FIRST LOCAL PORTRAIT

MRS. YATES COMPLETES THE PORTRAIT OF A HONOLULU LADY.

Mrs. H. A. Widemann Sat—Opinion on the Production—A New Scene by Mr. Hitchcock—Waianae.

Fred Yates, the visiting portrait artist, has just completed a life-size portrait of the late Mrs. H. A. Widemann. The work is pronounced very faithful and has met the entire approval of the friends of Mrs. Widemann. It was placed on exhibition in the art parlors of the Pacific Hardware Co. this morning.

A new painting which has attracted great attention in the same room this morning is one by D. Howard Hitchcock of a scene in Nuuanu valley. The sketch is perfect and is recognizable at a glance. For delicate coloring and exquisite shade effects the painting is pronounced of a high artistic order.

Hugo Fisher has finished his painting of Waianae. It is a strong piece of work. A handsome frame is being provided for it today and it will be on exhibition in the art rooms tomorrow.

Two Chinese were fined $10 each for gambling.

Nol pros was entered in the case of Lau Mee, charged with larceny.

Pipi was up for furious and heedless driving. After a long trial he was found not guilty and discharged.

Photograph Gallery

T. P. Severin has taken the photograph gallery opposite Love's bakery on Nuuanu avenue, where he will enter immediately into the work of taking pictures. Mr. Severin has had years of experience at this branch and has always met with success in it.

Like the Phonograph

The new goods just opened at L. B. Kerr's are like the phonograph, they speak for themselves. Ladies should examine this enormous stock before purchasing elsewhere, and if they are not convinced that they can save from 25c to 50c on every dollar by buying all their dry goods at this leading store it will not be the fault of the management.

WHICH?

The business man is often perplexed in deciding on which make of typewriter to get. They all claim to be the "best." Which machine really is the best?

The Peerless is a modern typewriter. It is right "up-to-now." Strong, handsome, durable. Easy to operate and its work is excellent. It is the business man's best friend. There's no question about the Peerless being the best typewriter. Examination will prove it. Price $100.

DISTRESS IN NORFOLK.

SYDNEY, Oct. 2.—In connection with Bishop Wilson's appeal for further assistance to the Norfolk Islanders, a somewhat misleading statement has appeared in the press, to the effect that one firm has sent ten tons, and another thirteen. These shipments, however, are simply business speculations, and not donations, and do not in any way affect the appeal made to the charitably disposed in New Zealand.

VENEZUELA.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—It is rumored in New York that the decision of the American Commission set up to investigate the Venezuela frontier dispute will be in favor of the Republic. The President and Mr. Olney are disposed to promote action in Congress before retiring from office.

RUSH FOR TICKETS.

Engaging Seats for H. Trovatore, Jane and the Concert.

The box plan for H. Trovatore, Jane and the grand concert, to take place in the Irwin Grand on the evenings of the 3rd, 5th and 7th of November, were opened at Wall, Nichols Co's. store at 10 o'clock this morning. People crowded around the place an hour ahead of time to get choice seats.

H. Trovatore, coming first, sold best. In an hour the rear of the pit and the front rows of the dress circle were gone. By noon 250 seats had been reserved down stairs and the gallery was rapidly filling up. Since noon Mr. Nichols reports that the sale has been very satisfactory. It begins to look like the house will be sold out before the end of the week.

Jane, the next play, has also had a run. The pit and dress circle are going well and gallery seats are being reserved. As the concert is so far off the sale for it has hardly fairly begun. It is now certain that each of the programs will draw a full house.

HIGH IN THE AIR.

One of the novelties proposed for the Paris exposition of 1900 is to swing a midair suspension railway from the top of the Eiffel Tower to the summit of the distant Trocadero, from which will be hung by rollers chairs making the journey back and forth. The Eiffel Tower is 985 feet high. It will give the reader some notion of what that means to recall that the copper cap on the top of Washington Monument is only 555 feet from the ground.

TO PUBLISH A BOOK.

Fred Walker has already started work in his bureau of information project. His first step will be to get out a book descriptive of the islands and travel. This will be circulated as far as possible in the States and elsewhere. Articles for the work are now being collected. After the project is well under way Mr. Walker will open an office for the accommodation of the business.

HE WEPT.

HAWAII JUDGESHIP.

Judge A. Rosa received his commission last Friday morning and opened the Kohala term immediately. Resolutions on the death of Judge S. L. Austin were passed. The Hawaiian criminal calendar was then proceeded with.

Respecting the judgeship Mr. Rosa writes to a friend here: "Little is pulling hard for the place. Petitions are out. E. G. Hitchcock will not take it. Little thinks this betters his chances. Nice people."

CHINESE NAVY.

Capt. William Long, R. N., now in command of the guardship Devastation, at Devonport, has been asked to take again the chief command of the Chinese navy, which he held from 1886 to 1890, and will probably accept. He is a mandarin of the peacock feather, and wears the star of the third grade of the second order of the Double Dragon.

In the days of his boyhood Edwin Winter, who recently purchased the entire line of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, its bonds, stocks, leased and branch lines, for $13,000,000, and has been elected its president under the reorganization, lived in Crompton Village, N. H., his father being a native of that town. When Edwin was in his teens the family moved West, and there he worked as clerk in a Chicago grain house.

A REVIEW.

