MURDER ON THE HIGH SEAS

The Captain of the Schooner Fred J. Wood is Stabbed to Death With a Knife in the Hands of a Japanese Cabin Boy.

The American four masted schooner Fred J. Wood, bound from Astoria, Oregon with a cargo of lumber to Kona, Hawaii, arrived and anchored off the harbor yesterday afternoon with her ensign flying at half mast. Today the flag of all the other ships in the harbor are similarly placed in respect to the story of the high seas tragedy that the schooner brought. A murderous attack by a Japanese cabin boy upon a kind hearted captain, the body, embalmed with rude but willing skill and tenderness, ended among the deck load and a young wife left a widow with two lots of children who are chasing the sea beams on the deck while she, heart broken, mourns the loss of her husband.

At Portland, Maine, the schooner Fred J. Wood, shipped as cabin boy a Japanese boy who for company had that of the cook also a Japanese named Ota. The boy's name was Tanbara. The boy proved stubborn and lazy often neglecting to do his work. For such conduct the first mate, H. Meyer, once wanted to argue with the boy and the captain, but the captain remonstrated, and saved the boy a flogging which he probably deserved. One of the sad points of the story lies in the unanimous praise that the crew, a mixed one of Frenchmen, Portuguese and Norwegians bestow upon the captain and his asseveration that he was unusually kind towards his men in both language and actions.

To understand the story clearly it should be premised that the time of the tragedy was six thirty in the morning, five bells. The first mate's watch was below. The second mate aft of the mizen mast. Beneath the deck at this point are the cabins of the officers and the dining room with the captain's quarters still farther aft. Between this and the mainmast lies the waist of the schooner with the hatches well covered with a deck load of lumber in the natural logs and some cut timber.

Hard by the mainmast the funnel of the donkey engine sticks up above the deckload. A rough ladder leads as a companionway to the donkey engine room, taken up on the starboard side by the engine and to port by the mainmast and a small part of the machinery also. A narrow passage some thirty inches wide runs between this shelf and the boiler and furnace, leading to the cook's galley. This does not extend across the entire width of the engine room but has a partial partition on the starboard side behind which are two dirty bunks used by Ota and the murderer. Forward again of this lies the forecastle where the first mate's watch lay asleep. The only communication between the forecastle and the galley is by means of a scuttle or sliding panel, through which the gruesome scene was witnessed by a member of the crew a Frenchman named Claude Jean More. The men have communication with the deck by their own ladder leading through the forward hatch.

At six thirty, the captain having had his usual cup of coffee brought to him by the cabin boy, stepped up on deck where second mate Nelson was mending sails. He passed a remark with him concerning certain ship's duties and strolled forward. He entered the cook's galley and, according to the testimony of that individual, asked him if he had a cook book, stating, on learning that he had not that he would show him how to cook dried apples and sage. He then asked where the boy was and the cook pointed to the berth where he lay, at the same time telling him to get up. The captain took him by the arm and told him to get along and get to his work.

Here the cook says that he kept his back to the whole affair and did not see what happened. The captain is believed to have come back after the boy had got up and to have found him sitting on a small bench which is just to starboard of the doorway between the engine room and the galley. Then he remonstrated with him. The whole space available is pretty well used up in the galley when three men are in there and it is thought extraordinary that the cook should have remained obstinately with his back turned away while the murder was committed.

The next point in the story is taken up by Claude Jean More, an intelligent Frenchman, aged thirty-nine, who was below asleep when awakened by a cry of "Boy! boy, give me that knife." He started to the panel through which food is passed to the men's quarters and sliding aside the scuttle saw the cook Ota just disappearing up the ladder leading from the donkey room to the deck. The captain and the boy were meanwhile engaged in a deadly struggle. Blood was running from a slash across the captain's forehead and he had his right hand clutched on the boy's shoulder near his throat while his left sought for the hand which held the knife of which the boy had somehow possessed himself. Another moment and the two staggered into the little passage way of the engine room and the boy had sent the butcher knife into the right groin of the captain, cutting through trousers and drawers and plunging into the abdomen. They fell, the captain on top and the boy with his head wedged into the corner of the donkey room underneath the shelf that runs along the port side. More had by this time attempted to take the knife away from the murderer. Neither of the combatants had uttered a word since the first "Boy give me that knife" and the captain was now past speech or action with his life blood welling away in streams.

As More sprang through the galley into the engine room or donkey room, as the men call it, second mate Nelson, following forward a man whom he had sent to the donkey room for oil, appeared at the foot of the ladder leading to the deck with the man needing the oil, Louis Samuel. He saw More in the entrance between the engine room and the galley.

More closed with the pair and attempted to wrest the knife from the hand of the cabin boy. He knocked his knuckles on the floor, twisted his wrist and snatched at the blade, cutting his fingers in the attempt. The mate also assisted and gained possession of the weapon. This in his excitement the second mate tossed overboard. This act he has apologized for repeatedly, merely stating that it was his duty and that he was not to lose the weapon. It is not absolutely certain that the knife went into the sea but it has not been found.

Right here, as the men were struggling for the knife, first mate Meyer, who had been ordered by the cook to hold the proceedings and course generally adopted. Out of a ship's crew confused at their captain's death he drew good witnesses and formed a coroner's jury that has woven a net of evidence around the murderer that will leave the murderer small chance of escape. Mate Meyers forgot nothing and navigated the ship successfully besides. A vigorous approbation of Mate Meyers and his actions has gone forward to E. K. Wood and Company, owners of the schooner, and it is thought that he will be given the command of the schooner.

When the mate arrived on the scene both the second mate and More were pulling the now dead body of the captain off the cabin boy and securing the body. Meyers gave More a topical, a species of mallet and told him to guard the cabin boy. The captain's body was then taken up on the deckload. The widow had also heard the cries and came forward to be confronted with the fearful spectacle. The whole crew was aroused and on the spot, the murderer was put in handcuffs and chained to the mizen mast, the vessel jibed and the course set for Honolulu.

Under the direction of the disconsolate widow the body of the captain, almost drained of blood was washed, covered with alum and alcohol poured down the throat. Clean sheets were used as coverings and a box, lined with tanned canvas and the seams caulked with putty, formed the casket. The swathed body was also tarred and the box caulked and tarred again on the outside. The improvised coffin was placed in a niche among the deck lumber.

The murderer was placed, heavily ironed, in the little dining room aft of the mizen mast and kept there. The cook who was generally thought to have abetted the boy was displaced from the galley and kept on deck during the day and looked up at night.

An inquest at which the deposition of the men were taken down by the first mate, was held and all hands examined. The widow and the witnesses all told their tales and the prisoner was brought up. He maintained a sullen apathy. The verdict adjudged him guilty of murder. All the evidence that could be collected regarding the position of the blood stains, the appearance of the lost knife, all that anyone remembered that might have possible bearing on the case was collected with an astuteness that has amazed the professional evidence-gatherers ashore. Afterwards the mate transcribed the evidence into his log book, the official log book of the voyage and set down the reckoning of the ship's position.

Then for seven days the widow sat in the cabin apart from the men who stepped softly about the ship and forebore to look in upon her grief. She was the only woman aboard. The little one called for papa once in a while but sees him as they are five and twenty-one months old respectively, their loss was a heavy one.

no reality to them and their happy laughter served only as a fresh reminder to the wife.

Captain and Mrs. Jacobson had been married three years on August 3, the anniversary falling four days after the murder. Captain Jacobson has relatives in San Francisco to whom the widow will return with the embalmed corpse of her late husband. The captain was a sixteenth owner in the vessel and had some other property besides. The schooner was built on the Oregon coast only three years ago. She will stay here pending instructions from owners which will be thought to continue to China where she has a return cargo of sulphur awaiting her to be brought back to Portland.

Yesterday afternoon Deputy Sheriff Chillingworth, accompanied by Captain Flint of the waterfront police, interpreter and special officer Chester Doyle and Customs officer Ravens boarded the vessel and, after hearing the depositions took charge of Ota the cook, the murderer and More the witness, keeping them over night at the station. Dr. Holt of the Quarantine service had previously boarded the vessel which was later towed in by the Lehuia. He gave the vessel pratique and turned it over to the United States Marshal, Marshal Hendry is on Hawaii and his deputy, Marshal Hand, has taken his place. The latter with United States District Attorney Breckons visited the schooner last night and also this morning in the company of Commissioner Gill. A complaint was sworn to and signed by first mate Meyer against the murderer Tanbara. The depositions of the other sailors will be taken at four o'clock this afternoon.

