THE Daily Bulletin

Pledged to neither Sect nor Party, But established for the benefit of all.

THURSDAY, JULY 11, 1889.

In this issue appears by request, copied from the New York Independent, the article of Gen. Armstrong, President of the Hampton Institute, upon "The United States and Hawaii." The unwisdom of the major part of the letter is proved by the bad use being made of it here by a portion of the native press.

Chief Arthur of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers declared, at a recent meeting of the society, that, under no circumstances of which he could conceive, should he ever sanction another strike.

As he was a candidate for re-election at the time, this was a very bold statement and it so staggered the meeting that, after the Chief concluded his remarks, it immediately adjourned.

That such an experienced man as Chief Arthur should absolutely condemn the policy of striking ought to have great weight with the working classes. He is probably right in his courageous decision, for the cases must be exceedingly rare where the advantages won by extensive strikes have paid for the inevitable misery and privation of the conflict, or where the liability did not remain of having at any moment to renew the contest against further alleged wrongs.

INSTALLATION AND PRESENTATION.

Court Lunallilo No. 6600 Ancient Order of Foresters held their election of officers on the 9th, when the following named brethren were elected and installed:

Thomas Lindsay, P. C. R., Chief Ranger.

David Douglas, P. C. R., Sub Chief Ranger.

J. A. M. Osorio, Secretary.

F. D. Wicke, Treasurer.

H. A. Juen, Senior Woodward.

A. V. Peaters, Junior Woodward.

After the installation the retiring Chief Ranger D. Douglas was presented with a Past Chief Ranger's Regalia and Certificate, Chief Ranger T. Lindsay making the presentation in name of the Court.

The Past Chief Ranger made a suitable reply, thanking the brethren for the kindness and courtesy they had shown while he had occupied the chair, also for the mark of respect they had given him that evening.

THE UNITED STATES AND HAWAII.

(Gen. S. C. Armstrong, in the N. Y. Independent of May 30.)

The recent difficulties in Samoa lend a fresh interest to the situation in the Hawaiian Islands, where the complications are, at the moment, quite as serious if not actually as apparent as those which have given such disastrous renown to the now but too well-known harbor of Apia.

The conditions in the two groups are substantially similar. In each exists a native race of some ability and much attractiveness, lacking however both in physical energy and moral stamina, to whom have been presented nearly every temptation which civilization can offer.

In themselves they find neither check nor stimulus, and that, sooner or later, they must in fact if not in name come under the control in some one of the dominant nations of the earth, goes without saying.

A marked feature in the development of the Hawaiian Islands has been the ascendancy of the missionary element, which from 1819 to 1860 was represented there by men of unusual strength, who were forced, in the nature of things, not only to convert their docile pupils to Christianity, but to establish and maintain for them a native government.

As these men asked nothing for themselves, and nothing but the best for the people whom they hoped to train into manhood, the system which they adopted worked excellently so long as they were the power behind the throne and practically ruled the King's councils, as they did the churches which they built up from one end to the other of this strange little Kingdom.

But when, by the action of the American Board, they were called upon partially to surrender the headship of the churches into native hands, their influence in other directions weakened, and as, one by one, they passed out of sight, new forces swept in, to whose mercy they had perforce to leave their uncompleted work.

Time has shown us that the native character is less strong than they believed it; these tropical children have fallen before the onset of civilization, sinking under its vices before they were able to comprehend its high ambitions; and the nation which owes its existence to the energy and devotion of a handful of American missionaries, is to-day on the verge of a crisis, which, if not averted, means possibly revolution and a period of anarchy.

Less than two years have passed since the better part of the foreign population revolted against the corrupt intrigues of the King and his prime-minister Gibson were the head and front, Gibson being a clever adventurer who had obtained such ascendancy over the King that no improvement was possible so long as he retained his position.

His dismissal, and such pledges from the King as should secure honest methods of government for the future were demanded, literally at the point of the bayonet, and to this pressure the King succumbed, deceiving his subjects for a few months into believing they had obtained a substantial victory.

