FORT STREET IMPROVEMENTS ABANDONED.

The Minister of the Interior Will Request the Next Legislature for an Appropriation to Finish the Work.

It was announced at the Interior Department that the matter of Fort street improvements will necessarily have to lie over until the next session of the Legislature.

The appropriation made to carry out the widening of this street has been exhausted and the Minister of the Interior will request more funds.

Two sections of Fort street, from King to Hotel, and from Hotel to Beretania streets, are not as wide as the regulation thoroughfares. The department has accomplished considerable already in the way of satisfying the claims of those people whose property was affected by the widening of the street. Land has been given in exchange for the road damages wherever possible.

On the Ewa side of Fort street, between King and Hotel, every claim has been settled save that of the Old Fellows' Society, which owns the brick building on the corner. James Campbell has erected his new block back on the new street line. The Wickham building and Tregloan block were originally built on the proper line.

On the Waikiki side of the streets, the Government has yet to satisfy the claims of the owners of the McIntyre building, the block in which Jordan's store is located and the May building. From Egan's store to the corner of Hotel street the street line is now properly adjusted.

Between Hotel and Beretania streets the Mott-Smith building on the Waikiki side, has been set back to the new line. The claims of Mr. Fisher, who owns the property where Poppleton's bakery is located, and the Clark property have been satisfied. The building in which are located the Criterion saloon, Criterion barber shop, Wright's blacksmith establishment, the Catholic cathedral and the Bishop estate, has yet to be adjusted on this side of the street.

On the Ewa side the Pantheon saloon premises and Widemann property must yet be attended to.

The Government has affected a compromise with the Cartwright and Douglas properties.

AT DEATH'S SUDDEN CALL

BRITISH COMMISSIONER HAWES DIES IN HILO.

Career of the Commissioner—Organized the Japanese Marine Force—His Duties in Central Africa.

Captain Albert George Sidney Hawes, British Commissioner to Hawaii, died in Hilo at 12:30 o'clock Friday morning from a carbuncle.

The Kinau arrived with the body shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon. British Vice Consul Thomas Rain Walker, Charles Gay and Miss Elise Gay of Kauai were on board.

A large number of people, friends of the deceased, were gathered on the wharf when the steamer docked. A guard from the Hawaiian Government and from the British ship Penguin bore the remains to the British consulate at Palama, where they will probably lie in state.

British Vice Consul Walker announced to the press shortly after the arrival of the boat that the funeral would be held either Monday or Tuesday, and in all probability on the afternoon of the latter day. Although the slightest details for the funeral arrangements have not been made, it is thought that the late Commissioner will be buried with military honors. The First Regiment may march in the funeral cortege.

BRITISH COMMISSIONER A. G. S. HAWES.

Commissioner Hawes departed from Honolulu on the Kinau sailing on July 9th. He was on a tour of Hawaii and Maui and more particularly the coffee plantations in Kona and Puna on the big island.

On the trip to Hilo, Commissioner Hawes was badly bruised up as a result of a fall in the captain's cabin of the boat. There was a rough choppy sea on and the Kinau rolled and pitched violently. On this occasion the Commissioner narrowly escaped being thrown overboard, but was saved by the timely assistance of Admiral Beardslee.

Upon arrival at Hilo Commissioner Hawes was compelled to lie in bed until his bruises healed. He was taken to Waiakae, where he was at the time of his death.

Very soon after his confinement at Waiakae a bad case of carbuncle broke out on his neck. It gave him intense suffering and two weeks ago last evening the attending physicians entertained no hopes for his recovery.

He rallied the morning following however, and had been slowly convalescing since that time up to sudden change shortly previous to his death. Each steamer from Hilo brought encouraging news of his condition, and the last report previous to that of his demise stated that while he was not recovering as fast as his friends would like to note, still he was surely on the mend. He had been in less pain than for several days past.

Vice Consul Walker took passage on the Kinau last week for Hilo. Miss Elise Gay, to whom Commissioner Hawes was engaged to be married in September, and her brother, Charles Gay, arrived from Kauai in time to board this boat.

Since his confinement the Commissioner has been very tenderly cared for by Mrs. George and Mrs. McGregor Deacon of Pepeekeo.

Mr. Hawes was born in England over fifty years ago. He entered the Royal Marines in December of 1839 and retired ten years later.

In 1871 Mr. Hawes was appointed by the Japanese Government to organize the marine force of their navy, and for thirteen years he took charge of this department, and to his excellent work is due the efficiency of Japanese marine corps at the present time. During his stay in Japan Mr. Hawes was very prominent in society of Tokyo and his parties attained much celebrity, especially was he famed for his "rose festival," when his gardens blossomed with the gorgeous blooms, which had been fostered and some times retarded in order that all should blaze forth on the day. The "rose festival" was a feature of Tokyo society.

Leaving Japan in January, 1884, Mr.

Hawes returned to England and after a short rest was appointed Consul for the territories of the African kings and chiefs in the districts adjacent to Lake Nyassa, January, 1885. In fulfilling his duties, Mr. Hawes had to undergo considerable hardships and contracted African fever, which never left his system, and from which he periodically suffered to the end of his life. While in Africa he proved himself to be a keen sportsman and had a fund of anecdotes about hairbreadth escapes by flood and field. His rooms were decorated with many trophies of the chase.

So well did he do his work in the interior that Mr. Hawes was detached for special duty at Zanzibar from December 30, 1888, to June, 1889. The duty was in connection with suppressing the slave trade and the position an extremely responsible one, as the whole of the East African seaboard was under his direct orders. Having completed the work Mr. Hawes was appointed Consul for the Society Islands, October 1, 1889, a position he filled with much satisfaction to his countrymen in the South Seas, and on the retirement of James Hay Wodehouse he was appointed Commissioner and Consul General to these islands. He arrived here in August of 1894.

VINEYARD STREET.

The Government has a big gang of men at work on Vineyard street, between Fort and Nuuanu. The land is being filled in with dirt and stone. The foundation for the bridge across Puna stream has been made. All of Vineyard street will be open in September.

WILL BE READY SOON.

Contractor Craig is pushing the work on the Ballou residence on Judd street. The carpenters will have finished in another week, when the painters will take charge of the building. The residence will be ready for occupancy in another month.

LAHAINA NOTES.

A central telephone exchange for Lahaina subscribers is now an accomplished fact and they appreciate the innovation.

Recent additions to Lahaina society are Mr. Jack Gannon, Mrs. Gannon and Miss Gannon. Miss Ward and Miss Ostrom of Kohala are also visiting for a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Rosecrans at Lahainaluna.

