CANADIAN LOYALTY.

Two of our local contemporaries are distressing themselves over the loyalty of the Dominion of Canada to the British Empire. Because a few French-Canadian radicals talked independence and hinted American annexation, at a banquet got up for the purpose, the conclusion is drawn that Canada is disloyal. It is true there is a strong, perhaps a growing element, of the Canadian people in favor of independence. At the same time, in probably ninety-nine percent of the constituencies of Canada, a candidate for legislative honors has only to have his loyalty successfully impugned to be certain of defeat. Within the past few months the subject of closer relations with the Imperial Government has engaged the earnest and enthusiastic attention of the best minds in the Dominion. Although Imperial Federation is not likely to be brought about by any formal compact, evidences are accumulating that it is being consummated in fact, like the growth of the British constitution, by the addition of precedent to precedent. Every year the influence and the privileges of the Colonies are being increased in London. Even now the period is within measurable distance, when the Colonies will be admitted to consultation, through their agents in London, upon their mutual concerns with the Empire, as their desires regarding their own affairs have, for a good while past, received the utmost consideration from the Home Government.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A correspondent has, unsolicitedly, given an effective reply to the Advertiser's defense and eulogium of the mynah bird.

While there remains the slightest danger of infection from the quarantined ship's company, people should be careful of their general health, and see that themselves and their premises are made and kept clean.

It was only at the last moment before going to press yesterday, that we had the facts in possession, regarding the infection on board the Japanese immigrant steamer. Therefore, there was no opportunity for making any comments upon the matter. Now that the full facts of the case are before the public, there seems nothing to be said but that the President of the Board of Health appears to have thoroughly recognized, and effectively acted upon, his grave responsibilities as guardian of the public health.

THE MYNAHS.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—A great deal of encouragement is being held out to people here to raise fruits, blackberries, grapes, etc., etc., and I wish it were possible, but I claim it is not, nor will it ever be so long as the useful (?) mynah has the run of the place. Mr. Herbert was one of the first to introduce grape vines, fruit trees, etc., here, and he has been obliged to abandon the whole thing, solely on account of the mynah birds. Mr. Milton, who raises a few pounds, where he ought to hundreds, of the best grapes grown in this Kingdom, has to tie up all the bunches with pieces of cloth, to prevent the mynahs from harvesting the entire crop. There are plenty of people who have the best varieties of fruit trees—peach, fig, plum, etc., besides small fruits, who can hardly procure fruit for their tables, let alone sell any. The price of such fruits as ought to be plentiful and cheap here should convince the most sceptical that it is due to the thieving good-for-nothing mynah. It is true they did some good years ago, in decimating the caterpillars, but then the plains were open, not built over. Now the same land is being cultivated, and nearly all the residents owning poultry, the caterpillars are exterminated (and the fruits will soon be). I do not believe a single person who has fruit trees, or strawberry vines, or, for that matter, pigeons, ducks, or young poultry, will have or say a good word for this pestiferous creature, the mynah, and for one I hope the law protecting them will be repealed at the next session of the Legislature. A repeal of the law would be useful—exterminate the sparrow and mynah, or drive them out of town, where they would benefit (?) the stock-raiser. Result, plenty of cheap fruit, and we would not have to pay, as now, 40 cts. per lb. for grapes or 6 cts. apiece for figs.

VENTURE.

THIS fast trotting stallion has been withdrawn from training and will now be kept for stock purposes exclusively. He has shown as much speed as ever and had it not been for an accident which befell him a few days before the race, he being dead lame on the 11th, we think that he would have given the gang a hard tussle for the money. He is now all right again, and is being regularly jogged at the track, and can show close to a 2:30 clip at any time that he is called upon. This kind of treatment has been found by long experience to be the right plan to adopt with a stallion, as by it he is not only a surer foal-getter, but also he will transmit a greater amount of speed, energy and vigor to his offspring. This plan is now the rule in all of the large breeding establishments everywhere.

To parties owning good mares this is an opportunity that should not be neglected, for Venture, with his fine breeding and great speed, I consider the most desirable stock horse in the country. Mr. Campbell tells me that of all of the horses that he has imported to this country, which is probably a dozen or more, he likes his colts by Venture better than any of them; which is surely proof enough of his qualities as a stock-getter. Mares will be taken to the Park and returned free of charge. For any additional particulars apply to corner of Punchbowl and Queen Streets.

