We are glad to see that the Bulletin comes out in favor of organic reform in the Government. It is what Hawaii needs and what the taxpayers will have before they stop. The Bulletin will prove a strong ally to the people's cause. The fight must be commenced now and be kept up until the end is successfully reached. Delay will only defeat the taxpayers' cause again; and those who were so ready with cold water previous to the last campaign ought to learn something from the late defeat of the Opposition party. There is such a thing as learning too much by experience; and in the present instance, the people's cause has not profited by the blunders of those who have assumed to dictate a campaign policy for it.

THE trade resume of California for the year 1885 shows the following general results: Wheat product for the year 33,000,000 bushels; wheat and flour exports, expressed in wheat, 15,537,116 cents; barley product 15,000,000 bushels; sugar imports 178,071,184 pounds; beet sugar product for 1884-5, 2,134,273 pounds; coffee imports 22,301,085 pounds; rice imports 43,184,591 pounds; tea imports 6,788,784 pounds; gold and silver yield $76,990,000; coinage in the San Francisco Mint $23,508,869; merchandise export values by sea $36,075,192; combined exports of merchandise and treasure, exclusive of merchandise by railroad, $56,298,816; Federal Revenue for the port of San Francisco, $8,191,500; lumber receipts at the port of San Francisco, 324,744,684 feet; wool clip 36,561,390 pounds; product of wine, 9,000,000 gallons; quacksilver product 32,073 flasks; value of San Francisco manufactures $90,000,000; sale of real estate in San Francisco $13,250,000; increase of immigration, 23,761 souls; banking capital of the state $55,000,000. The gold product of the Pacific Coast since 1848 amounts to $1,830,226,105. The combined gold and silver product of the Pacific Slope since 1848 amounts to $2,607,006,786.

PARTY selfishness is opposed to patriotism. Representative Government naturally depends upon political parties, and therefore sustains them. In all Government dominated by the people political parties are both necessary and wholesome. Whenever the leaders of a party, therefore, devote themselves to the welfare of cliques and factions their course is not one of devotion to the country and ceases to be patriotic. Too often, alas! does political history point out instances where the welfare of the country has been periled to promote the party interests, or rather the interests of the party leaders. It is also a fact that such party leaders generally illustrate and emphasize their unpatriotic selfishness by attempting to exclude those men who, by their fidelity to the country, stand in the way of these so called "party interests." It is thus that when the people wish to organize a reform movement against delegated power, they generally have to fight the first and hardest battle with the men who champion the people's cause for the purpose of reaching selfish party ends, which are in fact selfish individual ends paraded under the cap of liberty. Such leaders generally hold that disrespect to party is highly unpatriotic. It can, however, be shown logically that adherence to such political theories is treason to the people's cause, which is much worse than treason to a King would be. A deep sense of wrong oftentimes causes the truest patriots in a country to carry reform measures to an extreme, and this is the common danger into which the people fall when they attempt to redress wrongs received from the Government. It is true, therefore, that all reform movements should be first matured and then pushed patriotically and firmly, but justly, to the end, no matter what the result may be.

HAWAIIAN FERNS AND FERNERIES.
FOURTH PAPER.

We are now on one of the densely wooded slopes or "papas" in the midst of the forest, at an elevation of between 4,000 and 5,000 feet. There is a wealth of vegetation about us, which we cannot fail to admire, but it is the ferns especially we would note growing within a radius of two hundred feet.

First, there is the Polypodium speciosum, whose thick green roots climb the tree trunks to a height of five or six feet. At frequent intervals rise the fronds, triangular in shape, and often measuring eight and ten inches across and as many in length. The thin texture of the fronds enable us to note the curious veining, which, with the profuse seeding, make the plant very conspicuous and interesting. On the trunk of the tree on which the spectrum is climbing are other Polypodiums; sarmentosum with the solitary fronds deeply cut into horizontal points; serotinum, hardly an eighth of an inch wide and two or three inches long, with its edges finely serrated; and Holckeri, with its slender entire fronds (a good deal like the "button" fern previously mentioned) covered with a dense growth of fine soft hairs.