Jean More was examined in Breckons' office this morning. Allan Dunn acting as interpreter. He was explained to him that he would have to be retained until October as a parole prisoner under Warden Henry's care, meanwhile drawing $1 per diem and his board. This he objected to but Consul Vizzavona persuaded him that the fate was not such a bad one. He was also told that he would also be detained until the grand jury meets which will not be until October 13. Meyer the mate will not have to be detained.

The Fred J. Wood was berthed this morning and a nurse, recommended by Superintendent Eckhardt of the Queen's Hospital is in constant attendance and helping to look after the children. The eldest, clad in cunning little overalls, at times cries for her father, but neither seems to realize that he is dead. Ota the cook is being held in a cell. Mrs. Jacobson is holding up bravely. She is like her husband, Norwegian. She is considerably younger than he was. His age would have reached 44 in October next. Mrs. Jacobson will probably leave for San Francisco on August 11 in the City of Peking. The owners are E. K. Wood Lumber Company of 16 California street, San Francisco. E. K. Wood was here on a visit to Honolulu about two years ago. Captain Jacobson is well known to shipping men in this port.

Ota the cook is said to have incriminated himself by admissions and warnings made to the murderer in the presence of Chester Doyle, not knowing that the latter understood the language. The witness will be lodged comfortably in Oahu jail tonight. This will constitute the first murder case in Judge Estee's court, and if brought to the star performer in the first murder trial in the United States court and the first homicide by United States authorities. Marshal Hendry will have to provide the hangman.

Under the laws Tanbara must be tried for either murder or manslaughter. These are the only two counts possible under a harsh code of United States law has the privilege of qualifying the indictment by making the count read, "without capital punishment." The evidence seems conclusive in the case as at present developed and district attorney Breckons looks for a guilty verdict of guilty and the death penalty.

It is more than probable that Ota, the Japanese cook, has a record in Honolulu. Russian Frank and wife are of the opinion that the cook on the Fred J. Wood, is the same man who threatened to kill Russian Frank about three years ago. The cook is also thought to have been the same person who chased after M. T. Blumhouse with a knife at the Sailors' Home some years ago.

A Japanese servant was employed by Russian Frank about three years ago. Ota was the name of the fellow, and from the description given of him, it is believed that he was the same person who is now under arrest on suspicion of being concerned in the murder of Captain Jacobson. He was an excellent man at Russian Frank's place, so far as work went, and was entirely satisfactory on this point.

The Japanese was possessed of a savage temper, however, and when aroused was dangerous. On one occasion he threatened to kill Russian Frank. The latter's wife tried to dissuade the Japanese from such a project, but the Japanese who seemed to entertain some resentment against his employer continued sullen.

EVIDENCE IN HOLT CASE

SUPREME COURT RECORDS OF TESTIMONY OF FORTY YEARS AGO.

SOME SURVIVORS MAY ADD FURTHER EVIDENCE.

Charles R. Bishop one of the Witnesses, Evidence For and Against the Old Will.

The petition filed yesterday in the Circuit Court to set aside the will of Robert William Holt, probated in 1862, opens a case in which some of the oldest records of the Supreme Court of the Kingdom of Hawaii play an important part. There were no typewriters for court records when the case was heard before Supreme Justice G. M. Robertson, and the records of the clerk, written with pen and ink, are on paper that is turning yellow with age, though the ink remains clear.

There are two distinct proceedings regarding the dead man whose condition at the time when he made signed a will forty years ago has suddenly become a matter of court inquiry. The proof of the will was by witnesses whose names are among the best known of the old days in Honolulu, and the witnesses swear that when Holt signed the document he appeared to understand it, and to approve of its contents. It was signed by Holt with a very weak and trembling hand.

On the next day, in the Supreme Court, witnesses swore that Holt was incompetent, and a petition was filed which he declared himself incompetent, by reason of age and "infirmities," while some of the witnesses indicated that the condition which made a guardian necessary had lasted for some time.

The will of Robert William Holt, admitted to probate on July 26, 1862, after the usual proceedings according to the laws of the Kingdom, left to his widow $800 per year, in quarterly installments, and divided the rest of his estate among his four children, in the form of a trust. They were to receive the income during their lives, and the property was to pass to their heirs afterwards. The children were John D. Holt, Owen J. Holt and James R. Holt, and Mrs. Aldrich. A codicil left $500 to the Queen's Hospital, William A. Aldrich was made executor. John D. Holt and James R. Holt are surviving petitioners.

There was little opposition to the probating of the will, all those present in the Supreme Court when Justice Robertson heard the matter, with one exception, declaring themselves satisfied. Charles R. Bishop, who is still living, in San Francisco, was the first witness sworn. He swore that he was present when Holt made the will, and that he knew that Holt made the will. Bishop said:

"The will was made at the house of James Robinson & Co., in the dining room of Mr. Robinson's house. This paper was presented to me in the will that I saw made. The deceased executed the will and codicil in my presence. He wrote his name with his own hand. His hand at the time was very sore and had cloths upon it. Robert Lawrence and James W. Austin were present at the signing of the will. Mr. Holt understood the nature of the will. I think. The will was read over and explained to him in the presence of the witnesses and he appeared to understand it. He seemed to understand the will perfectly and seemed competent to do what he had done."

James W. Austin, attorney, swore that he drew up the will for Holt, at his request. "He said that the will was such a one as he wished. He signed the will in the presence of myself, C. R. Bishop and Robert Lawrence. I saw him add a codicil on the following day. Although not of strong mind he seemed perfectly to understand the contents of the will and competent to make it. I judge from his having asked me a few days after if he had not done right in signing the will as he had, without my attending to the subject at all, that he understood fully its purport."

Robert Lawrence was also sworn. He referred to Holt's sore hand and said that it explained the bad signature. "The will was read over to the deceased by Mr. Austin," said Lawrence. "He appeared to understand it and said he liked it."

"James Holt objects to the will because the property is left in the hands of a trustee," says the minutes of the clerk of the court, G. W. Brown, "but does not object to the division of the estate." John Holt asked the court to explain the will and then said he had no objection to the division of the property. Owen Holt said he was satisfied. Mrs. Holt, the widow, said she was satisfied. Aldrich said he was willing to act as executor, as provided in the will, and the court considered the will proven and appointed him, under $20,000 bonds. He at once qualified, with himself and C. R. Bishop as sureties.

The inventory showed that Holt left a personal estate valued at $96,444.35. The largest item was cash from the firm of James Robinson & Company, $40,786.56. The sum of $57,575 was represented by notes.

The files of the Supreme and Circuit Courts since 1862 contain a large bundle of documents of the estate, which has been administered without opposition ever since. There are numerous reports of trustees and orders of the different courts. Considerable property, both real and personal, has been transferred by the trustees of the estate, and an order revoking all past appointments of trustees might affect some titles.

AFTER AUSTIN NEXT TRIED INCENDIARISM

MANDAMUS TO SECURE THE WARRANTS.

Governor Dole and Officials Have Another Conference About the Chinatown Fire Commission Awards.

A writ of mandamus to compel Auditor Austin to deliver the warrants for the Court of Fire Claims awards is the next possibility in the Circuit Court. The warrants are all made out, but they are held up by the Auditor, in accordance with a decision reached by the executive Council, to the effect that they ought not to be given out until there is money to pay them. This morning Governor Dole and officials interested had another conference.

If Judge Gear should decide against the power of the Commissioners to charge fees for the certificates, the fight over them will not by any means be settled, as even when a certificate is secured it is useless without warrants on the treasury. Most of the holders of certificates are satisfied to have the money remain as it is, but some of them want their warrants.

In the event of there being a decision that the Commissioners cannot charge for the certificates, the clerk of the Commission will probably refuse to give out any more certificates at all. The work of making them out was done by Riggs outside of the hours as clerk of the court. A large part of them were made at night and during early morning hours at home. Charging by the hour at the rate of his salary while clerk, it was figured that he was entitled to $25, and this sum was paid him out of the fees collected. If the payment and collection were illegal, the Commission may want its money back. It is said that some of those who paid fees are preparing to bring suits in assumpsit to recover the amounts they paid in. In this event, it is said, they have no right to the certificates and the Commission may answer by telling them to give up the certificates. The claimants cannot afford to do this, as they need the certificates. It is claimed that the Commission is not under any obligation to give out certificates at all.

