May Day Dance by Company "D."

The dance last evening was a great success, and Company "D" deserve great credit for the manner in which they carried it off. The soldier boys were allowed to abandon their guns before the face of such over-whelming scores of pretty girls, and for once in the history of Co.
"D", discipline was forgotten, and Captain Fetter's boys surrendered themselves to the wiles and coquetties of feminine divine. The decorations embodied the military spirit with the festive day of the year, when all nature comes out in her gala-day attire. Red, white and blue bunting could be seen here and there behind palm leaves and banana trees, which lined the four walls of the ball room of the Armory. Targets, both bulls-eye and figure 8, caught the eye at one end of the hall, while the picture of George Washington, framed in flags with the American eagle hovering above, filled the space at the other end of the hall. The music was good, the refreshments delightful and the dancers happy and gay.
For the success of the evening credit is due to the committees:

Governor's Impression of Session.

Honolulu, April 27.—Governor Carter, on leaving the Capitol at 12:45 this morning, was asked by an Advertiser reporter for his impressions of the session of 1905 in a dozen words.

"They have passed 103 Acts," the Governor replied. "The Legislature of 1903 passed 88 and the next highest was 79 by the session of 1898. They have tackled more hard subjects than almost any previous Legislature of Hawaii, and passed an unusually large proportion of important tax measures."

"Only one franchise has been passed. They have done a great deal of adjusting. In this they have been greatly helped by having the Revised Code, which showed them just what the laws were and where they needed adjustment."

Kilauea Still Active.

Madam Pele is still doing her duty to the patrons of the Volcano House. During the last two weeks the display has been the best that has manifested itself during the series of recent eruptions. Two places are plainly visible, one on the Puna side and one nearer the Volcano House side of the pit. The latter place is spouting to the height of 40 or 50 feet every few minutes. During the last two months the floor has filled up about three hundred feet, and there seem to be no indications of a cessation of the eruption.

ORGANIZATION.

The Board of Trade in appointing a committee to look into the subject of local organization in the banana industry, has touched the key-note to the preservation of small farming in Hawaii. As small farming is to the up-building of the community, so is organization among the fruit growers to the up-building of a market and better prices for the fruit marketed. As long as individuals insist upon going it alone, so long will the prices remain as they are. With organization, such as that proposed by the Board of Trade, the grower will have his representative on the field, who will seek the market of the largest returns, and on the other hand the Hilo fruit by the system of selection and grading proposed, will be establishing such a name that it will be sought for by the market.

Now that an association such as the Board of Trade has taken the matter up, it is incumbent upon the growers to fall into line and lend their forces toward the furtherance of the project proposed. When business men, merchants and professional men are willing to put their shoulder to the wheel, with no other object in view or gain to themselves than that of seeing the community benefited, the banana grower who is directly concerned should not hesitate to come forward and if necessary make sacrifices toward the scheme which means his emancipation from the iron grip of the Banana Trust. What is true as to bananas is equally true in regard to other fruits, with which these Islands abound, and while this Committee has primarily only the banana trade in hand, yet the result of its work will redound to the benefit of other industries within the realms of small farming.

CO-OPERATION EFFORT.

The advice given in Mr. Kelsey's valuable report appearing in this issue, should be carefully followed by the banana growers and others interested in the future of the banana industry in the islands.

Until the owners and shippers of bananas organize an Hawaiian Fruit Growers Association, they may expect to be bled by commission men and fruit dealers at the coast. The Southern California Fruit Growers Association was the result of a long period of bitter experiences, to which island growers are now being subjected. Since the formation of a co-operative association to look after the selection and marketing of fruit, the growers of the fruit belt have been successful. They now have accredited agents on the fruit ranches and at the marketing depot, and the increased price obtained for their crops, fully compensate for the expense of the system.