Mr. Dickenson, who is now camping out on historic ground—Mt. Retreat—2000 feet above sea level, advises seekers after delightful air and plenty of it to visit him at his retreat. All welcome and always at home. Captain Ahlborn proposes building a driveway there soon, but don't wait for that.

CHINESE ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Cheung Wo, a Chinese who is booked to sail on the next steamer for China, was found in an alley off Maunakea street early this morning with his throat cut, and may die.

From the evidence in the hands of the police it is believed that he lost his money gambling and attempted suicide while suffering from despondency.

It is always gratifying to receive testimonials for Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy, and when the endorsement is from a physician it is especially so. "There is no more satisfactory or effective remedy than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," writes Dr. R. E. Robey, physician and pharmacist, of Olney, Mo., and as he has used the Remedy in his own family and sold it in his drug store for six years, he should certainly know. PATROLMEN UNDER ARREST

FOUR OF CAPTAIN RENKIN'S MEN IN JAIL.

Interrupted in a Drunken Revel, They Unmercifully Beat Two Natives—A Serious Affair.

Mounted Patrolman Gillis, Hewitt, Conley and Jim Cornwall are behind the bars at the City Prison with charges against them of such a serious nature that a sojourn on the reef is in prospect for the entire quartet. According to the information now possessed by Marshal Brown, Gillis and his comrades after going on duty last night repaired to a house on Punchbowl street where they met several native women and started in on an all-night revel. Two natives, Kekaha and Kukalahewa, relatives of the women, entered the place about 2 o'clock this morning, and objected to the sports. They were set upon by the officers, beaten unmercifully and finally placed under arrest and taken to the police station.

Hewitt and Conley took the men to the station and preferred charges of assault and battery against them. The officers were clearly under the influence of liquor and the natives so badly beaten about the head that the captain of the watch grew suspicious and telephoned for Captain Parker. While they were waiting for the senior captain the women with whom the patrolmen had been drinking entered the station and told the whole story. Captain Parker on his arrival found the natives so seriously injured that he summoned Dr. Emerson, who dressed the wounds temporarily and sent the men to the hospital.

Marshal Brown, after a brief investigation of the matter, decided to place the patrolmen under arrest. They were ordered to appear before him at 9 o'clock this morning, and on arriving at the station were promptly placed under arrest on charges of assault and battery on Kekaha and Kukalahewa. Each man was relieved of his star and locked up in a separate cell.

The Marshal is exceedingly angry over the affair. Some of the officers under arrest have been in trouble before, notably Gillis. Hewitt and Conley have been on the force about two years, but Cornwall and Gillis only a few months. The men went on duty at 9 o'clock last night. As nearly as the Marshal can learn they met at the Punchbowl-street house about 10 a. m., when the trouble occurred. After the natives had been beaten the patrolmen realized the predicament they were in, and arrested the men to cover up their tracks, telling a cock and bull story about being set upon by the natives and finding it necessary to use their clubs in self defense.

The natives are in the hospital, suffering from several severe scalp wounds and contusions. It is stated that one of the patrolmen broke his club over the head of one of the natives and then jabbed the poor fellow with the broken, razed stick.

At noon Hewitt, Gillis and Cornwall had been admitted to bail in the sum of $100 each, but Conley still lingered in durance vile.

A cordial welcome is extended to friends to visit the camp on Sunday.

THE MILK THIEVES.

Captain Bowers of the Merchant's Patrol is discomfited over the dismissal in the Police Court of larceny charges against Joseph Solon, a sailor, and a blue jacket from the Penguin by the name of Thornton, whom he accused of stealing milk. The Captain has been trying to put a stop to milk thieving, but if people from whom the cans are stolen refuse to prosecute, the Captain does not see his way clear to breaking up the practice. As the can was the property of a saloon keeper, he thought it might injure his business to prosecute, so he refused to carry on the case.

RECEIVING CONSIDERATION NOW.

Attorney A. G. M. Robertson closed his arguments before the Supreme Court late yesterday afternoon in support of the Government's position on the income tax law. The cases have been submitted to the Court for determination.

"WHEELER & WILSON."

The name "Wheeler & Wilson" is a household word and the machine a necessity. It is the same as everything else handled by L. B. Kerr. The best to be had.

MURDEROUS CELESTIALS

GANG OF CHINESE HACK AND STONE THEIR LUNA.

Luna Thrown Into a Ditch As Dead—Rescued by Japanese Long After—Five Arrests Made Already.

By the Mikahala this morning came the news of a heathenish attack by Chinese laborers upon a luna employed on the Lahaina plantation.

The news is of the briefest and is sent from Lahaina by the Star's correspondent. He says:

"One of the lunas on the plantation was mobbed by his Chinese gang at Kannapali yesterday. After splitting his head open with hoes and threw him into a ditch as dead."

"There was a spark of life left and a Japanese found him and carried him off the field some time after. The poor fellow is still alive, but very low, and his chances are very slight for recovery. Five Chinamen are in jail as the result of this heathenish attack."

The name of the unfortunate luna is not known. Marshal Brown received no word of the affair by the Mikahala. His mail is on the Kinan, due this afternoon. The full particulars are expected by this boat.

CYCLOMERE AWA.

At Cyclomere Park this morning a thirty-foot net was dropped into the lake for the purpose of dragging it for fish. In the space of about ten minutes nearly one hundred awas and mullet, averaging ten inches long, were ensnared in the net without being moved from the original position.

NAME THE WINNER.

The St. Louis College team is now well in the lead for the season's pennant.

THE BIG BAND CONCERT.

The attendance at the band concert at the Hawaiian Hotel last evening was quite large. The amalgamation of the Philadelphia and Hawaiian bands made over forty pieces under one organization.

The music was in perfect harmony. Bandmaster Grosskurzt of the Navy led the first part. Ivanovici's Danube Waves and the Sweet Old Songs were warmly applauded. In the second part led by Bandmaster Berger, Sousa's International Congress was executed.

THE OLD LIME KILN.

Katie Putnam and her company will play "The Old Lime Kiln" this evening. This new play is in four acts. It is intensely interesting, and has a number of highly sensational incidents, with unusually strong climaxes at the end of each act. There is new scenery, showing the old lime kiln, Yellowstone Park, a perfectly working geyser and other realistic scenes. Miss Putnam has an excellent chance to display her versatility.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy always affords prompt relief. For sale by all druggists and dealers. Benson, Smith & Co., wholesale agents for the Hawaiian Islands.

TURN ON THE X-RAYS.

