OAHU COLLEGE.

Forty-sixth Anniversary.

Fort-street Church was filled last Friday night with the friends of Oahu College, the forty-sixth anniversary being celebrated there with the closing exercises of the past term. The trustees of the institution occupied seats in the front of the church, facing the platform on which were Principal Merrill, Rev. Dr. Beckwith, the professorial staff and the graduating class.

Platform, organ loft, and adjacent recesses, as well as windows, chandeliers and wall brackets were decorated in an eye-refreshing way with drapery of vines and foliage, bunches of ferns and delightful bouquets, palm leaves, etc. Over the organ front was the motto in antique capitals, "Labora cum Fide et Amore," and above that a white floral star.

After an organ voluntary from Batsiste in the masterly style of Mr. Myron H. Jones, Rev. E. G. Beckwith, D. D., opened with prayer. Essays were read during the evening by the members of the graduating class: "The Modern Jew," by Helen K. Sorenson; "Chronicles of the Sphinx," by Kate L. Rogers, and "Our Work," ending with valedictory, by May C. Atherton, who was elevated to the responsible duty by her mates. These productions all evinced careful training in literary methods and reliance on individual resources, the valedictorian performing her important part with graceful taste and feeling.

The Punahou Glee Club sang the chorus, "The Skies Resound," also "Christmas Oratorio," the latter the closing piece, in the splendid style that the public have learned to look for from those choristers under the tuition of Mrs. Hanford. Jennie Grieve sang, "O Sing to God," with the musical talent that makes her every appearance most welcome. Levi C. Lyman sang "My Queen," displaying not only good training but the gifts of nature. A feature of the exercises applauded was the laying of floral tributes by the boy students at the feet of the young ladies as each completed her part.

After the valedictory R. V. W. C. Merrill, Principal, addressed the graduates in fitting and fatherly terms, closing with the presentation of diplomas. Hon. S. B. Dole delivered the anniversary address, his subject "A Complimentary Education." He laid stress on the importance of physical training to promote bodily health and development, and his several points were heartily applauded.

The Advantages of Insurance under a Mutual Life Insurance Company's Policy.

Are the following:
First.—Freed from conditions that could in any case lead to the contesting of a just claim.
Second.—No practical restrictions upon travel or residence in a foreign land.

Third.—All the advantages of "Tontine" insurance without its gambling and fort-tune features.

Fourth.—Immediate payment on acceptance by the Company of proofs of death.

Fifth.—The possession of a document that is as valuable as a Government Bond.

S. G. WILDER, Agent.

OAHU COLLEGE.

Forty-sixth Anniversary.

Fort-street Church was filled last Friday night with the friends of Oahu College, the forty-sixth anniversary being celebrated there with the closing exercises of the past term. The trustees of the institution occupied seats in the front of the church, facing the platform on which were Principal Merritt, Rev. Dr. Beckwith, the professorial staff and the graduating class.

Platform, organ loft, and adjacent recesses, as well as windows, chandeliers and wall brackets were decorated in an eye refreshing way with drapery of vines and foliage, bunches of ferns and delightful bouquets, palm leaves, etc. Over the organ front was the motto in antique capitals, "Labora cum Fide et Amore," and above that a white floral star.

After an organ voluntary from Babbitt in the masterly style of Mr. Myron H. Jones, Rev. E. G. Beckwith, D. D., opened with prayer. Essays were read during the evening by the members of the graduating class: "The Modern Jew," by Helen K. Sorenson; "Chronicles of the Sphinx," by Kate L. Rogers; and "Our Work," ending with valedictory, by May C. Atherton, who was elected to the responsible duty by her mates. These productions all evinced careful training in literary methods and reliance on individual resources, the valedictorian performing her important part with graceful taste and feeling.

The Punahou Glee Club sang the chorus, "The Skies Resound," also "Christmas Oratorio," the latter the closing piece, in the splendid style that the public have learned to look for from these choirs under the tuition of Mrs. Hanford. Jennie Grieve sang, "O Sing to God," with the musical talent that makes her every appearance most welcome. Levi C. Lyman sang "My Queen," displaying not only good training but the gifts of nature. A feature of the exercises applauded was the laying of floral tributes by the boy students at the feet of the young ladies as each completed her part.

After the valedictory Rev. W. C. Merritt, Principal, addressed the graduates in fitting and fatherly terms, closing with the presentation of diplomas. H. S. B. Dole delivered the anniversary address, his subject "A Complete Education." He laid stress on the importance of physical training to promote bodily health and development, and his several points were heartily applauded.

