WOMEN ARTISTS IN PARIS.

The Hard-Working Element and the Frivolous—Correcting the Students' Work.

The hard-working element is mostly composed of Finns, Danes and Norwegians—northlanders to whom art is a terribly earnest thing and who rarely, if ever, mingle with the more frivolous French, American and British sections. During the ten minutes of repose which is allowed to the model every hour these serious ones collect in little knots, and in curious languages (which sound vaguely like German cut up and hardened into cakes for exportation) they discuss each other's work, or else one poses and the others make pencil sketches of her.

It is curious to know what a large percentage of these northlanders there are in nearly every studio. They are almost all "serious"; that is, they work with a definite object, their average or work is consequently high, and, although they do not join in the general "frivolity" of the studio, they are always ready to help a struggling beginner, or to give a timely criticism to any one in difficulties. There are generally two professors, who come twice a week to correct the students' work, one in the morning, the other in the afternoon. Their arrival is looked forward to with a fearful joy. You hear a heavy step on the stair. "C'est lui!" says some wag near the door, and everyone begins to rub out suddenly found faults with frenzy, as Jacques, the garcon, comes in to make up the fire, or an unkempt Italian puts in his head to know if a model is wanted.

However, when, after many false alarms, the professor really appears, the joy of participation is lost in the horrid discovery of the mistakes which seem to break out all over your drawing as you feel the master coming nearer and nearer. When you dismount from your high stool, to allow him to ascend in your place, your tremors have not unfrequently so quickened your eye that you know instinctively that he will correct parts with which you were blandly pleased before he came. It would be interesting to know if this is an instance of thought reading on the part of the pupil, or merely the working of an unaccountably stimulated conscience. The professor's criticisms are usually very short, and most frequently severe. Then he passes on, leaving what has been a sufficiently satisfied young woman a broken-hearted ruin.—Magazine of Art.

A PHOSPHORESCENT CEMENT.

The Manifest Uses of Luminous Concrete—Guides and Beacons.
A method of utilizing the luminous powder prepared mainly as a sulphide of calcium for admixture with cement, plaster of Paris and concrete has been recently invented by a couple of London men, the object being to prepare the articles with a self-luminous glow from their high steel, to allow him to ascend in your place, your tremors have not unfrequently so quickened your eye that you know instinctively that he will correct parts with which you were blandly pleased before he came. It would be interesting to know if this is an instance of thought reading on the part of the pupil, or merely the working of an unaccountably stimulated conscience. The professor's criticisms are usually very short, and most frequently severe. Then he passes on, leaving what has been a sufficiently satisfied young woman a broken-hearted ruin.—Magazine of Art.

FRUIT CULTURE.

There is no good reason why these Islands should not be large exporters of citrus fruit, olives, etc. The configuration of the group gives a wide range of climate and variety of soil favorable for fruit farming. Everyone knows that Hawaiian oranges excel in flavor and lusciousness those raised on the Pacific Coast or along the shores of the Mediterranean, yet no systematic effort has been made to utilize even the orange crops available on these Islands every year, except for local consumption to a moderate extent. Lemons and limes grow equally well, and would undoubtedly pay any one who went into their cultivation and export as a business. Yet despite this fact, there are reasons here when limes are not procurable at any price and indeed a fair supply usually comes from the Coast. This is not at all creditable either to the business sense or enterprise of our landowners, big and little. There is money in fruit farming on the Hawaiian Islands, and if those who are now in a position to promote this industry fail in that duty they may live to see strangers coming in and securing the profit which they deserve. In this connection, the following practical remarks in "Vick's Magazine" for November last, on the orange cultivation in Southern California, have considerable value as pointers to any one who may contemplate the cultivation of citrus fruit on these Islands:

In comparison to the extent of Southern California, the localities suited to the growth of the orange, lemon and lime are very limited. I mean by this that the places where the orange can be brought to perfection, without codling, wrapping, etc., are few and limited in extent; even in the far-famed Riverside there are many groves in the lower ground where they get an occasional freeze, and where, in their young stage, the trees have to be wrapped and covered each winter, and in the valleys nearer the coast, Los Angeles, for instance, they get so many frosts that the fruit is more or less spotted with fungoid growth, which materially affects their keeping qualities and sale, so that, really speaking, there is only the mesa lands, near the interior foothills, where the orange, lemon and lime will flourish summer and winter, where the fruit is brought to its highest perfection, and where, year by year, the grove yields a good income to the grower. But given a good location, planted to good budded fruit, there is no tree planted that will yield such an income as the orange.

The planting is done from February to June. Seedling plants cost from forty to sixty cents each; budded trees from seventy-five cents to one dollar each. They are planted all the way from eighteen feet apart to thirty feet, and the estimate of last season's planting in the three counties, viz.: San Diego, San Bernardino and Los Angeles, was 1,000 acres, or nearly 100,000 trees, and these are almost exclusively Washington Navels.