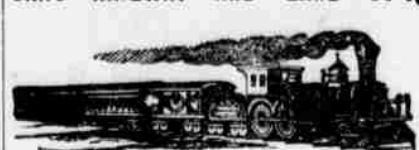

This is an age of light. In utter defiance of the mossy old theories, we now photograph the coins inside of a pocketbook and the bones in living bodies. Similarly the light of intelligence shines upon certain antiquated notions in medicine. The intellectual X-Rays have shown the fallacy of the idea that sick people had no alternative but to take nauseating doses of cod liver oil—or die. The wonderful success of disproves all that. Here is a medicine made from Fresh Cod Livers, containing to the full all the virtues of Pure Cod Liver Oil—the very essence and potency of it—without a sign to indicate its presence; yet it is here to nourish, strengthen, build up and cure. In Scrofula, Fevers, Bowel Complaints, Lung and Blood diseases, it acts as sunlight and sweet air do on dying vegetation. Combined in it are the Extracts of Malt and Wild Cherry, and other constituents which contribute to the noble result. Every dose effective. Palatable as honey. Sold by chemists everywhere.

WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION

HOSPITAL COLLEGE OF MEDICINE.
MESSRS. H. K. WAMPOLE & CO., Gentlemen:—The continued use of your "WAMPOLE'S TASTELESS PREPARATION OF PURE COD LIVER OIL" in my practice, during the past two years, convinces me that it is the most palatable, least nauseating and best preparation now on the market. As a rule, where indicated, the results have been all one could expect. Children take it without hesitancy. The most delicate stomachs seem to readily assimilate it. Entering as it does, into combination with the Hypophosphates and many of the iron preparations, thus enabling us to give a true reconstructive in every sense. I am, yours very truly, Thousands Join in a Demonstration Superior to Those Given to Statesmen—The Whole Town Turned Out.

Tom Sharkey, the pugilist, who is well known in Honolulu, was given a reception on his arrival at Dundalk, Ireland, his birthplace, that will become a part of the history of County Louth. The Conservative newspapers of Ireland gave columns to the event and state that it was a greater demonstration than any given within the recollection to prominent statesmen, and further, there was no doubt as to its spontaneity.

The Dundalk Herald of July 3d says: "Here was an exhibition of public feeling which went to show that the man who punches his fellow man, or who has the courage to be punched, is held in far higher estimation, by the working class at least, than the ranting spouters who appear from time to time as political regenerators of their country—with their oily, untruthful tongues."

"A Prime Minister might envy the reception Sharkey got in his native town on Tuesday night. The word went abroad during the day that he was coming by the 7:15 o'clock train from Newry, and approaching that hour a continuous stream of men and boys was flowing towards the station, while along the road were numerous representatives of the other sex. The station approaches were crowded, and a number of enthusiasts bought tickets so as to be on the platform to welcome the returning exile. As the train drew up to the station these made a rush for the carriage from which the pugilist made his exit; and he stood a fair chance of being torn in small pieces by his demonstrative admirers. Not in all his contests with Fitzsimmons and Maher and Choyinski and the rest did he receive much rougher usage. Presently he emerged from the press and came along proudly escorted by J. Gosling and by his brothers and a cheering crowd. When he got to the station door he met the same reception, only that this time he had to fight his way through hundreds of enthusiasts. By and by he got on a car on which mounted also his brothers, mother and sisters. The Emmet Band, which was in waiting, struck up "See, the Conquering Hero," and the whole assemblage got in motion. The excitement was tremendous. Men and boys lined the way and sat on the walls and fences and cheered themselves hoarse. They tried to carry the pugilist, but his weight is not a trifle, and he induced them to let him ride on the car.

"He seemed delighted with his reception, and said a modest word or two of thanks to the crowd. Speaking is not his forte, and he did not detain the procession. Along the way his tall hat and frock coat and other marks of prosperity and prominence—and they sit very well upon him—attracted the admiring comment of the crowd. Sharkey's first visit was to the scene of his birth—the snug thatched cottage in Hill street, where he first saw the light, and where his parents still reside. It was typical of the good fellow that this should be the Mecca of his transatlantic journey. A big carload of trunks went on to Bullock's Hotel, but their owner spent the first hour or two amidst the scenes of his boyhood, talking to his old neighbors, fighting his battles over again and enjoying the sweets of home coming just like any big boy fresh home from school. And was not Hill street proud of him? It was frantic. Tar barrels blazed on the bridge and joy overflowed the place and brightened its most squalid recesses. By and by he went to visit a married sister, Mrs. Lappin, at the Quays, and everywhere along the streets he received renewed ovations from enthusiastic admirers."

REMARKABLE CURE OF CHRONIC DIARRHOEA.

In 1862, when I served my country as a private in Company A, 167th Pennsylvania Volunteers, I contracted chronic diarrhoea. It has given me a great deal of trouble ever since. I have tried a dozen different medicines and several prominent doctors without any permanent relief. Not long ago a friend sent me a sample bottle of Chamberlain's Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after that I bought and took a 50-cent bottle; and now I can say that I am entirely cured. I cannot be thankful enough to you for this great Remedy, and recommend it to all suffering veterans. If in doubt write me. Yours gratefully, HENRY STEINBERGER, Allentown, Pa. Sold by all druggists and dealers. Benson, Smith & Co., wholesale agents for the Hawaiian Islands.

A FUNNY LETTER.

Every family in the city which numbers among its members juveniles who believe implicitly in Santa Claus, will appreciate this letter by a little tot who has just mastered the art of printing out her letters.

"Dear Santa Claus:
"Give me a doll with red shoes, a stove and a doll buggy and sum candy and a new brother and two bottles of Rainier Beer."

"When asked why she wanted Santa Claus to give her two bottles of Rainier Beer, the little writer replied: "Because papa and mama say it is the nicest beer made." Criterion Saloon, phone 783.

Sarsaparilla Sense.

Any sarsaparilla is sarsaparilla. True. So any tea is tea. So any flour is flour. But grades differ. You want the best. It's so with sarsaparilla. There are grades. You want the best. If you understood sarsaparilla as well as you do tea and flour it would be easy to determine. But you don't. How should you?

When you are going to buy a commodity whose value you don't know, you pick out an old established house to trade with, and trust their experience and reputation. Do so when buying sarsaparilla.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla has been on the market fifty years. Your grandfather used Ayer's. It is a reputable medicine. There are many sarsaparillas. But only one Ayer's. IT CURES.

