CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

The resolute stand taken by the Administration against unrestricted Chinese immigration has borne good fruit. The Consul General of this Kingdom at Hongkong recently visited the passports of two hundred returning Chinamen, and applied to the Secretary of the Colonial Government there for permission to allow them to ship direct for Honolulu, instead of incurring heavier expense by shipping to San Francisco and thence to this port. His request was courteously but firmly refused. The Hongkong Government, acting under instructions from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, cannot permit any direct shipment of Chinese from the port of Victoria, or Hongkong, as it is better known, to any port in the Hawaiian Kingdom, in consequence of the strong representations of this Government on the subject. No modification of this prohibition will be made unless requested by the Hawaiian Government; and it is perhaps superfluous to say that no such request will emanate from the present Administration. So far from that being the case, the Government, suspecting that Chinamen who left here disposed of their permits or Custom House passports to others, and by fraudulent representations afterwards secured Consular passports for double the number entitled to them, issued an order on the 8th of July last to the Consul General at Hongkong, forbidding the issuance of return passports to any one, except women or persons known to him to have been residents of this Kingdom. This will stop the immigration fraud heretofore perpetrated by the sagacious Chinese.

When the Opposition gets into office it will probably carry out its policy of "Asiatizing the country," by throwing down the barriers and letting in the "yellow horde" to reduce wages and furnish an inexhaustible supply of "ignorant muscle" which it strove so hard to accomplish through the Planters' Labor and Supply Company last October and since. But fortunately for the country there is no prospect whatever of an Opposition victory, and the chances for free labor are therefore better to-day than they have been at any previous period of our Island history. The intention of the Consul General at Hongkong appears to have been to encourage the Mexican line of steamships which has been established. These vessels are to call at Honolulu going and returning, and of course it would have been quite an item to command the Chinese passenger traffic with this country. The first vessel of the line, the Mount Lebanon, was to sail shortly on its pioneer voyage, having a large number of Chinese coolies for Mexican plantations on board.

VACCINE LYMPH AND VACCINATION.

The Board of Health received by the Alameda last Saturday fifty cones of capillary tubes of vaccine virus from the Boston Vaccine Company, through Consul-General McKinley, who displays great zeal in the execution of the various duties of his office. The supply will be kept up regularly, so that hereafter there need be no apprehension regarding the availability of a sufficient quantity of pure lymph. The ADVERTISER referred to this subject some time ago, and especially to the reluctance of Portuguese to vaccinate their children by the arm to arm method through the natives, for fear of contamination with leprosy virus. The prejudice was a natural one, and should be respected. But there is now no reason why these people should refrain from taking necessary and indeed imperative precaution against small-pox. The able and judicious gentleman who represents the Portuguese Government here will doubtless give attention to this matter, and suggest such means as he may deem expedient to induce his countrymen to avail themselves of the sanitary appliances which the Board of Health is ready to place at their disposal. It might be expedient perhaps that original vaccination should proceed among the Portuguese in groups, when revaccination could be practiced without any objection on their part, by taking the virus from the arms of perfectly healthy children of their own race who had been vaccinated with imported lymph. Anyhow, for their own sakes, it is very desirable that they should all be vaccinated. This country has no immunity from small-pox any more than other countries which have been and are afflicted by it, and should an outbreak unfortunately occur the first victims would naturally be those whose constitutions had not been fortified against infection by vaccination. The Board of Health would doubtless act upon any suggestion Mr. Canavaro might make in this regard. As it is a question of vast public interest, where so many children and young people are unvaccinated, we trust that measures will be promptly taken to give effect to the suggestion, herein contained, so far as these may be practicable.

PORTUGUESE IMMIGRANTS.

A short time ago there was a hue and cry raised concerning the departure of Portuguese immigrants whose terms of contract service on the Islands had expired. Our Opposition contemporaries dilated at length upon the evil effects wrought by the Government in this connection. It was the fault of the Government that men could not be compelled to remain here against their will. This was another crime laid to the charge of the Government. We said but little at the time, anticipating further developments, and the wisdom of the ADVERTISER has become apparent. We learn from San Francisco that, besides the eighty Portuguese who have already returned to the Islands within a month, fifty-two of whom came on the last steamer, there are very many more awaiting their opportunity to get back.

All who went to the Coast were possessed of a limited amount of capital. The Portuguese laborers found that they could not readily obtain work in California, but most of them made this discovery too late, as all their money was expended. A few wisely saved sufficient to enable them to return to this Kingdom, which they openly avow is better suited to them than California. Not a day passes in San Francisco but some of our former Portuguese laborers call at the office of John D. Spreckels & Bros. to ask if he cannot obtain a free passage, or work his way back to the Islands. Some even have desired to "ship" there for another term of years in order that they might return. This is tolerably conclusive proof of another misstatement and falsehood from the Opposition, but it is what the public should always expect from such a quarter. It is now in order for them to reiterate their falsifications in this connection.