Co-operation among farmers in the agricultural districts of the United States has produced well managed and profitable creameries and cheese factories, grain elevators and shipping associations for marketing produce, and wrought adequate returns for the season's labor. The farmers of the west and middle west are learning the benefits to be derived from co-operation. There are in some communities even a half dozen or more farms under one management, the crops specialized and the owners receiving their proportional share of earnings.

Absorbed with the work of agriculture, growers cannot give the proper attention to marketing their products successfully. A co-operative society or association would solve the problem and in the end would work incalculable benefit to its members. Then let the banana growers co-operate without delay.

The primary elections will take place on the 13th of May for the election of delegates to a County Convention to be held in Hilo on May 18th.

THE DAUGHTERS OF FAME.

The Sciences and Arts Vied for the Wreath of Honor.

As Neptune ruled o'er the purple deep, as Vulcan reigned in the realms of fire, and as Pallas presided o'er the arts divine, so did the Goddess of Fame with like power wield her sceptre last Tuesday evening over her Daughters of different nations and of all Ages, when she summoned them to come forth and assert their claim to the crown of Fame. So, too, did she erect her Temple of Fame amid the dingy and bare walls of Spreckels' Hall, transforming it into a palatial assembly room of marble, the stately casements of which reflected in their whiteness, the purity of those fair daughters who graced its precincts.

When the curtain rose at 8 o'clock, the draperies being drawn from in front of the royal throne erected to the left of the stage, a magnificent picture of a Grecian interior was displayed to the eye, and when the Goddess herself, so ably depicted by Mrs. A. G. Curtis, made her entrance, accompanied by her Grecian maids (Mrs. Hapai and Misses Bwaliko, Hapai, Vannatta and Williams) and issued her proclamation, her whole audience bowed in acknowledgment of the influence of her power. A Goddess indeed was she, when seated on her regal dais, and surrounded by the sylph-like figures of her singing girls, one playing upon a Grecian lyre, another upon a Roman harp, while the others hummed or sang the sonnets of a Syrian bard. The royal page (Miss Alice Mumby), a fairy from fairy land, a nymph from a wooded dell, a spright from spirit land, dressed in the bright and brilliant plumage of the cardinal, heralded the approach of each of the Daughters of Fame.

Queen Victoria (Mrs. Gere), bedecked with jewels and decorations, and Martha Washington (Mrs. Severance), a veritable Mother of Her Country, both rulers in different manner of two great nations, plead their respective rights to distinction with equal fervor. St. Cecilia, who caught the music of the angels and breathed it into reeds and pipes, was ably represented by Mrs. Lewis, who, dressed in surplice and bearing the cross of the Virgin Mary, sought the wreath of Fame not for herself but for the art of Music, and likewise Caroline Herschel (Mrs. Moline), who listened to the murmuring of the stars, asked the laurel wreath for stern Science. Hypatia (Mrs. Castendyk), carrying a scroll of her teachings and speaking of the oracles of old, asked the favor for Philosophy. Queen Louise of Prussia (Mrs. Sisson) and Elizabeth Barrett Browning (Miss A. Hill), artistically represented the gentleness of character and the deep learning and lofty sentiments of their respective prototypes. Mrs. Partington (Mrs. Holmes) and her irrepressible son Isaac (Max Tracy); Tabitha Primrose (Mrs. Elliot), with her woman's rights doctrine; Carrie Nation (Miss Potter), who insisted that "the world needed hatching over again," and Mrs. Rorer (Miss Deyo), who baked doughnuts "such as mother used to make," portrayed the humorous side of life, and showed why they each were deserving of reward. Nell Gwynn, the beggar actress, who was the first to fill a woman's character in drama, was portrayed by Mrs. Henry Hayes, whose rendering of the sentimental Juliet, the raving Ophelia and the passionate Rosalind showed remarkable versatility in acting. A very clever bit of acting was that of Mrs. Marsh as Mary, Queen of Scots, in her agonies just prior to her execution by Queen Elizabeth. Mrs. Shaw exemplified a typical shrew in her rendition of Xanthippe, the wife of Socrates, and her anger at her half-naked children (Miss Irene Maby and Master Robbie Rice) was opposed to the pretty picture she displayed in her ragged clothes and streaming hair. Crippled and stooped, eye-spectacled, and becappped, Mother Goose limped forward and pointed out her merits for a seat in the Hall of Fame. So well did Miss F. Scott eliminate her own self, that her portrayal of the character was excellent.