HAVING just completed two 27 feet Surf Boats on the model of the Kinau's boat, so highly approved by Capt. King and others. I am now prepared to fill other orders. These boats have their timbers in one piece running across the keel from gunwale to gunwale, bent by steam; thwart knees also bent 2 and 2 1/2 inches square. They are consequently lighter and more flexible, and the timbers being closer together, stronger and less liable to be severely bulged than those built after the usual process with the timbers in pieces and far apart. The boats will be sold at a price to compete with others of either local or foreign build. Our building facilities enable us to build to any model or size, decked or otherwise, and to supply duplicate parts of the same at a few hours' notice. There are several of these boats now open to inspection which will be sold finished or otherwise. Terms Cash.

A CIVIL ACTION.

In the Civil Court this morning the case of Wm. Horan vs. J. R. Holt, Jr., was heard. It was to recover $95, the expenses for training a horse. Horan stated he took the horse to train at the regular charge, $2 per day. The defendant paid him $50. On presenting the bill for feed, the defendant said he would pay it, but had not done so. The defendant Holt said that he told Horan if he could make the horse trot in 2.45 he would pay all expenses of training. The horse was to be matched against another for a purse. He was short of $50 to make up the purse and Holt gave him that amount. A few days afterwards Horan told the defendant he had lost the race, and the horse had moved in three minutes. He presented the grain bill, when Holt refused to pay it. Other witnesses were called for the defense, after which His Honor gave judgment for defendant, costs $3.00. An appeal was noted to Intermediary Court.

Honolulu Institutions

The Public Schools.

What they are Doing, and how they do it.

A Round of Visitation.

Good Work Well Done.

THE ROYAL SCHOOL.

This institution is located on Emma Street, near the corner of School Street. The buildings stand on a fine large area, near the base of Punchbowl. The view of the mountain, as seen through the heavy foliage of the school grounds and the adjoining lots, adds to the picturesque beauty of the locality. The course of study through all the grades is similar to that of the Fort Street School, reported in yesterday's issue of the BULLETIN. There are eleven teachers, the Rev. Alexander Mackintosh being principal. There appears to be a very judicious division of labor between the teachers of the ten departments below the principal's, the number of pupils in each room being nearly the same. There is no regulation to exclude any nationality from attendance at this school, although, probably on the sole authority of custom, it is practically native throughout. It is conducted in English, and none but text-books in the English language are used.

THE PRINCIPAL'S ROOM.

The morning exercises commence with a Bible lesson, on which are based a few practical comments applicable to the duties of every-day life, and intended to fix the character of every boy in principles of pure morality. Although "the Bible in schools" is a fighting question among politicians in countries claiming a more advanced civilization; here it is recognized as the text-book of the highest ideal of moral excellence.

Algebra being down on the timetable as the work of the next hour, two or three problems are read from the teacher's desk, the pupils taking them down with pen or pencil in full. After the lapse of a few minutes, the returns begin to come in, and are, with few exceptions, found to be correct. Mathematics, in all its branches, is a considerably magnified bug-bear in the imagination of most specimens of the genus school-boy; but to the Hawaiian student, working from English text-books, with English symbols and with enunciations and expressions in the English idiom, this science is invested with peculiar difficulties. And the native-born lad who will win his spurs by successfully fighting his way up the rough and rugged incline of mathematical science must have an intellect of no mean dimensions. After an exercise is finished, the pupils are expected to pass muster under a close examination of the reason for every step in the process of solution, in order to show that their work is intelligible to themselves. This lesson is followed by an exercise in English dictation, and the translation of the English text into Hawaiian. This is a feat, the difficulties of which cannot be realized by one not versed in grammar and analysis and in the idioms of both languages. There are many words, particularly those of Latin extraction, in English, for which the native has no corresponding terms. In such cases, the translator must ascertain the root meaning of the word from its Latin original, and express this meaning in Hawaiian phrase. Hence, in many cases the Hawaiian really consists of paraphrased definitions of very simple English words. All the boys' writings are minutely criticised, and no default in orthography or punctuation passes uncorrected. For the more thoroughly familiarizing the pupils with both languages, colloquial exercises are an important and effective part of the daily work. The analysis of a (very) complex sentence from one of the poets is elaborated on the black-board with a correctness of detail that would be impossible without a fair understanding of the structure of the language. The boys here, for the most part, wield the English pen with a remarkable degree of readiness, and their style of penmanship generally indicates a commendable ambition to do what is done in the best manner possible.

