TUESDAY, DECEMB'R 28, 1886. THE COLONIZATION SCHEME

Although little has been said in the press regarding the Oahu Colonization Company's scheme during the past few months, yet it has never for one moment been lost sight of by the origin ator, Mr. Dillingham, or those whom he has rallied to his aid. Capitalists in London have had the matter in hand for some months, making a careful investigation of the project through the assistance of maps and much detailed information. It is now reported from trustworthy bankers in London that there are good prospects of the stock being readily taken up. It was deemed important that the Hawaiian loan of $2,000,000 should first have been floated, the easy success of which has been reported. Now that the remarkable eagerness with which the national bonds were sought has been seen, it will not be more surprising to hear that from five to ten times the amount of the capitalized value of the colonization scheme has also been applied for. Those who have given this enterprise only a passing thought little realize the vast possibilities that it affords, not only to investors but to the whole country. When it becomes an accomplished fact, as there appears every probability it will, hardly an interest in the Kingdom will fail to receive great benefit thereby.

The promoter states that, as in the case of the national loan, a reserve of the colonization stock will be held for domestic investors a limited time, but the amount will be restricted owing to the length of time required for communication with London, and no subscriptions will be specifically solicited ness and 2 Village Carts. in this country. Those who want to invest in this scheme of developing the resources of this island should com municate with the promoter at once, as it will soon be too late to secure the stock here if English capitalists, as reported, are regarding it with confidence and favor.

The Portuguese Paper.

Christmas is a very important festivity in Portugal if even not the most important of all, and a well known tune, "Adesta Fideler" of Portuguese composition, is known the world over and sung in churches of all denominations. It is not therefore surprising that the Luso Howaiiano comes out in splendid array to celebrate the solemnity and wish "Merry Christmas" not only to its readers, but its editor says even to its enemies. On this occasion the Luse gives 36 columns, beginning with a map and geography of these Islands, and spleadid Christmas literature. It also enumerates different kinds of presents which are given to the subscribers by the business manager, showing the enterprise, energy and capacity of its director. May the Luso see many returns of the day in the same prosperous circumstances.

CHUN HOOK CAUGHT.

Seized by Officers on the Walkiki Road.

Mr. David Dayton, Deputy Marshal, when about sitting down to his tea table last evening, received information that Chun Hook would be found on the Waikiki road about eight o'clock. He quickly summoned Capt. Wm. Tell, Officer C. B. Reynolds of the Unea (w.) vs. Unea (k.) Kalua for Board of Health staff, and Policemen Puakalehua, Waihmalo and Waipa, taking them all in a wagon to near the Noble (k.) vs. Noble (w.) Ashford place indicated. They left the wagon on the other side of Mr. A. Jaeger's, King street, and walked down the Wakiki road in a body. After going about 600 yards they saw the glimmer of a lighted match ahead, which was the preconcerted signal of the informer. In a few seconds a man approached them in the darkness, walking on the town side The list of Christmas overdraughts of the road as they strode along the patch. He had got on the fence when Waipa seized and hurled him to the ground, from which he rose only to be was in vain. Mertally Wounded by Shots from His Own Men-Litter Bearers Under Federal Artillery Fire-Last Order Given by the General.

When Jackson had reached the point where his line now crossed the turnplke, scarcely a mile west of Chancellersville and not half a mile from a line of Federal troops, he had found his front line unfit for the farther and vigorous advance he desired, by reason of the firegular character of the fighting, now right, now left, and because of the dense thickets through which it was impossible to preserve alignment. Previous commanders found it more and more difficult as the twilight deepened to hold their broken brigades in hand. Regretting the necessity of relieving the troops in front, Gen. Jackson had ordered A. P. Hill's division, his third and reserve line, to be placed in froat. While this change was being effected, impatient and anxious, the general rode forward on the turnpike, followed by two or three of the staff and a number of couriers and signal sergeants. He passed the swampy depression, and began the ascent of the hill toward Chancellorsville, when he came upon a line of the Federal infantry lying on their arms. Fired at by one or two mushets (two musket balls from the enemy whistled over my head as I came to the front, he turned and came back toward When Jackson had reached the point where enemy whistled over my head as I came to the front), he turned and came back toward his line, upon the side of the road to his left.

