipan cases have been assigned temporarily from their permanent duty station on Guam. The new agents will reside on Saipan. O'Connor said the new arrangement will better serve the federal law enforcement needs of the Commonwealth.

The FBI agents are expected on island sometime in March, said O'Connor.

witness who reported to police they had seen Pangelinan driving on Airport Road with a Japanese woman who fitted the description of the missing tourist, made police suspect Pangelinan of the crime, said Manibusan.

At 8 p.m. Friday night, Pangelinan was stopped near San Jose Village. A search was performed on his vehicle which revealed blood stains on the passenger seat. Also travelers checks and a camera that are believed to belong to Ikeda were found, said Manibusan.

As of early Monday morning,

Manibusan said no statement had been made by Pangelinan regarding the murder charge and no blood test had yet been performed to see if the blood found in Pangelinan's vehicle matched those of the victim. Also further test on the victim will be made to see if a rape had taken place.

Pangelinan, who had been released from jail in September on probation from a conviction of burglary and theft, was arraigned on a first degree murder charge Monday. Through his legal counsel, Public Defender Oldias Ngirakalau, Pangelinan entered a plea of not guilty. Judge Jose Dela Cruz because of the seriousness of the crime denied bail for Pangelinan at the request of Assistant Attorney General Edward Hayden.

Department of Public Safety Director Manibusan said he believed the victim may have become involved with Pangelinan through an offer to guide her around the island. He advised tourist to seek out legitimate taxi services and tour buses instead of accepting rides from unknown persons.

News of the death of the female tourist has already reached Japan and after the news conference with members of the local media, a second news conference was held by Manibusan with members of the Japanese media.

"I'm sure that one way or another this will have some effect on our tourist industry," said Manibusan. But he added that such crimes are not common occurrences on Saipan.

fer if the injunction was granted. O'Connor said the company had already spent over $1.3 million and had orders from customers of some $600,000 which would be jeopardized if the court did not allow the company to proceed in its efforts to have the garment factory operational.

His final point centered on the argument that the House did not represent the interest of the public in the matter of the CRM permit but other agencies such as CRM, DEQ, and Department of Natural Resources did represent the public as they are charged to do and that those agencies had approved of the locating of the factory in Gualo Rai.

House Legal Counsel Smith said he did not view the denial of his injunction request as a serious setback to the House's position in the Kyung Suh question. "The decision did not harm our chances of winning the appeal," said Smith.

Through it is true alcohol makes a lot of money, there must be a stop to sale of alcohol to teens. I'd really hate to be responsible for a death if I had a business and sold alcohol to minors.

I don't think the law is really being enforced. I see cars going beyond the speed limit with wild chases around corners; I'm sure they had a little too much to drink. I ask myself --- where are the cops when the law is broken?

Lastly, I think the "alcohol is kool" idea should be banished. Teenagers must get their high egg's off that pedestal. They could find other highs without messing around with drugs or alcohol. For example, achieving an academic award or winning in sports could bring your spirits up.

Teenagers are just too concerned about being like everybody else and fitting in with the popular crowd. I think they're just making a fool of themselves and may be destroying their lives or have destroyed some lives already.

As teenagers, we should learn to resist peer pressure and if we do see a friend driving drunk for heavens sake! Take the keys away from the driver. Good grief - it could save a life.

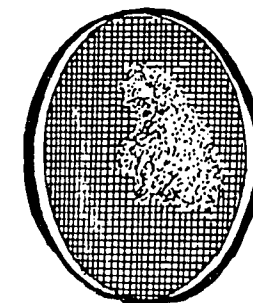

With so many deaths on the island that are alcohol-related, I think it's about time we put our foot down and say NO! - No more sale of alcohol to minors; NO more drinks for me - I'm a bad example to my children; and NO more submissions to a false highway to popularity.

If we address these certain areas of home, society & the law, and teens with a lot of moral support then we can tackle the drinking and driving problem among teens.