PICTORIAL HAWAII.

The Art Book for the Season of 1885, in Preparation by Jules Tavernier and Wm. Horace Wright.

It has been almost an open secret for some months past that efforts were being made for the publication of a work on the Hawaiian Islands that would eclipse all previous endeavors in that direction. Many interesting volumes have been already published in connection with these Islands, but they have been devoted principally to scientific researches, travelers' recollections, or the day dreams of florid imaginations. The Hawaiian Islands have been mirrored pleasantly, but not accurately or justly.

It is, therefore, with satisfaction that we announce that the long-felt want is about to be supplied. The work has been commenced under the most favorable auspices, and will in due course be published, supported by all that is necessary in the way of influence and capital. It is intended to be a complete analysis of the Islands pictorially and in text, from drawings, observations and investigations made in the localities described.

The title of the work is, "The Rainbow Land. An artist's rambles through the Hawaiian Islands, illustrated on the spot by Jules Tavernier." The art department will be in Mr. Tavernier's hands, who, of course, will occasionally call to his assistance the brushes and pencils of such confreres as possess peculiar gifts in special departments.

Mr. Tavernier's broad and versatile talent as an artist is recognized in Europe, as well as in America, while many of his works are familiar to our own people. Twenty years ago last May his first picture was placed "on the line" in the Paris Salon, Palais de L'Industrie. As an illustrator his experience has been considerable, he having contributed freely to the Paris "Caprice," London "Graphic," London "Illustrated News," New York "Graphic," "Harper's Weekly" and "Monthly," "Frank Leslie's," Appleton's and Scribner's magazines, the "Aldine," "Picturesque America," etc., etc.

From an artistic standard every effort will be made to render the work a masterpiece, and one that will be recognized as "the book of the season." It will be published in what is known as album form, about fifteen inches in length by ten inches in width, and will contain five hundred or more illustrations, including full page colored oil plates, black and white drawings, pen and ink sketches, photographs, wood engravings, etc., etc., in order that each subject may be appropriately dealt with in the happiest vein. Each letter-press page will be illustrated by scenes, suggestions or emblematic ideas congenial to the matter under discussion. The cover will be a very handsome one in colors, after the model of the antique wood bindings. Sunk in profile and embossed will be an allegorical and typical picture of the Islands. On the raised framework surrounding it will be carved in ornamental lettering "KA PAE AINA O HAWAII." Illustrated by Jules Tavernier. Honolulu, 1885-86.

From a literary point of view no pains will be spared to make the work reliable, valuable, useful and interesting to the general reader. It is contemplated and desired to make it a condensed but faithful reflex of all that is of interest on the group of Islands, of practical benefit to those connected with them by ties of birth, residence, property, commerce or pleasure, or of use to the great traveling and reading public. Briefly outlined, as the scope of the work is on the title page, the subject is a vast one, as it contains—

"The Hawaiian race, their history, traditions, legends, music and meles, the volcanic phenomena and island scenery, climate, products and possibilities, commercial and political features, prominent people of the past and present, routes of travel, etc., etc." From each of these main heads will naturally spring Hydras of thought and information, and in courteously supplying data from the treasure boxes of their knowledge, our readers can materially assist the compiler, who will gratefully acknowledge their kindly aid. This department of the work has been entrusted to Mr. Wm. Horace Wright, a gentleman in every way competent and qualified for the undertaking. He will bring to his assistance writers of knowledge and experience on several branches of the work.

The book will be published for the winter season of 1886, and in order to expedite its usefulness by rapid distribution, will be issued from Honolulu, New York, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, New Orleans, London (Eng.), Paris, Berlin, Lisbon, Vienna, Rome, Dublin, Glasgow, Liverpool, Melbourne, Sydney, Auckland, Yokohama, Hongkong, Bombay and Calcutta.

The ADVERTISER wishes to all connected with this enterprise a happy and prosperous termination to their well-extended labors, which are calculated to do so much lasting and material good to these islands.

Judge T. Lyle Dickey of the State Supreme Court, Chicago, died at Atlanta City, New Jersey, July 22d. He was born at Paris, Ky., October 2, 1811, consequently was close on seventy-four years of age. He died nine hours before General Grant, his old comrade and friend. Judge Dickey leaves a widow and four children surviving him. One of these is Mr. Charles Dickey of Haiku, Maui. The deceased was also half-cousin to Prof. W. D. Alexander. Mrs. Dickey, the widow, visited the Islands about a year ago. His funeral took place at Chicago July 25th, and was attended by the City Council, members of the bar, G. A. R., and many other organizations.

There will be a regular meeting of Excelsior Lodge, No. 1, I. O. O. F., this evening at 7:30 o'clock. All members are requested to be present.

