Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

For Colds, Coughs, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Influenza, and Incipient Consumption, no remedy approaches Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It has long been the most popular and successful anodyne expectorant in Pharmacy, and is everywhere approved and recommended by the Faculty. It soothes the inflamed membrane, breaks up irritating mucus, allays coughing, and induces repose. As a family emergency medicine, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral takes the lead. For the relief and cure of croup, whooping-cough, sore throat, and all the pulmonary troubles to which the young are so liable, it is invaluable. No household is quite secure without INSPECTION BY THE P. M. G.

What He Saw on His Visits to Hawaii and Maui.

Improvements in the Postal Service—Progress of Road Building—Kohala Rain Makers—A Narrow Escape.

J. Mort Oat, Postmaster General, lately made inspection tours of the islands of Hawaii and Maui, and is about starting off for the rounds of Kauai. He was twenty-five days absent on Hawaii, his land journeys thereon covering about three hundred and forty miles.

In conversation with a BULLETIN man the P. M. G. gave some account of his seeings and doings on both islands. He had an adventure on Maui amounting almost to a hairbreadth escape. Mr. Oat observed the roads, largely with an official eye, also took some note of the crops. Landing at Mahukoua from the steamer Kinau in the first instance, the Postmaster General proceeded thence by train to Kohala.

At Hilo he noticed that the cane was in very bad condition from drought. Approaching Niihau it made a better appearance. When Mr. Oat was in the district the planters were preparing to bombard the clouds with dynamite to procure rain. The mode is to send up a seven-foot kite, on the string of which a "messenger," bearing twelve sticks of dynamite, is hoisted into the cloud region. A time fuse lighted on dispatching explodes the charge, producing concussion of the air that crystallizes the moisture and brings it down in rain drops.

Going on to Waimea the Postmaster General found the new road more than half completed. It is partly on the lines of the old road, and when finished a stage line will be feasible through to Kohala. C. Kaiser has a line now running from Kawaihae to Honokaa and Kukuiahae. Mr. Oat went overland from Hana to Hilo. The new road is completed through the terrible Kawaihae gulch. Through the Laupahoehoe gulch it was finished on one side, when Mr. Oat was there, and work was progressing on the other. Wilson & Whitehouse, builders of the new Pali road on Oahu, are the contractors for this even more formidable work on Hawaii. E. W. Barnard, the man of various offices including postmaster, has built a new store at the foot of the new road in Laupahoehoe gulch, so as to bring his trade into convenient touch with the changed route.

Mr. Oat found much progress had been made in road making on the island since his last previous visit, and an immense improvement of the routes since four years ago. Soon after the next session of the Legislature there will be a road through the big Maunaloa gulch—one of the terrors of the island—and then one can drive clear through from Kau to Hilo. There is a daily stage now from Hilo to Hakalau, and mails by the steamer Mauna Loa, touching ports on the leeward side of the island, are now sent as far as that point on the windward side.

The best baking powder is Schilling's Best; it is pure and fresh and quick-acting.

It makes good bread, and good cake, and everything good that baking powder is used for.

The Postmaster-General, in answer to a question, said he was gratified at the absence of complaints everywhere. "I found no kick coming. The people seemed satisfied with the frequency of the mails. I propose to have the mails rushed both ways between Punaluu and Hilo, so that people at both ends will have the advantage of the two steam lines. Last mail sent across was twelve hours faster than ever before. The contractor wanted to interpret the new arrangement to require rushing mails only toward Hilo and beyond, but I insisted on having the mails by the Kinau rushed in the opposite direction as well. If the present contractor will not do it, another is ready to take up the service and carry it out in accordance with the new requirements."

With regard to changes made at Hilo, Mr. Oat mentioned the opening of the general delivery for letters before the distribution of papers to box holders. He did not consider it right that people who had come perhaps ten or fifteen miles should be kept waiting for their letters until the town people had been served with their newspapers. Another thing he had changed was the keeping open of a bag for receiving mail matter, to be sent aboard a steamer by the last boat without having the contents handled by the postoffice. It was ordered that the outward mail must close half an hour before the sailing of a steamer, a quarter of an hour being added when departure is from Waikanae beach.

Mr. Oat received no request for additional postal savings bank offices in the Kona districts. Mr. August, postmaster at Holualoa, did not think there was enough business to warrant the addition at present. Kailua is a savings bank and money order office. With the development of the country, by the coffee industry and new roads, the savings and money order branches will probably have to be extended to other offices.

The Postmaster General only remained in town a few days after his return from Hawaii when he went to Maui. Landing at Lahaina in a terrific rain squall, he accomplished his inspection there and thence proceeded to Hana. The steamer Helene carried him there, whence he went on horseback to Kipahulu. Crossing a gulch flooded by the heavy rains, Mr. Oat's horse went almost out of sight under water. The rider received a bad wetting, his boots being filled with water, but he was glad to escape with his life. It was at this place that a carrier lately had his local mails washed off his mount and carried to sea.