A regimental parade and review will likely be ordered for a week from tomorrow evening. It will be tendered to Minister Cooper, who is the official head of the war department. Minister Cooper has not yet had a review.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT ON THE IDEALISTIC LINE

LENGTHY ANSWER IN AN EJECTMENT SUIT.

Small Piece of Land on Kauai—Nine Acres at Waianae—Pat Curtis Regains Spray Title.

In a document of thirty-four pages of closely written matter, Christian and Anna Gertz made answer to the complaint of Mrs. Maria J. Forbes in an ejectment suit brought against them.

J. M. Peemahale, administrator of the estate of B. Kahawehewanui, has brought in a bill against D. Toomey, M. S. Grinbaum & Co., and Maria Makaha to declare and foreclose a lien. This case arises on account of a small piece of property on Kauai, which has passed through the hands of all the parties named as defendants, in one way and another, but starting, it appears, with a defective title.

Joseph Kahuakohoku has begun ejectment proceedings against Akamu and J. R. Holt, Jr., to recover some nine acres of land at Waianae, held by defendants and claimed by plaintiff.

Weedon vs. Waterhouse was argued in Supreme Court Wednesday afternoon and submitted.

In Pat Curtis vs. W. P. Morrow, alias J. K. Sheridan and Dr. Frank Underwood, equity, Judge Perry rendered an oral decision in favor of plaintiff Wednesday afternoon. In explaining to the court how he became owner of the boat, Curtis said he bought it for $500 "to go after opium with." The suit was to establish ownership against the claims of the two defendants. Humphreys for plaintiff; Creighton and Correa for defendants. No business in the Supreme Court today.

MYRTLE HOP.

The Popular Boat Club Will Dance at a House Warming Next Week.

The Myrtle Boat Club met in the Chamber of Commerce at 7:30 Wednesday. Attendance was unusually large. The names of thirteen new applicants were acted upon favorably. Reports of officers were received.

The matter of a dance to be given a week from tomorrow night in honor of the completion of the addition to the club house was decided upon. It is proposed to make it the most extensive and elaborate social function the club has yet held. W. F. Dillingham, W. T. Monsarrat, W. H. Wright, Fred Angus, Ed Paris, Charles Crane and Henry Giles were appointed a committee of arrangements.

The office of vice president was declared vacant, the resignation of D. Crozier, who recently left for New Zealand, having been accepted. W. F. Love was elected to fill the vacancy.

LABORERS.

The 266 Chinese in quarantine have been photographed and will be shipped next week to the following plantations: Lihue, Hamakua Mill, Laupahoehoe, Honokaa, Pacific Sugar Mill and Hilo Sugar Company.

FIFES AND DRUMS.

Meeting Called to Complete Organization of the New Corps.

A meeting of the men who will go into the proposed regimental fife and drum corps will be held at the old barracks at 7:30 tomorrow evening for the purpose of completing the process of organization. In the corps will be eight fifers and eight drummers. They will be drawn from the military and the Citizens Guard.

The uniform of the corps will be white duck trimmed with black braid. Sergt. King will command the body. The drum corps will amalgamate with the new organization.

HILLO'S NEW HOTEL.

The Hilo hotel was opened today by Mrs. T. L. Grant, a lady experienced in the management of such business. Mrs. Grant made two trips to Honolulu in refitting her place and has it now in first class shape in every respect. Under the direction of Mrs. Grant the hotel will be an excellent establishment and capital people can safely recommend it to their friends going to Hilo.

On the Bicycle

Is the only practicable way to see Honolulu. To rent by the hour, day or week. HAWAIIAN CYCLERY, Way Block, King street.

PLAN OF THE NEW THEATER DROP CURTAIN NOW KNOWN.

Something Highly Artistic and Commanding Study—To Be Reserved as a Surprise Drapery.

The design of the new curtain of the Irwin Grand has been decided upon, but the subject will be kept a profound secret, if possible, until the opening of the house. It will then be presented as a surprise, and it will indeed be a great surprise. There will be two curtains, the front one being of drapery of the latest design.

The subject of the curtain will be a scene from a famous work of literature. Of course it will be remembered that the old one was from "The Lady of Lyons." This subject was chosen in the same way, but will appeal more directly to the intelligent audience. It will appear idealistic and the effect will be dreamy. To look at it one will get the impression of a new masterpiece of art, reflecting something the mind is puzzled at first to grasp. Gradually the subject will be unfolded until its story dawns. For the best effect it is deemed most wise to withhold the subject, that all may have the pleasure of unraveling it for themselves.

The curtain will be fire-proof. It will rise straight to the ceiling, saving the annoyance of folding and unfolding. This will be used at the end of each full act. The drapery curtain will fall at the end of the last act and will signify the close of the performance. It will also remain down until the performances begin.

Mr. Porter will be at work a month longer on new scenery. When he is through the theater will be as complete in this important material as any opera house of like pretensions in the world. Any traveling combination can find in the collection all the pieces and sets needed for standard plays. The Frawley Company agent has found all required for twelve performances. Of course they bring along a machine shop, a man-o'-war and a few extra little things like that which no opera house is expected to keep on hand.

LECTURE THIS EVENING.

This is the evening for the lecture at the Y. M. C. A. hall, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Senate. Professor Scott, principal of the High school, will be the speaker. His subject will be gold and silver as money and he will treat the topic from an educational standpoint. This will be an excellent opportunity for young and older men of the city to familiarize themselves with the issues which has caused the mighty political struggle now pending in the United States. Others will be given the privilege of speaking after Professor Scott has concluded. All are welcome and there is no charge.