OFFICES VACANT.

The death of John S. Smithies makes vacant the positions of Deputy Collector of Customs at the port of Mahukona, postmaster at that place, military public, and agent to grant marriage licenses. The appointment of a successor as deputy collector of customs, lies with Collector Stackable. E. A. Fraser has been acting deputy collector since Smithies left Mahukona a few weeks ago.

SMITHIES' WILL FILED.

A petition for probate of the will of the late John S. Smithies, of Mahukona, was filed today. The deceased left about $1,100 in personal property. The heirs are the sons and daughters.

GETTING HANAIEI READY.

The work of getting the steamer Hanaiei ready for her special trip to Laysan Island, is being rushed by the Inter-Island Company. Captain Mosher will command her. It is expected she will get away either Friday or Saturday. She will be given stores and return with a load of guano. If the weather conditions are favorable, Captain Mosher expects to make the round trip in 15 days. It is thought that the bark Ceylon which is now out so long from Laysan Island, may have rolled her masts out, or else may have been piled upon the beach at Laysan Island.

Five gamblers arrested by Detectives Renear and McDuffie were fined $5 and costs each this morning by Judge Wilcox.

WELL LAID PLAN FRUSTRATED BY ACCIDENT.

An Attempt To Burn Up the River Planing Mill Was Made Early This Morning—Its Discovery.

A daring and well-planned attempt at incendiarism was discovered and frustrated early this morning by the fortuitous fact that Chinese butchers go to work early.

The attempt was made to burn down the River Mill Company's building at River and Pauahi streets. The building is used as a planing mill and some of the employees and perhaps others sleep there. The building is raised three or four feet above the ground and on one side of it is a vacant lot.

About 4 o'clock this morning a Chinese butcher passing the building along River street saw the light of flames underneath the building and immediately shouted a warning to whoever might be in the building. Just as he gave the alarm, he saw two men come out from under the building and run away. In the early dawn and the excitement the butcher was unable to make out whether they were Chinese or white men. He only caught a glimpse of them.

The sleeping men in the building were aroused by the shouts of the butcher and quickly put out the flames. It was found that a tin pal had been filled with kerosene saturated with kerosene oil and hung to one of the door joints and lighted. Above it, a bottle of benzine had been hung in the expectation apparently, that the heat from the burning cotton would explode the benzine, set it aflame and scatter it about.

The proprietor of the mill notified High Sheriff Brown who sent an officer to investigate. The circumstances of the attempt at incendiarism were clearly evident, but there was no clue to the perpetrator.

KILLED BY EXPLOSION

TWO CHINESE MEET AWFUL DEATH ON KAUI.

One was Trying to Open Tin of Powder With a Hatchet When The Accident Occurred.

Two Chinese were killed by an explosion of black powder on Pe Aw's rice plantation Maui, Kauai last Saturday. News of the accident was brought this morning by Purser Friel of the steamer Kauai which arrived from Kauai.

Chung Kui a Chinese man about 30 years of age, tried to unscrew the top of a 25-pound tin of black powder which was to be used in loading a gun with which to shoot rice birds. Ah Tong a Chinese boy aged 12 years, was standing close by, watching the performance. The Chinese could not get the top open, so he took a hatchet to break open the top tin. A spark is thought to have been caused by the hatchet striking against the tin, and this spark ignited the powder, for there was an explosion which killed both Chinese bleeding objects. Both died of their injuries within a few hours.

OFF TO MAUI.

If thirty-five patrons of sports are willing to back up the promises they have made to subscribe thirteen dollars apiece their passage money to Maui for the steamer, the Ke Au Hou will be chartered under the auspices of C. F. Chillingworth and convey the party to and from Maui.

The steamer is to sail Monday evening at 5:30 arriving at Maalaea Bay (the next morning) returning at eleven the same night and arriving off Honolulu somewhere about nine o'clock on Wednesday morning. The object of the trip is to see the Maui races and view the baseball game between the All Maui and the All Honolulu teams.

The list of thirty five has been filed and only the money now needs to be forthcoming to complete all arrangements.

PERU FROM THE COAST.

The S. S. Peru, Captain Pillsbury, is scheduled to arrive Friday morning from San Francisco. She may be sighted tomorrow night. She left San Francisco August 1 and will, therefore, have detailed news of the Jeffries Fitzgibbon fight which occurred in San Francisco the night of July 25. The Alameda Captain Herriman, left San Francisco August 2, and will arrive the afternoon of August 8. The Peru will have eight days later mail and news, and the Alameda one day.

One of the petitions for the establishment of the guardianship was by Robert William Holt himself. It was in the same handwriting as the will and bears the same trembling signature of "G. Wm. Holt." The petitioner represents that "from his old age and other infirmities he is unable to attend to the business that he formerly attended to, and that he is totally incapable of managing his own affairs and business and that on account of his infirmities and infirmities and his inability to attend to his business, his property may be wasted." He therefore asked that his son-in-law, William A. Aldrich, in whom he had confidence, be appointed guardian. On the bottom of this petition in the handwriting of the late Associate Justice Robertson, appears the following:

"On this 30th day of May, A. D. 1862, personally appeared before me Robert W. Holt, to me well known, and acknowledged that the signature to the foregoing was his own proper handwriting."

"G. M. ROBERTSON, Justice Supreme Court."

A petition of the same sort, signed by James Robinson and Robert Lawrence, Holt's partners, was filed with that of Holt himself, and the matter was heard before Judge Robertson on the following day, May 31, 1862. James Austin appeared as attorney for all parties present, there being no opposition to the petitions.

The testimony given on this hearing, which is now largely relied upon to show that Holt was incapable of making a will, included the following, by William C. Parke: "From what I have seen of Mr. Holt for the last six months, I think he is entirely incapable of attending to his business, by reason of excessive drinking. During the last year I have seen him frequently under the influence of liquor. I frequently meet him in the street, and from his manner of talking I think his mind almost gone. I saw him write his name six months ago and he wrote it very well. I should scarcely recognize the signature to this petition to be his."

Thomas Brown was sworn and gave similar testimony, those two witnesses having given the only testimony of record as to the mental condition of Holt: "I have known him for 14 or 15 years. I should state that he is certainly not capable of managing his business at the present time. I think it is caused by drinking. From conversation I have had with him, his intellect is very much impaired. He has come into my office frequently and he appeared stupid. I have seen him as early as nine o'clock in the morning, almost stupefied—his conversation at that time was that of a man who did not understand what he was talking about." Brown also testified that Holt had at one time written a good firm hand and that the signature to the petition was not recognizable as his.

lulu now. They are among the petitioners who are seeking to set aside the trust and acquire a clear title to the property, instead of the life interest in the income, which they now enjoy.

"The fight is really between the life tenants James Robinson Holt and John Dominis Holt on the one hand and on the other hand the remainder men who over they may be, to whom is reserved the fee of the estate to which the two life tenants now say belongs to them, notwithstanding the will now attacked," said Henry Smith the present trustee.

"It will involve the integrity of not only such men as the late Justice C. M. Robertson, who admitted the will to probate, and another Justice of the Supreme Court, the late Justice James W. Austin who drew the will, but also will involve the statements made by Charles H. Bishop, now of San Francisco, who was a witness to the will. The most remarkable thing of it all is that the will was executed on May 29, 1862, and on the next day, May 30, the same year, a petition was filed by the said Robert William Holt and his two partners in business Robert Lawrence and James Robinson, asking that a guardian be appointed over the person and property of said Holt, not on the ground of insanity, but solely on the ground of debauchery, waste, etc. The statute would seem to indicate two kinds of appointments, one on account of insanity and another on account of waste, etc., the one class being distinct from the other. But whether the kind of evidence which would substantiate the petition in the latter class is sufficient to overcome the amount or kind of evidence which should establish insanity, is a question which the court is now asked to pass upon. The only living witness to the will is C. H. Bishop, now in California. A commission will have to be issued to take his testimony."

TAX APPEAL COURT.

Oahu College Trustees Present Their Case.