Although there were no complaints there, Hana on Maui, like Kohala on Hawaii, causes the Postmaster General much concern. He would like to do better for the district, small though its population is, but at present the only way to get foreign and city mail to Hana is by the weekly Claudine route. The steamer Kinau every ten days takes the mail for the whole of Hawaii, and between her trips the steamer Mauna Loa serves the country from Kailua right round through Hilo to Hakalau. Before very long with the new roads, the P. M. G. hopes, the Mauna Loa will carry mails for all of Hawaii.

When Mr. Oat took office the overland carriers, by way of the Volcano House, only carried letter mail between Hilo and Kau. He very soon changed this, first adding local papers and then the foreign paper mail. Maui and Hawaii have for some time had a complete five days' service from Honolulu to the principal points on Maui and Hawaii. Every opportunity is seized by the Postmaster General to forward mails between the trips of the regular passenger liners. Sometimes the steamer managements neglect to notify him, as they are expected

THE ART LEAGUE TONIGHT

List of Exhibitors and Outline of Their Best Work.

Paintings in All Keys—Wautke's Ideals—Hitchcock's Air Studies—Hawaiian Effects
—Modelling and China Painting.

The first view of the Autumn exhibition of the Kiloana Art League will take place at 8 o'clock this evening. All of the exhibits have been hung and the League parlors have been made ready for the reception. The exhibitors and principal studies are as follows:

D. Howard Hitchcock, sixteen pieces, studies in plein art effects. Philip Dodge, eight marines.

Miss French, six studies, the best of which is a lily pond in strong colors.

Mrs. Augusta Graham, six pieces, the chief exhibit being a plaster cast entitled "Above the Hedge Line."

Mrs. Kelly exhibits six paintings, the most notable of which is a large study of Hawaiian flower girls.

Miss A. Parka has two Hilo studies. Miss R. Nolte exhibits several China paintings.

Mrs. Anita Foske's work is in China paintings from wood carvings, and is all quite pleasing.

Miss J. Wores adds some wood carvings to the collection.

C. Wautke, the visiting artist, has a side exhibit of Oriental and California scenery. His work is a good illustration of the Munich school of painting, and is what the French would call heavy.

Mrs. Dacota has two bits of Hawaiian scenery.

Mrs. W. C. Weedon contributes three studies of Island plants.

C. W. Dickey's exhibit this year consists of one water color study.

Miss Bessie Afong displays a charming pastel, a group of lemon shaped guavas.

Mr. Hitchcock strikes a high key in a delicate air effect which occupies a central position in his exhibit. It will undoubtedly attract a great deal of attention.

Each member of the League may take a friend to the reception this evening.

The Reservoir is Leaking.

Residents of the Punchbowl neighborhood are again alarmed about the reservoir, which is full of water above their heads. A well marked leak is now traceable on the floor of Lishman's quarry, and if blasting be continued it is feared that the reservoir will open out at the bottom. The department has the matter in hand, however, and thinks there is no cause for alarm.

Judge Barnard in Town.

Judge E. W. Barnard arrived by the Lehua late yesterday from Laupahoehoe and is quartered at the Arlington hotel. He came down to meet his mother who will return by the Alameda on Thursday from a visit to relatives in the States.

APPRAISERS APPOINTED.

J. G. Waibel Declines to Accept the Position of Deputy Appraiser.

The Cabinet on Saturday finally decided to appoint E. R. Folsom as Customs Appraiser and J. G. Waibel his deputy.

Mr. Folsom resided in the Islands a number of years ago and has recently returned. When here he lived mostly on the island of Hawaii. He is said to be fully qualified by business experience to hold the position.

Everybody knows Jack Waibel, who has been appointed deputy appraiser. He was for years with the firm of T. H. Davies & Co. and recently has been the local representative of J. C. Nohman & Co. and other Coast firms. He would have made an affable and popular addition to the Custom House force had he accepted the position offered him, but this morning he declined it and announced his intention of leaving for San Francisco on the Australia next Wednesday, with the intention of returning in January to take up his permanent residence.

DAWSON CITY OR BUST.

Billy Eassie of Kenia Has a Big Alaska Scheme On.

"Billy" Eassie has Klondikeitis and has it bad. With him it is "Alaska or bust," and he means business. Eassie has figured the thing all out and he knows just what he is doing. He knows exactly where his claim lies and, approximately, how many millions there are in it. The only drawback is that he is not on the ground, but he will fix that up by crossing the Chilkoot in April next.

Eassie is an old miner and his methods will be practical. He will take with him the first essential article—money. Besides his own fortune, numerous friends have "chipped in" $500 each for investment in the Alaskan hills. A firm in San Francisco is constructing machinery upon lines laid down by Mr. Eassie for use in the mines. The Hawaiian prospector will take it up with him when he goes.

New Fire Station Completed.

The concrete flooring in the new Central fire station was finished this morning. Contractor Patzig is also about through with the stalls. The house will be turned over to the department this week. It will take several days to complete the work of paving on the outside. Chief Hunt expects to occupy the building during the last week of this month.

Detectives After Harry Miller.

American detectives have been placed on the track of Harry Miller, the missing man from Honolulu. The latest telegraphic information makes it appear doubtful that he was in the wreck on the Denver and Rio Grande, and his friends now believe that he has met with some other mishap. At any rate they will leave no stone unturned to find out what has become of him.