The arrival of Cleopatra in her floating palace, manned by the bronzed figure of an Arabian eunuch (Mr. Jeremiah Malua), and accompanied by her slave attendants, made a beautiful picture. Reclining amid Persian rugs and Tyrian silks in a pavilion of beaten gold, and fanned by silken sails, with the odors of spices burned in brazen censers, the Queen of the Nile, clad in a tissue of cloth-of-gold, brought to the mind the grandeur and opulence of the Oriental world. Her maids of honor (Misses E. Curtis, M. Scott, D. Stewart and C. Westervelt), like the Nereids, were as so many mermaids, who in the outlines of their figures and the sweep of their draperies, breathed forth the air of the Far East. Of Mrs. Itice's rendition of the character and of her conception of the details, unreserved praise is due.

The spectacular entrance of Joan of Arc, swaying the fleur de lis of France aloft, to the stirring accompaniment of the Marseillaise, won her a legion of loyal followers. With valor open, disclosing the sweet and pretty face of the Maid of Orleans, she belied the formidable exterior of her bristling armor. Her shining helmet, her steel cuirass and her greaves and shoes of mail, combined with her dash and spirit, made the interpretation of the character perfect. Miss Venable, in her rendition of the part, embodied the purity and innocence of the shepherd girl with that indomitable spirit of the warrior chieftess, with which Jeanne d'Arc led 10,000 troops victoriously into the face of cannon.

Jenny Lind, dressed in hoop skirt, with fichu or shawl of black lace, and a flounce of like material caught up in festoons with blue bows, stepped forward as from the gilt frame of a miniature. The rendition of "The Last Rose of Summer" by Mrs. Siemsen in this character, in her sweet, clear and velvety voice, brought down the applause of the house. Pocahontas presented another striking picture. The gentle nature underlying the wild and barbarous display of Indian dress, was charmingly carried out by Miss Harriet Hapai. Bernice Pauahi Bishop, the daughter of Hawaii Nei, carrying with her the languor of tropical seas, was represented by Miss Ewaliko. Miriam, the sister of Moses (Miss Lilinoe Hapai) and Harriet Newell (Mrs. McLean) clad in costumes of their time, both exhaled in the pretty pictures they presented, the goodness of the deeds they had done, the former toward the mother of Moses and the latter in her missionary work in far and distant India.

The grand finale consisted in the crowning of that fair daughter most worthy of fame, and the execution and spirit given to it by all was a fitting climax to a piece, where every individual part was well done. The crown was placed upon Elizabeth Barrett Browning, whose learning and genius and great soul, in the opinion of the Goddess, merited the reward of Fame. The chorus work in the song "Sing Ye to the Lord" led by Miss Lilinoe Hapai, and in the final chorus "Throw Open Your Gates, O Valhalla" were excellent. These two pieces were the composition of Mrs. H. S. Lewis for this special occasion, and were beautiful examples of close harmony.

To say that the Daughters of Fame was a success would be putting it mildly. It was a triumph. The persistent energy that must have been exerted in the exactitude as to detail, and in the finish and polish of each one of the participants, command great praise. To Mrs. Levi Lyman, who conceived the idea; to Mrs. Turner who was her principal aid; to Mrs. Rice and Mrs. Balding, who gave their artistic touches to scene and costume; and to each one of the actors, the audience that witnessed last Tuesday night's performance are grateful.

The affair was under the auspices of the Ladies' Social Circle of the First Foreign Church, and they succeeded in taking in about $230, which after the expenses are taken out will go to the Church.