Tax appeals of Oahu College and the Manoa pasture tract were heard yesterday by the Appeal Court. Oahu College made a return of $65,020, and was increased to $233,180, while the college bill tract was returned at $61,000 and increased to $164,000. Percy M. Pond testified that he considered the returned values about correct. L. C. Ables also testified that the assessed value was in his opinion too high.

The Manoa pasture tract was increased from $3,500 to $4,200. Evidence was introduced to show that it was steep and barren and of small value.

OFFICIAL NOTICE.

The public is hereby notified that the alleged new Charter, issued by A. Fullerton, General Secretary American Section T. S., on the 23rd of June last, and through which Mrs. M. D. Hendricks and Mrs. Albene Rowe have assumed to sign notices to the public as respectively President and Secretary of the said Aloha Branch, has not only been issued arbitrarily at the request of a minority, and therefore is null and void, but moreover it is a fraud, from the fact that, among the Charter-members therein, are inserted, without their previous knowledge and consent, eight members who never subscribed for a new Charter, who never authorized any one, and least of all, A. Fullerton, to use their names in the matter, and who do not recognize the present condition of things created by the stupendous partiality of the said General Secretary, against whom they have protested both before the Executive Committee of the Section and the President. Moreover, the said Charter contains two names of persons not members of the Aloha Branch, as they have not been voted for and legally elected by the majority.

PARDON COL. LYNCH.

The arrest of Col. Lynch for high treason is not likely to be followed by a hanging, but if the prosecution is carried far enough there will be another Irish martyr, and his name will be Lynch. The Irishman who fought for the Boers and was elected to Parliament from Galway on that account represented the feelings of the bulk of the Irish people, which is a fact to be considered. The best way for the government to checkmate the Irish leaders in this case is to deprive Col. Lynch of the honor of being an issue. The king might pardon him at coronation time with a pretty grace that would shrewdly make the whole affair seem farcal—Springfield Republican.

A NATIONAL SCHOOLHAWAIIAN LACE AN INDUSTRY
OF THE FUTURE.Distinctively Hawaiian Pattern to be Created—Present Work is But a Small Beginning.A new industry, as far as Hawaiians are concerned, is gradually growing under the fostering care of Miss Lucy Adams, the recently appointed mistress of English at Oahu College, who is at present teaching a class of lace makers in the summer school, after having introduced lace making most successfully at the Kamehameha Girls' school during the past term.Miss Adams, herself an Hawaiian, does not pretend to be an expert lace maker although her skill is fully competent to teach all the preliminary grades of torchon lace and many of the higher forms. She is intensely interested in the industry as applied to the Hawaiian race and hopes ultimately to establish in these islands a school of lacemaking where a distinctive Haw-aian lace of local form and pattern, will be turned out by Hawaiian women and girls and form a sought-after product of the community, in much the same manner as the constant demand for Honiton, Irish, Valenciennes, Cluny and Maltese laces.Miss Adams has, during a trip to Europe, looked much into lace making as practised by the women of Switzerland, Italy, Ireland, England and other countries, where the results of their industry often furnish the sole means of providing little luxuries to eke out the daily fare bought by the scanty wages of the husband and father, or to start the small savings account laid by for a rainy day. The successful outcome of Lady Aberdeen's project with the Irish lace makers fired her with a similar idea to provide native Hawaiians with an Hawaiian industry fostered by Hawaiians for Hawaiians.The nimble taper fingers of young Hawaiian girls and women, made pliable by generations of skilful weaving of finely braided mats, hats and fans, guided the initial experiment at Kamehameha to a distinct success. One young Hawaiian girl, Miss Elizabeth Aha, has with constant practice of a few hours every day for the past year, become an expert. She is who arranges the framework of pins on the cushion from which depend the bobbins wound with thread, numbering from a dozen to a hundred according to the complexity of the design. Miss Aha no longer depends on printed or traced patterns but has been so carefully grounded that, taking up any piece of torchon lace, she can plan out a skeleton for its reproduction.Miss Aha will, after the summer school is over, carry the work to Ma-kai, while two other Hawaiian girls who have proved themselves more proficient than the rest will do likewise, one at Kohala and one in Honolulu.
They will not necessarily be connected with the regular schools although the Board of Education has warmly commended the new handicraft and is more than likely to adopt it as part of the regular curriculum.The Honolulu girl, for example will situate herself in Kakaako or Kawaia-hau, some district handy to native Hawaiians, and act as a missionary. This will be kept up for one year through subscriptions raised by Miss Adams in two days among prominent Hawaiian ladies, who willingly subscribed for the purpose besides promising their patronage. Only Hawaiians were asked and only Hawaiians are taught. The craft will owe whatever measure of prosperity it gains purely to Hawaiian enterprise, industry and capital and will be essentially a native product.The present results are but a beginning. Torchon lace making is but the forerunner of the craft. It is Miss Adams' hope to gain speedily the services of an expert lace maker from Europe, one who is trained and willing to come, and gradually induct the classes into the mysteries of Venetian point, Irish laces, Carrickmacross, Cluny, Irish applique, Russian lace and other varieties of filmy beauty.Above all the aim is to manufacture a distinctive lace of the country. As Honiton lace makers, each with their different web employ the familiar butterflies and flowers found in Devonshire lanes and on the moors to furnish their patterns, so is it the purpose of Miss Adams to adopt familiar yet distinctive natural objects of Hawaii and incorporate them into native weaving. Tar-leaves, the mail, fan palm, the flame leaf and bloom have all been thought of. To this end Miss Adams will send to the schools of lace design in Ireland, drawings, photographs and specimens of the motifs suggested.In time a design drawn by a native Hawaiian may be adopted but until the craft is more widely known the sending to an art school for a working design is necessitated by the necessity accurate knowledge of the craft required by a designer.It is the hope of those who have propagated the new industry to see eventually a lace making college, capable of being widened into an institution somewhat similar in plan to an Agricultural college, for the use of Hawaiian girls and women. In connection with this the lace will be sold at a fair price for the workers, the profits paying the expense. As purely an Hawaiian affair Miss Adams believes that with the impetus and interest already secured, she will have no difficulty in securing subscriptions and soliciting new ones to start such an institution and keep it going until it is on a paying basis. Under similar representation she believes that the local legislature will be inclined to foster an Hawaiian industry, started by Hawaiians for the benefit of the race. At any rate the attempt will be made.

A YOUNG LADY'S LIFE SAVED.

At Panama, Colombia, by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.Dr. Charles H. Utter, a prominent physician, of Panama, Colombia, in a recent letter states: "Last March I had as a patient a young lady sixteen years of age, who had a very bad infection of dysentery. Everything I prescribed for her proved ineffectual and she was growing worse every hour.
Her parents were sure she would die.
She had become so weak that she could not turn over in bed. What to do at this critical moment was a study for me, but I thought of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and as a last resort prescribed it. The most wonderful result was effected.
Within eight hours she was feeling much better; inside of three days she was upon her feet and at the end of one week was entirely well." For sale

LESSON IS LEARNED.

From every part of the Islands comes the same story of Republican activity. From the extreme south of the island of Hawaii to the extreme north of Kauai there is the same tale. The Republican primaries all show good work and satisfactory work. The Republican party has gained in strength and Wilcoxism has correspondingly lost strength. We may justly say that under our political conditions today there is an awakening all along the line. This is not only true among the people whose business interests are affected directly by the political unrest of the Territory, but it is true of the mass of voters and largely among the Hawaiian voters.

Two years has taught its lesson. The foolishness of the last Legislature is now thoroughly realized. The race prejudice and the class prejudice which were harped upon during the last election and which were carried into the Legislative halls are things which do not reverberate as strongly as they did at that time. The strings are much worn and are very slack. It is now evident that elections mean business, and that legislation for revenge is very poor legislation indeed. As a point of fact, a man, or a set of men who go into politics to "get even," usually fail and deservedly so. The Legislature is not the place in which to air private grievances, nor is it an arena for vengeance. It is a place where the advancement of the country is to be planned for, and its dignity preserved. A Legislature of even so small a Territory as this can be a model and a credit.

So with the experience of two years it is evident to most voters that foolishness must be laid aside, and that we must settle down to business. In the teaching of the lesson the hard times have had a good deal to do. It has been understood by the laborer that prosperity for capital means prosperity for him. He understands through the hard lesson of experience that lack of prosperity means lack of work, even though his labor may be skilled. There are not so many men carried upon the rolls of say the Iron Works, for the sake of an example. Why is this? Because there is not so much business to do, and orders are slack. What makes them slack? Lack of prosperity. Any man can reason this out for himself, and he reasons it out the quicker when he finds at the end of the month that his time card does not call for as much money as it used to do.