Encouraging for Investors.

Manager Ahrens had 500 acres of cane planted on Oahu plantation by Saturday night. An expert at Ewa mill said yesterday, giving figures in proof, that the Oahu would have 10,000 tons of sugar for market next year—that is the 1898-9 season.

Kaialani's First Reception.

Nearly a thousand natives called upon the Princess Kaiulani during Saturday. David Kawananakoa and Edward Lilikalaui stood with the young lady during the reception. There was no luau, and the affair was informal and quite simple.

STUNG BY A CENTIPEDE

Henry Congdon Has a Close Call on Friday Night.

His Head and Face Swollen and Great Toe
Big Enough to Wear a Separate Shoe.

Henry Congdon, the Hotel street wine dealer, was terribly stung by a large centipede Friday night. For forty-eight hours after the occurrence the top of his head and the left side of his face were swollen almost beyond recognition, and one of his great toes was twice as large as it should have been.

Congdon was asleep in his bed in his room near Punchbowl, when he was rudely awakened by a feeling of intense pain in his head. He roused himself to find the left side of his face swelling rapidly and stinging in a way to drive him almost to distraction. The veins on that side were swelled out like whipcords and throbbed violently.

Springing out of bed he struck a light, made a hasty examination and found that he had been stung twice, by what was evidently a centipede, on the top of the head. Some convenient lotion was applied to the wounds, and Mr. Congdon then made a thorough search for his little enemy. But the latter kept out of sight and could not be found.

After an hour the man returned to his bed. He had no sooner tucked himself up well than he was sharply stung again on one of his great toes. Throwing the coverlet aside a centipede nearly six inches long was disclosed. It was immediately dispatched and, on account of its great size, was bottled for preservation.

Mr. Congdon has since suffered intensely. His physician found that the poison had permeated his whole system. Medicine could do little good, and nature has been relied on for the most part, to throw off the poison. He is much easier today and is on a high road to early recovery.

Wheelmen's Reception Tonight.

This is the evening of the great wheelmen's reception at the Y. M. C. A., given to the visiting riders and all who competed in the races at Cyclomere park. All wheelmen are invited. Among the attractions will be: An exhibition by Tribby Fowler, songs by the Young Men's Glee Club, fancy clubswinging, selections by the Quintet club and an exhibition of the best wheels offered for sale on this market.

Hammer on Murray Hill.

Captain T. B. Murray is making extensive alterations and improvements about his fine Panahou premises. The large rear veranda has been enclosed and added to the room of the big house. In addition to this the building has been overhauled and neatly painted, which greatly improves its appearance and increases its value.

CYCLONERE PARK RACES.

Closing Night Brought Out the Largest Attendance of the Season.

Whitman Finally Wins a Race and Some Island Records Were Broken—The Present Season Ended.

The closing night of the recent meeting of wheelmen at Cyclomere park brought out the largest attendance of the season. It was estimated that over 3000 people were present on Saturday evening.
The mile match race, best two out of three heats, between Fred Damon and Tom King, was the opening event. It was won by Damon in two straight heats in the same time, 2:21.

In the mile novice open the first heat was taken by Treadway in 2:39 2-5 and the second by Coves in 2:45 4-5. The final heat and the race went to Lloyd, Coves second, the time being three minutes.

The mile open professional was the race of the evening, the riders being paced by Harvey and Lish-man on a tandem. In rounding the first turn Jones passed the pacemakers but their wheel touched his and there was a spill.
Jones went right ahead but the tandem team, Sylva and Sylvester, went over in a bunch. Shar-rick and Whitman kept out of the way and went after Jones. On the final lap at the stretch Shar-rick made a fine spurt and came in just a little ahead of Jones.
Time 2:36.

The half-mile open race for Chinese and Japanese created the most amusement of the evening.
Ed. Kong came in first and Ozawa second. Time 1:22 4-5.

The mile amateur handicap was virtually conceded to Fred. Damon but Henry Giles developed one of his old time bursts of speed in the final spurt and won in 2:28 2-5, with Ludloff second.

Whitman surprised the grand stand by winning the two-thirds mile handicap race, his 50 yards handicap being a big help to him. Shar-rick was second and Jones third.
Time 1:29 4-5.

In the attempts at record breaking Sharrick, paced by Jones and Whitman, made the third of a mile in 37 1-5, which becomes the track record. Sylvester made the same circuit in 39 3-5, beating Sylva's record by a fourth of a second. Henry Giles, paced by Murray and Porter, made a new amateur record for the Islands by making the third in 40 1-5 seconds, and Sylva took the starch out of Sylvester by making the circuit in 39 seconds even.

Trilby Fowler delighted those present with his trick riding, introducing several new feats.
Princess Kaiulani occupied Mr.
Desky's pavilion with a large party, while the National band enlivened the evening with excellent music.

CO-OPERATION OF CHARITIES

Rev. D. P. Birnie Says Benevolent Societies Should Work Together.

He Suggests a System of Exchanging Aid Lists and Data Concerning the Poor.