As to regularity of attendance this department has a good record. The full register of twenty-eight boys, shows a total of only four absent marks from the first to the twenty-seventh of May, and these few absences were caused by sickness. It is evident from this, at least, that they have not yet reached that stage of modern civilization where it is considered vulgar to be healthy. A number of the boys are taking Latin as an extra study, and as it is not laid down in their prescribed syllabus, they have lessons at recess times, probably one of the first instances on record in which boys preferred Latin to play. The Rev. principal, too, observes that they show an extraordinary aptness in the acquisition of that language.

While the Board of Education undoubtedly deserve credit for the commodious and airy buildings in which the eleven departments are conducted, it is almost too bad to pass an adverse criticism on their liberality; but the fact is that the furniture of the principal's room is not in keeping with the status of the school. The furniture is second-class, and very much depreciated at that, and not only is it second-class and depreciated, but it has a very dim and distant recollection of the painter's brush, so dim, indeed, that it is now scarcely capable of smiling, through its antiquated ugliness, if he should come again. A set of first-class desks in this room is certainly a most desirable improvement.

MISS L. L. MOORE'S ROOM.

The department next in order is in charge of Miss Moore. Twenty-one pupils are found present. Some specimens of English reading are given in the usual order of the lesson. The boys read with a fine clearness of utterance. The English ear cannot fail to be struck with the clean-cut syllabication which many people born with English organs of speech might imitate with decided advantage. The elocutionary quality of the reading is determined by the teacher assuming the situation of an auditor. In this way defects in pronunciation, accent or inflection have but a slender chance of passing uncorrected.

English composition and practice in common correspondence are part of the daily work. The specimens produced from the exercise going on at the time attest that the instructions given in this branch must have been minute. The boys, before being promoted into the principal's class, are expected to be acquainted with arithmetic through fractions and compound numbers, and to be proficient in the corresponding subjects of the course of study.

MISS K. LEWIS'S ROOM.

The next member of the staff visited is Miss Lewis. It is the time allotted to writing, followed by a brief exercise in spelling and definition. The writing book is Payson's No. 3. Specimens of penmanship are exhibited which are really perfect in their execution. Time for closing having arrived, a supplementary call was made next day, when the lads were found hoeing away with exemplary patience and perseverance among those dry rows of figures encountered in solutions of problems under the head of Least Common Multiple. All slates are carefully examined by the teacher, and give evidence of attention and application on the part of the workers. The number present is twenty-one.

MISS J. TANER'S ROOM.

The next room visited is that of Miss Taner, who has an attendance of twenty-six. Original compositions are in course of being written out on blackboards and slates. The compositions consist of plain narrations of such incidents as have come under the pupils' own observations on the street or elsewhere. These performances display considerable ingenuity and afford each member of the class the best possible drill in the use of words, and the structure and arrangement of sentences. This plan is immeasurably better than prescribing set subjects to pupils for compositions, reckless of whether or not they know anything about the subjects on which they are to discourse. Some excellent pieces of practical elocution are rendered in reading the lesson of the day in the Second Supplementary Reader. Master Walter Napoleon utters his sentences in something of the tone and style of a parliamentarian.

MISS N. ANDREWS'S ROOM.

Passing along to the next apartment, Miss Andrews is found just finishing the examination of an exercise in dictation. A recitation in geography follows. The members of the class are evidently up to time on the lesson. As a test of their acquisitions in this branch, they are assigned the map of one of the continents, and show themselves prepared to spot the principal points without any hesitation. The next performance observed here is arithmetic, consisting mainly of solutions in long division on the blackboards. This work is effected with creditable speed and correctness. The number present is twenty-one.

MISS L. B. BRICKWOOD'S ROOM.