The Leper Bill.

The Leper Bill after having been passed by both houses of the Legislature, and vetoed by the Governor, came up again in House and Senate and by one vote failed to pass over the Governor's veto. The House passed the bill over the Governor's veto by 23 to 2, but the Senate stood 9 to 6, lacking just one vote necessary to override the Governor's veto. The Senators voting against the bill were Paris of Hawaii, Wilcox and Randall of Kauai, Dickey of Maui and Dowsett and Isenberg of Honolulu.

The Governor in vetoing the bill alluded to the Federal appropriation of $150,000 and deemed the bill unnecessary. The bill however carried no appropriation with it, but permitted any person committed to leprosy to have an examination before a Board of Commissioners, with his own family physician present to explain symptoms, and further provided that a person be confined in Honolulu for one year or more as long as there appears chances of recovery. On the failure to override the Governor's veto, Senator Lane introduced a resolution to the same effect as the bill.

THE BANANA INDUSTRY IN DANGER OF RUIN.

H. E. Kelsey Makes Exhaustive Report to the Agricultural Society—At the Mercy of the Banana Trust—Organization the Only Solution—Three Plans Proposed—Fruit Growers Urged to Get Together.

"There can be no doubt," said H. E. Kelsey before the last regular meeting of the Hilo Agricultural Society, "that the United Fruit Co. intends to drive the Hilo bananas out of the market, if they can."

There was a goodly attendance of members present at the regular meeting of the Agricultural Society held on Friday morning, April 21st, to listen to the report of Mr. Kelsey, who has just returned from the coast. While in San Francisco, Mr. Kelsey made a special investigation of the banana situation, and gave to the local agriculturists the benefit of his information.

"My investigations of the banana industry while in San Francisco prove the correctness of the predictions made by members of this society, who from the beginning have urged the necessity of a union among the Hilo growers."

"The United Fruit Company of Boston, who are owners of eighty banana steamers and who imported thirty million bunches of bananas into the United States in the year 1903, has its greedy eye upon us. On the arrival at San Francisco of the Enterprise and every steamer from the Islands bearing bananas, a flood of Bluefields bananas is thrown upon the market at prices covering cost merely of freight. The bananas are brought by steamer from Central America to New Orleans, from thence train load after train load of fruit is shipped to the various markets of the United States. Each fruit train is accompanied by one or two special agents of the Company, keeping the bananas warm in the winter months and maintaining an even temperature in the summer."

"The Bluefields banana is long and slim, the bunches are somewhat larger than the Hilo variety, averaging easily twice the size of the bunches we are shipping. The bunches are always suspended from the tip instead of the base of the stalk. The fruit lies compact, close to the stalk and colors nicely on ripening. The flavor is not as good as that of the Hilo or Honolulu banana, but the difference in taste does not make them any less saleable."

"The salvation of the Hawaiian fruit is its flavor, and I believe it would be a mistake for the island growers to attempt to enter the market with Bluefields bananas. But flavor alone will not save our industry from utter extinction if growers fail to unite."

"The indiscriminate shipping of small bunches and overripe or underripe fruit, together with bad wrapping, rough handling and bruised skins have given the Hilo banana a bad name. On arrival of this fruit some of it has to be thrown overboard because shipped too ripe. Others never ripen because picked too green. Many bunches are too small and unsaleable, not being worth freight. Some bundles have been found to contain several immature bunches or loose hands. These are practically waste and dealers refuse to consider them in consignments."

"The Hilo banana seems to spot black, and sometimes turns from green to black without becoming yellow. No satisfactory explanation of the cause of this has been given. However, only a very small number of bunches are found in this condition. Careful selection of plants and cultivation ought to eradicate their blemish. Farmers should become familiar with the wonderful results obtained by Luther Burbank and government experimental stations, in the improvement of varieties of plant life by careful selection of seed and cultivation. All plants that bear inferior fruit should be dug up and destroyed."