But promise after promise has been broken or evaded, weakness, as it often will, has lapsed into viciousness, and the King and his chosen advisers have once more touched the danger-line.

The results of the next legislative election are threatening, uncertain, and the numerous American residents of the Islands, many of them descendants of missionaries, are once more facing the possibility of a great disaster.

As a colony they have kept a close connection with the mother-country, and have believed always that, in the event of a serious revolution, she would stand by them. But so terrible a climax is not inevitable, and, as recent advices show, there is now a strong feeling that the power of the United States Government can, probably, be so used as to control the course of events without actual interference.

What is asked for is that there shall be sent out as United States Minister to Hawaii a man of force, experience and uprightiness sufficient to make him virtually master of the situation.

President Harrison, if he will study the situation and make a suitable appointment, will earn the gratitude not only of the Americans in Hawaii, but of all the better class of foreign residents, who have an equal interest with their American fellow-citizens in the preservation of peace and the maintenance of good government.

A man of the right kind, placed there as representative of the United States, can probably so far influence the current of Hawaiian political affairs as not only to insure safety to millions of dollars' worth of property now held by Americans and Europeans, but also materially to affect the future development of the Islands.

As a nation, we have of late had few better opportunities to test the moral value of our own greatness than is offered us by the failure of this attempt to raise an inherently weak people to the height of self-government. It is not demanded that we should take any step which is likely to involve us in an international dispute, nor is any special "policy" required of us.

It is simply that in this fight for political reformation, in which a fairly intelligent and well-meaning native population who have been easily deceived by unscrupulous leaders are arrayed against men who are Americans, all of them by blood and many of them by birth, we should show ourselves, officially, on the side of morality and order.

Any one who is familiar with the conditions which obtain in these outlying posts of civilization knows the value, to any government of able and trustworthy representatives; but in the present case it is something more than a general principle which is at stake.

The Christians of America owe something to the memories of the men and women whose noble lives, have, in a sense, consecrated these Islands in the eyes of all who know their history.

They paid a good price for the ground which they won, foot by foot, from barbarism, and we have no moral right to let slip that for which they so bravely toiled.

There are higher issues involved than those of the counting-house or the ballot-box, tho these are sufficiently insistent, and the men in this country who hold the power to turn the scale in Hawaii are facing a responsibility which is possibly greater than they know.

SUPREME COURT—JULY TERM.

BEFORE McCULLY J.

The King vs. J. R. Robertson. When this case was reached on the calling of the calendar the first day of the term His Excellency Attorney-General Ashford said that he asked leave to enter a nolle prosequi or that he desired to be moved to enter a nolle prosequi or to that effect, the precise words used not being then noted, giving as a reason therefor the absence from the kingdom of one Louis Magoncy whom he styled the prosecuting witness. The Court responded that it would take the matter of granting leave to enter the nolle prosequi under advisement and upon the following day announced that it did not deem the absence of this witness a sufficient reason for not bringing the case to trial if he were not the sole witness on which the case depended, which was not alleged, and therefore declined leave of Court for the entry of a nolle prosequi.

Thereafter, Alfred S. Hartwell, Esquire, requested the Court that he be allowed to appear in this matter. On the 6th of July Mr. Hartwell presented argument to the Court as "Counsel for the Attorney-General, on the right of the Attorney-General to decline to prosecute."

For the complete understanding of the position taken by the learned counsel for the Attorney-General, his brief is here given in full. [The printing of the brief here is omitted for want of space.]

BY THE COURT.