The output of last season was about 153,000 boxes, or somewhat over 35,000,000 oranges, and Riverside alone netted $300,000 for their crop. An orange orchard, if it is well attended to and properly cared for, will begin to pay about the fifth year from planting.

The lemon is harder to cultivate than the orange, and the crop is more expensive to handle. The owner of a lemon grove must have a cool curing house. He would make anything out of his crop, because the lemon should be picked before it is ripe, and placed in bins in a cool room to cure. When picked the skin is thick and the fruit not very juicy, but when properly cured, it comes out with a thin skin and an abundance of juice, and such fruit always finds a ready market at a good paying price, but the California growers are only just beginning to find this out.

WAYS THAT ARE DARK.

One of our contemporaries relates the circumstance that a gentleman was driving home one night recently in one of the suburbs, when some person rode a horse violently against the buggy, doing it some injury and afterwards going off in the darkness, in consequence of which it was impossible for the aggrieved occupant to recognize him. Considering the extremely inefficient manner in which the lighting of the public thoroughfares is carried out, this is not surprising, nor would it be so if many more irregularities of the same kind were reported. The incident referred to was probably accidental, being directly attributable to the darkness; more serious things may occur as the outcome of criminal intent. Quite irrespective of the inconvenience and danger of collision with obstacles resulting from the omission complained of, it is offering a premium to crime. In fact, it is far from improbable that the numerous burglaries committed from time to time, and with such remarkable success, may be traced in a great measure to this cause. That on King street last week will serve to illustrate this point. A police officer, fancying he heard something unusual inside the premises tried the door, affording the culprit an opportunity to escape, which he did. For some reason they generally do, and it is open to doubt whether the police are wholly to blame for this. The difficulty of tracing a man in the dark is often insurmountable. There are certain parts of the streets in the city and suburbs, with dense overhanging foliage, where it is impossible for a pedestrian to find his way without feeling along the fencing. The remedy for this is very simple, for fully half, if not more than half the lamps upon the sidewalks remain unlighted night after night.

ANOTHER POINT FOR THE MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR.

The evidence given before the Coroner's jury yesterday, touching the death of Miyasaki, a Japanese under commitment for assault upon his wife, suggests some points for the Minister of the Interior. The man was notoriously of homicidal tendencies, and had attempted suicide by cutting his throat. Dr. Brodie testified that he had been demented, but latterly had become quiet. It did not follow, however, that his sanity had been restored. But be that as it may, the history of his case should have suggested special precautions. Instead of that, the evidence shows that he was locked up alone in his cell, and allowed to wear a sash, with which he hung himself from the grating. As it looks, there was negligence on the part of the officers in charge of the gaol. Such an occurrence would hardly have been possible in any well-regulated prison. We mention this matter in the hope that greater vigilance will be exercised in future. It is not our wish to speak harshly of the prison management, but we think it would be well if it were taken out of the time-worn rut into which it, in common with all public institutions, has got. If His Excellency Mr. Aholo brings about an "awakening" in the prison department, which is under his control, he will deserve well of the country.

A DISREGARDED LAW.

Chapter 65 of the Session Laws of 1886, Section 22, provides: "No person shall hitch or fasten any horse or animal in such a manner that such horse or animal, or the appliance used for hitching or fastening such horse or animal, shall obstruct the free passage along any side or crosswalk," under a penalty of not less than $5, nor more than $25 for each and every offense. This law is habitually violated before the eyes of the police. A similar penalty is provided in the case of a person unnecessarily obstructing the passage of any street, lane, alley or crosswalk, by means of any vehicle or animal. No attention whatever is paid to this enactment, and it is not an uncommon thing to find an express or private vehicle drawn up on a street crossing, compelling pedestrians to step into the mud in rainy weather and wade around if they wish to proceed. The police perhaps do not know of the existence of this statute. If that be so the Marshal should instruct them as to their duty in the premises. The Attorney General should also take care that the law, which is one of public safety, is strictly enforced.

Supreme Court.

AT CHAMBERS—BEFORE JUDGE, C. J. TUESDAY, December 14th. In the estate of J. M. Oat, late of Honolulu, deceased. The Court heard the application of J. Mort Oat, the administrator, asking that his accounts as such be approved and that he be discharged from further responsibility in the matter and his bond cancelled. No objections being offered, the application was granted. The administrators receipts were $844 17; payments, $727 31; balance, $116 86, which by consent of the heirs was authorized to be paid to the widow of the deceased. The administrator appeared in person.

Kealawai et al vs. Mawae and her husband. This was an equity suit continued from the previous day. The evidence of three more native witnesses was taken, and by the consent of the parties the hearing was continued till December 27th for the production of further testimony. That of W. R. Halstead, the officer who took the acknowledgment of the deed now attacked, will be taken on Monday next. Messrs. W. A. Kinney and J. M. Poepe for plaintiffs; His Excellency Antonio Rosa for defendants.