RAINFALL.

A Resume of the Reports from All the Islands for September, 1896.

Professor Lyons' weather report for September shows the rainfall to have been quite heavy on Hawaii, but comparatively light elsewhere. Oahu showed the heaviest for the islands, 18.64 inches. Pohnahani, on the same island, was a close second with 18.15. At Hilo there was 11.21. Honokaa shows only 1.02. On Maui the heaviest was at Hana, 3.43; Olowalu had no rain. Kauai's heaviest was at Hanalei, 4.66. On Oahu the fall was exceedingly low, the heaviest being at Wyllie street, Nuuanu, 1.44. At the weather bureau there was only .64. Ewa had .37; Kahuku .85 and Waimanalo .33.

The averages by islands have been: Hawaii, 6.67; Maui, 1.10; Molokai, .98; Oahu, .72; Kauai, 1.98.

CHINESE CHILDREN.

Two Chinese children were arrested this morning for truancy. The mother was also arrested for not sending her children to school. Capt. Parker released her, however, on her good looks. The children will be remanded tomorrow and released on their promise to go back to school.

THE SUREST WAY

to success in business, is to have a useful article to sell and then to tell the plain truth about it in simple words. The popularity of Wampole's Preparation proves the soundness of this principle. The best and most intelligent people throughout Europe and America, use and rely on it. There is no haze of mystery nor affectation of magic about this remedy. The formula is on the label; read it for yourself: Cod Liver Oil, with the Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, Extract of Malt and Extract of Wild Cherry Bark. There you have the whole thing—the very soul of healing for the diseases which everywhere prevail. Cases that were pronounced real Consumption have completely recovered by the use of it; and Rheumatism, Malaria, Anemia, Debility, the sequences of Scrofula, and all ailments accompanied with rapid loss of flesh and strength, yield very kindly to Wampole's Preparation. It always agrees with the stomach. All the more because, although it contains all the nourishing properties of Cod Liver Oil, there is no appearance or taste of that valuable yet nauseous drug. And this is a point which people will appreciate. It is a scientific victory of our own time. Accept no substitute; genuine only gives results. Sold by all druggists.

BRIEF STAY IN PORT OF THE R. M. S. S. MONOWAI TODAY.

Freight and Passengers—Coal Fleet En Route to Honolulu—Makee's New Machinery—400 Tons of Sugar.

The W. G. Hall sails tomorrow on her regular Hawaii route at 10 a. m.

The J. A. Cummins sailed today taking 1000 bags of paddy over to Koolau.

The Swanhilda, four-masted bark, is among the latest charters from Newcastle for Honolulu, with option for San Francisco. She brings a cargo of coal.

The Warrimoo falls due tomorrow from Vancouver and Victoria. The next mail from San Francisco will be by the Mariposa which falls due on the 22nd.

The Hawaiian bark Rosalie, Capt. Nissen, sailed from Newcastle for Honolulu, with 947 tons of coal on September 15th. She is just one month out today.

The Kaala came in from Oahu ports yesterday. She brought no sugar. She loaded 60 tons of coal and 1700 railway ties and sailed this afternoon for Kahuku.

The barks Ardgowan and Samoa were dispatched from Newcastle on September 25th by Messrs. J. and A. Brown and Mr. R. B. Wallace, respectively, for Honolulu.

The bark John Ena, 2568 tons, Capt. Madison, on the voyage from Newcastle to San Francisco met with a terrific gale, during which her cargo shifted and she lost three lower topsails, a staysail, and fore and mainsail.

The Monowai has but thirty-eight tons of freight for Honolulu, but carries a large through freight. She brought five cabin passengers for this port, and 64 cabin for San Francisco. The Monowai resumed her voyage at noon today.

The American bark Martha Davis, Capt. Soule, sailed at noon today for San Francisco. She took away only 400 tons of sugar, or enough for ballast. The Mohican is the next vessel on the berth to load sugar for the combination for San Francisco.

The James Makee arrived from Kapaa this morning. Capt. Peterson says the Makee is now a smart bant. Since receiving her new boiler she steams splendidly. She made the run to Kaula in nine hours and back in eleven hours, dead steaming, as there was no wind to help her. Ninety bags of rice constituted her cargo. She sailed again for Kapaa this afternoon with 100 tons of coal.

Mr. Lyle has had his diver examining the bottom of the Gainsborough for the last two days. The survey was completed yesterday, and with the exception of a slight dent in one of her plates, and the tops of several rivets there is no other apparent damage to the vessel. Mr. McCandless has his pumping gear in good working order, and there is not any trouble in keeping the vessel clear of water.

The R. M. S. S. Monowai arrived in port from the Colonies at 6 o'clock this morning. Following is the report kindly furnished by the purser: The R. M. S. Monowai, 2136 tons, Capt. M. The building papers are 1, 2, 3, and 4 ply. They come in rolls, each roll containing 1000 square feet. They are water proof, acid and alkali proof and vermin proof. A house lined with building paper is far cooler than one that is not. There is also a cheaper grade of paper adapted for use under matting keeping out insects.

HONOLULU, July 29th, 1895.
Messrs. W. G. Irwin & Co., LTD.

GENTLEMEN:—In reply to your inquiry as to how the Ideal Roof Paint you sold me lasted; I would say that I painted the roof of my house 12 months ago with your Red Ideal Roof Paint, and I find it is as fresh and bright in appearance today as when first applied; looking as well as others lately painted with other paints. I am more than satisfied.