"Until Hilo growers become united and have the selection of saleable fruit, the wrapping and shipment done under the supervision of a capable man, there can be no established position for the Hilo banana in the San Francisco market. The Honolulu bananas have an established reputation in the market and outside dealers can order without seeing the fruit. The fruit arrives in good condition, being well wrapped and cared for. Retailers will not buy Hilo bananas without first seeing them unwrapped."

"Every one seems to realize this situation, except the Hilo banana grower. While in San Francisco, I discussed the situation with F. C. LeBlond, A. C. McKenny, Mr. Tucker and the commission men, and three methods of solution were offered. On my visit, I was accompanied by Mr. Oloff Peterson of Olaua."

"Plan A. Establish a fruit commission house to go into the general fruit business, handling not only banana but other island products. An exclusive banana house would not prosper. This plan would require quarters in the fruit district with a cellar big enough to accommodate three to five thousand bunches of bananas. Such a location would probably be impossible to obtain."

"Plan B. Arrange with some firm now in the business to make them our exclusive agent. This could be accomplished perhaps by forming a partnership or stock company, arranging for the employment of a bookkeeper of our own selection. The business would have to be on a commission basis. No member of the banana trust is permitted to buy fruit outright, even at five cents a bunch. It might be difficult for one firm to dispose of the Hilo output, and outside dealers would make a fight, seeking to boycott the Hilo house by supplying their customers with fruit from other sources. But if our firm should place fruit with other wholesale firms it would probably make necessary a doubled or divided commission."

"Plan C. This is simply an agent at San Francisco to whom the manager of the Hilo organization could ship. He would be kept informed of the probable arrival of the fruit and could arrange with those firms that guaranteed the best prices for selling the fruit before its arrival. Although the commission firms are not permitted to buy, they can agree with a consignor or his representative to obtain a stated price. Had the proposition of the Galli Fruit Company made through Mr. A. C. McKenny been accepted, our growers here would have benefited many thousands of dollars and that Company would have lost money. Under this latter plan, the agent could see that the fruit is carefully unloaded, note its condition and see after its proper delivery. He should be held accountable for returns and therefore would be careful to place fruit with reliable firms. If he were empowered to collect returns, he should be required to give bonds. Such an agent might place fruit with retailers at San Jose, Los Angeles and perhaps at Seattle and Portland."

"With complete organization, having an inspector and an agent at San Francisco, the banana business of Hilo would become profitable. But as long as individual growers ship Hilo bananas, just so long will the Hilo banana business be uncertain and without an established footing in the market."

"San Francisco alone absorbs 30,000 bunches of bananas per month. If we can reach a production that will justify two fruit steamers a month, and United Fruit Company finds it cannot longer dis-

"We are old friends, this bottle and I. We have known each other for over sixty years. When a boy I was always taking cold, but a few doses of this medicine would at once set me right. When a young man I had a weak throat and weak lungs. My friends feared some lung trouble, but greatly strengthened my throat, cleared up my voice, and took away the tendency for every cold to go to my lungs. Last year I had a bad attack of la grippe. The only medicine I took was from this bottle, and I came out all right. I know it's good, too, for asthma, bronchitis, pneumonia, croup. There are many substitutes and imitations. Beware of them! Be sure you get Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Two sizes. Large and small bottles.

Cost of Living.

The average has increased steadily since 1896.

The Department of Commerce has recently made an exhaustive inquiry into the money spent for food by families of small or moderate means in this country, the investigation being confined to the households of wage-workers and salaried men earning not over $1,200 a year.

As a result, it was ascertained that the average income of such families was $827, and that the average expenditure for all purposes was $768. The amount spent for food was $327, or about forty-two per cent. The average cost of food per family in 1896 was only $296. In 1905 it was $344.