There is a sheltered grotto near us formed by two or three interlocking tree trunks and massive branches, and from the under side of these hang masses of Asplenium dissectum (a rare fern only lately discovered), near which we find the Acrostichum. These are distinguished by their habit of sending up an occasional frond, which is completely covered with spores on the back, while all the rest are sterile. Hanging down from the tree trunk are clusters of A. squamosum, coated with brown scales, while growing erect on the upper surface of the same trunk are the varieties, A. Coniforme, reticulatum and micrandium. In a crotch of the same tree is a fourth variety, A. Gorgoneum, so named from having its veins united near the edge of the frond.

On the prostrate trunk of a tree close at hand we find the Polypodiums tamariscinum, whose pinnules are set on the midribs like the leaves of a tamarind tree, and the varieties, Hillebrandii—named for a well-known former resident of these islands—and tripinnatifidum, which is the handsomest of all. These ferns are mingled with a most beautiful Hymenophyllum, called from its habit of growth, recurvum; and in a crevice of the tree standing near by is found two more varieties of this lovely family, lanceolatum and obtusum. The latter bears fronds resembling very closely in shape, size and color the feathers on the breast of a pheasant, and, like them, overlapping each other smoothly.

Looking still more closely at this fernery we find the delicate little Polypodiums, hymenophylloides and Abidinum; while creeping up from the ground are several Trichomanes.

A few feet from where we are standing there is a splendid specimen of the only Marrattia found in the group. Its fronds, with their stout fleshy stalks are over six feet in height, and the whole plant is of a light translucent green. The root from which the fronds arise is very large and has been found to be rich in starch. In times of famine these roots were often eaten by the natives, and after being roasted are quite palatable.

One of the most beautiful ferns found in this locality is the Asplenium horridum. Its slender pinnules grow in clusters, and are found from six inches to three feet in length. The pinnules are cut into long lanceolate pinnules which are covered with spores of a rich reddish color, and the whole fern is clothed with dark brown woolly scales from which it takes its name. There are also clumps of three varieties of the Pteris: quadrauricularis irregularis and excelsa. The first has its pinnules arranged as to include regular quadrangular spaces, while the second sends out pinnules at irregular intervals, and the third has superb fronds often six feet in length, with broadly lanceolate pinnules beautifully edged with the characteristic arrangement of spores along the edges. There are many more varieties of ferns to be found in this locality, but some we have seen further down the mountain and others we will find more in perfection at an elevation of seven thousand feet, where the next fernery to visit is located.

Merchant Navies of the World.
A comparative table of the strength of the merchant navies of the world, which has just been published in France, shows that Great Britain possesses 22,500 trading vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 11,200,000 tons. Of these vessels 4,649 are steamers, with a tonnage of 5,919,000 tons, or rather more than one-half the grand total of burden. The United States make a very bad second, with 6,600 sail and 2,700,000 tons. Norway has 4,200 vessels, with 1,500,000 tons, and Germany, which comes immediately after her, has 3,000 sail, with a total of 1,400,000 tons; France, Italy and Russia bring up the rear, each with less than 3,000 vessels. The proportion of steamers is, however, of greater importance than the total number of ships engaged in trade, and in this regard France stands second, although she has but 458 steamers, or 667,000 tons in all, to England's 4,649. Germany presses her closely with 420 steamers and 476,000 tons.

A lady who received a package of the most fashionable perfume inquired, innocently, "Is this a disinfectant?" She had become thoroughly impressed with the need of preparing for epidemics.

Japanese etiquette requires that the lady shall give the signal for the termination of a visit from a gentleman. In this country such a thing would be considered bad form; therefore the lady, when she would terminate an interview, merely yawns and looks the clock out of countenance.—Boston Transcript.

No. 20 of our neighbor, O Luso Hawaiian, is promptly at hand, and continues to bear the mark of energy and enterprise in its management, as well as continued and increasing patronage from the public. Last issue was again a surprise, coming out with a view of an eruption of the Volcano of Kilauea, and containing six columns instead of the regular number of five. To-day's number has an interesting article on the German annexations among the South Sea Islands, as compared with the Hawaiian Islands. It is also replete with useful information and local news, and closes up with a special article from the editor on the papa tree, and a good Chinese story from San Francisco.

