A Terrible Moment.

It was in India. Dinner was just finished in the mess-room, and several English officers were sitting about the table.
The bronzed faces have the set but not unkindly look common among military men. The conversation, at best, had not been animated, and just now there was a lull, as the night was too hot for small talk. The major of the regiment, a clean-cut man of 55, turned toward his next neighbour
at the table, a young subaltern,
who was leaning back in his chair
with his hands clasped behind his head, staring through the cigar smoke at the ceiling. The major was slowly looking the man
over, from his handsome face down, when, with sudden alertness, and in a quiet steady voice,
he said:—

"Don't move, please, Mr.
Carruthers. I want to try an experiment with you. Don't move
a muscle."

"All right, Major," replied the subaltern, without even turning his eyes. "Hadn't the least idea of moving. I assure you. What's the game?"

But this time all the others were listening in a lazily expect-tant way.

"Do you think," continued the Major, and his voice trembled just a little, "Do you think you can keep absolutely still for, say,
two minutes—to save your life?"

"Are you joking?"

"On the contrary, move a muscle and you are a dead man. Can you stand the strain?"

The subaltern barely whispered, "Yes," and his face paled slightly.

"Burke," said the Major, addressing an officer across the table, "pour some of that milk into a saucer, and set it on the floor here just back of me.
Gently, man! Quiet!"

Not a word was spoken as the officer quietly filled the saucer, walked with it carefully around the table, and set it down where the major had indicated on the floor.

Like a marble statue sat the young subaltern in his white linen clothes, while a cobra di capella, which had been crawling up the leg of his trousers, slowly raised its head, then turned,
descended to the floor, and glided
towards the milk.

Suddenly the silence was broken by the report of the major's revolver, and the snake lay dead on the floor.

"Thank you, major," said the subaltern, as the two men shook hands warmly. "You have saved
my life."

"You're welcome my boy," replied the senior. "But you did your share."

PROGRESS.

The Life of the Land is Established in Righteousness.

HONOLULU, NOV. 18, 1893.

The Star Scavenger.

The Star has chosen to go into what we would call the scavenger business, and has made a number of charges against different officials and prominent citizens on the opposition side. Most of these charges will end in libel suits, and we do not feel called to make them subjects of discussion at the present stage. But since the annexation organette, seems desirous of doing the scavenging act, we should humbly suggest that the "cleaning up" be done on both sides of the street. Of course Editor Smith being a stranger here, may lack the necessary material, but we are perfectly ready to furnish him with all information needed.

In regard to corruption, he might write a few columns about the Marnie Hospital. Of course we all know that poor Christie is dead and Magnin absent, but still the records can be found in the U. S. consulate, and we have no doubt that Consul-General Mills will be only too happy to assist the Star in its patriotic work of exposing "the rascals." The Star might then turn its eagle-eye towards the little "irregularity" performed by a certain missionary firm, and strongly exposed to the public gaze by a Legislative finance committee. The irregularity in question dealt with the importation, free of duty, of telephone-material for a company privileged by law, but sold to other companies at a great advantage to the firm. The starry exposé of corruption might also write one or two chapters on Alcohol for the special benefit of the W. C. T. U. or Y. M. C. A. or all the other blue-ribbon-wearing, psalm-singing sons—of missionaries. The scavenger-editor might then devote some space to "opium in reform circles." He might tell us about the miraculous transformation of dope into bricks or straw or molasses. He might tell us about the high and prominent chump who now receives honors and wears gold-lace, as a pillar of the P. G., in his capacity as a schemer and boodler. He might repeat with some advantage the well-known statement of the said "pillar" when he corralled $700 from a pakapio crowd that "he would surrender it to his superior or anybody else who had a better right than he to it"—and then he kept it.

But it is not necessary in our efforts to assist the Star scavenger to stop at corruption. We could fill columns for our esteemed contemporary about "reform" thieving. We shall not mention the smuggling of opium among broom handles or in sewing-machines by a "holy" firm, which hasn't even under such circumstances been able to avoid financial ruin; we shall not take up the records of our "anti-Chinese" politicians and legislators, who mysteriously disappeared when they were wanted; we shall omit recalling any incident with the tons of opium landed from the Likelike, the result of which was the building up a prominent man and a prominent—and very much "reform"—firm. We shall furnish the Star scavenger with no information in regard to the honest and trust-worthy and reliable and government-job-deserving Hawaiians who have swindled their clients and spent the money forwarded by Honolulu attorneys on receipt of executed mortgages. We shall refrain from telling the Star about the foreigners, who have secured honours and offices by prostituting their wives to the Kanakas—be it a King or a Minister or a politician—for the purpose of gaining office. We shall say nothing about the bar sinisters—which have been caused and created by the men who now compose the Councils of the Provisional Government. We shall not go back into the dark ages and remind our immaculate Christians—fathers and sons—about their escapades (Whoa, Emma!). We shall refuse to remember the lights of the churches and the hopes of our saintly flocks being refused admittance to society—as it was—on account of their wild and disreputable living—be they fat boys or otherwise. We shall not publish the diary of the man high in office covered with honor—and through his late actions with disgrace and odium. We shall refuse to remind the Star of the Police Court records of the holy, but cruel man, and we shall not endeavour to search the records of our high officials in the countries, from where they hailed before they stranded on this beach. All this we say we will not do for the purpose of assisting the alleged journalist who has taken upon himself the office of public scavenger. But if the Star man honestly means what he writes, and he is determined to rake up ancient history, we will help him to the best of our ability—and God help those who made the ancient history.