The proposition of the counsel for the Attorney-General that at the common law the Attorney-General of England and of States which have adopted this part of the common law has the right upon his sole responsibility to enter a nolle prosequi is not doubtful and has not been questioned by this Court. But the common law is not in force as such in this kingdom. This is not an English colony which has brought out the law of England to be in force here except as modified by express statute. The law of this country is found in our enacted statutes and in the precedents established by decisions of our Supreme Court, in which it is allowed, Section 823 of the Civil Code, "to cite and adopt the reasonings and principles of the admiralty maritime and common law of other countries and also of the Roman or civil law so far as the same may be founded in justice and not in conflict with the laws and customs of this kingdom." This doctrine has been frequently expressed by the Supreme Court. This part of the common law has not been enacted nor adopted here, nor could a duty and power of the Attorney-General be imposed or assumed or withdrawn upon consideration of what was the law of other countries.

The uniform practice of the Supreme Court and of the Circuit Courts has been that the Attorney-General by himself or his deputy, when desiring to nol. pros. a case after indictment found, asks leave of the Court that it may be so entered, giving the Court or the presiding justice some satisfactory reasons therefor. These reasons are not always given publicly in the Court. They are frequently presented to the Judge in his office, and upon the motion being made in Court, the Court in response sometimes states the reason given, and sometimes merely says that for satisfactory reasons given the nol. pros. may be entered. I state this to be the custom of the Court upon my own knowledge as a Justice for twelve years and as a deputy of the Attorney-General for four years, and upon inquiry of my brethren on the Bench, two of whom have held the office of Attorney-General, and who say that the practice has been uniformly as I have stated it.

Our statute of Criminal Procedure (Act of '76, C. L. p. 338) provides for the discharge without prosecution of persons imprisoned under commitment for trial for any offense, by the Attorney-General's granting a certificate to the Justices or a Justice of the Supreme Court that he declines to present an indictment in the specified case, whereupon the Justice or Justices shall thereupon issue to the Marshal a warrant of discharge of such person from custody. This statute was enacted in 1876, and as it provides only this method of discharge upon the sole responsibility and authority of the Attorney-General, I think it may be inferred that the existing practice was not intended by the Legislature to be varied in other respects.

The Court has control over a continuance of a case by Section 34 of the Criminal Procedure Act of 1876. "If the Court before which any person is indicted shall, upon the application of such person or otherwise, be of opinion that he ought to be allowed further time to plead, etc." the Court may grant further time or continue to another term, certainly without the control of the Attorney-General.

Section 13 of the same Act gives the power to the Court to change the venue of any criminal proceedings to any other Court of Record, for such reasons as the justice of the case may require, and subject to such conditions as the Court may in its discretion impose. In regard to all which the Attorney-General would be heard but the decision and control would be of the Court. The Act of 1866, now in force, defining the duties of the Attorney-

General (C. L. p. 815) requires him to be vigilant and active in detecting offenders against the laws, and to prosecute them with diligence. The law (Sections 1 and 2 of the Act of 1876) requires the Attorney-General to present the indictment before the next ensuing term after the commitment to the Judge who shall after examination certify upon each bill of indictment whether he finds the same a true bill or not.

What is the examination which the Judge is required to make? There is no grand jury here and to some extent the Judge performs its functions. The evidence taken before the committing magistrate is submitted to him, and he hears statements from and makes inquiry of the Attorney-General to the extent of ascertaining if it is a case which ought to be tried. In the supposable case of its appearing that the evidence was frivolous and entirely unconvincing, he would not find it a true bill, and the accused could not be put on trial. Or in the supposable case that the evidence being examined showed a case, say, of embezzlement when the indictment charged forgery, he would not approve the indictment for forgery.

Again if the form of the indictment was obviously defective though not charging a different offense from that presented in the evidence he would probably not find it a true bill. The Court's approval of the indictment as to form in no wise precludes or prejudices any showing by defendant's counsel that the indictment is faulty, and motions to quash or demur.

The Court's approval of the bill as being founded on evidence in no wise identifies the Court with the prosecution. I say this without hesitation on the part of every Judge living and dead who has occupied this Bench.