This is the principal department of the Primary Division, in which there are altogether six teachers. There are thirty-three present in this room. A number of the scholars are stationed at different points round the room, busily engaged writing, from dictation, on the boards. The show in this line of work, considering the age and stature of the pupils, may be marked down as very good. The time for recess having come about, the pupils are filed out in military order, keeping time and step as if they had been under the training of Captain O'Connor. The return from the playground is performed in similar style. The pat, pat, pat, sounding through the open doors and windows from the other rooms in the building indicate that the same order and precision prevail there. Some three or four of the juniors in this department, on their return from the outer air, come forward to the platform and each one counts down, cashier fashion, a pretty large handful of small weeds, done up carefully in parcels of ten. Enquiry elicits the information that these little fellows had been sentenced to pick weeds during recess time as a penance for some breach of regulations. It is a mode of punishment that commends itself by a three-fold argument: it reminds the boys of the necessity of mending their ways, gives them a good lesson in the elements of the Arabic notation, and helps to keep the grounds clear of weeds. A number of English words and phrases are translated into Hawaiian on the boards, and show that considerable progress has already been made in this part of the Royal School work.

MRS. J. BROWN'S ROOM.

In this apartment, Mrs. Brown has a class of twenty-nine present. At the close of a piece of reading, there is an elaborate exercise on the lesson involving the subject matter, definition of words, translation and English grammar. In a spelling exercise, the thirteen lads in line are correct 35 out of 39 times, a good enough exhibit if made by a like number of English boys. This is followed by some sharp drill on the multiplication table, the plague of every small boy's life. The class is fully prepared for sharp practice, there being but one miss in many rounds. Then comes an exercise in addition, in which the lads hold their ground equally well.

MISS P. RHODES'S ROOM.

In this department there are 30 pupils present. Creditable exhibits are made in elementary reading, followed by black-board work. There is a manifest increase in the peculiar difficulties of the teacher's work as we get back towards the first grades, owing to the pupils' studies being prosecuted in what is to them a foreign language in which they have not had the time or the practice, as yet, to shape their ideas. In spite of these manifest disadvantages, the pupils are exceedingly keen and sharp at figures, and give unmistakable evidence of being well drilled. Their execution in the addition of numbers, large and small, is commendable. To use an Americanism, they "enthus" over the work, and are making fast acquaintance with the signs used in all mathematical calculations. A good start has also been made in the matter of writing.

MISS A. PRESCOTT'S ROOM.

Twenty-three pupils are in attendance. Writing English from print has to form a large part of the work here. This branch, though not prosecuted very far, is beginning to show up. By continuously pegging away from room to room and from grade to grade, the result must be achieved at last. The marks on paper are here beginning to acquire a meaning in the infantile mind. In these cases, however, there must be a meaning within a meaning. The thought indicated by the English word must be re-cast in the Hawaiian mould. The grade of arithmetic required to be gained here comprises the rules of addition and subtraction with a good beginning made in the multiplication table. A number of original test exercises are propounded to a few of the boys at the boards, which they bring out "all right." Mental arithmetic is grappled with at this early stage and with very good results, showing that real advances have been made towards thinking numbers out in English terms. To produce these results requires much skill in the adaptation of method, as well as the exercise of considerable faith in the present importance and ultimate success of the work.

MISS M. BARCOCK'S ROOM.

Twenty-three pupils are found present. Here the growing citizens of the next generation are about being initiated into the mysteries of the Arabic and Roman notations, addition, multiplication, etc., together with English reading and its associate branches. One of the boys is heard reading. The operation is a rather difficult one at this stage to any child. It is doubly so to him, and to all his classmates. Progress in any art is assured when the student is able to work from the known to the discovery of the unknown. But here, the unknown is hidden within the unknown, and a double search must be made after it. To learn to read one's own language is a slow and not too easy a process, but in these schools, the pupils have the reading and the language both to learn, at the same time. Most of the communications between teacher and pupils are, of necessity, in the native language. The rudiments of English are acquired slowly but surely. The teacher's skill and patience are under a continuous strain to adapt her methods to the ever-changing circumstances of the hour, and to the many phases of mind with which she comes in contact.

MISS C. MIST'S ROOM.