Every householder knows how the cost of food has gone up during the last few years, but it is interesting to have definite figures on the subject. It seems that this important item of family expenditure reaches its highest in 1902; when it was eleven per cent above the average for the ten years from 1890 to 1899 inclusive. The year of the lowest prices was 1896, when food cost sixteen per cent less than in 1902. These data were obtained by taking the prices of 814 retail merchants for a period covering the last thirteen years.

It was found that the average family devoted fourteen per cent of its expenditure to clothing, a little over five per cent to fuel and lights, and three and a-half per cent for furniture and utensils. For tobacco one and four-tenths per cent was spent.

The increased cost of food is offset to a considerable extent by better wages. In years of low prices, wages are low and employment irregular, whereas in years of high prices wages are high and employment steady.

When a Man Starves.

For the first two days through which a strong and healthy man is doomed to exist upon nothing his sufferings are perhaps more acute than in the remaining stages; he feels an inordinate, unspeakable craving at the stomach night and day. The mind runs upon beef, bread and other substances, but still, in a great measure, the body retains its strength. On the third and fourth days, but especially on the fourth, this incessant craving gives place to a sinking and weakness of the stomach, accompanied by nausea.

On the fifth day his cheeks appear hollow and sunken, his body attenuated, his color is ashy pale and his eyes wild, glassy and cannibalistic.

The sixth day brings with it increased suffering, although the pangs of hunger are lost in an overpowering languor and sickness. The head becomes dizzy, the ghosts of well-remembered dinners pass in hideous procession through the mind.

The seventh day comes, bringing increasing lassitude and further prostration of strength. The mind wanders.

The Coldest Place in the World.

Werchesjansk, Siberia, is considered the northern pole of cold, or place of greatest cold in the northern hemisphere. A temperature of 69.8 degrees centigrade below zero (the freezing point of water) has been observed there, but the Russian painter, Borissow, has found a temperature of 70 degrees centigrade below zero registered on a minimum thermometer left by an Austrian exploring expedition in 1872 in the straits of Matotchkin, Nova Zembla. Another maximum thermometer registered 24 degrees above zero centigrade as the highest temperature since 1872. Apparently the place has a good title to be regarded as the pole of cold.

Three out of every twenty children that are born to British parents in these islands of the blest do not live to the age of twelve months. Short of the wholesale extermination which was ordered by Herod it would be difficult to conceive a more ruthless massacre of the innocents. And—Rachel is not weeping for her children.—Onlooker.

courage Hilo growers, it will fine it unprofitable to keep up the flooding process.

"Organization is imperative. Fruit growers at the coast have been compelled to organize. The longer we delay here the worse for us. Organization is sure to bring better prices; better prices means larger production and larger production means better steamer service.

"We ship 7,000 bunches a month. At a tax of five cents a bunch, a fund of $350 per month would be raised. This would pay the salary of a good man at each end, and to get a capable, trustworthy man with business ability ought not to be a difficult matter.

"With the shipment of 7,000 bunches per month means $3,150 per month to encourage steamer service and $700 per month to the Hilo Railroad and draymen. With organization and proper handling, it would mean $3,000 per month, or $36,000 per year for growers, which will be spent among laborers, artisans and merchants and upbuild the entire community. But Hilo ought to ship 40,000 bunches a month, which would insure two steamers a month, $4,000 for railroad and teamsters and probably $16,000 per month for growers and laborers. An earnest effort should be made to acquaint people of all occupations (and especially those of no occupation,) of the immense benefits and advantages that may be expected from the proper development of the banana and other fruit industries in the Islands. All this can be accomplished if the banana and fruit growers will unite in an organized effort to improve conditions and encourage the industry."

A Safe Speculation.

If you have an attack of rheumatism and Chamberlain's Pain Balm gets you back to work in a few days, will it not pay for itself several times over? There is no need of suffering from rheumatism for a month or six weeks incurring the expenses of a large doctor's bill, when a few applications of this liniment, costing but a small amount will cure you. THE BANANA TRADE.

