AFTERWARDS.

(Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.)
There is no vacant chair. The loving seat—
A group unbroken—smitten. Who knows how?
One sits there silent only; in his usual seat
We gave him once that freedom. Why not now?
Perhaps he is too weary, and needs rest;
He needed it too often, nor could we bestow. God gave it, knowing how to do so best.
Which of us would disturb him? Let him be.
There is no vacant chair. If he will take
The mood to listen mutely, he will do so.
By his least mood we crossed, for which the heart must ache.
Plead not your question! Let him have
this one.
Death is a mood of life. It is no whim
By which life's giver mocks a broken heart.
Death is life's reticence. Still audible to him.
The husband's voice, happy, speaks on,
apart.
There is no vacant chair. To love is still
To have. Near to memory than to eye,
And dearer yet to anguish than to comfort will.
We hold him by our love, that shall not die.
For while it doth not then he cannot. Try!
Who can put out the motion of the smile?
The old ways of being noble all with him
laid by.
Because we love he is. Then trust awhile.

A PROMINENT FIGURE.

The Member for Northampton and the Editor of London "Truth."
[London Cor. Boston Herald.]
Labouchere, the member for Northampton,
is a good deal in evidence, in parliament,
and in his clever, satirical paper, Truth.
He is not unlike Mr. James G. Blaine in appearance. He is about the same height and build, wears his beard, and is somewhat slow in his movements. Mr. Blaine has a forehead and a larger nose; but there is not much more in his head than is shown away in the Labouchere brain. A well educated and a traveled man, Labouchere has, I dare say, far less earnest views of life than Mr.
Blaine has, is certainly far more indifferent to the opinion of Mrs. Grundy, and possibly the only likeness between them is in the build, height and manner of wearing the beard.

This trifling similarity may, however,
help the reader to realize the figure of Labouchere. If he cared a brass farthing, or even less for anything or anybody, Labouchere
would have more influence in the house of commons and out of it. Life is to him an amusement. He has plenty of money and plenty of brains. A seat in parliament, a share in The Daily Truth, a paper of his own,
a bank, a house in town, a classic home on the Thames, a clever wife, of whom he is really fond, and a baby that is to him a constant surprise; he finds his time well occupied. He has none of the fears of business men; his bread is buttered on both sides; he is rich beyond the dangers of such speculations
as he cares to indulge in, and his heart is neither consumed by the fire of patriotism
nor the cancer of a lofty ambition.

Some people despise him; he does not care.
Some people admire him; he does not care.
A few friends like him; he does not care.
Still fewer probably love him; he does not care. He is a good story teller. His best anecdotes are against himself. As a financier and a man of business, he is more generous than is generally known; and I have never heard a whisper against his honor as a banker, speculator and man of business. He has a slight drawl in his speech;
is a capital talker, a liberal host, and he stands at the extreme end of the extreme political party in the state. His latest radical performance was to propose in the house of commons a motion not in exact terms,
but favoring the abolition of the upper house.
In spite of the opposition he pushed the motion
to a division, and got 71 votes in its favor.
The result was loudly cheered by his Irish friends and radical colleagues. Some political opponents regard the division as very significant.

Gathering Florida Sponges.
[Florida Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.]
One of the sights of the Florida reef is the sponge. He is generally a coach. From Conchochua, Key West, and dozens of other times to the business of fishing up the reputable objects called sponges. This is done chiefly with hooks or spears, the boats drifting along until a sponge is sighted, when it is hooked or speared and jerked from its stronghold upon the bottom. When the water is too deep for the hooking process the sponge goes overboard and dives to the bottom. The sponges taken from this section are not the delicate toilet sponges, being a different grade and only used for coarse work. They grow to a large size, sometimes measuring three feet across and two high,
and when active present anything but an attractive appearance. A good quality sponge looks as it comes to the surface like a great beef's liver, and the odor is spongy—no other word describes it.
When a load of these aromatic flowers of the ocean is secured, they are taken down to Key West, or may be cured on some of the keys. This consists in allowing them to remain in the sun until thoroughly decayed,
and then treating them to repeated rinsings,
until the animal matter is entirely removed.
They are then placed in the sun to bleach,
and in this stage are seen covering the fence in Conchochua. Later they are subjected to several processes, one of which in some cases is salting. This is more common in the toilet sponges from the Mediterranean.
Shave one and you will find quite a disposition of fine sand escapes. This was not eaten or absorbed by the sponge when alive,
as you might suppose, but is a process by which the weight of the sponge is increased,
and as they sell by the pound, the object is evident.