"The time has arrived when the benevolent societies of Honolulu must adopt a system of co-operative effort," said Mr. Birnie at the Central Union church last evening.

The preacher spoke earnestly and interestingly for twenty minutes to a large congregation.
This paper announced the subject of the discourse a week ago, and many of those present at the evening service were there for the special purpose of hearing the views of the clergyman on the matter.

Beginning with present conditions the preacher remarked that the Chinese and Japanese took care of their own poor and distressed. The Portuguese were also active along that line. Most of the real work of the Samaritans of the city was among the Hawaiians, Americans, British and German residents. There were 1300 men of the last three nationalities in Honolulu, and the calls from them upon the societies entailed a vast amount of work and money.

The work would increase rapidly in the coming years. To meet the extra demands, as well as to carry on the present work successfully, a system of co-operation was a pressing necessity. It would be cheaper and would obviate the possibility of "sponging" upon the societies. Under the present arrangement people have been known to procure aid from two or more organizations at the same time.

The preacher thought there should be an interchange between the societies of lists of persons under their care, including data concerning each case. He scored wealthy people of the city who give little to charity, and hoped a means of losing their purse strings would suggest itself.

Carter Has Been Hustling.

"The last two months have made up the busiest season of my life," reports Sheriff F. W. Carter of Kauai, who is at the Arlington.
Aside from the Smith murder case, which entailed a great deal of hard work, Sheriff Carter had set several traps for notorious law breakers, nearly all of which were successful, and threw a flood of business upon the lower courts.

EVENING BULLETIN.

A. V. GEAR Manager.
DANIEL LOGAN, Editor.

MONDAY, NOV. 15, 1897.

Hawaii's postal service keeps up with the general progress of the country. On the other islands, considering all the difficulties, it is even a trifle in advance of the people's expectations.

Mr. Birnie's advice, on the matter of local charitable societies, is sound and ought to be taken. It contemplates no interference with the work of any single organization, but will help each one in knowing the merits of some cases better.

Editor Snicker strikes a good keynote, on his entrance into Hilo journalism, by saying that the mission of the Herald is to assist in developing the island of Hawaii and not to foster factional differences. A factional and personal "roaster" is as much a nuisance in the journalistic field as a "scorcher" is amidst the ranks of rational wheel riders.

To have thorough unity of this group there is to be desired, after good roads opening up the different islands to settlement and traffic, express steam service between the islands, and, on top of that, inter-island telegraphic communication. The first is coming on rapidly now, and the second and third, bound to come in time, might be hurried up by the bringing into play of existing but latent public spirit and enterprise.

THE FOOTBALL GAME.

Saturday's game of football ended in the first half in a manner very unsatisfactory to those who had paid their money at the gates. E. R. Adams was chosen referee and P. L. Weaver umpire and before the game commenced these officials asked the players if their appointment was satisfactory and if their decisions would be abided by. A promise to this effect was given and the play commenced.

The Town team clearly had the best of the playing, but, before the first half of the game was up, the Regiment team questioned a decision of the referee and it being decided adversely to them left the grounds in a body.

The referee then awarded the game to the Town team by a score of 6 to 0, according to the rules provided for just such cases.

After this many people demanded their entrance money back again but the man in charge of the box office had disappeared.

WILL GO TO WASHINGTON.

Richardson, Bob Wilcox and A. Marques to Leave Friday.

The Anti-Annexation delegation will proceed to Washington this week. John Richardson, Robert W. Wilcox and A. Marques will go as the representatives of Maui. It is said that the last named will pay the expenses of the trip. The sum of $1300 has been raised for a delegate from Honolulu. It is yet to be decided whether James K. Kaula or D. Kalanokalani will be the man.

The Honolulu delegate will likely sail on the Australia, Wednesday afternoon. The others will take the Gaelic on Friday.

The President Receives Kaulani.

President and Mrs. Dole received Princess Kaulani and Hon. A. S. Cleghorn last Thursday afternoon. The call was a short one. The young lady was cordially received by the President and his wife, and was granted a pleasant interview. On account of the departure of the President on Friday the call, which had been planned for this week, was hastened.

EXAMINATIONS OF JURORS

Still Proceeding in the Kauai Murder Cases Before Judge Perry.

Defense May Exercise Forty-eight Peremptory Challenges and the Prosecution Six—Other Court Matters.

At the afternoon session of the Kauai murder trial on Saturday afternoon, the examination of jurors for cause was continued, and at half-past 5 by agreement of counsel an adjournment was taken until 9 o'clock this morning.

At the opening of Court this morning W. A. Kinney, of counsel for the prosecution, asked the Court for leave to further examine juror Wm. Kaapa. Mr. Robertson for the defense objected but the Court allowed the request and the usual exception was noted by the defense.

Up to the noon recess twelve jurymen out of twenty-four drawn had been excused for cause and about six passed. The examination of jurors is still going on this afternoon. No peremptory challenges will be exercised until twelve jurors have first been passed for cause. The defense are entitled to use if they see fit forty-eight peremptory challenges, twelve for each defendant, while the prosecution are allowed six only. There is little chance of securing a jury today.