Opera Prospects.

Signor Farini was courteously received by His Majesty the King yesterday. The King listened attentively to the musical project which Signor Farini submitted, and promised to do all he could to further it. Indeed, His Majesty entered heartily into the subject, and being an ardent admirer of good music, is naturally anxious that there should be a successful operatic season in Honolulu. We regret in this connection that the idea of giving a concert next Friday evening has been abandoned, owing to the difficulty of getting together a sufficient number of trained voices for rehearsal at such short notice; and Signor Farini very properly prefers not to make the attempt when perfect success is doubtful. He may probably, however, give an invitation musical soiree before leaving on the 1st September. The operatic subscription list was opened at Wiseman's yesterday and several names were put down. We hope the list will fill up quickly and so ensure a really superior presentation of opera on the local stage.

A young black bear, owned by a Pole, who keeps the store adjoining the Union Feed Company, on Queen street, died last evening under peculiar circumstances. Ever since last Tuesday they have been trying to put a ring in the animal's nose. A blacksmith was called in yesterday. The animal's legs were tied, and also his nose. A few minutes later it was found to be dead. The owner valued the bear at $100. He should have taken better care of the beast.

Yesterday morning at 6 o'clock a gang of prisoners were put to work on King street near Thomas Square, and by noon they had a section of the track for the street railway laid. It was done under the supervision of Mr. Julius H. Smith, Superintendent of Public Works. Anyone passing that vicinity would not be able to find the track, as it has been covered up so as to prevent carriages coming in contact with it. There is a probability of work being resumed inside of two months.

About 3 o'clock Sunday morning, three milk wagons were standing outside of Nolte's saloon, the drivers being inside taking their usual cup of coffee. An express, carelessly driven, with five persons inside who were all in a merry state, came tearing down Fort street and ran into one of the wagons belonging to the Woodlawn Dairy, considerably damaging it, and making the milk therein fly. Another wagon had to be sent for to replace the damaged one.

VENTURE.

This well-known Trotting Stallion is now standing at the corner of Franklin Queen streets, and breeders, horsemen and stock-owners should take advantage of opportunity to obtain his blood while they have the chance. He is now feeling nearly as well as he ever did in his life, and moves as lively and his eyes as he is as vigorous as a four-year-old horse.

It does not require a great horseman to discover great points of nature in VENTURE. The ordinary citizen, upon beholding him, will be impressed with his grand make-up, magnificent length, and elegant finish. If he is not a horse that ever came to this country, he is surely one of the greatest, and many former, he towers as far above them all as he does above a sucking colt in stature. A great deal of importance has lately been attached to the value of a horse being kept for stock purposes, whether he is standard or not, and the Franklin National Association of Trotting Horse Breeders in America strongly advise to patronize stallions that are not standard bred, and he also advises them to not only standard bred, but if possible one that is standard by his own pedigree, which is a public record of 2:30, or better, and even more than this by the pedigree of his get also. Now, if this rule was rigidly applied, it would exclude almost all horses as Electioneer and the sires of Maud S. and Jay Eye See, etc., for while they become greatly renowned by the performances of their get, they never were formers themselves.

Now, we will see, for curiosity, how near VENTURE comes to possessing the qualifications, namely: Breeding, performance and performance of his get. As to breeding, he is the peer of any horse on earth, and I don't except the Hermit, who is the most popular stallion in England, and whose service he is the sire of three Derby winners.

As to his own performances, he meets the requirements, having a public record of 2:27, 2:30 being the standard of admission.

His get are now just beginning to be appreciated in California, one of (Vengeance) won a good race quite lately in Sacramento, in straight race, record of 2:34, and is said to be able to trot close to 2:30, when called upon to do so. With these facts before us, VENTURE looms up as one of the greatest horses only on this but in any other country, and the day is past when people will look at him but the very best; and while the death of two such great horses as VENTURE is not as desirable a horse to breed from as any of our standard bred horses as Electioneer and the sires of Maud S. and Jay Eye See, etc., for while they become greatly renowned by the performances of their get, they never were formers themselves.

VENTURE is an aged horse, but he is one year younger than Electioneer, sold only last year in Kentucky for $25,000, on the strength of his being the sire of Jay Eye See. His stud fee is $300. He is also ten years younger than Volunteer (see July), whose fee is $500. All things taken into consideration, I cannot see why VENTURE is not as desirable a horse to breed from as any of our standard bred horses as Electioneer and the sires of Maud S. and Jay Eye See, etc., for while they become greatly renowned by the performances of their get, they never were formers themselves.

"Where do I camp?" he inquired, and he was shown the lower berth, next to me.

"That's my pigeonhole, is it? All right, old son; just wait my motion, while I file myself away."

At this juncture he was desired to turn over his revolver to the porter, which he declined to do in a very spirited manner.