As he rode near to the Confederate troops just placed in position, and ignorant that he was in the front, the left company began firing to the front, and two of his party fell from their saddles dead—Capt. Boswell, of the engineers, and Sergt. Cunliffe, of the signal corps. Spurring his horse across the road to his right, he was met a second volley from the right company of Pender a North Carolina brigade. Under this volley, when not two rods from the troops, the general received three balls at the same instant. One penetrated the palm of his right hand, and was cut out that night from the back of his hand. A second passed around the wrist of the left arm and out through the left hand. But a third ball passed through the left arm half way from the shoulder to the elbow. The large bone of the upper arm was splintered to SHOT BY HIS OWN MEN large bone of the upper arm was splintered to the elbow joint, and the wound bled freely. His horse turned quickly from the fire, through the thick bushes, which swept the cap from the general's head and scratched his forehead, leaving drops of blood to stain his forehead, leaving drops of blood to stain his

As he lost his bold upon the bridle rein be resied from the safelle and was caught by the arms of Capt. Milbourne, of the signal corps. Laid upon the ground, there came at once to his secon Gen A P Hill and members of his staff. The writer reached his side a minute after, to find Gen. Hill holding the head and shoulders of the wounded chief. Cutting open the coat sleeve, from wrist to shoulder, I found the wound in the upper arm, and with my handkerchief I bound the arm, and with my handkerchief I bound the arm above the wound, to stem the flow of blood. Couriers were sent for Dr. Hunter McGuire, the surgeon of the corps and the general's trusted friend, and for an ambulance. Being outside of our lines, it was urgent that he should be moved at once. With difficulty litter bearers were brought from the line near by, the general placed upon the litter and carefully raised to the shoulder, I myself bearing one corner. shoulder, I myself bearing one corner.

A moment later artillery from the Federal side was opened toon us; great broadsides thundefed over the woods; hissing shells searched the dark thickets through, and shrapnel swept the road along which we moved. Two or three steps farther and the litter bearer at my side was struck and fell, but as the litter turned Maj. Watkins Leigh, of Hill's staff, happily caught it. But the fright of the men was so great that we were UNDER ARTILLERY PIRE. of thirs star, happiny caught it. But the fright of the men was so great that we were obliged to lay the litter and its burden down upon the road. As the litter bearers ran to the cover of the trees I threw myself by the general's side, and held him firmly to the ground as he attempted to rise. Over us swept the rapid fire of shot and shell—grape-shot striking fire on the flinty rock of the road all around us and sweeping from their feet horses and men of the artillery just moved to the front. Soon the firing veered to the other side of the road, and I sprang to my feet, aminted the general to rise, passed my feet, agricted the general to rise, passed my arm around him, and with the wounded man's weight thrown beavily upon me, we forsook

Entering the woods, he sank to the ground from exhaustion, but the litter was soon brought, and, again rallying a few men, we essayed to carry him farther, when a second bearer fell at my side. This time, with none to assist, the litter careened, and the general to assist, the litter careened, and the general fell to the ground with a groan of deep pain. Greatly clarmed, I sprang to his aid, and lifting his head as a stray beam of moonlight came through clouds and leaves, he opened his eyes and wearily said: "Never mind me, captain, never mind me." Raising him again to his feet, he was accosted by Brig. Gen. Pender: "Oh, general, I hope you are not seriously wounded. I will have to retire my troops to reform them, they are so much broken by this fire." But Jackson, rallying his strength, with firm voice said: "You must held your ground, sir!" And so uttered his last command on the field.—Capt. James Power Smith in The Century.

Children Who Make Language.

The language-making instinct of very young children, which, in Mr. Horatic Hale's opinion, furnishes the solution for the puzzling question of the origin of tongues, is curiously shown among the children reared in Shaker families. They have, according to the evidence of those acquainted with the subject, many verbs and nouns, apparently of their own creation, and unlike any known dialect. The words are usually singularly ugly and unpleasant to any one with a sensiugly and unpleasant to any one with a sensi tive ear.—Boston Transcript.

Profits of Moonshining.

Moonshiners say they can stay in jail six months in the year, still three, and loaf three and make more money thereby than at any other business. They get seventy-five cents to $1 a gallon for their whisky and sell it as fast as they can make it. Very little is ever found when stills are seized.—Chicago Times.