J. G. ROTHWELL.

Have you a leaky gutter? If you have, make it perfectly clean and dry, apply a good coat of No. 3 P. and B. Paint over the leaky spots; then take a piece of stout Manila paper, or a piece of common cotton cloth, paint it well on both sides; lay it over the first coat, giving the whole a final coat, and there will be no more leak there. Or if the whole gutter is bad, make it clean and dry, and apply a paste of P. & B. Paint and Portland Cement.

When Striving

to keep the wolf from the door remember that it is not always the cheapest that is the most economical; the vast superiority of our bread over any other make—either brown or white—both in its bone and muscle making substances, secures for it the position of cheapest and best.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1896.

The Bureau of Education has acquired a most admirable business snap.

W. O. Smith is on the island of Hawaii. Perhaps he will make a casual call at the office of the Hilo Tribune.

Olaa district had rain enough last month for almost the whole of Hawaii. But there are never any floods in the territory of coffee groves. The porous soil and the admirable natural drainage insure against any damage.

If a hurricane struck the White House at Washington and Mr. Cleveland escaped, it was most likely because he was not at home. If he was on deck it was not his initial experience as the center of a Washington storm center.

Russia and Great Britain might become allies again, but the dispatch intimating such a union had best be stored away with the recent advice projecting an American-British-Italian partnership in the interest of the Armenians in Turkey.

Americans must have multiplied mightily on the Rand, or South African gold reef. Mine or claim jumping is a distinctively American institution. In the States there has been the most deplorable indulgence of this disregard to property rights.

The discovery of coal near Melbourne is of the first importance to that city. At present all her fuel comes from Newcastle. Coal at hand will give Melbourne an onward push and if the seams pan out she may confidently expect a return of prosperity.

That is a guileless little rumor dispatch from Washington telling of a New York report to the effect that the decision of the United States Venezuelan commission will be in favor of the United States. The advance sheet on the opinion belongs to the category of important if correct.

The news from New Zealand that Australian oranges have found a ready and profitable London market will be painful intelligence to the California orchardists. These latter have been trying across the Atlantic with a most worthy perseverance, but will now discover their plans for extension completely shattered.

Distress on Norfolk island and grain riots in India are briefly told of in the dispatches. The cries for help from these quarters will in all likelihood draw some attention from Armenia. Norfolk can be easily relieved from either New Zealand or Australia. As to India it is much more serious. The sufferers are numbered by the hundreds of thousands and a system to save them must be elaborate and perfect and very expensive.

The Sudan affair has afforded the British War Office a rare opportunity for some brilliant experimenting. It is a most marvelous thing that less than a score of white officers are handling with such splendid effectiveness and such certain success an army of 6,000 to 10,000 black and yellow men. Here is a generous and pronounced reward for the drilling of years and an abiding faith that there was army material in these natives. They have been trained of mind as well as of body. The reports are that the divisions, regiments and companies are heart and soul in the work and that they contest for the chance of action, always eager to follow the flag of the Queen. This practical demonstration of the great value of the native troops is destined to have a widespread international effect. The fact will serve as a bumper to Russian advances and will contribute much to a decisive arrangement of European puzzles.

ART AND THE ART POSTER.

The natives generally and the haoles to a very large extent, seem to have the spirit of art rampant abroad. This is shown by the liking of the classes indicated for Le Breten's grand historical nightmare now on free public exhibition. No canvas ever displayed in Honolulu has attracted half the attention or admiration bestowed on this lurid creation. Perhaps it is the subject, the inspiring motif, that has captivated, but The Star is inclined to the belief that the coloring is the chief charm. At any rate the picture has become immensely popular and it becomes the duty of a journal to seek for the causes. The problem is not entirely difficult of solution. The Battle of Nuanu is depicted in the style of the modern artistic poster. The poster cult is just now at the head of the art procession in other countries and the worshippers of Le Breten's masterpiece have kept apace, while the real local artists have stuck to the old methods and subjects. This is the secret of the sensation. On an occasion some months ago The Star quietly called attention to the immense Honolulu partiality for the weird variety of print. But the art poster is not yet fully understood here. As Ella Wheeler Wilcox declares of people on earth today, there are just two kinds. One is a dream, painted at night in a dark room. A merchandise prize is awarded for the best interpretation of it. The other has figures of men and women and horses, dogs, cats and rats. In this second variety it is nothing uncommon to notice a depiction of a yellow rat either battling or holding converse with a pink horse. There is also such crazy deviation from the ordinary as a green woman grinning at a carmine man and at the same time scornfully rejecting the smiles of a carnation cat with a red mane and blue feathers. It is the spirit of this high art. The Star is firmly convinced, that has somehow floated through the ether from New York, Boston, London and Paris and permeated the intellects of more than half of Honolulu. But the Kilohana Art League's Fall Exhibition should happily offset this strange and foreign lunacy.

SUPPOSED TO BE FUNNY.

(Mavericked.)

"What are you going to name the boy?" asked the old neighbor.

"We thought something of naming him after some of our statesmen," answered the proud father.

"One of the dead ones, or one of the live ones?"

"One of the living ones." "Don't you do it. Don't you do it. It isn't safe. About the time you git the kid named for some politician you admire the darn politician is liable to bolt clean over to the enemy."