T. J. KING, agent Spaulding-Robbins Disc Plow, Honolulu.
Dear Sir: I have one of your TWO DISC PLOWS at work on my ranch at Waihee, and am pleased to report that it gives me the fullest satisfaction.
In two days, with four Hawaiian mules, I can do as much work with your implement as I can do in seven days when using eight mules or twelve oxen, with a mould board plow, and the pulverization is much better when using the disc.
In the rocky ground your plow either rolls over the roots or cuts through them, and we find it unnecessary to sharpen the discs, which scour perfectly and were set at such an angle that friction with the earth makes them self-sharpeners. I am, dear sir, yours very truly,

Electric Company.
The cleanest, brightest and really in the long run, the cheapest and best light for use in the family residence, is the incandescent electric light. Safe; nothing could be safer. A few days ago a prominent gentleman of Honolulu came rushing down to the office of the Electric Company and said:
"Give me figures for wiring my house, and I want it done at once; no more lamps for me.
Last night a lamp tipped over and it came so near setting fire to the house and burning my children and I take no more risks."
This is the sentiment of quite a number in the past few weeks, who have ordered their houses fitted with the perfect light.
Just think it over and make up your mind that you want the best and safest light; send for the Hawaiian Electric Company and tell them what you want.

WILL HE EVER RETURN?

ANDREE AND COMPANIONS NOW
FLYING IN MID AIR.

The Aerial Navigator Apprehended
no Danger Once Over the Sea—Realizes His Responsibility.

Professor Andree, the Swedish engineer, who with several companions, went up in a balloon from the north of Norway, bound for the North Pole, less than three weeks ago, made a solemn vow that he would not return unless he accomplished something.

It will be remembered that Andree,
when he made his ascent, was in danger of being dashed against the overhanging rocks above Tromsø. The correspondent asserts that on account of these high cliffs, which were in the very path of his intended route of ascent, he feared that he could not rise high enough and that therefore he purposely left his drag rope behind.

Andree frequently referred in ominous terms to the dangers of the departure from the balloon shed. He argued that on account of the unfavorable environs he would not venture to start in a temperate wind, but that he would have to be blown directly north by almost a gale. He thought, too, that it might be necessary for him to throw most of his ballast overboard. Andree often said once he found himself over the open sea he had no immediate danger to fear. He had no dread of the possible bursting of his balloon. The only difficulty he thought would be a continuous season of rain.

The aeronaut spoke feeling on July 8th of the high responsibility resting upon him, not only on account of the dangers threatening his own life, but also those of his companions. He said that he was often assailed by dark forebodings, and that for this reason he could only proceed with the greatest prudence and that he would not hurl himself and his party headlong upon avoidable perils.

He did not think of returning without having accomplished something.
This, according to his opinion, was a duty, as it was not only a question of his own honor, but that of his country.
Andree said that he would not publish anything without first having consulted his friends, and he would first of all serve his fatherland, as to it, he felt that he owed greater obligations. Three days after this conversation the Swedish engineer was flying in midair above the ice regions of the Arctic circle.

WILL ROW NO MORE.
Famous Stroke Oar of Toledo Now a Helpless Paralytic.

L. W. Hunter of Toledo, a bookkeeper, 41 years old, is at the City hospital in St. Louis paying the penalty of an overdevotion to athletics in his younger days. Long years—20 of them—have passed since the safety line of exertion for his fine athletic frame was passed, and he had thought that he for one had escaped the inevitable penalty of a violated physical law, but his Nemesis has surely followed him, and at last has laid him prostrate, a paralytic, on a cot in a charity hospital, among strangers.

Twenty-eight years ago Hunter, an athletic young fellow, fond of sports generally, was the stroke in the rowing crew of the Toledo Athletic association, rowing in all the races of the Northwestern association, for seven years. At last came the great race of 1875. The Toledos held the championship, but its possession was threatened by the Detroit Invincibles, a team that had developed a wonderful stroke and power.
Just as they pulled into the stretch
the Toledos' captain said a few words in a tense tone, calling on his men to save the day at any cost. A spurt was made, which sent the Toledos half a length ahead of the Invincibles, but in doing so one of the Toledos collapsed.
Hunter saw him drop his oars and saw that to win some one must do the work of two men. He did so, and sent the boat over the line six seconds ahead of the rival Invincibles and saved the championship.

But in that last awful spurt that saved the day brave Hunter almost tore himself to pieces, badly straining his side and back. For a time his condition was precarious. Then he recovered, and though he never rowed again all evil effects seemed to have disappeared.

Two years ago he suffered a slight stroke of paralysis. The intervening time he has spent in Hot Springs, Ark., in a vain attempt to recuperate. Recently, fancying himself better, he went to St. Louis to obtain employment.
Soon after his arrival he suffered another stroke, this time a serious one. He was taken to the City hospital. The physician in charge, feeling sure that the condition was superinduced by a strain in former years, began to question him, and thus his story came out. Hunter could hardly believe the doctor when he told him that his present helpless condition is the direct result of the overtaxing of his system in the boat race so many years ago.—St. Louis Republic.

THE WING OF DEATH.

The death of British Commissioner Hawes will cast a gloom not only over his own countrymen, but over all who came in contact with him, regardless of nationality or politics, for Mr. Hawes was essentially a popular man. Moreover, his death coming, as it does, on the very eve as it were of his marriage, seems more tragic and gloomy than even death usually is.

During the three years of his residence here, Mr. Hawes has won troops of friends. His relations with the Government have ever been of the most friendly character, even when presenting claims for those who thought themselves aggrieved. He ever acted in a manner that would assist, and not hamper, the Government. The officials of the Government will feel deeply the loss of an honorable gentleman.

As the representative of Great Britain, Mr. Hawes always maintained the dignity of his high position, and dispensed a lavish hospitality to all his countrymen regardless of social standing. To be an Englishman, was to have a passport to Colonel Hawes' heart.

Few here will forget the princely manner in which the Commissioner celebrated the jubilee of Her Majesty; his pride in worthily giving expression to the patriotic feelings of his fellow-countrymen and his anxiety that the event should be properly marked. The jubilee remembrances in Honolulu will ever be connected with memories of Commissioner Hawes.

No representative of Great Britain has shown more interest in the details of his work. He personally visited the other islands with the distinct object of informing himself of the agricultural and economic conditions of the various industries, and to make himself personally acquainted with the various Britishers who were engaged in them. His present trip was undertaken for the purpose. He had not quite completed the tour of the islands, and was anxious to visit Hilo and Hamakua, and then take in Maui before his marriage. The day before he left, he came to the writer of the article for an itinerary of the route and for the names of those of his countrymen whom he could visit on his trip—a trip which, alas, has had a fatal ending in place of the expected wedding which should have been its termination.

The observations of Mr. Hawes were already embodied in two pamphlets, which have only recently been reviewed in these columns. The pamphlets were widely read, and copied into the United States papers. Only the other day a notice of the pamphlet appeared in Bradstreet's. The work was well done, and showed a cultivated and trained mind, taking careful cognizance of opportunities for increasing the trade of his country, and of looking for opportunities of investment for its cadets.