S. S. Enterprise Takes Away Big Cargo of Bananas.

When the S. S. Enterprise sailed out of the harbor yesterday afternoon, she carried about seven thousand five hundred (7,500) bunches of bananas for San Francisco. This stands among the largest consignments of bananas shipped from this port on this vessel. One year ago in March the shipment was 2104 bunches, April 4247 bunches, June 5283 bunches, July 4230 bunches, August 5445 bunches, September 4893 bunches, October 5884 bunches, November 6325 bunches, January 5868 bunches, February 5561 bunches and March 6316 bunches. As a general rule these shipments go to about 50 consignees and are from an equal number of shippers. The unloading of a big cargo like this to a great number of consignees, makes it almost impossible to obtain good prices.

The Enterprise also took away 30,409 bags of sugar from Hilo, valued at $153,926.24, and from Honolulu 18,050 bags of refined sugar and 1505 bags of raw sugar, valued at $110,289.00. Decides to Organize a Fruit Growers Organization.

At the regular meeting of the Hilo Board of Trade held last Friday evening, the report of Mr. H. E. Kelsey on the banana and fruit trade was read. This committee consists of J. W. Mason as chairman, and L. A. Andrews, H. Vicars, L. Turner and H. E. Kelsey. The recommendations of the Board of Trade was, that the organization here should handle all the bunches of the planters; that they would examine them and if they came up to the standard, that each bunch was to receive the stamp of the association; to establish representatives at important centers to handle the bananas; and that a levy of five cents per bunch be charged at the outset to cover the expenses.

Spring Fever is considered a joke—when someone else has it—but the condition is in reality no joke. Spring Fever is one of the terms applied to that general relaxed condition of the system which is so common at this season. It indicates, as a rule, a loss of vitality and a disordered condition of the blood. An effective remedy should be promptly used, because this condition readily becomes chronic. Our

INDUSTRIALISM HAS SEALED RUSSIA'S FATE.

The Third of a Series of Articles by Dr. Nicholas Russel—The Establishment of Industries and Manufactories—The Laboring Class Assert Their Rights—The Growth of Their Power.

PART III.

In the last issue I have exhibited the foundations of power, the historical prerogatives and vested rights of the Russian crown and its bureaucratic henchmen. Before we look at the situation from the point of view of the future, of modern political and social ideals, we must throw a glance at another form of the past, the natural evolutionary past of Russia and find out whether the continuance of bureaucratic monarchy is justified from that standpoint.

Those who have followed the progress of political and social ideas for the last half of the century must know that form of government; political forms are merely a superstructure on the economical foundation. As such they must intimately correspond to their respective foundations in shape and principle. Every stage of economic evolution has its own political superstructure different from others in essence and character, although they may pass under the same absolute and indefinite names of monarchies and republics.

Up to twenty or twenty-five years ago, Russia was yet in a period of natural economy, a condition, when every man provides for his own needs himself, raises his food stuffs, manufactures cloth, shoes, tools and implements. In this period of development, exchange hardly existed at all, and the medium of exchange—money played but a very limited part. Russian industries, manufacturing industries, the machine production of goods have developed only for the last quarter of the century. It was Mr. Witte, at the head of the department of finance, the only talented minister of the Czar, who in ten years succeeded in increasing through bold financial reforms Russian industries ten fold. Thanks to him, Russia became an industrial country, supplying her share of goods to the world market. Through development of industries, she passed from the period of natural economy into the industrial, manufacturing period, the period of exchange. This economical transformation has immediately resulted in the corresponding changes in social superstructure. New classes have been created; bourgeois, or as we call them, "captains of industry" and industrial proletarians. These proved to be something entirely different from gentry, peasantry and commercial classes already in existence. The new classes did not find any room and standing provided for them by the official codes of the empire. Besides, they happened to be more intelligent, exacting, clamorous, noisy and self asserting. Conscious of this power, one side in their wealth, another in numbers, they began to yell for rights. The same subversive ideas that we, students and professionals, have vainly tried to spread among the people for fifty years, at once have found eager and attentive listeners. The demand for forbidden literature, partly smuggled from abroad, partly manufactured clandestinely at home, grew from year to year. Secret circles and societies having honey-combed Russia, the sleeping giant awoke. In erecting the industries and the new dissatisfied classes, Mr. Witte did it at the expense of agricultural industries. The high protective tariff in favor of manufacturers and industrials was a new tax for the gentry and peasants, who, without that, hardly could keep the two ends together. Ruin, actual ruin stared them in the face, and they could not help but join the dissatisfied crowd. Hence, a general row!