Winter Visitor to Florida—I should love dearly to go sailing, but it looks very dangerous. Do not people often get drowned in this bay?

Waterman—No, indeed, mum; the sharks never lets anybody drown.

ODD SPOKES.

Next year's world's championships will be held in Scotland.

Literally the Japanese for cycling means "living machine."

It is asserted that the output of some manufacturers of wheels of the 1897 model will be no more than a third of their production for this year.

Charles D. Cramp of Philadelphia is at the head of a company of capitalists of that city to erect a large plant at Norristown, Pa., for the manufacture of steel cycle tubing.

A Missouri girl dressed up in bloomers and went to surprise her grandparents. They, in turn, tore her bloomers off, compelled her to put on a dress, smashed her bicycle and then sent her home.

James Edward Leahan of Boston has patented an ice bicycle. The steering post extends to the ground and terminates in a skate. The rim of the rear or driving wheel has a flat tire fitted with spikes.

Gertrude Vanderbilt brings $5,000,000 into the new Whitney family. It is evident that young Mr. Whitney can afford to take his bicycle to the repair shop whenever he wants to, says the Minneapolis Journal.

L. D. Hotchkiss, a young man who lived in Cheyenne county, Kan., wanted to go Oberlin, 125 miles away, to stand an admission to the bar. Having no money he rode the distance on a bicycle, passed his examination and pedaled back home again.

"La Somnambula" up to date was seen at Bath Beach, N. Y., recently, when a young lady, beautiful of course, was discovered riding a bicycle and yet sound asleep. It is no uncommon thing for soldiers to march and sleep, but a bicyclist sleeping on a moving wheel is peculiarly fin de siècle.290 LIVERY.

WATER SLUGS.

Uncanny Things That Come Through the City Mains and Taps.

This morning a slug nearly two inches long by an inch wide was sent to Professor Koebele for identification. It came through a water pipe. The specimen is a mole brown with a white streak beneath the body. It's general makeup suggests the leech, but it is much larger and wider. It is provided with a small mouth and suckers.

Professor Koebele says that several slugs have been sent to him lately, and it appears that they are becoming quite numerous in the valley reservoirs. They are harmless little creatures in the ordinary sense, but would be apt to make one feel very uncomfortable to see one in a glass of water.—Hawaiian Star.

Unquestionably, it would not be a very pleasant sensation to experience something like the above, but you can easily avoid it by using the Gate City Improved Stone Filters.

The filtering medium is natural stone mined from the earth and is unlike any other stone in that it does not become foul. Impurities never penetrate it, but lie on the surface and is easily cleaned and never become cracked or crased by change of temperature.

We have the filters in four sizes, viz.: No. 6, $6; No. 7, $8; No. 8, $10; No. 9, $12.

The Board of Health will always advise you to drink only pure water, well boiled and well filtered.

We quote from a letter of Anheuser Busch Brewing Association, dated Sept. 8th, the following:

Your honorable firm having represented us so many years, we believe it is useless to call your attention to the merits of our article, but we should like to repeat again and call your attention to the fact that ours is the only pure barley malt beer manufactured, and corn cereals and other adulterants, as well as acids, for the preservation of beer, are unknown in our establishment. With the above you may go before the public and publish the same.

Mr. L. A. Rocher is a farmer residing about three miles out of Colon, N. C. His home is somewhat in the back woods. In an interview with Mr. S. T. Godfrey, a correspondent of the Telegram and Sunday Times, Mr. Rocher on the 17th of June, 1895, said: "I am 61 years of age, and until I was eight or ten years old, I was always well and hearty, then for a long while and until last February, I suffered with indigestion and could not eat anything hardly at all. My daughter, who lives in the city, sent me some of Ripans Tabules, told me how to take them, and they have completely cured me. My wife is now troubled with the same complaint, and has written daughter to send some more of Mr. Ripan's medicine. I want you to tell everybody how I got cured, for it is a blessing to humanity." Hawaiian Electric Company.

The cleanest, brightest safest and really, in the long run, the cheapest and best light for use in the family residence, is the incandescent electric light. Safe; nothing could be safer. A few days ago a prominent gentleman of Honolulu came rushing down to the office of the Hawaiian Electric Company and said: "Give me figures for wiring my house, and I want it done at once; no more lamps for me. Last night a lamp tipped over and it came so near setting fire to the house and burning my children and I take no more risks." This is the sentiment of quite a number in the past few weeks, who have ordered their houses fitted with the perfect light. Just think it over and make up your mind that you want the best and safest light; send for the Hawaiian Electric Company and tell them what you want. We have a complete stock of everything in this line and have just received a lot of the very latest designs in chandeliers.

UNCLE SAM IN SAMOA

COURT DECISION FAVORS AMERICAN INTERESTS.

Now on a Par With the British—White Cruisers Are Expected—Revival of Talk on Pagopago Harbor.

(Samoa Times.)

Now that the Polynesian land litigation has terminated, and the lands are practically the property of Messrs. Wellman, Neylan and Hobbs of California, the American interests have become much more substantial than formerly, and, in consequence, more deserving of the serious consideration of the United States Government. With the prospect of a Republican majority in the Senate, it is quite on the cards that, early in the coming year, we may have an American man-of-war in these waters on a visit of inspection; and possibly it may be considered expedient for the future, to pay more frequent visits to Samoa than of late years, and revive public interest in the direction of harbor works in Pagopago contemplated long since, but dying an ignominious death from inattention. Let us hope that such a step may be taken in the interests of the United States Navy, which is being reorganized and largely increased in numbers—particularly in cruisers—even if the step originates from a jingo outcry. The decision to which we refer brings the American interest on a level with the British interests, or nearly so; a fact that may possibly have a political influence over our future, of which we have but little conception at the present time. The fact is not to be disguised also that from 1890 to the present year of grace American politicians have left us severely alone—except, once or twice, as a party cry to secure some trivial end—thus proving a stumbling block to our progress.