Remember to clean the lint screen on your clothes dryer. Lint restricts the flow of air in the dryer and requires the machine to use more energy in drying your laundry.

Plan To Improve Lives Here

BANGKOK (UNIS) - Asian-Pacific countries have decided to step up efforts to improve peoples' lives and asked the United Nations to plan a development strategy to wipe out poverty and usher in more fairness in income distribution.

Twenty-one Asian-Pacific governments strongly endorsed the planning of a regional social development strategy to be carried out by the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP).

ESCAP's intergovernmental Committee on Population and Social Development, which meets every two years, decided that the three major themes of the strategy are to be distributive justice, elimination of poverty and popular participation in development efforts.

Other major ESCAP initiatives in the field of social development which received the Committee's strong support were the Jakarta Plan of Action on Human Resources Development in the ESCAP Region and the Survey of the Quality of Life in Asia and the Pacific.

Issues highlighted for vigorous action by ESCAP included literacy promotion especially among women and youth, strengthening the role of the family in development and social development in rural areas. Skills training for youth, the active participation of disabled persons in development, demand-focused reduction of drug abuse and social security for the elderly also engaged the attention of the Committee.

A common focus of delinquency, prevention and early detection of disability by families and reduction of women's workload through community action such as provision of child care services. The Committee also recognized the invaluable contribution of non-governmental organizations in promoting social development, both through efficient social service delivery and the organization of social groups for community action. New efforts are being made by the United Nations family to strengthen the partnership between Governments and non-governmental organizations for social development.

Portable Telephone Rage Reaches Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP) _ The rage of Hong Kong these days is easy to spot. Just look for the tiny antennas, the telltale sign of the portable telephones so many people are carrying wherever they go.

Despite price tags of $2,000 or more, the hand-held telephones have become a huge hit in this British colony, where doing business is a 24-hour preoccupation and new status symbols are always in demand.

Downtown streets are filled with professionals ready for business with the cellular phones tucked under their arms or stuffed, antenna-up, into briefcases.

Away from the financial district, people can be seen barking into the phones while eating in restaurants, riding public buses and ferries, or sitting in darkened movie theaters. Everyone from executives to proprietors of produce stalls can be seen chatting away.

The Hong Kong Standard newspaper spotted a telephone in a recent 100-kilometer (62-mile) charity walk along a rural trail.

"In driving rain and a lashing wind, a young man was spotted eagerly and conspicuously talking into his mobile telephone," it said.

"In a more normal society one would expect (him) to hand the phone over to one of his se-onds before starting the race. (But) a few kilometers down the track, the young man was spotted merrily informing the financial markets at large of his continued existence."

The government estimates about 60,000 portable cellular telephones _ roughly six times earlier projections _ will be in use by the end of the year in this territory of 5.7 million people, said Deputy Postmaster General Henry Wise, whose department is in charge of telecommunications.

While most cellular telephones sold in other countries are for use in cars, roughly three-fourths of the units sold in Hong Kong since the market opened three years ago have been the more expensive handheld models.

"We were amazed when the whole thing really took off in a great way," Wise said.

Hutchison Telephone Co., which has sold about 26,000 cellular telephones, recently stopped sales for six weeks because demand was outpacing the company's capacity to handle all the calls.

"The market just caught everybody by surprise," said Peter Grant, president of China Telephone Co. Ltd., a rival firm. "We're all frantically rebuilding networks."

Harry Hui, a psychology lecturer at the University of Hong Kong, attributed the popularity of the telephones here in part to "the importance of face. It's a status symbol."

Wise believes the Hong Kong work ethic of doing business whenever and wherever possible is largely responsible for the tremendous sales.

"Virtually the whole day is part of the working day," he said. Although industry officials see no end in sight to demand for the telephones, their indiscriminate use in public places already is viewed as an irritation by some.

"People are becoming aware of the annoyance factor," acknowledged Grant.