In the ejectment suit of Abraham Fernandes vs. Samuel O. Dwight in which judgment was rendered for plaintiff this term Cecil Brown, plaintiff's counsel, has filed a bill of costs amounting to $18.

Deputy-marshal H. R. Hitchcock files a return in the case of E. A. Jacobsen, in bankruptcy, that he has duly delivered to P. L. Weaver, assignee of the bankrupt estate, all the goods of the said bankrupt in his possession.

Cecil Brown, executor of the last will and testament of Kaleipua Kanoa, deceased, has filed an inventory of said estate, showing real property valued at $30,300 and personal effects to the amount of $4400.

J. K. Nakookoo, recently convicted of gross cheat, has filed an appeal to the Supreme Court. S. K. Kane for defendant.

Beautiful Cabinet Work.

W. Miller has a beautiful inlaid center table on view at his shop on Hotel street. There are more than forty kinds of wood in it. The table is square with cutaway corners. A star within a border is the central design, and there is another border near the margin of the table. This beautiful piece of furniture was made to the order of Messrs. Gay & Robinson for a wedding present to the late Captain A. G. S. Hawes, British Commissioner, whose intended marriage was prevented by death.

Burglars are having quite a good time in Honolulu just now. So accustomed are we to take up a daily paper and find an account of another "Daring Robbery" that it is quite a disappointment after carefully going through the news of the day to find no mention of the usual crime.

Just who is responsible for this state of things is an open question. It is all very well to throw reason to the winds and accuse our police force of incapacity, etc., but the true cause is to be found nearer home. There are many persons who would not think of a criminal act, were temptation not placed in their way by the incautious acts of many of our citizens. Valuables are allowed to lie about in all places and at all times, and no care whatever is taken to secure them from curious eyes.

The true remedy is in a nutshell—or rather in a Safe. The old excuse of "too expensive" does not hold now—a days. We carry a selection of safes made by the first manufacturers in the United States in no less than 6 sizes, from the $15 "Baby" to preserve the family jewels, books, etc., to the largest office safe. All sizes are equally well made, strong and beautiful.

No one can afford to be without one—a safeguard alike from fire and the enterprising burglar.

Every being who has suffered from sick-headache caused by derangement of the stomach can appreciate a preparation which will at once give relief and does not lose its effect after taking a few doses, the result generally experienced after taking many saline aperients.

Magnesia

The cooling and refreshing effect produced by taking a dose on rising will convince even the skeptic that it is just the thing for this climate. It has a pleasant taste and never fails to act. A dose taken before breakfast regularly will insure good health.

Sal

The ingredients that enter into the composition of MAGNESIA SAL FRUTAS are salts obtained from fruit and are harmless when taken into the system. The preparation can be taken indefinitely without injury.

WORK FOR THE STAGE.

Carpenter and his Assistants—Antidote to Family Jars.

George Crose and his assistants have been very busy repairing some of the scenery that was broken on the steamer coming down. The set used on the opening bill, "Christopher Junior," is a very novel one, and will be particularly appreciated by the people of Honolulu who may witness the performance, because it is a style of home that they are all familiar with.

The wit that runs through the entire play never fails to put the auditors in a good humor, so that if there are any ill-tempered members in your family, send them to the opening play of the coming season of the Frawley Company, and you will have peace forever more. The sale opened this morning at 9 o'clock.

Speed in Torpedo Boats.

The development of speed in torpedo boats is a study of special interest, and the effect of the rapid increase of speed in this class of vessel is by no means confined to it, as a basis is thus formed for the introduction of many improvements, and consequent higher speed, in vessels of large size.

The question is often asked, What is the probable increase in speed to be in the future and in what direction are we to look for improvements with a view to obtain it? One evident mode of increasing speed is by augmenting the size of the vessel and its machinery, as if the proportion of weight allotted to the machinery is the same a greater speed will be obtained. To secure speed by this means, however, does not involve any special skill or anything in the nature of improvement. All that is necessary is simply to reproduce the same description of hull and engines, but of a larger size.

Greater skill is shown where an exceptional speed is obtained within small dimensions, and in this respect the results obtained by M. Normand of Havre in his latest achievements are specially creditable. No doubt material of greater strength than generally adopted would admit of lighter scannings for the hulls. Probably the engines themselves may be driven at a higher number of revolutions and possibly improvements in water tube boilers may enable a reduction of weight to be secured without loss of efficiency. Aluminium may also be introduced as a substitute for heavier metals. It is in the saving of weight for power that advance may be looked for in the immediate future, and the shipbuilder can now see his way to obtain from 32 to 34 knots—A. F. Yarrow in Cassier's Magazine.

THE TALKING STRING.

By MARTHA McCULLOCH WILLIAM.

(Copyright, 1897, by the Author.)

As Ned ran along to school, about 8 o'clock one frosty March morning, he found a curious thing at the side of the road. First he thought it was a snake, but snakes were not yet out of their winter houses. Then it seemed to him a whiplash. At last he made out that it was a length of leather curiously colored and mottled with darker spots.