The bureaucratic paternalism that to some extent could satisfy the country during the period of natural economy proved altogether unfit and inadequate for the new, industrial conditions. Life became too complicated, various interests too much entangled for the brain capacities of the 40,000 chiefs of the bureau. They had lost the control of the people already before the war. The war complications have put a final seal to their fate. A modern, industrial state requires more efficient and more complicated political superstructure, another form of government, a better driver. The present alternative is whether the vehicle alone may be sacrificed.

In carefully nursing the manufacturing industries and machine production, the Russian government and Mr. Witte have followed conscientiously the wise rules of their double-entry book-keeping system, have faithfully stuck to "pure business principles." They meant well. What they meant was to increase the nation's wealth and make it economically independent of neighboring industrial countries. They did not foresee and did not expect the vast consequences and results so disastrous to the bureaucratic ship and her sovereign master. They did not know they have been digging under their own seats, preparing the grave for themselves and their dear system. They did not know that the modern state is an organic unit that cannot advance with one side only, that other sides and parts of the body invariably have to follow. While hunting for students and revolutionists, and slaughtering the people on the streets by the thousand, the Czar with his uncles and cousins, his mother and sisters-in-law do not realize till this moment who the real nihilist, reformer and revolutionist is. They still keep Mr. Witte as president of the council of ministers and consult him. They do not know that he, though unconsciously and unintentionally, was the main moving revolutionary spring, that all the rest of the socialists and disturbers are but logical consequences, minute, tiny, numberless wheels of the machine set in motion by Mr. Witte.

It is to Mr. Witte that belongs the honor of having made the revolution in Russia. What three generations of nihilists could not accomplish in fifty years, he did in ten. What a derision of fate!

Something similar happened on this side of the globe with high protection of industries. It was well meant—to increase wealth and prosperity, especially of some classes. It resulted in the creation of trusts on one side and of an organized army of labor on the other. The consequences of the double entry policy may prove as disastrous to our benevolent industrial paternalism as they were for the bureaucratic paternalism in Russia. Besides, the modern man is a queer customer. He positively refuses to be governed. He imagines that he is capable of governing himself. He does not want his legs to be chopped off to fit the length of King Ogg's Ledger-bed. He advances the subversive, heretical idea that one man can as little think and act for another, and as little determine another one's course and behavior, as he can eat, drink, sleep or walk for him. Strange times, indeed!

WEAKNESS

When you are weak, nervous, and all run down, everything seems to go wrong. Ayer's Sarsaparilla will build you up, make your nerves strong, and give you pure, rich blood. Here is what a nurse of large experience says about it.

Mrs. E. B. Chappell, Stowell, Victoria, sends us her photograph, and writes: "I have been a nurse for thirty-five years, and I take great pleasure in recording my experience with Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's Pills. I have used these medicines in different parts of the world, both for myself and my patients. I have had great success with them, especially in cases of nervous prostration, impure blood, skin diseases, and weakening illnesses in general. I most heartily recommend these medicines to all sufferers from any of the above-named distressing complaints."

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

There are many imitation Sarsaparillas. Be sure you get "Ayer's." Ayer's Pills cure constipation. Sugar-coated, mild, but effective. Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass., U. S. A.