Lucky Emmeluth.

We are pleased to make a note that the Annexation Club on Maui at a meeting last Monday night (about eleven persons being present) heartily endorsed Senator Emmeluth's resolution relating to the creation of volunteers among government officials by coercion. Now the scheme of the plumper will materialize! We understand that John W. Kalua desires to be assigned to the artillery—he always was a big gun. No news in regard to the settling of the bill against the club from the "Chinese" caterer to the ball. Mr. Plummer a police officer at Spreckelsville was promptly dismissed by Mr. Chillingsworth—the sheriff—because he expressed a dissenting opinion on the Emmeluth's resolution matter. Sheriff Chillingsworth will be kindly remembered.

In referring to the visit of Senhor A de Souza Canavarro Charge d'Affairs and Consul General for Portugal, to the U. S. F. S. Philadelphia yesterday; the Star of last evening refers to the representative as "Portuguese Counsel-General Canavarro," and the Tiser this morning says "Mr. Canavarro, Consul-General"—very, very polite.

CORRUPTLY PARTISAN!

Mr. W. G. Smith, the editor of the Hawaiian Star, was arrested yesterday on a charge of libel. According to the statement in the last evening's Star the arrest of the editor was as merry as a marriage-bell. The police officer left a warrant with Mr. Smith, and that person walked down "by-and-by" to the Station House where he was released on his own recognizance—no bail being called for. A more infamous proceeding has hardly been known in this country. If this government composed of Messrs. Dole, Damon, King and Smith, desire the slightest claim to be considered an honest government, they will without delay emphasize their disapproval of the corruptly partisan act of Marshal Hitchcock.

The editor of the HOLOMUA was arrested a few weeks ago on a charge similar to the one preferred against Mr. Smith. The warrant against Mr. Norrie was served, and executed in the proper manner, and he was told to wait in the Marshal's office until the bail bond was made out. Mr. Geo. Carson Kenyon, was arrested on a charge similar to the above mentioned. Two police captains arrested Mr. Kenyon, dragged him to the Station House, searched his person and locked him up in a cell. Mr. A. Johnstone was arrested on a charge of libel and is at liberty after having furnished a bail-bond for $100. May we then ask what authorized the Marshal or induced him to treat the editor of the Star with such an ostensible favoritism? The Captain of the Police, who served the warrant should be discharged, because he acted contrary to law and contrary to the instructions given to the police. The Marshal should be immediately removed, because he has brought the authorities of of this country into contempt and hatred through his partisan action. The Attorney-General—if he approves of this action on the part of his subordinates should be cashiered and forced out of office by his colleagues whose names are being dragged into the mud. For Heaven's sake, what are we coming to? Is Sanford B. Dole the man who at one time was an honor to the bench as a judge going to sit tamely by and see the government which he heads covered with odium? Because no man can come to us and inform us that he or Mr. Damon are in fear of this hired scribbler of the Star and afraid of doing to him as, according to our laws, is done to others. The corruption, the infamy, the unspeakable cowardice which the government has displayed in its show of partiality and partisanship is enough to turn every decent citizen against them. The kamaainas are placed under bonds for their appearance. Men whom the government knows wouldn't leave the country if there were hundreds of libel suits against them are treated like criminals while a stranger, a new-comer, a hireling of a political party is treated as if he was above the laws and regulations of this country. We have finally learned the true character of Marshal Hitchcock. Good government would be impossible with him or any other corruptly partisan.

Mixed Drinks.

If there yet is among us any "doubting Thomas" let him once try the following beverage which will make him feel assured that "we are all right." Yes, let him follow our prescription and try the Restoration Punch.