The tricks that the guileless sponge dealer is not up to are not worth chronicling. Some time ago a young man was sent to a sponge locality to buy sponges for a firm who was going to manufacture a new article that required large quantities, and it was found that the young man paid as much for water and coral rock as he did for sponges.
Better sponges are found in the Bahamas
than on the Florida reef, and the business,
though in the hands of a few, is a valuable one. The majority of people have rather peculiar ideas regarding the sponge. Some think it an insect; others a plant. It is, however, a simple animal, composed of many cells, that are arranged in three layers, the middle one secreting the sponge. The cells
may be, that goes to form the skeleton of the animal.

SHAKESPEAREAN EXPRESSION.

The power of Shakespeare over the public is shown by the extent to which his phrases, and even his slang, has become incorporated into our language. In this point, indeed, he is unequalled. Among these are "bag and baggage," "dead as a door nail," "proud of one's humility," "tell the truth and shame the devil," "hit or miss," "love is blind," "selling for a song," "wide world," "cut poppies," "fast and loose," "unconsidered sides," "westward ho," "familiarity breeds contempt," "patching up excuses," "misery makes strange bedfellows," "to boot" (in a trade), "short and long of it," "comb your head with a three legged stool," "dancing attendance," "getting even" (revenge), "birds of a feather," "that's flat," "Greek to me," (unintelligible), "send one packing," "as the day is long," "packing a jury," "mother wit," "kill with kindness," "mum," (for silence), "ill-wind that blows no good," "wild goose chase," "scare-crow," "luggage," "row of pins" (as a mark of value), "viva voce," "give and take," "sold" (in the way of joke), "give the devil his due," "your cake is dough." These expressions have come under my own notice, and of course there are many others of equal familiarity. The girl who playfully calls some youth a "milkop" is also unconsciously quoting Shakespeare, and even "logger-head" is of the same origin. "Extremepore" is first found in Shakespeare, and so is "Almanacs." The "elm and vine" (as a figure) may also be mentioned. Shakespeare is the first author that speaks of "the man in the moon," or mentions the potato, or uses the term "eye-sore," for annoyance. Another often quoted utterance may be here mentioned, simply because it is generally misunderstood: "One touch of nature makes the whole world kin," which is supposed to express the power of sympathy, whereas it solely referred to the widespread operation of selfishness.

OUT OF NOBODIE, THEN.

There has been somewhat of complaint made lately by persons living along the routes which lead to the public and other schools, to the actions of children out of school. Boys and girls in going to or returning from school should be taught to conduct themselves with propriety on the public streets; and if the instructions of parents, guardians, or teachers, are wanting in effect or unapplied in this direction, it is still the duty of the police to check as much as possible, their tendency to misbehave. If this duty were exercised we would not so often see the younger members of both sexes seeking the protections of passers-by or skulking through back alleys and into people's yards, to avoid the alleged persecutions of older children, whose abuse takes on the form of youthful hoodlums. These juvenile scramblings and justings too often end in the use of dangerous missiles on the public streets. An instance of youthful restlessness was noticed in the Press a short time ago when two boys, who are old enough to have known better, rode down Nuuanu street carrying a rope which endangered the lives of several other returning school children.

General News Items.

Important gold discoveries are reported from Oregon. Some mines found a few weeks ago and sold to some Omaha parties for $70,000 have since yielded ore enough to pay for them.

The fifteen rubber-boat concerns in the United States turn out 40,000,000 pairs annually, and foreign markets are now doing industriously sampled to extend the sale abroad; but a clumsy style is wanted.

The big Woods of Minnesota are rightly named, for they cover 5,000 square miles, or 3,200,000 acres of surface. The woods contain only hardwood growths, including white and black oak, maple, hickory, bass-wood, elm, cotton-wood, tamarack and enough other varieties to make an aggregate of over thirty different kinds.