SIR HENRY PARKES.

The late Sir Henry Parkes is the subject of a kindly character sketch by Mr. A. Patchett Martin, who is, however, careful not to leave the warts out of the picture. The deceased statesman, it appears, was a great borrower:

"Parkes, too, apart from his salary (when in office) had, in the language of the police court, 'no visible means of support.' He accordingly adopted the Falstaffian method of perpetual borrowing. * * * He even reduced his borrowings to a scientific system, and when in want of money applied to the first friend he met in the street for £30. This was his pet figure."

The writer then sums up the man:

"He was, first and foremost, a public man—in some respects a truly great one. That a man with such drawbacks and deficiencies—lowly birth, poverty, lack of early education, lifelong improvidence, to which may be added untoward, if not unhappy, domestic relationships—should have played such a part for fifty years in public affairs can only be accounted for by the combination of great intellectual capacity with an inborn gift and genius for statesmanship."

HIGHLAND MARY.

Burns immortalized Highland Mary in verse, and now her image has been perpetuated in imperishable bronze at Donoon, Scotland, where her statue was recently unveiled. The site of the statue was a gift from Bouverie Campbell Wyndham, and the fund was raised by admirers of Burns' genius from all parts of the world. Not far off is Auchamore farm, the birthplace of Highland Mary. She inspired him to write one of the most human and touching poems that has ever been framed. She was to Burns what Beatrice was to Dante, and their names are indissolubly linked together wherever the Scotch poem is known and appreciated. The sculptor of the statue is D. W. Stevenson.

Mr. J. K. Fowler, secretary and treasurer of the Corinne Utah, Canal and Stock Co., of Corinne, Utah, in speaking of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy says: "I consider it the best in the market. I have used many kinds but find Chamberlain's the most prompt and effectual in giving relief, and now keep no other in my home." When troubled with a cough or cold give this remedy a trial and we assure you that you will be more than pleased with the result. For sale by all druggists and dealers. CHAPTER III.

When she was gone, Mr. Timberly said to himself: "That woman makes me shudder. But her caper of going through Sam's desk gives me an idea. I don't half like having his confounded letters around here. Suppose Flossy should some day take it into her head to play the same game and find them! Ten to one they are, like most girls' letters, without address or signature, and she would be justified in thinking they were written to me. I've a notion to see if they do not expose me to that risk—not to read them, of course, but just to know what chances I am taking." While soliloquizing he took the package from the drawer, slipped off its rubber band and shuffled over the perfumed billets doux. "As I expected. Not one of them in an envelope addressed to him. Sam's cunning." He opened one. "Big lump of sweetness," he read, and muttered to himself: "A pretty way to address a man. Might apply to any fellow. 'Your own loving Cuddles! Loving Cuddles! Oh, this won't do at all. I would rather keep a dynamite bomb lying about loose. They will have to go into the safe until I can see Sam and tell him to take his firebrands away."

Handling then together and doubling the elastic on them, as if he feared one might get loose, he poked them away back in a private compartment of the safe. He would have done better had he burned them at once. Love letters, new or old, are always dangerous, even though they may be those of a stranger. Those who extol the "golden age" do not lay anything like sufficient stress upon the general ignorance of letters as a factor of popular happiness in that felicitous era. Where few could read or write, there were not many love letters, and no wife in those days would have been likely to suffer such a shock as Flossy had on her way down town from an astral view of her husband handling what her feminine instinct promptly recognized as love letters, and her wifely power of unreason at once assumed were his own pernicious and incendiary property.

Mrs. Timberly was in an elevated railway car, thinking so intently upon Algernon's treachery that she was more than half unconscious of immediate surroundings, when her impish second sight caught a glimpse of him at the very instant of his hearing, "Your own loving Cuddles," and the line was as plain to Flossy as to him. "So," she thought, "that was how the brazen creature called herself—the woman who pawed Algernon and made eyes at him—Cuddles!" She ransacked her memory to find if he had ever inadvertently called her Cuddles, for she rightly surmised that a man addicted to pet names is liable to use them carelessly at times, making new and inadvertent combinations of names and women. No, she could not recall that he ever had. But that only showed how sly he was. Slyness would not save him now, however. She would get hold of Cuddles' letters and then let him tremble—she would tell all to her mother.

Flossy found her husband at his desk writing a business letter. Cuddles had left no visible trace of her presence—no dropped glove, forgotten handkerchief or other trifle. "The perfidious monster," Mr. Timberly, professed an unexpected pleasure in seeing her.