Break the yolk of one egg in the bottom of a mixing-glass, add the juice of half an orange, a spoonful of pineapple syrup, a bar-spoonful of fine sugar, add one third of the glass of fine ice, one pony of old brandy, one-half pony of benedictine, one-half pony of Maraschino, one dash of creme des roses, one dash of creme de cacao. Fill the glass with cream. Shake for two minutes under cover. Strain into a tall fancy glass, filling it. Beat the white of an egg into snow and place that on top of the drink. Squeeze the oil of a bit of orange skin on top and—doubt no more.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions or the utterances of our correspondents.]

EDITOR HOLOMUA:

It is to be regretted that the memory of Mr. John F. Colburn, is getting so short that he cannot realize the reasons why he should resign even if the other three ministers were unwilling to do so. Is it necessary to refresh his power of remembering by publishing his actions and attitude on the 15th, 16th and 17th of January 1893? A LOYALIST.

COURTSHIP IN RUSSIA.

Parents never Attend the Wedding Feast.

Love is the same the world over, but courtship is managed differently in different countries. Courting among the middle classes in Russia is peculiar. The first Whitsunday after the young girl is acknowledged by her mother to be of a marriageable age she is taken to the St. Petersburg Summer Gardens to join the 'bridal promenade,' as it is called. This consists of the daughters of the Russian tradesmen walking in procession, followed by their parents. Up and down they walk pretending to chat with each other and take no notice of the young men—the sons of the tradesmen, dressed in their best—who walk in another procession on the other side. However, every now and then some young fellow slips out of his proper rank and adds himself to the line of girls on the other side, speaking to one particularly. The parents of the girl join in conversation, and soon they leave the promenade and are joined by the parents of the young man. Generally the old folks have talked it over before, but on this occasion everyone pretends to be surprised.

Next day a female confidante calls on the girl's parents and requests her hand. This granted, all the relations on both sides meet and argue about the portion to be given to the girl. If this is not satisfactory all is at an end; if it is what was expected the betrothal takes place.

The prospective bride and bridegroom kneel down on a great fur mat, and she takes a ring from her finger and gives it to her intended, who returns the gift by another. The girl's mother meanwhile crumbles a piece of bread over her daughter's head, and her father holds the image of his daughter's patron saint over his future son-in-law's well brushed locks. As they arise, the young friends selected for bridesmaids sing a wedding song. The guests each bring forward a present of some sort, wine is handed about and some one says it is bitter and needs sweetening. Then the prospective bridegroom kisses his future wife—the sweetness being supposed to be provided by the kiss—salutes the company and takes his leave, on which the bridesmaids sing a song, with chorus something like this:

Farewell, happy bridegroom,
But return to be more happy.

Courting is now begun. Every evening the lover comes to his lady's home with a present, which is always something good to eat, generally cakes or sugar plums. He makes love under very awkward circumstances, for the bridesmaid-elect sit about the betrothed pair in a circle, singing songs descriptive of their happiness. The last evening the courtship is enlivened by the presentation of the gifts of the bridegroom, which must include soap, perfumery, brushes and combs. On receiving these the bridesmaids instantly carry the bride away to wash her, dress her hair and perfume her pocket-handkerchief. Thus touched up she returns to the company, and the bride's father gives his future son-in-law the marriage portion, which he takes home in a neat little bag.

The next morning the young man returns for the lady herself. She receives him with her hair unbraided and flowing down her back. They are married by the ceremonies of the Greek Church, and the old folks never go to the wedding-dinner. Those eternal bridesmaids, whom they must hate by this time, are, however, still on duty, and the evening closes by the bride kneeling down and pulling off her husband's boots as a proof of her intention to be an obedient and submissive wife. Good-natured bridegrooms generally hide jewelry in their boots, which the bride may take possession as a balm for her pride.

After the wedding-day the parents give feasts and keep it up for a whole week, and it is not until all this is over that the young couple see these blessed bridesmaids take their departure. They are compelled to kiss them, thank them, and give each a present.

They Barked up the Wrong Tree.

Everything is not as lovely in our sporting circles as could be desired. We have got a wonderful lot of Nimrods among us, but we regret to say that they are not all gifted with the proper spirit of sportsmen, but rather the victims of the most insane jealousy towards anybody, especially non-members of the "association"—who through skill and true sportmanship brings down a few more ducks, or pheasants than do the would-be hunters who monopolize the shooting rights on Oahu. The other day two "vigilantes" sent out from the association thought that they at last had run their game to cover. They saw a poacher—mind, a live poacher—and they decided that it must either be Cunningham or Black, the two pheasant-killers who turn the hair grey of all the "true" sportsmen of the "association." The poacher was chased, the poacher was caught—and then he turned out to be one of the officers of the famous sporting association. Dire vengeance, was sworn and promised against the sacrilegious duck-killer—but evidently, better counsel prevailed when the "detectives" were cooled off, and we have heard of no disaster happening to the youngster, who broached the sacred preserves of the "association."