Yesterday morning a native drayman was seen working his way down Nuuanu street toward the wharf with a load of sixteen bales of native hay, loosely piled upon his truck, and tied with a very slack rope. The top bales leaned threateningly toward Ewa and the native could only keep them on by driving very slowly and keeping two wheels on the Waikiki side of the street in the gutter, to counterbalance the tipping. Every once in a while he would get down and push the top bales of hay back within the center of gravity, and so continued throughout the length of the street, greatly to the annoyance of other vehicles. Moral: This shows that if people and firms owning drays would hire competent men as teamsters, who could properly load and transport through our narrow streets such bulky merchandise the public would gain in convenience and run less risk of accidents.

They say: That the people of New Zealand have to climb a hill to see the ocean over their public debt; that New Zealand is now anxious to buy the Samoan Islands; that the rain came down in a very tropical manner for a while during Thursday night; that the gay fellows who were out trying to put salt on a lark's tail night before last all went home drenched with the gentle dew from heaven; that Mr. Berger sent the band programme for this afternoon into the PRESS office yesterday set to music; that the music cannot be printed because the compositors couldn't read it; that the next patent of nobility issued in this Kingdom will be written on sheet iron; that the yacht clubs of Honolulu are thinking of competing for the American cup next time; that the mud on Fort street is not as dirty as the mud on Nuuanu street; that the funny man from Frisco is expected to arrive by the steamer George Washington Eider, early in March; that it will be decided to-morrow when the next Legislature will meet; that some of the disgruntled citizens of Honolulu affirm that the kingly crown has been poised for the last time in Hawaii; that the spirit of the times is against the policy to be carried out in the next Legislature; that Signor Eurico Campobello will likely come to Honolulu during next April with an operatic troupe; that the immigrants are quietly folding their blouses and silently shipping away to the other Islands like good Jappies should; that the Honolulu Library has received donations this week amounting to about twenty volumes; that the Wells, Fargo agencies now being established on the other Islands by Mr. C. K. Miller will be duly appreciated by the people generally; that the band will give a concert at Emma square next Monday evening, if it don't rain; that the Church services for to-morrow will be of more than ordinary interest; that if the Waikiki road is in good condition to-morrow there will be some dashing horseback parties out; that the trial of Alo in the Intermediary Court is a hollow mockery if it is anything; that people say this without any disrespect for the Court; that the temperance work in the Hawaiian Islands is more than overbalanced by the policy of the Government; that everybody is logically warranted in exterminating the Hawaiian race as soon as they can, since the Government has set the example; that the prince of men is generally a rich man; and that the poor man has no right under the present form of Government here.

Hold Sneak Thieves.

Some time last Thursday night, some unknown person or persons entered the cottage occupied by Captain Haley and his family, in the Hotel grounds, and carried away all the wearing apparel belonging to the Captain. On arising yesterday morning, Captain Haley started to dress himself, when looking around he could not find the clothes he had laid on a chair the night before, and thinking somebody had put them in a wardrobe which stands in the hall, he went to the wardrobe, opened the door, when to his astonishment, all his clothes were gone. The door of the cottage was left open by Captain Haley, to admit one of the hotel employees, who was to wake him early, as he was going to Waialua early in the morning. The matter was immediately put into the hands of the police, who are working up the case. Among other things taken was a set of fine gold sleeve buttons and a set of studs. Nothing further could be learned from the police or at the hotel, than the above, as the police are trying to hush the matter up until the thief is caught.

The residence of C. W. Hart, on the corner of Punchbowl and Beretania streets was also entered the same night, and a quantity of clothing carried away. The thief or thieves, whoever they are, seem to have a particular taste for wearing apparel.

A CARD.

Mr. H. Armitage.
DEAR SIR: We have just returned from a trip to the Volcano of Kilauea per the "W. G. Hall," via Punaluu, and have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the admirable manner in which the whole arrangements are conducted with a view to the comfort and convenience of tourists. The hotel accommodations and meals supplied by Mr. Lee of Punaluu it would not be easy to surpass anywhere. And at the half-way House a really first-class meal is provided both on the up and down journey. There is no doubt that this is by far the most comfortable route by which to visit the Volcano.

We are yours truly,
H. W. DRYSDAL,