Several exclusive clubs demand that their patrons and guests check their telephones at the door.

Quake Relief Still On-Going

SEATTLE (AP) _ A plane carrying a team of 46 Northwest medical providers left Seattle on Tuesday on a mission to carry help to earthquake victims in Armenia.

Members of the Seattle-King County Disaster Relief Team say the mission may be the toughest project the private, volunteer group ever has tackled.

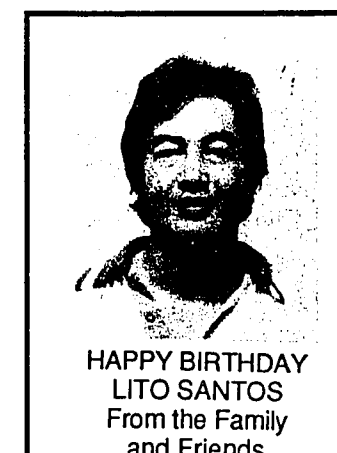

"This is going to be 10 times more difficult than any rescue effort I've ever been on," said Marty LaFave, 28, a Bellevue Fire Department paramedic.

"I anticipate it will be like a MASH unit," said Dr. David Roselle, 33, an emergency room physician at Overlake Hospital Medical Center in Bellevue.

A Boeing 747 loaned by Flying Tigers Air Cargo Co. of Los Angeles, with the flight crew and support workers donating their time as well, was scheduled to arrive in Yerevan early Wednesday after stops to pick up people, equipment and supplies in Portland, Seattle and New York, with refueling in Frankfurt, West Germany.

The flight with 46 doctors, nurses and paramedics aboard left Seattle at 7:12 a.m. PST, said Joni McDonough, a Flying Tigers spokeswoman.

Also making the flight were members of the Northwest Medical Team from Portland and specially trained search-and-rescue dogs and their handlers from Alaska.

Kids Give Advice To Future Pres.

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — As a fellow president-elect, Scotty Hoel has some advice for his colleague, George Bush.

Scotty is president-elect of the third grade class at Gregory School here, and this is his agenda for his counterpart in Washington:

"I would like him to lower prices at stores and for taking trips, so we could afford to take a trip. And so we could buy more food and drinks. I would also like him to give our school some more money so we could add on to it.

"I would like him to stop crime and killing because I don't want to get robbed or I don't want our school or anybody to get robbed."

Scotty, his vice president, Ben Lafferty, and their classmates in Nancy Sandberg's class at Gregory wrote short essays outlining what they want the new president to do.

"I was surprised by the children's knowledge of issues," Ms.

Sandberg said.

The children followed the campaign with the help of their teacher and The Weekly Reader. They heard the campaign promises, and now they expect action on arms control, pollution, taxes, education poverty and homelessness. It's clear from their responses that they listen to their parents discuss food and housing prices, taxes, crime and drugs. They also have some ideas of their own.

Here are some of their suggestions:

Patrick Yanez: "I would like Mr. Bush to stop letting people dump toxic waste into the water. I want him to let us kids vote. ...

I would like him to come to my house and rub it in to my dad that he won and Dukakis lost."

Dan Harezlak: "When Mr. Bush becomes President Bush, I would like him to do all my homework. Also, I would like him to make a robot to do all my work around the house. I would like him to increase my allowance."

Kenneth Lee: "I want him to ask people if they need help. One day I saw a man. He had a sign that said, 'I will work for food.' Can you help him?"

Tracy Hollandsworth: "I want Mr. Bush to help the Rockford Board of Education. ... I want Mr. Bush to help schools raise money for things like new pencil sharpeners (the handle comes off of ours), computers, and playground equipment."

Kristina Bernard: "When Mr. Bush becomes president, I think he will help us so all the bills will go down. I want Mr. Bush to help my grandma because she is in River Bluff Nursing Home. She had a stroke and I felt sorry for her. I want her to get better. ... I would really like it if he would take my 20-year-old brother and my 18-year-old sister away. I will really like him if he does this."