TUESDAY, DECEMB'R 28, 1886 THE COLONIZATION SCHEME

Although little has been said in the press regarding the Oahu Colonization Company's scheme during the past few months, yet it has never for one moment been lost sight of by the origin ator, Mr. Dillingham, or those whom he has rallied to his aid. Capitalists in London have had the matter in hand for some months, making a careful investigation of the project through the assistance of maps and much detailed information. It is now reported from trustworthy bankers in London that there are good prospects of the stock being readily taken up. It was deemed important that the Hawaiian loan of - $2,000,000 should first have been floated, the easy success of which has been reported. Now that the remarkable eagerness with which the national bonds were sought has been seen, it will not be more surprising to hear that from five to ten times the amount of the capitalized value of the colonization scheme has also been applied for Those who have given this enterprise only a passing thought little realize the vast possibilities that it affords, not only to investors but to the whole country. When it becomes an accomplished fact, as there appears every probability it will, hardly an interest in the Kingdom will fail to receive great benefit thereby.

The promoter states that, as in the case of the national loan, a reserve of the colonization stock will be held for domestic investors a limited time, but the amount will be restricted owing to the length of time required for communication with London, and no subscriptions will be specifically solicited ness and 2 Village Carts. in this country. Those who want to invest in this scheme of developing the resources of this island should com municate with the promoter at once, as it will soon be too late to secure the stock here if English capitalists, as reported, are regarding it with confidence and favor.

The Portuguese Paper.

Christmas is a very important festivity in Portugal if even not the most important of all, and a well known tune, "Adesta Fideler" of Portuguese composition, is known the world over and sung in churches of all denomina-tions. It is not therefore surprising that the Luso Howaiiano comes out in splendid array to celebrate the solemnity and wish "Merry Christmas" not only to its readers, but its editor says, even to its enemies. On this occasion the Luse gives 36 columns, beginning with a map and geography of these Islands, and splendid Christmas literature. It also enumerates different kinds of presents which are given to the subscribers by the business manager, showing the enterprise, energy and capacity of its director. May the Luso see many returns of the day in the same prosperous circumstances.

The Best Tonic.

Mr. Henry Billings, Washington, D. C., writes: "I have used your Duffy's Pure Malt Windley for medicinal purposes. As a tonic I consider it imperior to the hundreds of concocions which are now flooding the laud as stimulant liquors."

If you want a good smoke for your money, patronize home industry and call at J. W. Hingley's, Crystal Soda Works, 69 Hotel street. Island orders solicited and promptly filled. CHUN HOOK CAUGHT.

Seized by Officers on the Walkiki Road.

Mr. David Dayton, Deputy Marshal, when about sitting, down to his tea table last evening, received information that Chun Hook would be found on the Waikiki road about eight o'clock. He quickly summoned Capt. Wm. Tell, Officer C. B. Reynolds of the Board of Health staff, and Policemen Punkalehua, Waihmalo and Waipa, taking them all in a wagon to near the place indicated. They left the wagon on the other side of Mr. A. Jaeger's, King street, and walked down the Wakiki road in a body. After going about 600 yards they saw the glimmer of a lighted match ahead, which was the preconcerted signal of the informer. In a few seconds a man approached them in the darkness, walking on the town side The list of Christmas overdraughts of the road as they strode along the feet or so away Mr. Dayton said "Go!" and the three policemen darted fortheir whiskey fund, as the forfeiture of to get over the fence into a banana patch. Mortally Wounded by Shots from His Own Men-Litter Bearers Under Federal Artillery Piro-Last Order Given by the General.

When Jackson had reached the point where his line now crossed the turnpike, scarcely a mile west of Chancellersville and not half a mile from a line of Federal troops, he had found his front line unfit for the farther and vigorous advance he desired, by reason of the irregular character of the fighting, now right, now left, and because of the dense thickets through which it was impossible to preserve alignment. First son commanders found it more and more ablance of the twilight deep-aned to hold that broken brigades in hand. Regretting the necessity of relieving the troops in front, Gen. Juckson had ordered A. P. Hill's division, his third and reserve line, to be placed in froat. While this change was being effected, imputient and anxious, the being effected, impatient and anxious, the general rodo forward on the turnpike, fol-lowed by two or three of hisstaff and a numlowed by two or three of his staff and a number of couriers and signal serguents. He passed the swampy depression, and began the ascent of the hill toward Chancellorsville, when he came upon a line of the Federal infantry lying on their arms. Fired at by one or two musicsts (two musicst balls from the enemy whistled over my head as I came to the front), he turned and came back toward his line, upon the side of the road to his left.