"Now I can feel all the fellows. Hay none of them ever saw the like of it. I will drag it gently over their feet and make them, too, think it a snake," Ned said to himself, and he slipped it through his hand, then stretched it taut and gave it a gentle jerk before setting it at the bottom of his pocket. "How they will jump and cry out! particularly the Weston boy. I hate him anyway. I hate all cowards."

"Do you?" said a muffled voice; so muffled and weak indeed that though Ned started a bit at the sound he easily persuaded himself he had imagined, not heard it. But all the way to the school door he had a sort of shivery sensation and ran fast, now and then looking over his shoulder as though expecting to see something queer behind him.

"Whew! I am late!" he said as he came up to it. "Everybody is inside at lessons. I shall tell the master--let me see! oh! that mother sent me on an errand and I could not get here earlier," he began in thought. Again came the muffled voice:

"Tell him a lie, eh! Thought you hated cowards. Lying is the worst sort of cowardice. You know you loitered, looking for young squirrels in the big oak tree. If you told that he would!"

"Give me five black marks and lose me all chance of the medal," Ned said, too angry to be much awed. "I did go an errand last night," he went on. "If I had not, I would have been abed earlier, got up earlier and been here!"

"Just when you are," retorted the voice. It had not grown stronger, but shriller--so keen and penetrating Ned was afraid those inside might hear it. He hurried in and slipped into his seat as quietly as a mouse. Soon he had his book out and was studying as though life depended on knowing that particular lesson by heart. The master's head had been turned as he came in. Maybe he might be persuaded that Ned had been overlooked, not absent, at roll call. He felt more than a little ashamed, though, when it turned out that way. After class, where he had recited best

"HOW DO YOU LIKE ME, NEDDY?" of them all, the master said almost affectionately: "Bless my soul, Ned, I must be growing blind and deaf. I was about to mark you absent, when I looked up and saw you in place. I am as glad I did not do it as that I did not need to do it. You lads are racing so gallantly for the medal I should hate to see a single one drop out."

"You are very good, sir," Ned answered, getting very red; "too good by half." The hateful voice rang in his ear. He was relieved to find that the rest did not hear it, yet so upset over it that he made a sad mess of the algebra lesson which came next. Usually the problems were but play to him. Today x and y, and plus signs and minus ones tangled and jumbled themselves together in his brain after a maddening fashion. But to this fall in it would send him from first place, down a mark below Timmy Angel, the next competitor. Timmy was Ned's deskmate, yet a great chum of the Weston boy whom Ned hated.

Now he came over to them, ostensibly to ask for a pencil he had left on the desk yesterday, really to show them in the shelter of his open book all those knotty and tantalizing problems worked out beautifully upon fair white paper. "Set up half the night to do 'em," he said in a proud whisper. "But, oh, ain't I glad now that I did!"

"Let me look good. Leave 'em a minute, can't you?" Timmy returned, with a sigh half of envy. Just then the master called: "Weston, I think it is your turn to fetch water. Let us have a fresh bucketful, please. Meantime you are excused from algebra."

"Please, sir, mayn't Timmy go along? He can take the other bucket. We shall need 'em both by dinner time," Weston answered. The master smiled and nodded. Before yes was out of his mouth the two lads were scuttling away, leaving Ned alone with his blurred mind and those temptingly wrought out problems.

He shut his eyes and dug his knuckles hard in them. In his heart he was saying: "It can't be any harm. Weston is excused. That means a good mark for him--the very highest maybe. And I can't, I simply can't, do these exercises. Not now, I mean. I will--how ever, I will--tonight, when I can think."

"You will not," said the voice in a funny little scream that made Ned at most jump out of his seat. He knew whence it came now--out the pocket with the string in it. "I ought never to have put it there. I might have known it for a piece of witchwork," Ned said to himself, trembling all over, but he stuck to his ill determination. He would use Weston's exercises. He must indeed. It was out of the question to think of studying anything until he was rid of that fearful string. He must keep it until playtime. If he slid it out and dropped it under another desk, there was no telling what might not come of it.

The spring was half a mile off. Weston alone might have come back from it quickly. With Timmy to bear him company they were good for at least the algebra half hour. The master was even now calling up the class. Ned's feet were linden as he went, but again fortune favored him. After a smiling glance over the exercise paper, which Ned had handed him, the master called some one else to the blackboard, saying in a kindly aside: "I must give the slower wits a chance, Neddy. I see plainly you need no help which I can give."

"No. He needs manliness and honesty. Only himself can give that," the terrible voice said clearly in Ned's ear. He set his teeth hard and got so white the master said kindly: "You may go outside for a bit, Neddy. If you do not feel better soon, I will excuse you from all the other classes and send you home."

"Thank you, sir. I--I don't feel just right," Ned stammered, making for the door. In his haste he was forgetting the tolltale paper.

"Oh, you are not even a clever rogue," whispered the voice. "You bungle in your cheating. Remember the Weston boy will come back pretty soon."