POSTPONEMENT OF BID OPENING AND PRE-BID CONFERENCE

The bids for the Public School System's Groups B and C Projects under PSS-IFB-88-168, will be held at the PSS Procurement and Supply Office, Lower Base, Saipan, at 3:00 p.m. on January 11, 1989, instead of December 23, 1988, as being advertised in the local newspapers.

The pre-bid conference for these projects will be held at the Board of Education's conference room at the PSS Central Office, Lower Base, Saipan, at 10:00 a.m. December 21, 1988, and not on December 7, 1988, as being advertised.

The reason for the postponement of the bid opening and the pre-bid conference was the lack of contractors reporting to the PSS Central Office to pick up plans and specifications.

Customer Billing Will Improve, Says CUC Official

By Tom Anderson
Managing Editor

Progress, problems and promises were a part of the report from CUC official Paul Swanson given to CUC Board members Friday. Swanson report focused on such areas as consumer operations and billing, and accounts receivable.

While recognizing that "the computer billing program has had serious flaws," in the past, Swanson said a new computer program which will allow a 12 month customer history to be displayed on the cashier computer screen will greatly improve that area in the future.

Not only will CUC have the 12 month billing history of the customer, but also at the end of the year, the customer will receive a copy of that billing history, said Swanson.

Customers of CUC may also see an improvement on their billing as efforts are being made to correct billing problems.

"There are often more than 100 billing adjustments made each month. These adjustments are due largely to meter reading errors and payments made by customers that were not entered in the computer billing in the past," said Swanson. "Customers often come to CUC with receipts marked paid which were never credited to their bill. This should eventually become less of a problem as we become better organized and as we have more training for personnel in computer operation and data entry."

APIL Asks U.S. To Look At Immigration Impact

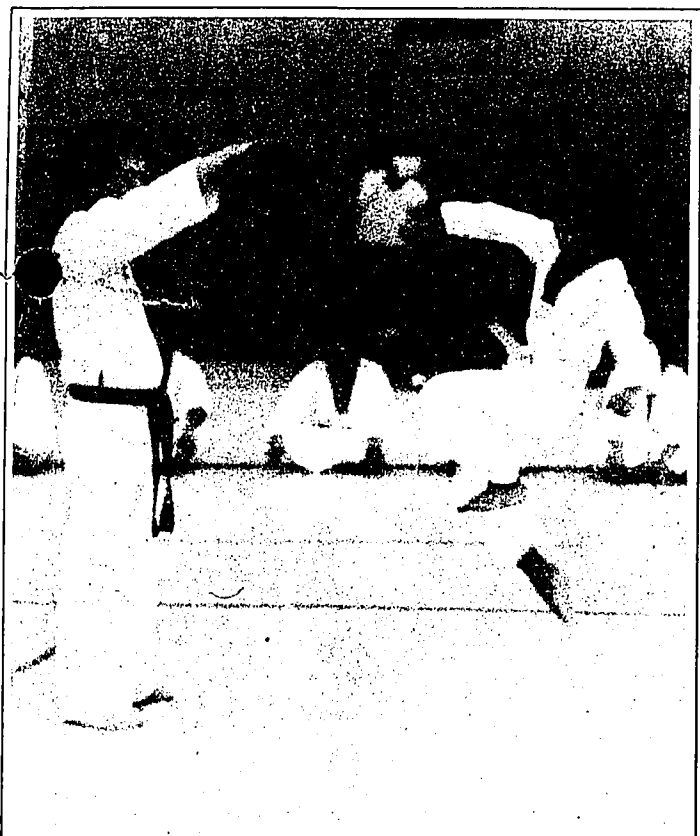

By Tom Anderson
Managing Editor

It is time the US President made a report to the US Congress on the impact of immigration from the Marshall Islands and the Federated States of Micronesia say the Association of Pacific Island Legislatures because while the report has gone unmade the cost of the immigration to areas like the Commonwealth has not stopped.