SHOT BY HIS DWN MEE. SHOT BY HIS OWN MEN.

As he rode near to the Confederate troops just placed in position, and ignorant that he was in the front, the left company began firing to the front, and two of his party fell from their saddles dead—Capt. Boswell, of the engineers, and Sergt. Cunilife, of the signal corps. Spurring his horse across the road to his right, he was met a second volley from the right company of Pender's North Carolina brigade. Under this volley, when not two rods from the troops, the general received three balls at the same instant. One penetrated the palm of his right hand, and was cut out that night from the back of his hand. A second passed around the wrist of the left arm and out through the left hand. But a third ball passed through the left arm half way from the shoulder to the elbow. The large bone of the upper arm was splintered to large bone of the upper arm was splintered to the elbow joint, and the wound bled freely. His horse turned quickly from the fire, through the thick bushes, which swept the cap from the general's head and scratched his forehead, leaving drops of blood to stain his

Hill holding the head and shoulders of the wounded chief. Cutting open the coat sleeve, from wrist to shoulder, I found the wound in the upper arm, and with my handkerchief I bound the arm above the wound, to stem the flow of blood. Couriers were sent for Dr. Hunter McGuire, the surgeon of the corps and the general's trusted friend, and for an ambugeneral's trusted friend, and for an amou-lance. Being outside of our lines, it was urgent that he should be moved as once. With difficulty litter bearers were brought from the line near by, the general placed upon the litter and carefully raised to the shoulder, I myself bearing one corner. UNDER ARTILLERY PIRE.

A moment later artillery from the Federal side was opened toon us; great broadsides thundefed over the woods; blasing shells searched the dark thickets through, and shrapnel swept the road along which we moved. Two or three steps farther and the litter bearer at my side was struck and fell, but as the litter turned Maj. Watkins Leigh, of Hill's staff, happily caught it. But the fright of the men was so great that we were obliged to lay the litter and its burden down upon the road. As the litter bearers ran to the cover of the trees I threw myself by the general's side, and held him firmly to the ground as he attempted to rise. Over us ground as he attempted to rise. Over us swept the rapid fire of shot and shell—grapeshot striking fire on the flinty rock of the road all around us and sweeping from their feet horses and men of the artillery just moved to the front. Soon the firing veered to the other side of the read, and I sprang to my feet, assisted the general to rise, passed my arm around hou, and with the wounded man's weight thrown beavily upon me, we forsook

Entering the woods, he sank to the ground from exhaustion, but the litter was soon brought, and, again rallying a few men, we essayed to carry him farther, when a second bearer fell at my side. This time, with none to assist, the litter careened, and the general fell to the ground with a groan of deep pain. Greatly clarined, I sprang to his aid, and lift-ing his head as a stray beam of moonlight came through clouds and leaves, he opened came through clouds and leaves, he opened his eyes and wearily said: "Nover mind me, captain, never mind me." Raising him again to his feet, he was accested by Brig. Gen. Pender: "Oh, general, I hope you are not seriously wounded. I will have to retire my troops to reform them, they are so much broken by this fire." But Jackson, rallying his strength, with firm voice said: "You must held your ground. Gen. Pender: you must hold your ground, Gen. Pender; you must hold your ground, sir!" And so uttered his last command on the field.—Capt. James Power Smith in The Century.

Children Who Make Language.

The language-making instinct of very young children, which, in Mr. Horatic Hale's opinion, furnishes the solution for the puzzling question of the origin of tongues, is curiously shown among the children reared in Shaker families. They have, according to the evidence of those acquainted with the subject, many verbs and nouns, apparently of their own creation, and unlike any known dialect. The words are usually singularly ugly and unpleasant to any one with a sensiugly and unpleasant to any one with a sensi tive ear.—Boston Transcript.