And now, suddenly, in the midst of interest in his work, in the midst of preparations for an event which is the crown of man's life, death has suddenly put forth his hand, cut the thread of life and said, no further! The end has come, close the book and write finis upon the unfinished page.

There is deep sympathy for her who would have been the wife in a few weeks, and deep sympathy for all her friends and relatives. There will be no one throughout the Islands who will not cast a thought of heartfelt feeling upon the widowed bride. But such things are, and hard as they are they must be borne.

The grave of the late British Commissioner will have around it sorrowing friends of all nationalities, who will say of him, he lived the true exemplification of an honest, honorable, true hearted English gentleman.

A REMINISCENCE.

A passage in Emily Soldene's reminiscences of the stage recalls Honolulu of the early seventies.

Among the habitués behind the scenes at the Philharmonic, she mentions a certain Major Larkins; and adds that he got down on his luck, went out to San Francisco, took a Mrs. Mnybridge out driving and was shot by the aggrieved Mnybridge. It was in 1871 or '72 that a Major Larkins came down in the Idaho to Honolulu, and cut a great swathe in the society of those days. The Major could talk, or was supposed to talk, many languages; he was great at croquet, danced divinely, was wealthy, etc. He foregathered with a kindred spirit a certain Captain Nicholson, and the two took what was then known as the Allen house up the Valley. All went merry as a marriage bell till the bills began to come in, and then the whole affair collapsed and the wealth was found to be non-existent. Some kind of an arrangement was made, and the pair got away. In San Francisco, the tragic end came to Larkins' career. Mnybridge distinguished himself later by taking photographs of a horse in motion.

This little incident from a distant past makes one wonder whether Honolulu is any wiser now than it was then—whether the adventurer does not have as good a time and take in as many people now as he did a quarter of a century ago. The plausible rogue still haunts our beach and sometimes makes a good strike, forsakes sack, as Falstaff says, and lives cleanly for a time; but he always gets bowled out at last. So it is very doubtful if Honolulu is any wiser now, in 1897, than it was in 1872. The race of rogues still exists, and the gulls exist for their advantage.

Beides the Trans-Mississippi Exhibition of 1898, there is the Paris Exposition of 1900 to be thought of, and, as the two are close together, preparations for the one may be made with the idea of continuing the exhibit in the other. There is already a bill in the United States Senate appropriating $500,000 to defray the cost of suitably representing the United States at Paris. This bill directs the heads of the various departments to prepare exhibits illustrative of the history, statistics and methods of administration of the government; it also provides for a director-general and assistants. When our next Legislature meets an eye will have to be cast for an appropriation in this direction. It is the best kind of advertising, and we should spend liberally. As has been urged in these columns, when previously speaking of these exhibitions, what we want to do is to show modern Hawaii with its products, its advanced education and its advantages for tourists. We do not want to show a collection of stone adzes, fusty mats and poi calabashes. Those are curios belonging to a by-gone age; we want to show the growing Hawaii of today. This can be done, and well done; but it will require working up, and interest taken in it by all. By all means, let us make a good and a worthy showing.

In anticipation of increased sales on bicycles we have quietly laid in a good stock of

than which there is none better in the market. The Tribune is now recognized in the United States as the best; it is the favorite with all the society people and business men all over the Union, and our own American Minister rides one.

Recent advices announce a cut in prices of low grade, but the strictly high grade wheels still sell readily at the former list price. We have made better arrangements with the manufacturers, whereby we are enabled to sell the Tribune bicycles at list price—$100, and invite all intending purchasers of wheels to come and inspect our stock before going elsewhere.

We have ladies' and gentlemen's road wheels, racers and all models manufactured by the celebrated Black Manufacturing Co. We also carry the Columbus, Columbus Juvenile for boys and girls. B and H Special, Jimmy and Stormer, which are sold exceedingly cheap.

Big Freights

By the Wilder for W. V. Dimond and now we are busy getting goods in position for customers to examine. Three extra clerks in the cellar this week unpacking goods. Don't look like dull times, does it? We are here for business and the Wilder brought the goods that will make things hum. We fix the prices to suit the customers and mark the goods in plain figures.

Another carload of Jewell Stoves and Ranges is not too much. We have a carload on the way all the time; it's a breezy busy line with us, because everybody likes the Jewell.

In other lines by the Wilder we have enough glass, both cut or pressed, to stock any ordinary store. With us it is only a department, but we make it a good one by constantly bringing in new goods at prices which win consideration from the masses.

An innovation with us is a complete line of kitchen tables, cupboards and safes. These are made of the best seasoned material and may be kept free from ants or roaches. The ordinary "made to order in Honolulu" sort cannot be depended upon in this respect. Our house furnishing department is complete. Every one will tell you this.

It's Easy To Promise,

But not always so easy to perform all the promises made, especially when those promises are gross exaggeration of facts.

It has been our policy to stick close to the truth.

We promised you recently that we would show you, the largest stock of Shoes and Slippers and goods in our line that had ever been exhibited in Honolulu. We mean what we say. Come in and look for yourself. The goods are here, bought right and will be sold right.

From a morning paper of August 6 is taken:

"They will be outnumbered in the matters of 'rooters.' The Naval men hold a straight flush when it comes to admirers."

An admirer of the town team has contributed the following:

"We care not the number of rooters who cheer for the gold and the blue. It may be that there will be others who love us, if only a few. The victor in Roman arena Cared naught for the multitude's cheer:

He looked in the far away corner
For the smile of one woman, so dear.
And so we will grant them the rabble,
And open our heartstrings more wide
To the few who we know will be faithful
At the ebb and the flow of the tide."

ANDREW WELCH ARRIVES FROM THE COAST.

Rough Weather Reported on the Hawaii Coast—Helene Delayed—Gossip of the City Front.

The Andrew Welch is docked at Brewer's wharf.

The dredger is again in active operation off Brewer's wharf.

The Mikahala brings word of rough weather on the Hawaii coast.

The James Makee arrived from Kani this morning with 471 bags of paddy and 60 bags of rice.

The Mikahala arrived from Hawaii ports this morning with 5175 bags of sugar and 26 head of cattle.

The W. H. Diamond will receive a full cargo at the railroad wharf, and will be dispatched about Tuesday next.

The Kinan has been held at Hilo to bring down the body of British Commissioner Hawes, and will not arrive until this afternoon, although she was expected this morning.

Wilder & Co. have advices from Hawaii to the effect that the Helene, expected daily since Wednesday, has been delayed by the rough weather, and will not reach here before Monday or Tuesday.