ASSAULT ON POLICE.

Trial of Dowsett, Whitney and Widemann.

THIRD DAY.

Discharge of Defendants.

The assault case was resumed at 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning.

John M. Dowsett, sworn, gave evidence to similar effect with that of the defendant Whitney. His statement of the trouble was chiefly of interest from his version of what had happened between himself and the two mounted policemen. The party made no noise whatever in going from Mr. Muller's house to the gate; the two men rode up, stopped, and turned their horses' heads toward the gate; when witness made the remark, in answer to one of the party questioning what those fellows wanted, "There is my friend Robinson, who tried to arrest us some time ago," Robinson turned his horse toward him, saying, "I know you, Jack Dowsett, God damn you; you are the man I want." On witness asking what he wanted, Dias came up and asked witness if he wanted to fight. Then followed the altercation and subsequent scuffle described by other witnesses.

When Dias jumped at witness, the latter (not Dias as reported in a contemporary) used the expression, "Noho made oe," but no attention was paid to the remark, and Dias and Robinson both held him. After falling on the sidewalk with Dias, he got free and entered the yard at the request of Mr. C. N. Arnold. When several of the party were in the hands of the police on the street, Robinson shook his billy at witness and said if he dared come out he would fight him. Officer Doie on coming along and being told what the trouble was, said that those officers were new men and if he had been there it would not have occurred. As Robinson was mounting his horse to leave, he swore at witness, calling him a coward. Witness did not know Dias before that night; did not strike Dias or Robinson; only thing he did was to try and free himself; neither of the policemen said he arrested witness; the witness touched no bridle or horse; Dias had his coat on when he rode up but had it off when he approached witness; the latter did not see either Widemann or Whitney strike Dias; Dias got hold of him first. Cross-examined, witness said nothing passed between Dias and him before witness caught him round the body; witness did not get angry, had no ill feeling against Dias; he draws nothing after him; played on the guitar most of the time at Muller's house; the fracas did not last more than ten minutes.

Geo. S. Wells, sworn, stated he was a hack driver at Hawaiian Hotel Station. He had seen the whole affair, and it was caused by the outburst of one police on the party, who were quiet after leaving the house till accused by the officers. From Dowsett's action he should not judge that he had been drinking.

John O. Kane, sworn, stated he was a hack driver and was at the Hawaiian Hotel Station Saturday night; heard Mr. Muller's guests bidding him good night; then heard one of the mounted police say, "Jack Dowsett, I know you," saw Dias get off his horse and put his face to Dowsett to be hit; confusion followed, and Dias caught Dowsett and said they would go to the Station. Cross-examined he said the first he heard was Dowsett saying to Robinson that he was the one who arrested the Attorney General; did not see the officer take off his coat; thought he would have seen it if he had done so; first time officer took hold of Dowsett was when he asked him to go to the Station.

G. Smith, sworn, testified to a friendly contest between Dias and C. B. Wilson some years ago.

W. R. Lawrence, sworn, stated he knew Dias at Waialua as a bruiser; knew nothing wrong against Dias of his own knowledge.

Chas. B. Wilson, sworn, told of a glove boxing contest he had with Dias three or four years ago; Dias said he had enough after a few minutes.

Jas. Welsh, sworn, told of the same affair as last witness, it having taken place at the Commercial Saloon.

G. H. Tweedie, sworn, was at Muller's that night; did not go outside the gate; saw Dias pull off his coat and ask Dowsett to strike him first; first he heard one of the officers say was, "I know you, Jack Dowsett."

Mr. Muller's; he saw two officers at the Hotel dining room, about whom there was some discussion, but that had worked off.

C. A. Widemann, sworn, testified to the quietness of the party on leaving the house, and gave a similar account to that of the other guests regarding the conduct of the officers; he told Dias to keep quiet, but did not strike any one; saw Dias throw his coat on the ground, and his horse go down the street.

REBUTTAL.

D. V. Nahoolewa, sworn, Mr. Hatch asked what it was proposed to rebut.

Marshal Kaulukou stated that the prosecution had asked Dowsett regarding alleged threats made by him against Robinson on the occasion of that defendant's previous arrest.

Mr. Hatch opposed the production of rebuttal on the ground presented by the prosecution, as the matter in question had not been gone into by that side with sufficient fullness to be proper foundation for rebuttal.