"I was lonely at home—bored," she said graciously, "and yielded to the temptation of paying you a visit, but the car I rode down in was so crowded, hot and stuffy that it has made me feel quite faint. Close the door that no one may come in. I must give myself a chance to breathe." He did so, and she loosened her corsets. Then she wanted a glass of cold water. Of course he could not call the office boy to bring it in, when his wife was en deshabille, and must needs go for it himself to the cooler at the farther end of the outer office. He went out, closing the door behind him. Quickly as a cat pouncing upon a bird, she sprang to the drawer she had seen open while he looked at Cuddles' letters, and from which she rightly supposed they had been taken. It was empty. With the celerity of a magician she rummaged the desk, but nowhere could find that which she sought. Hearing his returning steps, she sank back in her chair, fanning herself with a folded paper and mentally debated, "Shall I surprise the truth from him by a direct attack, demanding at once Cuddles' letters, or shall I wait until I know more?" While she sipped the water she decided to wait.

Just then the loud voice of Mr. Bulgerby was heard in the outer office demanding Mr. Timberly, who went forth to him. Flossy listened to the two men talking of some "directors' meeting," which Algernon must go to at once to "make up a quorum." Presently he returned, took his hat, kissed her and said, "Remain where you are, dear, until I get back; I shall only be gone 15 or 20 minutes," and went away.

It was just sheer luck for him that he did not let his tongue slip and call her Cuddles, for really he had a very narrow escape from so doing. The word flashed into his memory when their lips met, and as he was very fond of his wife the pet name suddenly seemed to him pretty and suggestive. But the thought of who it belonged to saved him, and instead of betraying him into trouble the remembrance inspired him with a good idea. Wagstaff was also a director and would be at the meeting to which he was going. Those letters could be returned at once. He took them from the safe, which was behind the cashier's desk, put them in his pocket and went out with Mr. Bulgerby.

Hardly had he been gone five minutes when a young woman entered the outer office and asked for Mr. Timberly. She was showily dressed, wore excessively high French heels and had dark eyebrows and very light golden hair. She was told that he would be in shortly, and the cashier—a sedate, elderly man, who was not favorably impressed by her appearance—invited her to take a chair outside the railing. She accepted it, but after sitting a few minutes sprang up, gave herself an all around shake which filled the office with rustle and the odor of patchouli, said she would "come back later," and went away.

Mrs. Timberly, peeping out from Algernon's den, saw, heard and wondered. Another! Oh, what a wretch Algys was! Jennie had met Mr. Wagstaff accidentally and in conformity to his instructions came to reclaim her letters from Mr. Timberly. But she was a restless young person, conscious of deserving admiration, enjoyed evoking it, and, happening to remember that she was near Wall street, suddenly realized that she had much better be out dazzling susceptible young brokers than wasting her sweetness in a dingy office waiting to get some letters about which she did not really care much from a man who might be 60 years old for aught she knew to the contrary.

Hardly was she well out of the way when Mrs. Wagstaff returned, and, having what the office boy mentally characterized as "a very pretty nerve of her own," did not wait to be seated outside the railing or even detained in the outer office, but marched straight into Algernon's den, the door of which now stood a little way open.

Mrs. Timberly was aghast at the audacious familiarity demonstrated. "But no wonder!" she reflected. "A creature who calls herself Cuddles!" Who she was Mrs. Wagstaff did not care or even trouble herself to imagine. She was not Jennie, and that was enough. How could she know that? Well, she had seen another of Sam's friends, and the fellow—whether from malice or because he was just a plain fool, who can say?—had permitted himself to tell the jealous wife all he knew about Mr. Wagstaff's apparent delinquencies. It was not much. He had seen Sam on two or possibly three occasions dining publicly with a young woman—a very light blond, quite dashing in appearance and a little overdressed—who might, for all he knew to the contrary, be Jennie. She looked like the sort of young person liable to be called Jennie, or Fanny, or anything like that. And on one of those occasions, two or three months ago, maybe more, at Delmonico's, he believed Mr. Timberly sat at their table a little while. He would not swear it was Timberly, but he thought it was.

"Aha!" thought the jealous wife. "Now let Algernon look me in the eye and deny knowing Jennie if he dares! Of course if she had found him he would have done so, for he was a consistent man, who having said a thing would stick to it. Furthermore, in this particular instance he would have been right, for the tattler was at fault in naming him. But he was not destined to be put to the test that day. Instead of him Mrs. Wagstaff found another woman and charitably said to herself: 'Poor Mrs. Timberly! How she, too, is deceived!' That this lady might be she did not occur to her. In fact, her mind was so full of Jennies that there was temporarily no room in it for tamer imaginings or interest in less reprehensible personalities. Since this lady did not fit the description given of the young person who dined abroad with her husband, Mrs. Wagstaff had no concern as to who she might be. So, after a moment's embarrassed pause at the door, she turned upon her heel, told the office boy she would "return later" and disappeared. She was gone before Algernon's wife had sufficiently repressed her indignation to determine whether to address her as Cuddles and wreck her then and there or wait until by fair speech she should have entrapped "the creature" into some self betrayal.

Just then Flossy's mind's eye caught a glimpse of Algernon as he was at that moment. In a large room, where other men were standing about as if they had arisen from seats at a big table, he was earnestly talking, a little apart from the rest, with a tall, jolly looking man, who laughed, and, receiving a package from Algernon, dropped it carelessly in one of the pockets of the light overcoat he carried on his arm. "Oh, the cunning of the wretch!" exclaimed Flossy. "He is giving Cuddles' letters to a friend to keep for him!"