The Kaala arrived late yesterday afternoon from the windward side of the island with 2825 bags of paddy, all that Captain Mosher could pack under her decks and on them. She has been doing a rushing business of late.

The Nuanuu sailed from New York on June 15 for this port with a general cargo for Brewer & Co., and will be the next New York packet to arrive. The A. W. Spies and Edward May are now on the berth there, and the Spies will sail this month.

The Mokoli arrived last night from Molokai ports, with 17 head of cattle, 58 sheep and 30 hogs. George Trimble, Deputy Sheriff Mahoe and 20 natives came down to attend the Noe murder trial. The little steamer had the biggest cargo of freight and passengers she had had in many months.

Orders have been given to Captain Thompson to have the Mikahala in readiness to sail this evening. Unless other arrangements have been made by those having charge of Commissioner Hawes' body, the Mikahala will make a special trip to Kauai to bring down the Gay and Robinson families to attend the funeral.

The S. G. Wilder will have her inward cargo out before noon. She is taking sugar now from the Mikahala. The schooner Moi Wahine is waiting with 1764 bags for her, which will be transferred this afternoon. On Monday the Wilder will haul over to the railroad wharf, where there is enough sugar to top off her cargo.

The Hawaiian bark Andrew Welch, Captain Drew, arrived from San Francisco this morning after a fair passage of 16 days, having left the same day as the ship Commodore. She brings 16000 tons of general merchandise, including 100 kegs of powder, for Brewer & Co., and 16 head of horses for J. A. McDonald.

Thrive on hillsides where few other plants will, as the soil can be, and should be, well drained. This crop is a very profitable one, as is demonstrated by the number engaged in their cultivation and the ready market.

VALUE OF ATHLETICS.

Stimulus of the Nation Largely Increased by Reason of Muscular Development.

The question is often asked whether the interest in athletics is increasing the stamina of the nation at large or whether it is only encouraging a few to obtain abnormal physical development. If it is doing the latter, it is not worth while. Only a general growth in vigor and health can compensate for the time and money devoted to athletics.

It is impossible, of course, to give in figures the result to the nation at large, but the more healthful appearance of the majority of the people and the decreased death rates are evidences in a general way of an improved physical condition. Of the result in colleges, however, and especially in Harvard university, it is possible to speak more definitely. The system of athletics in use at that university and the careful records kept enable the advance made to be a matter of proof and not a question of guesswork. These records show such a general and almost continuous advance in the physical standard of the students that its meaning cannot be mistaken.

Under the system in use at Harvard a general test of all the physical capabilities of the students is made each year. A complete record of this has been kept since 1880 and enables the progress to be seen at a glance. By this record it is found that in 1880 the highest strength test reached was only 675, and only 4 students gained this record, and 8 students fell as low as a test of 225. But in 1896 18 students made a test record of 675 and 55 students went above that, 2 even reaching a record of 950, and no student fell below a record of 325. The medium of average strength of the 579 men examined in 1880 was 400 points, while the average for the 689 men examined in 1896 was 625 points. In 1880 about 95 per cent of the men examined failed to reach 550 points in their tests, but in 1896 this standard was surpassed by 70 per cent of the men examined.—Philadelphia Press.

ATHLETICS IN SCHOOLS.

Preparatory Institutions Follow the Lead of the Colleges With Good Results.

Those who watch the records of the time may have noted that they show a large and interesting development of athletic sports in schools. These preparatory institutions have naturally followed the lead of the colleges, and now most of them have the whole apparatus—football and track teams, baseball nines and tennis players, tracks, gymnasiums and directors of physical culture. They have their leagues, championships and records, and their competitions bring out a fine display of colors, yells and enthusiasm. The principals of the various schools encourage these sports, and in most instances the faculties either directly or indirectly take part in their management. The directors of physical culture are usually men who have played conspicuous parts in college athletics and who are qualified by experience and study to direct the training of the boys that the best results are obtained without too large a tax on the physical powers of their young charges. Experience has shown that the pursuit of athletics in schools has a value beyond the development of strong and healthy bodies in the cultivation of a healthy spirit and high standards of character.

Time was when the hero of the school-boy mind was he who was most daring in forbidden exploits.

The schoolboy's hero is now the athlete, and the athlete, by reason of his pursuit, is bound to pay proper attention to his school duties lest he be disqualified by the action of the faculty and to lead a clean, wholesome and regular life in order that he may be fit to do his work on the field. He must not smoke or drink or sit up late, and he must cultivate pluck, fortitude, energy and decision of character.—New York Times.

They May Fight at Carson.

As a result of the unsatisfactory ending of the recent bout between Maher and Sharkey it is more than likely that another match will be arranged between the two heavyweights. Before sailing for Ireland Sharkey issued a sweeping challenge to meet any heavyweight in the world, Maher preferred.

The managers of the two heavyweights have agreed that the battle shall be for $5,000 a side, and each has placed an installment of $2,500 with Al Smith, who is to be the final stakeholder. The final deposit of $2,500 is to be made Aug. 2, and the contest is to take place three months from that date.

As the bout is to a finish it is quite evident that Carson will be selected as the place, as that is the only spot where a finish fight can be brought off.

Bacon Coming to America.

Tommy Conneff, the American champion, who has just returned from Ireland, where he went last July to meet Bacon, the champion runner of Great Britain, says that Bacon promised him three return races in America this year. Conneff says the trouble he experienced on account of climatic changes and a severe attack of malaria, to which he attributes his defeat in the races with Bacon, has now entirely disappeared, and he is ready to meet Bacon. The latter's promise was that he would come to America this fall to meet Conneff in races of the same distance as those run in the British Isles last year—one, two and three miles.—New York Telegram.

Fitzpatrick Will Coach Them.

John Fitzpatrick, the well known rowing coach and trainer, who so successfully handled the crews of the Palisade Boat club, New York, for three seasons, has accepted an offer from the Nantux Boat club of Bay Ridge, Long Island, to coach the crews which it expects to enter in the regatta of the Long Island association, to be held on Sheephead bay on July 24.

THE HIGHWAY.

The highway lies all bare and brown,
 A naked line across the down,
 Worn by a hundred hurrying feet.
 The tide of life along it flows,
 And busy commerce comes and goes.
 Where once the grass grew green and sweet,
 The world's three pulses beat.

Well for the highway that it lies
 The passageway of great enterprise!
 Yet from its dust what voices cry—
 Voices of soft, green, growing things
 Trampled and torn from earth which elings
 Too closely, unresisting why
 Its darling baits must die!