Examining the statutes previous to those now in existence above referred to—the first is the statute of 1846 which organizes the executive departments, and by which the office of Attorney-General was first constituted and his duties prescribed (page 264 et seq., Section VIII.), prescribes that every prisoner committed for trial shall be arraigned upon an indictment allowed by the judge. * * * * * And (Section IX.) after plea the said Attorney-General shall, unless a postponement be granted for cause by the Court, proceed to make good by proof all or any of the counts in said indictment. So it appears that the Attorney-General had not the sole and exclusive control, now claimed, of the prosecutions, for he could not continue a case unless by leave of the Court granted for cause shown. An absolute power to continue a case, without cause shown and without leave, is equivalent to a power to continue and not prosecute at all. This he had not, but was commanded by the law to prosecute.

In a single instance under this statute was the power given to the Attorney-General to enter a nolle prosequi. (Section III.) "When a writ of habeas corpus shall have been issued by any Court of Justice, to inquire by examination of witnesses into the cause of the legality of the imprisonment of any alleged delinquent or criminal awaiting his trial the Attorney-General * * * shall attend to see that the alleged delinquent or criminal be not enlarged without just cause. He shall represent the prosecution in all such cases and he may, when the public interests require it, enter nolle prosequi against a suspected person." This statute is nearly equivalent to the statute of 1876 above cited. The rule of expressio unius est exclusio alterius well applies here. The authority is given expressly in a defined instance, viz.: of preliminary inquiry for commitment and is not given otherwise. The instance allowed is of a case not yet under indictment found. The general mandate of the law is that the Attorney-General shall prosecute.

By a joint resolution of the Legislature in 1846 subsequent to the passage of the organic acts in the same year, authority is given the Cabinet to appoint other public prosecutors, and to the Judges of the Superior Court to appoint district attorneys, pending the appointment of a new Attorney-General—the then Attorney-General, Mr. Record, it appears was about to leave the kingdom and his office was not filled.

In 1859 (Civil Code, Sections 1080-1095) the law provided only for district attorneys, an Attorney-General not being constituted by the Constitution of 1852. These district attorneys were appointed by the Justices of the Supreme Court for each judicial circuit of the Kingdom. They gave bond to the Chief Justice, they were commissioned for the term of two years, unless sooner removed by the Justices of the Supreme Court. They were required to prosecute offenses with diligence. No mention is made of a right to nolle prosequi.

By statute in 1862 the system of having an Attorney-General was restored. He was appointed by the King for a term of two years unless sooner removed by the King. His duties were prescribed to be those which had been performed by the district attorneys in Sections 1080-1095. No power is granted to nolle prosequi.

By the Constitution of 1864 an Attorney-General was established, and he was made a member of the King's Cabinet (Art. 42); and in 1866 an Act was passed defining his duties. It is almost throughout in the same words as the Act of 1862. His duties are again referred to Sections 1080-1095. The Act would seem to have been passed solely to state his position as "being appointed by virtue of an article of the Constitution," but although thus placed for the first time under the Constitution and made a member of His Majesty's Cabinet, his duties in relation to prosecutions, and his status, rights, privileges and powers in the courts are unchanged from those of the officer who was created by statute only.

From this review of all the statutes touching the rights and duties of the Attorney-General, I am of the opinion that the procedure which I have stated to be the custom of the Court and of the Attorney-General, is in accordance with our law, and accords with the interpretation hitherto given by the Court and the Attorneys-General.

It is a well established precedent of practice based on the law. I cannot set it aside. If it does not now and further commend itself the Legislature can enact a statute authorizing another procedure. The counsel for the Attorney-General says in argument: "If the judicial power can be extended to requiring the Attorney-General * * * to prosecute any specified case on penalty of fine or imprisonment this would not permit the exercise of executive and judicial powers to be preserved distinct—it would annul the discretionary and voluntary exercise of executive power, so far as the Attorney-General is concerned." This in my view is a misapprehension of the matter in discussion.