In a short time thereafter Mr. Timberly returned to his office accompanied by the tall, jolly looking gentleman, whom he introduced as Mr. Wagstaff. They were eagerly discussing business—something about a railroad consolidation. Mr. Wagstaff threw his overcoat upon a chair and sat by Mr. Timberly's desk, talking with him and making penciled calculations. Both men were very busy. Mrs. Timberly, sitting by the window, recognized that overcoat. She did more. In a yawning pocket of it she saw the end of that package of letters. It fascinated her, and her fingers twitched with longing to clutch it. Presently the two gentlemen went out bareheaded to lay a proposition before some other man in another office on the same floor.

In a second after the door closed behind them Flossy had the package. With nervous haste, she tore it open to make sure she had the proofs she sought. The first letter at which she glanced began, "Big lump of sweetness," which meant Algernon, of course, and was signed, "Your own loving Cuddles." That settled it. She put the incriminating missives in her pocket and hastily scribbled upon the memorandum pad on her husband's desk: "I have gone to my mother's. You need not follow me."

CHAPTER IV.

One could have known by the thumping of her little heels in the marble corridor as she went away that she was furious. "He cannot have Cuddles and me too," she said to herself indignantly as she marched out of the elevator at the ground floor. In her excitement she took the first public vehicle that presented itself to her sight, a Broadway cable car, which was not, as she reflected when well under way, the quickest way of reaching her mother's house, which was very far up town. "But then," the idea occurred to her, "I can get off at Union square, catch that piece of silk and take the elevated at Fourteenth street." Doubtless there may be in life situations of such intense, all absorbing concern to a woman that in them she will not think of dress, but they must be few, and the present was evidently not such a one to Flossy. It is not, indeed, impossible that she found shopping a consolatory diversion for the time being. That it was not, however, a paramount consideration in her mind was sufficiently evidenced by the fact, discovered when she became cooler, that she had actually taken silk two shades lighter than her sample, which she knew "could never have happened if she had not been flustered."

At the Fourteenth street station she boarded a Harlem train. Wedged in a corner just behind a cross seat, she quickly recognized in the person whose back was against her shoulder tall and jolly Mr. Wagstaff. Accompanying him and in animated conversation was a showily dressed young woman, whose eyebrows were dark and hair golden. Fearing to be recognized by the gentleman and accused of abstracting the package of letters from his pocket, Mrs. Timberly drew down her veil. This did not, however, prevent her hearing very clearly the artificial blond, who spoke in a sharp, high keyed voice, and her companion, who talked loud, as became one who had nothing to conceal. Yet they were discussing the loss of those letters.

"What were you going to do with that pistol?"

"Really," said the gentleman, "I lost them. I give you my word I did. I had them in my overcoat pocket, intending to give them back to you this evening, as you requested, and they must have dropped out in the Cafe Savarin or on the street somewhere, as I carried the coat on my arm."

"But you wrote me your friend Limberly had them."

"Not Limberly; Timberly. So he did, but gave them back to me this afternoon. Called them 'incendiary,' and said he didn't want them around."

"Oh, well, I suppose it don't matter! Whoever finds them will be none the wiser as to their writer or receiver."

"Not unless you are better known as Cuddles than I have imagined."

"I'd box your ears if we were not in the car. Much more likely you will be identified as Lamp of Sweetness or Poppy Wopsy or Baby if some woman finds them."

"Oh, no! Baby at least is of multitudinous application. Every fellow has some one who calls him Baby."

They laughed, not because there was anything to laugh at, but in sheer exuberance of spirits, as the innocently happy laugh, but Mrs. Timberly flushed and shuddered, mentally registering a vow never to call Algernon pet names any more.

"That new code of yours worked to a charm," resumed Cuddles, "and it was awfully funny to see the triumph in old Morgan's sour face when he told me. He doesn't like me, even a little bit, you know, and it did him such good to tell me you were in the country and wouldn't be back for a month."

"Little suspecting it meant that I would meet you at the usual place and time this evening."

Again they laughed merrily.

The train neared the station at which Mrs. Timberly would have left it if she had been going home instead of to her mother's. And—she had changed her mind. Rising as the cars slackened speed, she leaned over the couple in the cross seat and dropped the package of letters in the girl's lap, saying, "Permit me to return Cuddles' letters." Already her back was turned when they looked up. In a few seconds she was out of the car and on her way home, full of joy over her restored confidence in Algernon's honesty and truth. It is true the memory of the "baby eyed woman who pawed him" and said she would "return later" did recur to her, but in her improved and happier state of mind only as a stimulant to curiosity which her husband would no doubt fully satisfy. Yet in the midst of her regained happiness a cloud of anxiety swept across her mental horizon.

"What," she asked herself, "must have been the dear, good fellow's feelings when he read my cold and cruel farewell and realized that I had left him—"

Tanks

Curious title for soda water talk, isn't it? But its important. We'll tell you something interesting for you to know.

Experience has shown that the block-tin lining of soda tanks, the containers in which the soda is carbonated, don't last but a few years. When this lining is defective and the tank is copper, someone is sure to be poisoned. It won't kill you, but it will produce seasickness that won't be relieved until the poisoned soda is up.

Now, steel tanks are absolutely safe. We use them exclusively. Should the lining of block-tin be defective no harm results. There's no poison in steel. If it leaks, we know it. It won't keep its pressure and it is laid aside.

No one has ever been poisoned by drinking our soda. We have always taken the best precautions. We leave nothing to chance. No safety in any other plan.

At noon today with the R. M. S. S. Monowai, bound for San Francisco Capt. Carey, the veteran master, made a decided departure in getting away from the Oceanic wharf.