My heart's a highway, trodden down
 By many a traveler of renown—
 Grave thought and burden bearing deeds,
 And strong achievement's envoy fares,
 With laughing joys and crowding cares,
 Along the road that worldward leads—
 Once rank with foolish weeds.

Glad is my heart to hear them pass.
 Yet sometimes bemoans a low class!
 The tender, springing things that grew—
 The nursing hopes their feet destroyed,
 Sweet, innocent things that youth enjoyed—
 And blossomed there the long year through—
 Would I could have them too!

—Louise Letts Edwards in Harper's.

HER DOWRY.

"I demand the payment of the $10,000 in gold," said Miss Magruder, a little testily and quite determinedly. "I owe this to my niece, who is about to be married. As you know, I am her guardian, and I do not wish to diminish her legacy by any oversight on my part just now, when no one knows just what effect a possible silver victory may have upon the financial condition of the country. Once married, her husband may do as he likes."

"Very well, Miss Magruder," said Cashier Holt. "Your request will be honored if for no other reason than to show to you that this bank is amply able to meet all demands."

The lady whom he addressed as Miss Magruder was a spinster of uncertain age, regular features and a determined and businesslike manner.

Cashier Holt, a middle-aged man with sandy hair and curly, flax colored hair, had tried vainly to demonstrate to her shrewd client that her money would be safe in the vaults of the bank than in her house.

Now he gave a whispered order to the only clerk the bank afforded. The latter turned an inquisitive face upon the spinster and her companion, a pretty country girl of 20 summers. When he returned from the vault, he carried in his hand a leather satchel, which he placed on the counter before the cashier.

"Here is your $10,000," said Mr. Holt whimsically. "Remember my warning! Take good care of the money."

Miss Magruder was not so easily satisfied. She opened the satchel, took from it a buckskin bag and counted the money, which was in $50 coins. Then she pushed it all back, locked the bag and left the bank, accompanied by the clerk, who carried the satchel and deposited it under the buggy seat. As the ladies entered their conveyance they were accosted by a tramp. The fellow looked anything but prepossessing, and Miss Magruder curtly denied him aid.

During the drive from New Brunswick to the little hamlet which was their home, Miss Magruder gave vent to her annoyance over the cashier's hesitancy to pay her niece's legacy in gold. His warning against robbers was especially distasteful to the spinster, who had never been afflicted with fear of anything. Nora Wilson listened to her aunt in silence. She was not at all inclined to share her guardian's confidence that their house was as safe as the bank vault, but out of deference to the older woman she refrained from expressing her opinion. Even when the money was safely stowed away under Miss Magruder's bed, Nora felt uneasy. When bedtime came, she herself examined every window and door, to see that they had been securely fastened by the servant. Anxious doubts disturbed her slumber, which she wooed in vain for a long time. In the middle of the night the girl awoke with a start. She was not certain at first whether her imagination had played her a trick, or whether she had really heard a stifled noise in the next room. She hearkened with bated breath, and was soon convinced that what had disturbed her were stealthy footsteps.

Without a moment's hesitation the girl jumped from her bed. A door led from her room to her aunt's chamber, but this she would not open. After all, it might only have been the vivid play of her imagination, and she dreaded Miss Magruder's ridicule. So she unlatched the door that opened out into the corridor and groped her way to her aunt's room. It was ajar.

Nora Wilson scarcely breathed as she listened. She could distinctly hear the respiration of two persons. One breathed regularly and quietly; the other's breath came in short, stifled gasps. A sweet, penetrating odor came from the room. Then all her doubts were dispelled.

There was a robber in the room. He was searching for the hidden gold. Nora was a courageous girl. She pressed her lips firmly together, advancing carefully with outstretched arms. Almost instantly she came in contact with a human body. The man—for it was a burglar—clutched her around the waist and held a sponge saturated with chloroform to her nose. Nora tried not to breathe, to keep from inhaling the noxious vapor. The girl's fierce struggle made the burglar resort to other means to overcome her. He dropped the sponge and plunged his hand into his breast pocket.

"He has a pistol and he is going to kill me!" thought Nora. Quick as a flash she seized his hand the moment he withdrew it. Her fingers closed over the handle of a large bowie knife, not the butt end of a revolver.

The marauder dragged Nora from the room, down the stairs and into the lower corridor. There he hissed into her ear that he would kill her if she made an outcry and did not release the knife. Gathering all his strength, he thrust her into the pantry, the door of which stood wide open.

Miss Wilson made no reply, but with an almost superhuman effort attempted to wrench the weapon from him. She succeeded in clutching a few inches more of the long handle of the knife, and the man uttered a terrible oath. The blade had sunk into his hand. Snatching his left arm from her waist, he struck her a fearful blow with his fist.

Realizing that she could no longer cope with the robber, Nora turned quickly and dashed past him toward the door that led out into the yard. It was open, but on the threshold the girl stumbled and fell prone to the floor. When she awoke a few moments afterward from the stupor caused by the fall, two men were bending over her. They were grappling, and by their voices Miss Wilson recognized in one of them her aunt's gardener. The girl, brave as ever, came to his assistance. Their combined cries for help brought one of their neighbors to the scene of the struggle. The marauder was soon overcome, and when the serving maid appeared with a lamp Nora and the gardener recognized in him the tramp who had accosted them in the afternoon in front of the bank. "Take him to prison," commanded Miss Wilson. "My aunt and I will lodge complaint against him in the morning."

While the two men carried off their prisoner Nora hurried to her aunt's room. By this time the effect of the chloroform had disappeared, and Miss Magruder was acquainted with the events of the night. The little satchel, with its precious contents, was moved a considerable distance from where it had originally been placed, and the spinster admitted that the cashier was right after all in admonishing her as he did. To relieve herself from further responsibility she sent for her niece's betrothed early in the morning.

In the meantime the prisoner had a preliminary hearing before the judge. Miss Wilson deposed that she had met the man in the afternoon; that he had seen the satchel which they carried from the bank stowed away under the buggy seat. She then narrated her struggle with the intruder and his final arrest by a neighbor and her aunt's gardener. The latter corroborated her statement. The prisoner firmly declared his innocence, even in the face of these grave charges. He denied having struggled with the young lady in her aunt's room, and said that he had sought shelter in Miss Magruder's woodshed for the night. When he heard Miss Wilson's cries for help, he thought a fire had broken out, and rushed from the shed to aid in suppressing it.

Without a word Nora Wilson pointed to the prisoner's right hand, which was bandaged with a dirty rag. The judge understood her meaning and asked the tramp how he had injured his hand.

His answer was that he had cut himself with an ax, as he cleared the place in the dark to find a comfortable spot to lie down in.

His statement was not credited, and he was remanded to jail.