Messrs Cunningham and Black, are still to be found on their old stand, (on the other side of the Chinese Theater), and that's where the pheasants are.

HAH! HAH! HAH!

A reporter who wilfully and purposely falsifies the language of a diplomatic representative, deserves to be branded as unworthy of public credence." (P. C. A. Nov. 18).

"The British Minister is said to have offered to join in the protection of property, by calling for marines from the British war vessel in port, but the offer was declined as unnecessary." (P. C. A. Nov. 17).

They can disguise themselves, they can dye their whiskers, they can call themselves by all names—these missionaries, the cloven hoof of the liar is there.

We Told You So!

Another instance of the intense foolishness in arming irresponsible men! The following report comes to our office from the very best authority: A few days ago a small (blasted?) Britisher entered an up-town saloon for the purpose of enjoying a glass of ale (don't you know!) It happens that the same Britisher has got a very tame colt out of a very tame mare and that the colt follows him like a pet-dog. On this occasion the little colt followed the ale—desiring Britisher into the saloon and—as colts will do—took a colt's-eye view of the premises. A specimen of the dreihundred was around the place and objected to the four-footed animal being allowed in his sacred presence. The Bar-keeper mildly suggested that Hans oughtn't to be mad even if the establishment did look like a stable as Hans probably had been in a stable before, and perhaps even were born in one. Deuter ignored the remarks of the bar-keeper (who is rather powerful) and devoted his attention to the Britisher and the colt (the Britisher being an apparently small man.) The Britisher attended quietly to his business (drinking the ale) and stood the "gaff" of the "preserved dutch citizen" as long as he could. Finally the ale and the patience of the little Britisher ran out and there was a knock out—or rather three of them. The (not "very well" this time) preserved citizen then got a move on him and after requesting a stay of proceedings for about ten minutes walked home to fetch his deadly government gun. When he returned the colt and the Britisher had gone and he was alone with a Winchester rifle full of cartridges and on full cock, together with the bar keeper. What happened we cannot describe. A cyclone struck the house somewhere and Hans is now mourning the loss of the government gun and his reputation as a gunner.

Moral! Mr. Dole, cease to arm men who while they don't hurt any "outsider" might hurt themselves or some of the "insiders."

WEAT WAS IT.

On Thursday evening at about seven o'clock, the residents in the neighborhood of the Palace building—at present occupied by the revolutionists—were startled by the sound of pistol shots. About ten shots were fired in rapid succession, which gave rise to the impression that two or more persons were exchanging shots. It is quite possible that some of the army saw a bug-a-boo—perhaps snakes—and took a fright. However, what ever it was, such careless use of fire arms should not be allowed.

MUD!!

The P. G. Band at Emma Square this afternoon.

Hon. F. H. Hayselden, is in the city again for a few days.

Base ball this afternoon. Unknowns and Myrtles play a game.

The band concert at Thomas Square last evening was cut short—it is said that the attendance was not large.

One of the P. G. prowlers stationed on Miller street last night, was heard to make the remark "another five dollars easily earned."

P. G. prowlers were on the streets again last night. Their beds, if they have any, would be the best place for them, instead of warming the streets—as street walkers.

As we go to press, a telephone message is received stating that owing to the inclemency of the weather, the Concert announced to take place at Sans Souci this evening, is postponed.

It is reported to us, that on Friday morning between 3 and 3:30 o'clock, armed men were seen going up Nuuanu Avenue. Evidently returning to their homes after being all night looking for "bug-a-boos."

At about eight o'clock last evening five men carrying rifles were seen on Beretania street, between Richards and Alakea streets walking towards Alakea street. One of the five resembled very much one of the officials of the Honolulu Fire department.

The libel suit against Stellar Smith was called this morning. The Counsel for the Plaintiff was ready to proceed, but, on request of the Defendant's lawyer hearing was postponed until next Wednesday. A. Rosa appears for the Plaintiff, and C. L. Carter for the Defendant.

An early riser and one who takes an early cup of coffee was down town earlier than usual this morning making his rounds. He noticed an unusual number of persons about, which attracted his curiosity. He watched awhile, and was rewarded by seeing about two hundred P. G. prowlers taking their coffee at one of the coffee houses in this city, between three and four o'clock.

At a few minutes after 12 o'clock this noon, after Editor Smith's second arrest for libel, the Chief Justice, Editor Smith, and Councilman Emmeluth were seen standing on the side-walk near to the Station House, apparently in secrete conversation. Spectators were of the opinion, that it was hardly the place for the Chief Justice to be at that moment. Surely he was not offering advice.