A mass of granite estimated to weigh at least 500,000 tons was placed recently on the line of the Iron Mountain Railroad, Missouri, by a single blast. A shaft sixty-five feet deep was sunk, with lateral chambers, in which five tons of powder were stored. After the shaft had been nearly filled to the top, an electric spark from a battery half a mile distant fired the magazine, with the result indicated.

The fibrous bark of the sugar palm (Arenga saccharia) proves to be a good substitute for bristles and animal hair. The treatment is simple. The bark is first immersed in water and boiled for some time in alkaline solution; the fibres are then soaked in an emulsion of fat, alkali and water for about twenty-four hours, after which time they are sufficiently hard and elastic for the above-named use.

The most extensive linseed oil mill in this country is said to be located at Amsterdam, N. Y. It uses sixteen presses, run by power equal to 275 horses, and runs night and day the year round without stoppages. Nearly 1,000,000 bushels of flax seed are consumed annually by the mill, and tens of thousands of barrels of oil are produced yearly, while from 10,000 to 12,000 tons of oil-seed cake are annually exported for consumption in England.

According to the Arizona Gazette, a new tanning agent has been discovered in that Territory which bids fair to become of considerable importance. The statement is made that a tanner at Temple, Ariz., two or three years ago discovered a plant which carried a large proportion of tannin, and which when used in the manufacture of leather gave extra weight to the product. The plant is of an annual growth, indigenous to the deserts and dry uplands, and is known to Mexicans and Indians as "gonagra." It has a root somewhat longer and more scraggy than the cultivated beet, though resembling it in appearance. It is said to contain a very large per cent. of tannin; and to make a substitute for oak bark.

In the now widely-extended field of utilizing matters hitherto regarded as worthless, the mineral wastes play an important part. Among these is tin dust, which is really the scum from the tin pot, but when separated from the waste is advantageously used for button-making and for various other purposes. Pyrites, formerly a neglected mineral, is now made to yield sulphur. The waste of glass furnaces is used again, by simple processes, serving a purpose in the manufacture of glass similar to rags in paper-making; broken bottles though on being remelted make an inferior quality of glass, the latter is made up into a variety of useful and expensive articles; it is also made into cheap jewelry, mantel ornaments and the like. The utilization of slag from blast furnaces is also an industry of considerable importance, in addition to its long-time employment as a material for road making. It is not only converted into bricks and other useful building stock, but is likewise applied to the manufacture of artificial stone and molded into chimney pieces, window heads, balustrades and outside ornaments generally. Large quantities of mortar, cement and concrete of a very serviceable character are also produced from this substance.

The cry that is going up from clubmen and indignant husbands (says the New York Sun) about the matter of the Ladies' Club, which is now a recognized and established fact, would be amusing if it did not betray gross ignorance. Why in the world a Ladies' Club should not exist in a great city like New York, and come to be a very useful institution, it would puzzle any of its adversaries to decide. That it will be as hot "bed of sand" is almost impossible, the men's clubs having already secured a monopoly of that sort of thing. That it will "lure women from their homes and encourage a spirit of insurrection and insubordination against their lawful protectors" is extremely unlikely. If that spirit exists in the female breast, it will show itself at her own freize as readily as outside of it, and there scores of women in New York society who are not tied down to household or nursery duties to whom the club will be an inestimable boon. During the five or six months of every year when city homes are deserted, the club, as a shelter and refuge, will be an immense comfort and convenience to ladies who come to town for a day and have no place for rest and refreshment. Then there will be reading rooms, music rooms, and many opportunities afforded for improvement and relaxation apart from any social advantages. The ladies who have the matter in charge will have many nice points to decide as regards the restaurants, the sale of stimulants and tonics, the question of games of chance, gambling, betting, smoking, etc., etc. But well guarded as it will be, there is no reason why the Ladies' Club should not prove an influence for good in the community. —S. F. Argonaut.