"If--if you are done with those, sir, I would like them. I--I want to show them to my father," Ned said, holding out his hand. As the master laid the exercise paper within it he turned it over. Something upon the underside made his face grow grave, but he said nothing, only waved Ned away and went on with the class. If he had spoken, Ned would scarcely have heard. The voice was dining and hissing into his ears:

"You hate a liar and a coward--at least you say so--yet you have stolen meanly and lied to cover your theft. Perhaps you never thought before how easily one wrong thing slides into another. Get away from here! Quick! Go and stay with yourself awhile and judge how fit you are for better company."

He got out of the house as the water bringers came to the door. A cool draft revived him somewhat. He ran on to the woods and sat down at the side of a great tree, too shaken and miserable to pay much heed to anything. Presently he reached cautiously within his pocket and drew out the hateful string. Still it looked no more than a harmless piece of queer leather. He noted, though, that the darkish mottles were darker and the bright colors somewhat faded.

"Tell me what that means. Tell me what you are, you terror!" he said at last, flinging the string angrily away from him. It fell upon a bed of moss near at hand, and Ned was astounded to see it dissolve to colored vapor out of which there soon appeared the daintiest merry fairy in the world.

"How do you like me, Neddy? You never saw me before, but I have watched you ever since you were born," she said, tripping up to him and hopping upon his hand. "You were born in my minute. Each fairy of us has a minute, you know, and all the children born then are our care."

"Why didn't you come sooner? Then I would not have done such nasty, mean things," Ned groaned.

"Why did you make it necessary for me to come at all?" the fairy demanded, stamping her foot, which felt like a dewdrop pattering on Ned's hand. "Yes, you brought me to you," she went on. "Such a censorious, critical fellow you have grown! Because poor Jimmy Weston cannot help his fear of cows and toads you have sneered at him and made the school look down on him, yet used his brains without scruple."

"No, no. I--I hated to do it. I meant to make it up to him," Ned broke in eagerly. The fairy looked at him with keen eyes. "Intentions do not count. Only actions," she said. "You have had too easy a time. You could learn without effort and are too strong to be afraid, so let yourself be contemptuous of less fortunate ones. You have not learned the consideration due from strength to weakness. I came to teach you that more than anything else. When the master gave back the paper, he saw Weston's name on it. His first thought involuntarily was the truth--that you had tricked him. His second was that because of illness you had made a mistake."

"And he did not tell the rest? Oh, I can never thank him enough!" Ned said contritely. "Neither can I thank you, dear fairy, as you deserve."

"Yes, you can," said the fairy. "Always believe the best and do the best."

"I will try," said Ned. And try he did always thereafter.

A common error that people who own oil painting make, is in allowing them to go too long without attention. A painting should never go more than a year without overhauling especially in this country where the air is so laden with salt, they should be protected with varnish. King Bros. do this kind of work at very reasonable prices.

Although this article is not intended for a review of the whole Hawaiian postal service, it may be mentioned that from 14,000 to 17,000 letters and 6000 to 8000 papers are dropped into the general postoffice in Honolulu in one week for delivery and transmission. Of course receipts from foreign countries and the other islands are in proportion. At present the Postmaster General and the Superintendent of Public Works are in consultation about the new front to be put in the building. It will have latest style boxes and be a great addition to the improvements that have been in progress for several years.

THE PRETTY TYPEWRITER.

A Romance Founded on Several Facts of Recent Occurrence.

She was as beautiful as a dream and as fresh as the dawn.

But Horatio Everingham was not in a genial mood. He had arisen with a headache, and everything had seemed to go wrong at the store that morning. Only five minutes before the sweet young woman entered one of the firm's oldest customers had left in anger and declared that he would in future buy all his goods from a rival house.

"Well," said the old gentleman as she stood with downcast eyes before him, "I suppose you've called in answer to my advertisement for a typewriter, have you?"

"Yes, sir," she demurely replied.

"I've already engaged one," he went on. "Sorry you didn't get here a little earlier. The fact is I hired the first applicant that came, for I concluded that a person who would not get here early enough to beat the others who might want the place wouldn't be likely to be very prompt in getting around if I were to employ her."

"I should have been here earlier," she said, "if I had not first gone to see Mr. Bullion, the banker. He also advertised for a typewriter. I am sorry now that I didn't come here first. Then I should probably have beaten all the others."

While she had talked Horatio Everingham had taken his first good look at her, and he, too, was sorry that she had gone to see Bullion first. But there was no use regretting what had been done. He didn't need her now; so there was nothing to do but let her go. He arose to show her out of the private office, but she hesitated.

"You don't think you need two typewriters, do you?" she said at last.

"No," the merchant prince replied rather impatiently. "One can do the work easily. Good morning."

"Well, then," she murmured, half to herself, "I suppose I shall have to accept Mr. Bullion's offer. I'm sorry, for I'd rather work here."

"What!" exclaimed Mr. Everingham. "You're going to work for Mr. Bullion?"

"Yes. I told him I'd come back if you didn't want me."

"Stay here, my girl, stay here," said the old gentleman, while beads of cold sweat stood out upon his brow. "I'll make room for you some way. Great Caesar, what a narrow escape! Why, all my money is in Bullion's bank."—Cleveland Leader

THAT DINNER.