When we had the heavy blow struck at our prosperity, through foolish and insane legislation, we were in a peculiar position. We were facing a depression in our staple, but there was a strong belief in our island investment, and in spite of the gloomy prospect, there were capitalists who were ready and willing to help us tide over our commercial and agricultural difficulties, but the moment the Legislature showed its hand, that moment capital shrunk within its shell, and we suffered a setback, which it will take years of care to recover from.

It seems almost trite to repeat these arguments. Still they are those upon which we must base the reasons for the interest taken in the Republican party throughout the group, and they account for the present attitude of the voter. The hopes of the voter lie in the Republican party. He sees that the Republican is the dominant party on the mainland. He has learned facts and facts go a great deal further than windy rhetoric, even if it does come from the lips of a spicer like Wilcox or from some of his wordy lieutenants.

And as to Wilcox's chances. How do they look? It is a question that has been often asked and will be so again. The Star has had an opportunity of asking several people from the outer districts of the island, and one and all seem satisfied that though he may continue to have strength, it is very much sapped. This does not mean by any means that there will be a walk-over, but it does mean that there is a great chance of beating him. As has been often pointed out in these columns Wilcox's plurality was by no means so large. It was 227 votes over Parker, the Republican candidate.

Of Wilcox's total vote it is quite fair to say that natural causes have considerably depleted it. There have been many deaths in the ranks, and while these under different circumstances would have been replaced by the natural advancement of the younger generation to their political duties, this is not the case with the Wilcox party. He has lost far more than he has gained. The younger men do not believe in Wilcox, they thoroughly realize that he has made a mess of the delegation in Washington, and that he has done nothing for the Territory. They want something done for the Territory, and they will vote for such a man. It is for the Republican party to choose such a nominee for Delegate as will carry this element with a boom.

If the Wilcox party has lost strength, the Republican party has gained strength. Not only can it look for recruits among the Wilcox party itself, but it has an added strength in those voters who have been naturalized since election. Many American citizens have been made by the courts and these are going to vote the Republican and not the Wilcox ticket. With a little figuring the mathematical certainty of this could be proved. Wilcoxism is by no means dead, and it will give us a lively fight, but the show is upon the Republican side. Of course a fight is never won till it is over, but there is the best of prospects for the Republicans, and if they work honestly and hard they will win a glorious victory, and set the country once more floating upon the tide of prosperity.

THE GYPSIES.

The fortune-telling Gypsy has come among us. She is hardly as picturesque as the Gypsy of England or Scotland, the true Romany described by Scott in Guy Mannering, typified by the immortal Meg Merrilies in which character Charlotte Cushman used to thrill the audiences of an earlier generation. She will still tell the fortune of the gaping yokel, or the half-timid, hysterical girl, if she can find yokel or girl. If she can't, she will easily find fools enough, half believing, half skeptical, who will cross her palm with silver, will listen to her jargon, and will read into her gibberish, things which she never said, but which will be translated into signs and portents and fulfillments.

Human nature is prone to folly, and the knavish side of humanity finds it an easy prey, whether educated or uneducated. It takes years to eradicate superstition. In fact superstition remains firmly imbedded, ready to blaze forth in spite of all the education and all the experience the highest and most civilized races have had.

We have our signs of "luck," practically our lucky days, our "dies fasti et nefasti" as much as the old Roman had. We have our little superstitions about the moon, which have descended to us from the days of Babel and of Ashur. Some of us don't like to spill the salt. Some of us repeat "lucky at cards, unlucky in love," and Charles Dana Gibson gave us an illustration of the superstition in an illustration in "Life" the other day. We educate ourselves and eliminate all superstition and all creeds from our minds, and forthwith proceed to gaze with open-mouthed wonder upon Blavatsky's cracked tea-cups, and broken China which came hurtling through the air from the upper fastnesses of the Himalayas where Mahatmas and their Chelas dwell in endless contemplation of the unknowable, the un-understandable and the unfathomable.

Others of us have stripped the cloak of superstition from us and forthwith proceed to believe that the Davyport brothers were helped by spirits to play guitars and accordions when their hands were tied, that Mr. Home floated from one window of a five-story house to another. Levitation this used to be called, and rank humbug it was dubbed by gross and materialistic minds. The whole farrago of spiritualism has taken the place of superstition and no one would dare to say that a spiritualist was superstitious or a theosophist no better than a self-deceived Gypsy, nor that under the crust and veneer of all of us their lurks not the primeval dread of the unknown which seeks alleviation in various ways, and which forms the basis of religious belief as is argued by Buckle and Lecky and thousands of others. If you can scratch the Russian and find the Tartar, as Talleyrand or some one else said, you can certainly scratch the cultivated mind and find primeval superstition, the offspring of fear and hope. Why should you not do so? It does not take a long war to show that the gentlest and most loving of human beings can develop the primeval beast, with all his or its unpleasant characteristics.

But we have been drifting away from our Gypsies. In spite of the fact that they don't camp out and steal chickens and game, they will reap a neat little harvest from our superstitious community, unless the High Sheriff and the police department get after them, which they are likely to do. Legally the gypsy will be condemned, inwardly the gypsy will be believed in. We are really a set of humbugs, and are fit subjects for satire, as we have been from the time of Aristophanes to now.

A will which is contested forty years after it was probated is certainly a curiosity in legal annals, and shows the glorious uncertainty of the law, and of the holding of property. After all the best way of dealing with property is to spend what one can during one's life time, and when the end is near to give away the balance. It will never be disposed of after one's death as one would wish.

It is a wise move to send provisions by steamer to Laysan Island. In the office of last century we had a guano island horror. Something went wrong about the supply boat, and the inhabitants of the island were starved to death. If memory serves there were but two survivors, one of which was Julius Richardson, brother of the late Charles Richardson of Hilo. Mr. Richardson never recovered from his terrible experience, and from a robust man was so reduced that those who knew him before he went to the island and after he returned could hardly recognize him. It was a gruesome chapter in Hawaiian history. But then the Guano Islands of the Pacific could supply many a gruesome story, and many an incident calculated to make one's flesh creep. Murder and madness have played a terrible part in some of the tales.

Considerable anxiety is being expressed with regard to the Ceylon. Long voyages should give no undue cause for alarm. There may be several reasons advanced with regard to the delay of the vessel, none of which need necessarily be accounted for by ship wreck. After the recent experience with regard to the Mohican, about which all the old salts on the harbor front, who dearly love a gruesome sensation, had some diabolical theory, and over which Admiral Merry did not worry in the slightest, we may always look for the best and the brightest. The Ceylon may turn up all right any day. Of course it is proper that vessels on her track should keep a lookout for her, for there is always the chance of accident.

JAPANESE MERCHANT MARINE.

A movement is on foot in Japanese naval and army circles to develop a mercantile marine system, somewhat after the order of the famous merchant-naval fleets of Russia. It is well known that Russia has a fine fleet of ships in the Black sea and plying between home and far eastern ports. These vessels are something more than the partly subsidized passenger and naval ships of England, Japan and France. They are really naval vessels engaged in traffic, instead of being merely merchant ships with a remote possibility of naval service. In any war that Russia might be engaged in these ships would play an important part in transporting troops, destroying the commerce of the enemy, guarding the commerce of Russia, or augmenting the strength of different squadrons. These are some of the purposes in view in the proposed organization of a Japanese mercantile marine—Japan and America.

WANTED.

When we called attention a few weeks ago to our new preparation called Casara we felt there was a demand for a really good article made from Casara Sagraña bark. We were not mistaken and we are greatly pleased that the community has appreciated our efforts.

We offered to give free samples of Casara but few asked for them preferring to take the regular package being sure that we would not recommend it as we did unless there was real merit. They were right. This has always been our policy and customers know if the preparations are not as represented they get their money back. No risk taken in dealing with us.

Casara is a pleasant-to-take laxative made from the bark, Casara Sagraña, which is well known for its most excellent cathartic qualities. It tones and strengthens and is a cure for habitual constipation. Children take it readily. Samples free.

identify him as the person who worked for them.