The Court considered that Dowsett's denial of the threat formed a good pretext for rebuttal.

Messrs. Hatch and Whitney contended the words of the alleged threat were not put to the defendant.

The Court quoted its record to show that the words in effect of the threat were denied by defendant.

Mr. Hatch asked for the ruling of the Court whether the prosecution was to be allowed to go over its own ground again.

The Court ruled that the question could be asked as to whether the alleged words were used.

Witness—I remember Dowsett at the Station on a former occasion; he said to Robinson, "I'll catch you again and fix you."

J. M. Dowsett went on the stand and made the following statement: I want to explain that on the occasion referred to in evidence, when the Attorney General and I were at the Station, we were not arrested; we would not have been there at all if Rosa had not ordered the policemen to come to the Station; now I want to state what I did say on that occasion; I said, "If we had known who you were, you might have got a licking."

The Marshal asked the Court to discard the statement just made, as it was an extension of testimony and not a contradiction.

At 4:30 the Court took recess for ten minutes.

Mr. Hatch, on the Court resuming, asked the Marshal to state what particular duty the officers alleged to be assaulted were instructed to perform.

Marshal Kaulukou replied that it was for the defense to establish, if they could, that the defendants did not assault officers in the discharge of duty.

Mr. Hatch said they were not there to bandy words; the defense was entitled to an opening, and his object was to save time in argument.

Marshal Kaulukou repeated in effect his former observation, adding that it was for the counsel to show the Court by the evidence whether there was obstruction to officers in the discharge of duty, or assault on officers simply, or common assault.

The Court asked the prosecution to state the statute on which they relied.

Marshal Kaulukou gave Chapter 25, laws of 1884, as the statute.

CLOSING SPEECHES.

Mr. Hatch said he thought this matter had been given an importance that the facts did not justify. So far as the people were concerned, or any breach of the peace, there was very little to it. But as regarded the spirit in which the Marshal had taken it up, it had become rather serious. As an interference with the police or an affray it was a very trifling matter. It was natural that the Marshal should have a high regard for his force, and that his Honor from his long connection with the force should likewise have such, and lie, the speaker, had a high regard for it. Those were young men who had not arrived at full maturity of discretion, but that did not explain the conduct of the prosecuting officer throughout this case. Defendants had a right to have explained what particular offense they were charged with, but the prosecuting officer had compelled counsel to wander through all that evidence to find out what was the offense with which they were charged. What were defendants charged with? It was not affray, for that could not be found in the evidence. He supposed what was attempted to be proved was that the officers were assaulted to prevent the discharge of their duty. Orders had been testified to sending Dias and Robinson to the Portuguese settlement to prevent some disturbance there. They started to go there and continued till they came to where these gentlemen were coming out of Mr. Muller's gate. They did not show much zeal or diligence in going to carry out the duty which they were ordered to perform. Nothing had been produced to show that they were obstructed in such a way as to keep them from obeying their orders and getting away to the duty for which they were sent. Counsel referred to the common information as well as testimony that police were stationed round the Palace walls, and asked if it would not have been better to leave the regular patrols to quell any disturbance in that vicinity. Those mounted police had no right to stop in the performance of duty to which they were ordered. There was no serious disturbance when they came up; the party was conversing in ordinary tones, that can be heard a long distance in the stillness of night. It was not easy to explain in times, but no attempt had been made to show why these officers neglected their ordered duty. Intent was the whole gist to be shown in a question of innocence or guilt. Allegation of assault was committed on a police officer on duty was not sufficient. Intent must be shown. What ever may have occurred at Mr. Muller's or the Hotel had no bearing on what occurred when these persons were leaving Mr. Muller's premises. There was no reason for any argument that there was any breach of peace at any other time. As to what happened at the beginning of the affair there was only the evidence of the two mounted police themselves. Kaulukou arrived later and was too excited to find out what was the cause of the disturbance. The two police were evidently grugged and lost their temper. Robinson was not in the performance of duty when he called out, "I know you, Jack Dowsett," nor Dias when he shook his fist and asked Dowsett to strike him first. The alleged arrest of the Attorney General was a sore topic with the officers and one that they did not relish being grugged upon. Robinson being insulted, if you please, took it up, and Dias, whose sparring abilities had been the subject of evidence, wanted to take up the cause of his friend. He might be very decent fellow, but counsel thought he was ready for a row that night, for a little scrimmage with the boys. He did not believe that anybody interfered with the officers, or took hold of their horses' bridles; those statements of the officers were false. They did not wish to admit that they wanted the defendants to fight, so they say that they were struck first. Counsel proceeded to show a contradiction in Dias' evidence, as to the relative positions of the party and himself when he arrived. He then proceeded to the main point of his argument, namely, that the officers were not making an arrest, hence could not have been assaulted in the performance of duty. A policeman had no right to make an arrest without any offense being committed, and the individual had no right to submit to any such arrest. The Marshal made an insulting reference to swine rolling on the ground which was neither here nor there. The clause under which this prosecution was made implied that an officer must be in the performance of some specific duty to make interference therein an offense. A legal arrest without a warrant—and he thought very few were made—must be according to section 6 of chapter 49 of the Penal Code, which was as follows:—