The Court has not ordered the prosecution of this case. It cannot and it will not do so. It has simply refused to approve and allow a motion for nolle prosequi upon the reason stated. It has not and will not "fine or imprison an Attorney-General" for contempt by reason of not prosecuting a case.

It will be observed that I do not agree in terms with the statement in the opening of the argument of counsel—"The Attorney-General having nol. pros'd the case * * * the Court said its consent was required which it refused to give."

The Court said it would take time to consider (the reason offered) and it could not treat the motion as made otherwise than in accordance with the established precedent of practice and procedure. This difference in statement is however only the difference which constitutes this controversy on the part of the Attorney-General and his counsel. It is not a question of veracity as to facts. Having thus given the opinion of the Court upon the abstract question, argued by counsel, and holding against his contention, and he having made no argument addressed to the discretion of the Court upon its previous ruling to grant leave to nol. pros. the case of Robertson, that ruling might stand. But as this particular case has been virtually brought up by allowing the further argument to be made I have reconsidered that ruling.

I have examined the evidence given in the previous trial, excepting that of Magoncy the absent witness. There are six witnesses besides him. On their testimony, if given in a magistrate's court, I should find a true bill of indictment. I express no opinion upon the proper or probable result of a trial. It is only an opinion that it is a case to be put on trial.

But this the Court cannot order. If, when it is called for trial, the Attorney-General, being present in person or by deputy, does not prosecute, it will stand not prosecuted in fact, but without the entry of nolle prosequi. The Attorney-General will take his own course.

If it shall proceed to trial, I will ask one of my brethren on the Bench to hold the trial, not because I deem myself to have, or to have indicated, any bias in the defendant's case, by withholding my concurrence to dismissing him without trial, but because by the collision which has arisen from this case, between the Court and the Attorney-General, a sensitive condition of public feeling has been induced, under which it might be imputed that my rulings were over strict against the defendant, urging his conviction, or were too favorable from fear of the other imputation. Justice Supreme Court. July 11, 1889.

When the foregoing had been read the Court said: Ten minutes before my coming into Court Mr. Hartwell saw me in my chambers, and being without information of what the decision was, desired me to make a statement. I thought he could make it more accurately and I ask him to do so. The case of Mr. Ashford's deputy informed me that Mr. Ashford desired the case to go on and defendant's counsel are present in court. In regard to the suggestion that the Court desired one of its brethren to preside at the trial I desire that the Court itself shall sit at the trial. I think the interests of justice will be the better observed.

Mr. Neumann for the defendant—I shall ask that the Court sit, as I think it is entirely free from bias.

Mother Seigel's OPERATING PILLS, FOR CONSTIPATION, SLUGGISH LIVER, ETC. UNLIKE many kinds of cathartic medicines, do not make you feel worse before you feel better. Their operation is gentle, but thorough, and unattended with disagreeable effects, such as nausea, griping pains, &c. Seigel's Operating Pills are the best family physic that has ever been discovered. They cleanse the bowels from all irritating substances, and leave them in a healthy condition. The best remedy extant for the bane of our lives—constipation and sluggish liver. These Pills prevent fevers and all kinds of sickness, by removing all poisonous matter from the bowels. They operate briskly, yet mildly without any pain. If you take a severe cold, and are threatened with a fever, with pains in the head, back and limbs, one or two doses of Seigel's Operating Pills will break up the cold and prevent the fever. A coated tongue, with a brackish taste, is caused by foul matter in the stomach. A few doses of Seigel's Operating Pills will cleanse the stomach, remove the bad taste, and restore the appetite, and with it bring good health. Oftentimes diseased, or partially decayed food, causes sickness, nausea and diarrhoea. If the bowels are cleansed from this impurity with a dose of Seigel's Operating Pills, these disagreeable effects will vanish, and good health will result. Seigel's Operating Pills prevent ill-effects from excess in eating or drinking. A good dose at bedtime renders a person fit for business in the morning. These Pills, being Sugar-coated, are pleasant to take. The disagreeable taste common to most pills is obviated.