Oto is also thought by others living at Frank's place to have made an unsuccessful attempt to kill M. T. Bluxome about two years ago at the Sailor's Home. Bluxome got into a row with the man, and Oto armed with a knife, chased him around the yard. Employees at the electric work recall the occurrence, but can not describe the assailant of Bluxome. They think that the man now under arrest was probably the same fellow.

The dead captain was well known in this city and San Francisco, as his home was in the latter place. He was formerly in command of the schooner Maggie C. Russ. He was a member of the Master Mariner's Association of San Francisco.

This afternoon the body of Captain Jacobson is being brought ashore. An examination of the remains will be made at the Quarantine Station by Dr. Cofer, for the purpose of ascertaining the nature and character of the wounds which caused death, and the body will then be turned over to the widow, Mrs. Jacobson, who will have it embalmed if possible, and sent to relatives in San Francisco.

The ship's log contains the following narratives of those who were in any way witnesses of the tragedy:

Page 32, July 30, 1902: At 6:30 a. m. Capt. Jacobson was called by the cabin boy J. Tanbara by a stab in the right groin and cut in the chest. The mate then took charge of the vessel and set the course for Honolulu. Position at that time by dead reckoning from the day before, Lat. 24° 07' N. Long. 157° 16' W.

Page 33: At about 6:30 a. m. the mate was called by the cook S. Oto saying that the cabin boy had stabbed the captain. I rushed upon deck at once when I met Louis Samuel shouting "Mate, mate, cabin boy stabbed cap." I rushed forward at once to follow Samuel. When I came to the mainmast I heard the second mate's voice from the donkey room shouting for help. I rushed down there at once. The captain was then lying on the doorstep to the donkey room with one hand holding onto the cabin boy's shoulder and the other hand holding on to the cabin boy's left hand. The cabin boy was lying partly underneath the captain. Inside of the donkey room a big carving knife in the captain's groin. The second mate was lying with his knee on top of the cabin boy's chest trying to get the knife from the boy. Jean More was there too trying to pull the captain clear of the cabin boy. I took hold of the captain at once and helped lifting him up on the doorstep. The capt. was by all appearance dead by that time. The second mate after getting the knife out of the wound put his hand over it to stop the blood that was oozing out from the wound. I then gave one of the sailors a towel and told him to watch the boy and not let him get up. The second mate threw the knife away and helped taking the captain on top of the deck. All the sailors were around by that time. When we got the captain on top of the deck the blood was stopped, running and the captain was dead by that time. We could not do any more for him. I then got handcuffs and put on the boy and took him down in the pump room, handcuffed him to a chain around the mainmast. I then ascertained the position of the vessel, jibbed (jibed) ship and set the course for Honolulu. Afterwards we washed the body of the captain. Put alum all over his body. Got some alcohol down him, and put him in a box covered with canvas inside. Cool tarred the canvas and the body inside, caulked (caulked) the box outside and puttyed the seams trying to preserve the body. We came to Honolulu. As I considered the cook an accomplice of the boy I took him out of the galley and put one of the sailors as cook intending to keep the cook helping on deck day and night and locked up in a room forward night time.

H. Meyer, Mate.

Claude More, lat witness. Between 6:30 and 7 a. m. I was on watch below deck. I heard the captain saying "Give me that knife" repeating that several times. I opened the scuttle from the forecabin to the galley. I saw the capt. grappling with the boy bleeding from a wound in the forehead. They were at that time in the door between the galley and donkey room. I crawled through the scuttle to assist the captain. They were grappling, then. Both fell down, the boy having the knife in the captain's groin. I tried to get the knife away from the boy and had my hand cut in the attempt. The second mate came shortly afterwards. When the mate came I helped lifting the captain's body up on the doorstep to the donkey room. The mate then did give me a towel and told me to watch the boy and not on no condition to let him get up. When I crawled through the scuttle the cook was in the leader from the donkey room to the deck.

Claude More.

At 6:30 a. m. the captain came on deck. I was then working between the mainmast and spanker masts repairing a sail. The captain spoke to me saying:

EMMELUTH'S "DEFI"

CHALLENGES WILCOX TO MAKE CHARGES AGAINST HIM.

Asks For a Hearing Before Being Read Out of the Home Rule Party—Promises More To Come.

Therefore, Wilcox and Kalaauokalani decided not to have anything to do with him, even talk with him, and Emmeluth is hence entirely out of the Home Rule party.

Such is the naive announcement made by Mrs. Wilcox's resuscitated Home Rule organ, that Representative John Emmeluth had been officially read out of the Home Rule party.

As a sort of preamble to this announcement, the Home Rule says:

"Mr. Wilcox was asked to answer to what was written in Emmeluth's letter, but he declined to give the fullness, only to state what he thinks of the representative. He said, 'When he was in Washington he was informed that Emmeluth had been read out of the Home Rule party. He is the very man that was upheld by D. Kalaauokalani who was nearly drowned in the hands of robbers in time past, but now he wanted to run against his saviour. A man like this, who can betray his friend, he can ever betray the people.'"

The letter to which reference is made is one sent by Emmeluth to Wilcox and to Kalaauokalani by registered mail last Friday, and to which they have made no response to him. In the letter Emmeluth calls attention to the action of Wilcox and Kalaauokalani in reading him out of the party without any charges, trial or opportunity to be heard. He calls attention to the statements made by Wilcox and Kalaauokalani at the Home Rule convention and since whereby without making charges against him they declare him a traitor to the party.

He asks that written charges be made if they have anything against him, and that he have an opportunity to defend himself, intimating that if this is done he can produce some mighty interesting facts on the subject of treason to the Home Rule party.

Proceeding, Emmeluth in his letter says: "If there are charges against me let these be made in writing and give me a chance to defend my name. Bear with me in this, I am patient up to this point and its cause can be unraveled. God knows, as I feel that you must know that this is an unholy conspiracy against one whose every effort was bent to the realization of 'Equal rights for the People.'"

"In support of this contention I desire to call your attention to a speech of mine made on the last day of the regular session, on the occasion of the joint session of both houses for the purpose of choosing the four-year term Senators. Senator William White of Lihala had just been nominated for the four-year term when I arose and addressing the presiding officer, Hon. S. E. Kaue, of the Senate, as follows: "Mr. President: It is our right, privilege and duty to scan well the records of these Senators. I charge that it is right and proper to consider what this member and other Senators have done when they pledged themselves to our party; to consider what the situation is today. I have learned a great deal during this session in reference to many matters of interest to our party and especially regarding the fate of measures which I desired to see put through. I have stood for the rights of the people as I could see them and I have stood on the platform of the party which put me here."

"The measures to which I refer and which I would like to have been passed were for the people's interest and benefit. I charge that members of the Senate of the Home Rule party have been derelict in their duty to their constituents and because of their actions, important measures have been held up in the Senate. I refer to measures by which the people had their rights denied. There have been measures held up in Senate committees which should have been passed and which were valuable to this community. House bill 79 halting the hours of labor on public works and providing that only American citizens should be employed on such works, and House bill No. 171 making similar provisions in regard to Territorial officials are among those to which I now refer."

"They were measures that, for the next two years would have filled the calabash of every honest, hard-working Hawaiian in this land. I charge Mr. President that it is a crying shame that such measures should have been held up under the existing conditions and the pledges under which we came into this Legislature. I have said that I was sorry that these things happened, but they had a definite cause and that cause will be ventilated when, two years from now, we have got to go before the people."

"But these Senators care nothing for the people. It was my prayer and desire that the promises made our constituents should be carried out, but what could we do when Senators conducted themselves in this way?"

"I am sorry for this situation, but the work done is behind us. We are near the end of the life of this Legislature and must weep over that which we did not do."

"When I vote today I want to express in my vote, my opinion of the men who were pledged and who violated their pledge to their party and to the people."

"For this reason I say the members of this Legislature are free to vote for any man they want for four-year Senator."

"Let us take the session through and look at their records, and then, I do not care whether he is a Republican, a Democrat or a Home Ruler, if he has done some good for this country, I will vote for him and work for him."

"The above is an extract from the Legislature. It speaks for itself and tells my constituents far more forcibly than anything I could utter at this time as to conditions at that time, and where I stood as a member of the last Legislature. As to my work since then and my purposes for the future, I must leave you to the impressions created by my work heretofore. I deny absolutely any change of heart or purpose in the course for which we have joined our fortunes. I am debarr'd from further affiliation with the Home Rule party by the dictum of its bosses, but that does not prevent my working for those principles which, through the actions of your leaders become but a blot in the escutcheon of your party."