Some very funny tricks were played by the enlisted men of the army on their officers during the rebellion.

One day Captain Ripka proposed to some of his brother officers that they should have a grand dinner at a certain time and place. The time selected was a few days off and the place a sawmill somewhere near the Dismal Swamp canal. Of course the people who were to get up the dinner were the necessities of the occasion, but all this could be obtained by the officers, who could buy the tables and hire the plates, knives and forks in Norfolk. The idea was voted a good one, and preparations were made to carry it out. Men from Captain Ripka's company were detailed to go to Norfolk and procure the necessary things, and among these men were two of the wildest men in the command. They were young Dr. Theodore Runkel and Carr Rapp.

It would be useless to tell of their escapades while on this expedition. Suffice to say everything was provided in handsome style by the purveyors, and in due time the dinner was ordered for a certain day. The dinner was to take place at 6 o'clock. In the meantime the officers sat about and talked of their proposed "feed," and the time for them to sit down was only too far removed for comfort. They were hungry for a homelike dinner once more.

About 12 o'clock on the day of the dinner a group of soldiers might have been seen—in fact, they were seen—loitering about in the company streets as if waiting for something to turn up. At 2 o'clock it evidently had turned up, for the soldiers could be seen in the streets no longer. Now let us proceed to the sawmill, where the dinner was prepared.

Of course no men were about, but the women folks had been most industrious, and chicken, ham, potatoes and strawberries and things had been prepared galore. A large dining table had been spread beneath the sheltering branches of a sturdy oak, plates had been laid for over a dozen, and now all was ready. Only the guests were wanted.

Carr Rapp was a tall, good-looking soldier, but he found it impossible to wear stripes for any length of time on account of certain peculiarities not necessary to mention. His general got up as well as his looks had made him quite a favorite with the ladies, and when he proposed to eat a good dinner he had the favor of the ladies in his mind, and he believed they would grant his request without a murmur. The boys accepted the invitations, and that was the reason why they were not found in their company streets during the afternoon. Somewhere about 4 o'clock the ladies of the sawmill had the pleasure of welcoming Rapp and his entire party. They had come for dinner. Was it ready yet? For they were somewhat in a hurry, and who knew but what the rebels might be upon them at any moment.

The dinner was served in fine style, and the boys enjoyed it as only hungry soldiers could. They finished up with beer and cigars, and then, thanking the ladies for their kindness, accidentally upset the table as they arose and spilled what was left on the ground. Then they departed, but not before the women had commenced to think that perhaps there might be something wrong about them, but they never for once thought that they had given the wrong people the right dinner. At any rate the dinner was ordered and paid for. That was all they needed.

Now for the other fellows. At half past 5 a jolly party of officers of the Fifty-eighth came riding up to the sawmill. The table had been righted, and everything looked as it had before, but it wouldn't bear a close inspection. The women now saw that something was indeed wrong, but they held their tongues.

"Now, fellows," cried Captain Ripka as he dismounted from his mule, "here's the place where we get our money back, and if any man doesn't enjoy it why he's a shod." How the captain did rub his hands and caper about while he spoke! The anticipation of getting a good dinner had fairly set these men beside themselves, and the way they behaved was like little children. They wandered about and looked at everything, and then asked the captain how soon the dinner would be ready.

"In a few minutes," said Ripka. But while he spoke he was wondering why it was so late, why he and the others had not been called long before. In the meantime the women were sure a mistake of some kind had been made, but at last the old lady came forward and spoke.

"What do you gentlemen want?" she asked. Every man who knew Captain Al Ripka will see his face at this particular instant. It was jovial and laughing most of the time, but now it wore a look of wonderment.

"We have come for our dinner," said he in surprise. "cents," the dinner we ordered. Is it not ready yet? If it is not, we'll wait a few minutes."

By this time the other officers had clustered around, and the captain was watched with absorbing interest.

"The gentlemen have been here and eaten the dinner," quoth the lady sadly.

"Whor? Which? Whor?" "Whor?" followed in quick succession from a dozen voices. The lady tried to explain, but she couldn't satisfy a dozen hungry men. Then she looked toward the table, and the eyes of the officers followed her eyes.

Then, as if the whole thing had been preconcerted, they made a rush for the table, only to find it bare of food. Then there was swearing done that would have put to shame the array of Flanders. The disappointment was heartrending, and Captain Ripka's position was that of a man in a slough—the more he endeavored to get out the deeper he got in.

But there was no help for it. The dinner had been consumed, and now nothing was left to tell the tale except that there is many a slip 'twixt cup and lip. It had disappeared and left but the table and the empty plates. Nothing could be done to mend the matter, but one officer suggested that they eat sawdust from the mill, so that they might not return as hungry as they had set out. The proposition was not accepted, but the officers returned to camp sadder if not wiser men. To punish Rapp for his share of the dinner would be to expose themselves to the ridicule of their fellows, so they did nothing with him. He was frequently heard in after times to ask his tent mate if they liked a good dinner. Poor fellow, he and the nearly all concerned are dead now. The stories of his pranks and tricks have outlived him, and this is one of them.—Exchange.