King Ludwig of Bavaria, says the London Daily News, is now obliged to borrow to pay his debts, and he shows no disposition to leave off building castles. Out of the seven on which he has been engaged, one only is finished, and it was begun by his grandfather. A whole army of artisans are still busy at six others. Chiemsee surpasses the finest portions of Versailles, and its fountains excel all others in the world. It is in the Louis XIV. style. The other residences are gothic or feudal. King Ludwig's inherited fortune was so vast that it was only within the last three years that he began to feel what his architectural and operatic fancies cost him. He patronized Wagner in the most extravagant manner; and when his treasurer ventured to hint that the expense was too great, King Ludwig answered that his love for Wagnerian operas was not so costly as a queen-consort would be. A year ago it was found impossible to go on without borrowing half a million sterling on the King's Civil List income, and guaranteed by the heirs to the hereditary estates. More money is wanted. The King's relatives are incensed at his having spent all they helped him to borrow, and creditors are clamorous. A Council of Regency is demanded. Prince Bismarck, wishing to bring South Germany into close union with North, is greatly interested in all this; and as Prince Hohenlohe, who recently went to Vazim, is a Bavarian and one of the few political men with whom King Ludwig deigns to converse, he will be able to give the Chancellor a sound opinion about him. When, some years ago, the king was studying the architecture of Versailles, he was the guest of the German Ambassador, who pushed his complacency so far, because King Ludwig is a woman-hater, as to send the Princess Hohenlohe away from Paris.

LOCAL NEWS.

A number of interesting locals are crowded out of to-day's issue on account of the report of the regatta. They will appear tomorrow.

An unjust attack was made upon Mr. Frank Godfrey in yesterday's Advertiser which that gentleman justly resents in this morning's Press.

The Eclipse boys entertained the members of the Kapiolani Club and some friends in the successful way that they do everything else they take hold of.

Yesterday afternoon a small native boy was crowded off the Inter-Island wharf and had it not been for prompt assistance he would have drowned.

The manager of the circus requests that all accounts against them be presented between nine and eleven o'clock this morning. They sail for the other islands this afternoon.

The Myrtles claim that they were, about four seconds ahead of the King's boat when about turning the buoy. They then unavoidably shipped a heavy sea nearly swamping them.

There will be a social at the Bethel Union Church this evening commencing at half past seven. A musical and literary programme has been prepared and refreshments will be served during the evening.

Last evening about four o'clock, two native women were driving a brake on Fort street. When in front of Sprekel's & Co's bank the horse balked and a passing hack ran into the brake damaging one of the wheels.

The Blacksmiths celebrated their victory by sticking a broom with sweepers up, in the bow of their boat. They then rowed to the other boat houses and gave some good solid American cheers. Commodore Wilson was in his glory.

The Myrtles accepted their defeat yesterday in a most commendable manner. Their guests were so pleasantly entertained, and their visitors were so cordially received that it was difficult to realize that they were other than the victors.

Last night at about ten o'clock, a collision took place in front of the circus tent between the Queen's carriage and hack No. 2. One of the front wheels of the latter vehicle was smashed. The Queen's carriage was not occupied.

This evening Pastor and Mrs. Cruzan will kindly open their house, 196 King street, for the monthly social of the Fort Street Church, the vestry not being available. There will be a brief literary and musical entertainment, and, if the weather permits, refreshment will be served on the lawn in tents.

On the 16th of November the patriotism of some of the natives is so sincere that they help to defray the expenses of the Government by paying the sum of six dollars at the Station House. About thirty-five of these magnanimous souls were furnished with lodgings at the Police quarters last night, so that they could follow the dictates of their loyal generous hearts by sunrise.

Yesterday evening near five o'clock a Portuguese employed by Mr. Henry Hart to freeze ice cream at the Elite Ice Cream Parlors on Hotel street, wanted to see if the thing was freezing and poked fingers into the freezer at the same time continuing to turn the crank. The result was that the man lacerated the end of his index finger. Dr. Henri Mc. Grew found the man at Benson Smith & Co's drug store where he bound up the wound.

The Band will play at Emma Square this evening at half past seven o'clock the following programme:

1. March, "La Hana o ka Mo'i" Berget.
2. Overture, "Hailiana in Algeria" Rossini.
3. Galop, "Street Cars" Amot.
4. Selection, "Jerusalem" Verdi.
"Ahi Wela."

5. Selection, "Grand Mogul" Andran.
6. Gavotte, "Confetti" Vancar.
7. Waltz, "Under the Linden" Gungli.
8. Quadrille, "Covent Garden" Cortis.
"Hawaii Ponoi."