"Equal rights for the people can never be obtained under such conditions as now obtain in your party, and so it happens that I am working outside of your fold, but long before election day, your eyes shall see the truth if any work on my part can assist you thereto. This is not the last address of this kind that I shall make you. The next one will give you the true inwardness of the defeat of county government."

"All I ask for myself and those that left the Home Rule party, is that you weigh the matters we lay before you, judging them and weighing them as statements coming from the fullness of heart of those who are striving for the erection of the great bulwark of the people against oppression. County and Municipal Government."

"Yours faithfully,
JOHN EMMELUTH,
Representative of the Fifth District,
First Legislature, Territory of Hawaii."

KAUAI FROM KAUAI.

The steamer Kauai returned this morning from the Kauai run of the Mikahala. Captain Bruhn reports that the bark W. B. Flint had 13,400 bags of sugar aboard at Makaweli and it was proposed to give her an additional 2,000 bags. She was to sail today or tomorrow for San Francisco. The schooner Robert R. Hind was discharging coal at Elele, but had only 700 tons out. There has been an ugly southerly swell running the last couple of days.

INSPECTING PEARL HARBOR.

Admiral Merry took Captain Whiting, the new commandant of the Naval Station, on a tour of inspection at Pearl Harbor today. They will visit all of the government property in that vicinity, in order that Captain Whiting can become acquainted with the details and character of that part of the land which comes under his jurisdiction. The inspection of the local naval station has already been made.

UNGRACEFUL MAN.

"Did you ever watch a man taking a drink of water in a public place, in a railroad station, or on a train, where he is aware that many eyes regard him? Watch this some time," a drummer said. "You'll find it interesting. The man, you see, holds the glass in his right hand while he drinks, and it is his inability meanwhile to make his unoccupied left hand look graceful that makes the spectacle worth while. One fellow, as he stoops over the cup in an elegant attitude, an attitude like that of bowing, solves the enigma of what to do with his left hand by putting it in his trouser pocket. Another holds it behind his back. A third puts the thumb of it in the pocket of his waistcoat, and a fourth swings the hand like a pendulum to and fro at his side. But all men, do what they will with their left hand, look awkward and self-conscious when drinking in public, and it is amusing to watch them."

WHITE AND BLACK.
The passage by the Louisiana House of the Wilson separate car bill, which requires separate cars for whites and negroes on all street car lines, makes it probable, says the Milwaukee Free Press, that the Legislature will pass all the measures now before it aimed to carry out the southern idea that the permanent settlement of the race question can be accomplished only by the complete separation of whites and negroes at all times and in all places.

MURDER ON

"Take out all the cloths washer you see is wanted. He went forward, I did not take any notice where he went to. But at the same time I heard a man working aft cleaning the steering gears. The man walked up to me saying he wanted oil. I immediately went for the oil which is kept in the donkey room. The man ahead of me said, 'Good God.' I jumped right down seeing the cabin boy laying underneath the captain on top. The first witness, Morre said to me, 'look at that knife.' I grabbed the knife with my right hand at the same time speaking to the captain, but did not get any answer. I shouted for help and the mate came down. I wrestled the knife away from the boy and put my hand on the wound to stop the blood. I then helped taking the captain's body upon the deckload. I threw the knife away. It must have gone overboard. I did not see what became of it. After getting the captain up on the deckload we tried to get life in him, but it was all in vain to do anything for him. I then took care of the captain's wife and children while the mate was taking care of the body and of the cabin boy. Afterward I was helping washing the body and putting it in the coffin. The cook was just coming up the steps of the donkey room as I jumped down.

John Nelson.

LOUIS SAMUEL.

I was cleaning the steering gear aft and went to the second mate and asked for some oil. He told me to get the pot I had oil in before. I went to the donkey room to find the pot and when I came to the donkey room I heard a voice holding for help. I looked down and saw the captain laying bleeding and also saw Morre there. I runned aft at once to call the mate and both of us got back together. I afterward helped getting the captain's body upon the deckload.

Louis Samuel.

At 5:30 a. m. the captain came forward to the galley and saying, 'Good morning cook, how are you this morning,' to which I replied, 'thank you, I am all right.' He then asked me if I had a cook book. I told him I had none. He told me then he would show me how to cook dried apples and sago pudding. I thanked him. The captain went on deck. He asked for the boy. I told him the boy was in his bunk, the captain turned back quick. I told the boy to get up. He got up and met the captain in the steps, the captain given the boy a kick. The boy went aft and came back in about seven minutes. The boy telling me the capt having told him to clean the cabin every morning after coffee. The boy was sitting on the bench the captain came back after a short while. The captain took the boy by the arm. He says 'come along Don.' I was at that time standing with the back to them. I heard the capt saying 'My, My, My' several times, I turned around. I saw the capt grappling with the boy. I runned aft and called the mate.

"We the undersigned after holding an inquest of the body of Captain J. J. Jacobsen found on his forehead on the right side with a cut marked by a knife or an other sharp instrument of that kind. Starting from the nose following the cheekbone around the eye (not damaging the eye) and downward. The cut going to the bone and about 4 inches in length. On his head several bruises and his left elbow bruised. In his right groin a knife cut extending in and upward. The cut being on the outside about 4 inches in length. Our opinion is the cut in the groin caused instant death. The bruises on his head and on his left arm caused by the fall. On examining the captain's clothes we found the back of the cap cut from the right side about 2 inches. In his pants on the right side about in the middle of the pocket of pants a cut. On the drawers on the same place one cut the cuts being close on the right side of the pants and drawers 2 cut close together. And all the clothes full of blood. In the galley we found blood marks on the floor on the bench and on a box standing alongside the door from the galley to the deck. In the donkey room the cover of the donkey from the door of the galley and toward the door from the donkey room to the deck spotted with blood. On the floor of the donkey room blood spots from the door of the donkey room to the deck where there was a pool of blood standing. The doorstep from the donkey room to the deck on the port side covered with blood. The steps from the deckload down to the donkey room spotted with blood. There was also blood spots in the deckload on the starboard side and a pool of blood where the body been lying in our opinion the bloodspots on the galley floor and on the cover of the donkey was caused by the blood running from the cut in the donkey room while struggling for the possession of the knife. The blood on the doorstep and alongside the door caused mostly from the cut in the groin. The blood spots on the step and on the deckload caused while carrying the captain upon the deckload and we the undersigned find the cabin boy Tanbara guilty of the murder of Captain J. J. Jacobsen and consider the cook T. Oto his accomplice. H. Meyer, mate, John Nelson, second mate, John Bar, Harry Fortune, Jean Ferrier, Louis Hurban, Claude More, Louis Samuel.

"We the undersigned saw the knife in the hand of the second mate after taking it out of the captain's body and has seen that knife several times before. The knife being a carving knife about 8 inches in length and one half in wide a little bigger towards the end the blade being rounded and the point turned upwards. H. Meyer, mate, Louis Samuel, Harry Fortune, Claude More, Jean Ferrier.

A summarized account of the murder and the incidents preceding and following it is as follows.

The schooner Fred J. Wood arrived at Portland from Hakodate June 14, and after discharging and loading sailed for China on the present ill-fated voyage. The cook and the cabin boy were both shipped some days before the vessel sailed from Portland. While in port there they did not seem to get along well together but afterwards apparently made up their differences. From that time on they seemed to be in a conspiracy of insubordination, the boy under the influence of the cook. The cook refused to do many things he was ordered to do, and the boy, at the cook's instigation also refused to attend to many of his duties. To all orders and remonstrances of the captain he was obdurate, sulking and shirking. Seven days out from Port and Captain Jacobson directed the boy to do certain work. The boy demurred saying the cook had told him he did not have to work so hard. To this the captain replied that he was giving orders and not the cook. Such incidents occurred on several occasions.