An hour later Nora and her betrothed were on the way to the bank. They had with them the satchel of gold, ready to again intrust it to the custody of the bank cashier.

"Good morning, Mr. Holt," said the girl. "Here is the money! You were right; some one did try to rob us last night."

"Ah, ha!" cried Mr. Holt, coming close to the cashier's window to receive the money.

A penetrating odor of chloroform was noticeable. It came from the clothes of the cashier.

"Oh, James!" cried the girl, still pale and nervous from her terrible experience of the night.

"My name is Cliff," said James. "I am Miss Wilson's fiancé. Permit me to lead her to your couch. She is not well. A little rest will soon restore her."

Holt was not inclined to grant the request to admit the two young people to the back room without opposition.

"It's against the rules of the bank," he remarked stubbornly.

James Cliff paid no attention to him, but pushed the door open and led the young girl to the leather sofa in the back room. Nora was far from fainting. Her mind had never worked more quickly and to the point. A sudden suspicion that not the tramp, but another, had tried to rob them of her fortune flashed through her brain. There was the odor of the chloroform, and, besides, the cashier held his hand concealed in his coat pocket.

"What is the matter with your hand, Mr. Holt?" she asked.

"My hand? I sprained it last night while trying to move a heavy piece of furniture. I have been bathing it with arnica and must keep it bandaged."

"Won't you let me see it?"

The cashier hesitated, but when he pulled the hand from the pocket at last, the bandage showed other stains than those of arnica.

With a bound the girl stood before him. "This is blood, James," she cried. "A sprain could not have caused them—the smell of the chloroform, his voice, his look, and the hairs wrapped around the button of his coat! Do you not recognize them?"

Her lover snatched the overcoat thrown over the back of the chair in the room in which they were.

"They are yours, Nora," said James Cliff, carefully loosening them from the button that held them confined. "I would recognize them anywhere!"

"This is the man who broke into our house, with whom I struggled, and in the struggle he cut his hand," said Nora firmly and menacingly.

"I wish I had killed you!" muttered Holt, now blind with rage over the girl's discovery.

They called the clerk and sent for the sheriff, but James Cliff was compelled to keep the desperate bank cashier at bay at the point of a revolver.

At his home were found a bottle half filled with chloroform, a blood-stained cuff, a bowie knife, a bunch of skeleton keys and other paraphernalia belonging to the light-fingered gentry.

Years afterward, when Nora Wilson and James Cliff celebrated their marriage anniversary, they learned the cause for the crime of the bank cashier. He had been in love with the pretty country lassie, and as James Cliff was then an impecunious attorney he thought if he robbed her of her fortune the young man would not marry her.

"But you know better, dear wife," whispered James into the pretty matron's ear. She nodded her head in silence and heaved a sigh around his neck.

The $10,000 in gold was deposited in a larger bank, and the interest has been piling up from year to year, making a nest egg for the three little children of the Cliffs.—St. Louis Republic.

Pat and the Target.

An Irish militiaman, while at musketry, was singularly consistent in never hitting the target.

"What the devil are you firing at, my man?" wrathfully exclaimed the musketry instructor, who was standing near a freshly tarred gate some distance from the target.

"I'm firing at the gate, your honor," was the reply.

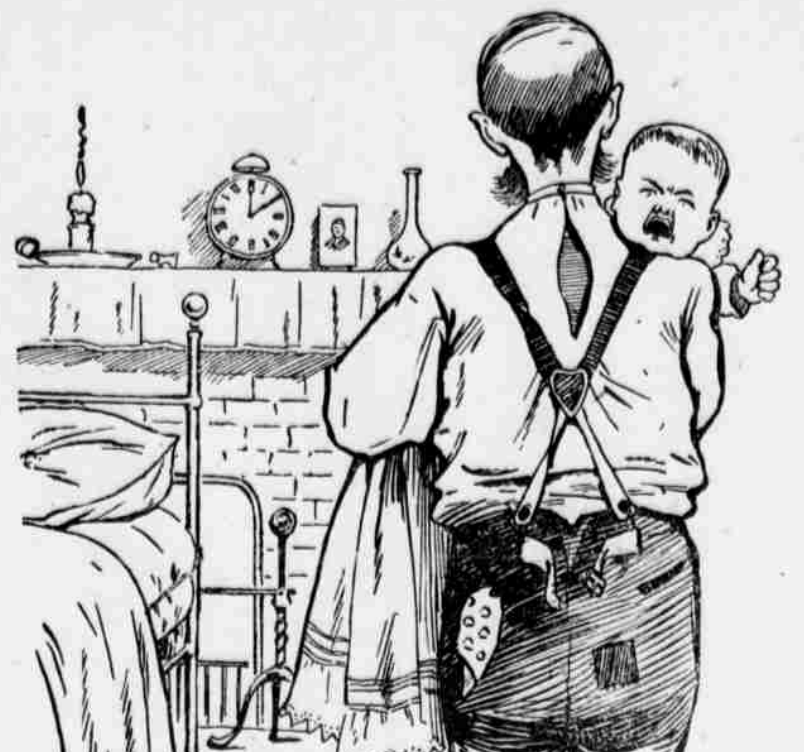

"What gate, you fool?" said the musketry instructor, who had been nearly hit on one or two occasions during Pat's practicing.

"The tar gate, your honor," replied Pat, with charming simplicity.—Dundee People's Friend.

Irreconcilable.

"Isn't there any chance of settling the difference between Mr. and Mrs. Whirly?"

"Not the slightest. Each got hold of the diary that the other kept before they were married."—Detroit Free Press.

The horses in Japan will not drink water out of any container or even a stream or pond. The water for the horse has to be splashed up by the hand into the horse's mouth. To the stranger in Japan this is most striking. Professor Hilgard of the University of California, in his annual report for the year 1896, writing about

VERONICA MINERAL WATER, says:

"As a purgative this water is very effective, and not painful in the least. It was a medicinal water used by the Indians. The composition of this water is very unusual, in fact, the composition is very remarkable, as it contains nearly every chemical element of value to the human system, whether to become a part of the membranous secretions, the blood or the bones."

Veronica.

Nature's own spring medicine, guaranteed to be bottled as it flows from Nature's laboratory.

Continuous Use.

By its continuous use impurities of the blood are removed, the stomach and digestive organs are strengthened, the liver acts freely, and the skin and kidneys are kept in good working order.

The name "Santa Barbara" is known the United States over as a widely patronized health resort by invalids as well as by those who feel the need of a change of air and diet. The Veronica Mineral Water is bottled at Santa Barbara in its natural state, and if taken as directed, the Veronica Mineral Water Company, guarantee a positive relief and cure.