They say: that the softest thing out for a candidate is to be tax collector too; that all the road tax is not spent on the roads of the district where collected; that there wouldn't be any fun if Chinese hack drivers knew how to drive; that Christmas is coming; that the Myrtle senior six would have won if; that the Gazette "called the turn" on the outcome of the races; that the usefulness of the Hawaiian Rowing association is ended, for the time being at least; that there will be more rowing races on the 28th inst; that the Fenians got left out; that the clerk of the weather cannot please everybody; that the raid on the Chinese Secret Society is apt to breed trouble in Government circles; that the Governor of Oahu is going to pay personal attention to police appointments in the future; that, the King's Own engaged in mimic warfare, battle of the fists, last night at their luau; that, more opium is expected by the next steamer; that pigs can't whistle.

Yesterday not only brought pleasure and recreation but also embarrassments and tribulations. One poor unfortunate elderly individual, whose gallantry was remarkable, especially was noticed. Several natives engaged in a fight yesterday afternoon, and during the scuffle, a piece was torn out of one of their shirts. The party above referred saw the severed linen fluttering gracefully to the ground, and, being very near sighted, immediately concluded that it was a handkerchief belonging to two young ladies who happened to be passing by. The vigor of youth rushed through his veins and in much less time than it takes to tell he picked the rag up and presented it with a courtly grace that would have done any Frenchman justice—the ladies did not claim the proffered article.

EDITOR DAILY HONOLULU PRESS.
Sir: A report of proceedings in a case in the Police Court in which one L. J. Scott was the defendant, appeared in the Advertiser issue of the 16th inst, and in which my name is introduced by the reporter of that paper, one Wray Taylor, in a manner as to make it appear that I was a principal in the case. The idea thus conveyed is an entirely false one, I simply was a witness for the prosecution in connection with three other people who testified against the defendant. The animus which directed this out on the part of the vindictive tailor is believed by me to be an offset for a deserved chastisement which I found it necessary to give him two years ago, and he has, without the knowledge of the Editor carefully placed the story together in a manner, that would injuriously reflect on me. The Advertiser Editor promises to make, in this morning's issue of the paper, a proper apology for the contemptible action of his employee.

FRANK GODFREY.
Honolulu, Nov. 16, 1885.

The 16th of November.

The morning of the great national holiday at last arrived, bringing with it a good stiff breeze and occasional showers. All the business houses were closed and from appearances the regatta had taken the place of everything else in the minds of the people. At an early hour the Inter-Island wharf began to be occupied by interested natives all dressed in their best, and impatient for the lazy hands of Old Time to indicate the hour of nine. By eight o'clock the space fenced off for spectators was crowded with eager and excited men, who, with plenty of jingling coin, were backing up their mighty opinions with that substantial article.

The betting was about even on the senior race, the King's crew being in favor for the junior races. It is estimated that at least four thousand dollars changed hands, outside of the reported six thousand that His Majesty had wagered on the results of the Senior and Junior races.

The programme was very well carried out, and reflected credit on the executive ability of those in charge. The jinksome delays that are as a rule form a prominent feature on all occasions of this kind, were altogether avoided and everybody, with the exception of those who bet on the wrong side, were well pleased with the day's sport, and will always look forward with pleasant anticipations to the next birthday of His Majesty. The following gives the results of the different races:

1—YACHT RACE—First class—1st prize, $300; 2d prize, $150. Open to all.
Course—From starting line passing out the channel, keeping between the Buoy, leaving Spar and Bell Buoy on port side, thence to and around Flag Boat off Waikiki, keeping it on the port side in rounding to a Flag Boat off Quarantine Grounds, keeping it on the starboard side in rounding, thence to Spar Buoy keeping it on the port side, keeping between the Buoy in the channel, back to starting line.
Healani, His Majesty's Chamberlain, Red, White and Blue; Kahihani, W. F. Williams, Blue; Pokii, do, White.
Healani, winning, 1 hr., 31 min., 55 sec.; Kahihani, 1 hr., 39 min., 9 sec.; Pokii, 1 hr., 56 min., 44 sec.

2—TWO-OARED BOATS—Stationary Seats—1st prize, $200; second saves stakes. Open to all.
Course—From starting line to and around the Can Buoy off the Marine Railway and back to starting point.