Here the tag of war begins. The number of recruits present is twenty-one. By the provisions of the Compulsory Education Act of the Kingdom, these young people are entering on a nine years' campaign. Their career as effective troops will depend very largely on the drill they receive at the outset. All come in here knowing nothing of English. Names of familiar objects and animals are obtained from charts containing pictures of the individuals named. An elementary reading lesson consists partly of reading words and partly of reading pictures. The work, throughout, is tedious and brings into play no little ingenuity on the part of the instructor. Copying from print as well as from script is a common and indispensable method of fixing upon the infant mind the connection between the printed or written word and the object it represents. Those called upon to perform on this occasion, acquit themselves creditably. The quantity of scholarship found in this department is not a fair standard by which to measure its success. While that is as large as can reasonably be demanded, there is a greater element of success unmistakably present, and that is the interest of the pupils being enlisted in their work. This point gained, the first triumph is effected.

MUSIC.

Vocal music is recognized in the schools of this city as a branch of education. No school room can afford to dispense with it; for singing is a fine intellectual stimulus and an excellent moral sedative. The able services of Mr. Berger, band-master, have been secured to visit the schools on two days of each week. (Yesterday's report of the Fort Street School, referring to Mr. Berger's visits, can be amended by substituting two for "three.") The effective results of Mr. Berger's bi-weekly lessons can very readily be understood by all who are acquainted with that gentleman's mastery skill and hearty enthusiasm in his profession.

CONDITION.

The report of the condition of the rooms and premises of the Fort Street School is applicable to the Royal School. The grounds and rooms are kept in a style that apparently leaves nothing to be desired in this particular. Kamehameha III., in endowing this institution, may or may not have been conscious of the fact that he was providing for himself a monument greater than "any nameless pyramid," and for his race a fruitful source of improvement which cannot exhaust itself, but will go on increasing in power from generation to generation.

IT DOESN'T PAY.

"It doesn't pay, young fellows, there's beer down stairs and there's ice water in the pail in the corner. One costs money and the 'tother's free; one makes tramp printers and the other saves 'em. Stick to the saloon in the corner, fellows; drink at the sign of the tin dipper, and you'll have eyes and nerves to stick type when you're seventy." Some how the boys always enjoyed the old man's homely little temperance lectures, and in the forty years he stood at the case and preached, if he wasn't quite so eloquent as Gough, every now and then he coaxed some type away from the sign of the glass mug to the sign of the tin dipper. And sometimes the old man used to stimulate himself, but that was long ago. He would be gone a day or two, and come back quietly, penitent, and very oblivious to the occasional remarks of a mysterious character which would drift up and down the alleys. But this didn't often happen, because the boys always liked the old man and felt sorry for him, and they respected his penitence, and finally only the new men or the subs ever said a word about these annual disappearances. All the old man would ever say about them was that he had "been up in the country to bury his uncle." His uncle died hard, but he did die at last, and the old man for many years stood like a conqueror at the time-worn old case with his enemy under his feet.

EDUCATING SUGAR CANE.

The bete noir of the Louisiana sugar planter has been the European sugar beet. When it was an ignorant plant, producing a low percentage of saccharine and a large percentage of potash salts and woody fibre, we could laugh at the French agriculturist; but now that he and his German confrere have educated and reformed it, we don't laugh—we tremble.

Our sister State, Alabama, wisely established an "experiment station" some eight or nine years ago, took cotton in hand and found out enough about that plant to grow it successfully on lands which never matured it before. Last year sugar cane was obtained from Louisiana and sent to school there. Of course one year has not sufficed to establish definitely how much education sugar cane can take, but enough is known to warrant the belief that it is a plant of great natural capacity.

Diffusion, maceration, shredding, double effects, kettles, cog-wheels, etc., are all very well in their place, but it won't do to peg away at one end of the job and leave the other religiously alone. An earlier maturity and a richer juice means as much in the planter's pocket as a higher extraction and improved rendering. —New Orleans Picayune.

"Do you love me still, darling?" gushed young Mrs. Crimmonbeak to the partner of her joys and sorrows. "No, wife, I can't honestly say that I do!" was the husband's frank confession. "And why not?" replied the wife preparing to deluge the place with tears. "Because you never are still?" came from the hard-hearted wretch whom nature had endowed with a funny department in the head. —Yonkers Statesman.