Public Law 99-239 calls for the President to make such a report but it is two years behind schedule as established by Congress. The APIL not only wants the report to be made but for money to be paid for the increased cost to its members because of the increase demands on its members infrastructure due to the immigration.

"The APIL requests the President of the United States to provide reports to Congress on the impact of immigration from the Compact of Free Association States as provided by Public Law 99-239 and that the past failure to provide such reports be identified, including the impact cost incurred by the territories, Commonwealths, and states in the lapsed period between the time the report should have been originally submitted, and the delivery of the first reports," states a letter which will be sent to the President of the U.S. and key members of Congress and Chairman of Congressional Committees.

Special Sports Championship Everybody Is A Winner

Abed Younis Editor

The Special Annual Sports event for the CNMI handicapped children held last Saturday brought great success and enjoyment to many of the children and their parents.

Guided by their teachers and the Special Education Program members, about one hundred children from Saipan, Rota and Tinian competed in several events as: Track events from 25 meters to 100 meters. Field events include soccer, softball throw, Frisbee distance and accuracy; long jump running and standing; and basketball.

The events started Friday evening with special reception party sponsored by Governor Pedro P. Tenorio and First Lady Sophie at their residence in Capitol Hill. On Saturday, the children attended a special mass at Mt. Carmel and follow by a breakfast at Hopwood and torch lightning to mark the beginning of the one day sport activities.

Governor Pedro P. Tenorio and Lt. Gov. Pedro A. Tenorio were on hand for brief remarks and presentation of awards in the beginning of the day.

The success of the event was credited to the organizing committee headed by Tom Pangelinan, Principal of Hopwood Jr. High School, Margaret Dela Cruz, Josephine Mesta and Gene Repcki from Special Ed. Ramon Tebuteb, Hopwood teacher and Rita A. Sablan, Principal of Garapang School.

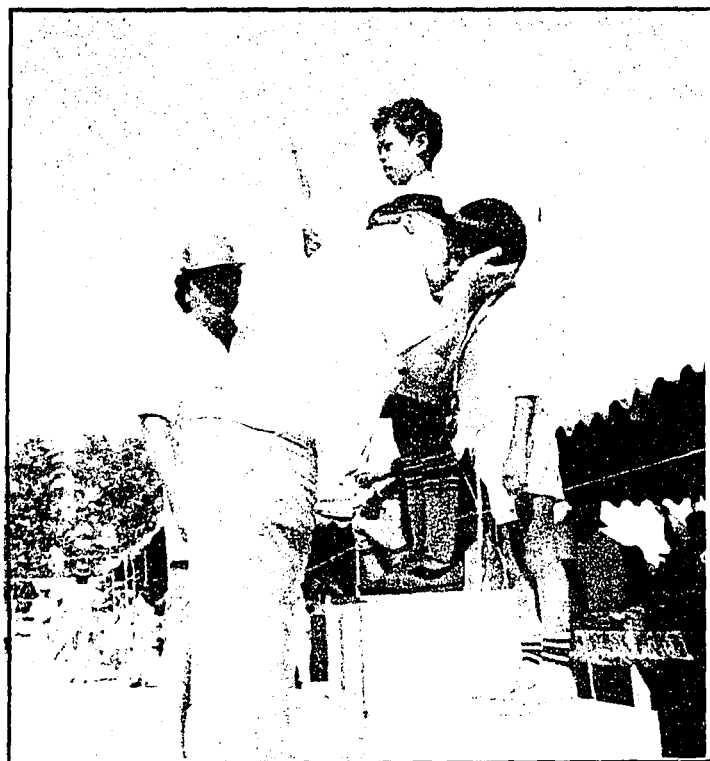

Extra efforts to make this special sports event a memorable one was added by the generosity of a number of local businesses who contributed, donated to part of the sponsorship of the Special Day for the Special Children.