"At or before the time of making an arrest, the person must declare that he is an officer of justice, if such be the case. If he has a warrant he should show it if required; or if he make the arrest without warrant in any of the cases in which it is authorized by law, he should give the party arrested clearly to understand for what cause he undertakes to make the arrest, and must require him to submit and accompany him to the jail or magistrate. This done, the arrest is complete."

The officers did not request Dowsett to submit even in the heat of the struggle. Everyone of the party who was requested to go to the Station complied without any resistance. Dias testified that he had no intention of arresting Dowsett when he got off his horse nor until he was hit in the face. His Honor must find what duty he was in the performance of that Dowsett prevented him from carrying out. He was not in the performance of any duty when he went up to Dowsett and dared him to fight. An officer acting that way was not fit to be a preserver of the peace. Robinson was not in the performance of his duty when he rushed into the crowd. It did not appear to be proved that any assault had been committed up to that time. Mr. Hatch continued to review the evidence as to the undue aggressiveness of the officers, and inconsistencies in the evidence for the prosecution regarding the turning loose of the horses and detaching an officer's badge. The essential question was how the affair commenced, and the only evidence to indicate defendants as the aggressors was that of the two mounted police. He could not see how the testimony of all those gentlemen could be disregarded, and it was the practice in Great Britain and United States require the testimony of interested police officers to be corroborated. He did not think that Robinson, the graduate of the Reformatory School, was of the class of men who should be on the police force. Both these men were directly interested here, and the burden rested on them to show that they were in performance of some special duty of emergency requiring their interference. The uncontradicted statements of their attempts to start a fight destroyed the whole case of the prosecution. If such had not been their conduct, why should there have been evidence of Dowsett saying if the officer took off his badge he would fight him. Further reviewing the evidence he contended that defendants had acted very reasonably throughout, for there were enough of them there to seriously hurt the officers. They acted manly in self defense. There was little or no evidence against Widemann or Whitney. The prosecuting officer had not only made the affair as serious as possible, but had done it by so as to put case on it as much trouble as possible, acting in a spirit which his Honor could not ignore in considering the case.

Justice Dayton said that further consideration might enable him to go more into details, but could not alter the decision he had arrived at. He read Chapter 25 of the laws of 1884, under which defendants were charged. It gives Police Courts concurrent jurisdiction with Supreme and Circuit Courts in all cases of assault and battery on public officers; and in cases where the offense is not of a highly aggravated character gives the Police Court to punish the offender by fine not exceeding $200 or imprisonment at hard labor not exceeding two years, or by both fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the Court; but in cases where such punishment would be inadequate the offender shall be committed for trial according to existing provisions of law. His Honor said there seemed to be a black in evidence as to what, as had been argued, was the cause of the disturbance. It appeared there was some ill-feeling between Robinson and Dowsett, but why Dias should take up Robinson's quarrel was inexplicable unless it was that both were policemen. He quoted section 6 of chapter 49, Penal Code above given, and stated that he could not find that those requirements of a legal arrest had been complied with by the officers in dealing with defendants on that occasion. If any of the parties were brought up for affray, he would have no hesitation in saying that they were guilty; or if the officer went into that yard with a warrant and they resisted him, they were guilty. There must be obstruction of an officer in some express duty. He failed to find any such express duty and discharged the defendants.

The Marshal then asked for a nolle prosequi in the case of assault on Robinson which was granted.

Rev. A. Mackintosh desired he lady collectors for St. Andrew's Cathedral building fund to make their monthly returns by Wednesday morning next.