On the morning of the murder, the cabin boy had brought the captain's early morning chocolate to the cabin, but had failed to return later to remove the dishes. About half past 8 o'clock, the captain went forward, as it is supposed to tell the cabin boy to do this work. He found the cabin boy seated in the cook's galley. He told the boy to do his work. Thereupon the boy pulled a butcher knife from under his coat and made a lunge at the captain. The latter called out, 'Boy, give up that knife.' This was heard by one of the seamen, who was in the forecabin, a Frenchman named More, who instantly threw open a small panel between the cook's galley and the forecabin, used to pass food through from the galley to the forecabin, and saw the subsequent struggle between the captain and the cabin-boy, though unable to get through and interfere in the struggle, or rescue the captain. The captain had held of the boy evidently attempting to disarm him and protect himself. In the struggle the boy pulled the captain into the donkey-room where the passage was a narrow one, not more than two feet and a half wide. All the time he was slashing away with his knife. Here the captain got the boy by the shoulders, but instantly the little Jap dropped to his knees and ran his knife right up through the captain's body. Fatally wounded the captain fell on top of the Jap, the blood flowing from many wounds.

Quickly the whole ship's crew and Mrs. Jacobson were on the scene, in a state of great excitement, as was not unnatural. The body was brought up on deck, but life had fled. One of the sailors saw the knife still sticking in the body, and drawing it out, excitedly threw it far out to sea. For a few moments it looked as though the sailors would make short work of the murderer. But the first mate, H. Meyer, at once took command, and ordered the Jap in irons.

The cook during this scene kept out of sight. He was at once relieved of his duties, and kept under surveillance until the vessel came off this harbor, when he too was put in irons. The body was as cruelly entailed by the use of alcohol, and placed in a cool part of the cargo forward, and brought to this port.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

The Executive Council yesterday recommended a renewal of the salmon license of H. C. Vida and that of Ah Kan Chuek at Kapa, Kauai. Yet, of Hanapepe, was granted a light wine and beer license. The application of the Hawaiian Agricultural Co., for permission to increase the capital stock from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 was granted. Report of the road board at Koloaupo, Kauai for the extension of the road through Waialeale was adopted and the work ordered done.

A FANCY COLLEGE YELL.

There is a gentleman who is beyond his school days who is interested in chickens. Recently he learned that there was an institution of learning where a course of instruction was given in chickenology and duckology, or in those branches designated by scientific names. The fowl fancier thought the matter over—was he too old? He decided to consult his friends.

"I don't mind the schoolroom," he said with a frown, "but it is the thought of the other class meetings. Just as I am as not we will all wear goose quills in our hats and have a college yell something like this: 'Quack, quack, quack! Cock-a-doodle-do! Roosters, broilers, 1902!'"

THE ROUGH HOUSE

WHERE WAS CLUNY WHEN THE LIGHTS CAME?The Captain Says He Was Not Under The Table—Here Leaves Party In Disgrace.Captain John C. Cluny has published the following card:"Editor Advertiser: I read a report in the Star on the 4th in regard to the trouble in the reformatory school.
Stated that when the light was turned on I was seen coming from under the table. I was knocked up against the table number of times and badly bruised. I feel the effects of it at present, but he who said that I was under the table is a dam liar."
"JOHN C. CLUNY."The statement that the captain was under the table was made by two of those who participated with him in the dark rough house in the Reform school on Sunday morning, just as the count had progressed far enough to show which side had won. Neither of the men who made the statement seemed to think that the captain had personally had a wish to be under the table, and neither knew how he had got there. It is generally conceded that Cluny is one of the last men in the world to make for a place of safety during a fight, for he has been piling up a reputation for many years, but when the patriotic political leaders of the bloody seventh rush a man he cannot always tell where they will leave him. Now, the captain says he was not under the table, but against it, and still in the ring, and that settles it.
The fight in the seventh has one feature of possible interest to the Department of Public Instruction, in that it was an early lesson to the youthful inmates of the institution, in American politics. The scene of the trouble was the school room of the institution. The unruly boys confined there, left their hats and many coats on the walls of the school room when they retired. They knew that newly-made American citizens were about to make the place holy by using it for the exercise of an American's great right of suffrage.
When the boys returned just after the politicians had sung the Doxology and departed on Sunday morning, they found most of the windows broken and their clothing was well scattered.
Confusion reigned and there were signs of broken pitchers. What explanation Superintendent Gibson made to the boys is not known.
H. C. Birbe, one of the defeated faction who took part in the row, says he has left the Republican party altogether and will be a Home Ruler. Birbe says that everyone "put it on" him, and that he is being made a scapegoat.
"You can say that after the deed I have got," said Birbe, who was a very active vote-chaser for the Sims faction last Saturday, "that I am a Home Ruler and will vote the Home Rule ticket and work for it."

RODRIGUES FOUND GUILTY.

First Verdict of the Term May Be Set Aside.The case of Pedro Rodriguez, charged with larceny, was tried yesterday afternoon before Judge Gear and a jury. The jury quickly reached a verdict of guilty.
When asked if there was any reason why sentence should not be passed, Pedro said that he had witnesses in jail to prove that he had purchased the jewelry he was said to have stolen.
Gear wanted to know why the witnesses had not been brought and Attorney Robinson said he had not thought it advisable to bring them from the jail.
Judge Gear postponed the sentence to next Thursday. Robinson said he had been assigned to try the case and had no opportunity to consult with his client, and a new trial may be granted.
George McCauley was yesterday appointed by Judge Gear Spanish interpreter for the August term of court.
The transition cases, William Ester, Murder, and Kaluna, burglary, were continued by consent yesterday for the term.The case of William Schneider, charged with assault has been specially set for Thursday morning by agreement.T. I. Dillon, as master, yesterday reported upon the accounts of A. B.
Wood, guardian of Genevieve Dowsett.The inventory shows the value of the estate to be $178,222.60, producing an income of $1,000 annually. The accounts are approved excepting two minor items amounting to $17.30, which were erroneously paid. The discharge of the guardian is recommended.An inventory of the estate of William Thompson has been filed, showing a value of about $4,300.The bill of complaint in the case of Jacintha Jose-Rodriguez vs. A. R. Silva was dismissed by Judge Humphreys yesterday.The partition suit of Lee Chun and C. K. Ai against Isaac Noar was on trial before Judge Robinson yesterday.The parties to the suit own parts of the Star block and want the property divided by sale. There is some prospect of settlement and the case went over until Friday.

DR. MARQUES.

Dr. Marques says that in the interview with him published in The Star yesterday, while in the main expressing the sentiments he holds in some respects conveyed a different meaning than he intended to convey. In all that he has said he has no purpose to stir up strife or further estrange those claiming to hold the same principles. Nor does he seek to impugn motives. In the unfortunate controversy he believes the truth and the right as he sees it will prevail and hopes that ultimately all concerned will come into agreement.

DEFAULT ENTERED.

Judge Gear this morning granted a motion for a judgment by default in the case of the Kona Sugar Company against the Kona Sugar Company and the first American Savings and Trust Company.
The suit was for $8,250, for machinery sold by the Kona Sugar Company to the sugar company. An affidavit was filed showing that the defendants had failed to make the necessary appearance, and on this showing Gear signed an order of default. The default is against the sugar company only, the bank having answered.

Riggs, clerk of the Fire Claims Commission, this morning advised J. M. mission, was not decided that he had given the matter considerable waiting, but had not been able to prepare a decision yet. The matter was set for decision on Friday.

The Ferris case also went over to Friday, the judge taking under advisement a motion for a continuance until the desired California depositions can be secured.

An execution against H. L. Evans and Matsumoto in the matter of the judgment secured against them by Bishop & Company, was returned this morning unsatisfied.

F. T. Merry, of Honolulu, is to be the new clerk of the Fifth Circuit Court, according to a letter received from Judge Hardy.

THE PING-PONGERS.

Many of the fairer sex accepted the invitation of the Elks yesterday afternoon and visited the hall to watch the semi-final games. The herd acted as hosts and light refreshments were served. The finals will be played tonight between Atkinson and Lowell. This will close the tournament as far as play is concerned. A program is tendered in social session to all those who took part in the tournament and other friends of lodge members. This takes place on Saturday evening in Elks' Hall when the prizes will be presented during the evening.

A SMALL BLAZE.

The overturning and breaking of a lamp started a fire about 10:30 o'clock last night in a tenement building occupied chiefly by Japanese, near the place where the fire occurred Sunday night on King street. The Japanese in the room where the accident occurred, grabbed their clothes and ran, shouting. Police officer Espinda, who was on King street heard the shouting, ran to the burning apartment, threw blankets on the blaze, organized a bucket brigade and extinguished the fire before the fire department could respond to an alarm turned in by another white man who was in the neighborhood.