"Old Dad" (his revolver) "and me always sleep together, and we don't want no divorces," he explained.

The conductor remonstrated, but was advised not to try to "braid this mule's tail."

"This here's a sleeping car, ain't it?" he inquired.

"Yes."

"Well, why in — don't you let people sleep, then, when they've paid and gone into your game? If you're aimin' to keep people awake and want company, just dance into the next car; there's lots of folks there don't want to sleep, now, and I'll be glad to see you."

The conductor withdrew, and my friend pulled off his boots and stretched himself, with many comments, in an undertone, on the poverty of the surroundings.

In about ten minutes this erratic person had his head out in the aisle.

"Say, you boy," to the porter.

"Well, sah?"

"Come a rummle."

The porter drew near, and a pillow about as big as a pincushion was handed to him.

"Take that goose's thing away," said the cowboy.

"Don't you want a pillow, sah?" asked the porter.

"That ain't no pillow, and I don't want it, now; I'm afraid it'll get in my ear."

"Then this, sah, and for a short time I sleep. I roused up, however, at an exclamation on the part of my neighbor.

"Hold on there, my son! Jist drap them boots!"

"I was only just gwine to black 'em, boss."

"Drap 'em."

"Jest gwine to pull them spurs, I reckon. Now, don't monkey around my camp taking things no more. If you want anything, speak for it. If you can't speak, make signs, if you can't make signs, shake a bush. You h'ar me?"

"Yes, sah."

After this, silence. The wheels and rails again sang together; and the car again kept approving time, and presently I slept without interruption.

Our Cholera Facilities.

(Texas Siftings.)

The average American editor does not seem to be afraid of the cholera. He just writes what he pleases about it. The reasons why the journalist does not dread the cholera are several.

In the first place, it is a well known fact that intelligent and sensible people, who live on a plain light diet, and not much of it, and who lead upright lives, are reasonably safe, even in the midst of contagion. Those who live on a spare diet cannot well be spared, but the cholera spares them, nevertheless.

This lets most editors out. All authorities agree that the avoidance of fear is necessary to keep the system in a condition to ward off the blows of the cholera microbe. The fearless which the average American editor displays in taunting England for her cowardice in not declaring war, demonstrates what a plucky set we are.

Unless the cholera microbe is insured for its full value against accident, he had better stay where he is.

The cholera epidemics in France, Spain and Italy last year were very serious, as the press has very little influence in those countries. During the middle ages, the cholera microbe had it all its own way, because there was no press to restrain it.

This Beats the Old Button Trick.

(Boston Transcript.)

"I beg your pardon," said a slouchy dressed individual, reaching for a bur which adhered to the coat sleeve of a gentleman just ahead of him; "there's a bur on your coat, sir; permit me to remove it."

"Thank you, no consequence," said the gentleman, himself removing the bur.

The impudent one struck an attitude, told the regulation story of hunger, and preferred a request for ten cents, with which to buy bread. He got the money, but still lingered.

"What is it, my man?" asked the gentleman.

"Please, sir," replied the tramp, "you have my bur in your hand. I'd like it, if you please. It is my capital, you know."

"Your capital?"

"Yes, my capital; you see, I sticks it on to a cove what looks downy, you know, and then I steps up and takes it off. Sometimes I only gets thanks for my trouble, and sometimes I don't get that much; and then some of 'em comes down handsome. Yes, boss, that's my capital; couldn't do business without it; have to shut up shop, you know."

Fitting the Keyhole Around the Night Key.

(Buffalo Courier.)

Brown arrived home somewhat late the other night after a convivial supper with friends. Mrs. B. like a dutiful wife, set up until her liege lord should come in. From one side of the door she heard the protracted fumbling with the keyhole, which her husband from the other side was with difficulty trying to fit around the night key. Finally the key sprang the latch, and the delinquent husband pushed open the door to find himself face to face with his angry partner. Wishing to cover him completely with confusion, the aggrieved wife pointed to the key which was still in the door, and with an air of grim satisfaction, remarked: "You seem to have forgotten your key."

"You seem to have forgotten your key," Brown had now recovered his humor, and, appreciating the fact that she had been a silent listener to his prolonged maneuvers, retorted: "Well, my dear, you don't think I went to all that trouble to get the key in merely to pull it right out again, do you?"

The Hat of Most Importance.

(Detroit Free Press.)

"What! in mourning?" she exclaimed, as she entered the car and caught sight of an acquaintance.

"Yes."

"Some one dead?"

"Yes."

"Well, that's too bad! Died of pneumonia, I suppose."

"No, of brain fever."

"Dear me, but that's awful! How do you like my new hat?"

The new corset rattled on in this fashion for 20 minutes, and then left the car. As it started again after leaving her on the crosswalk she made vigorous motions to the conductor, and when he had brought the vehicle to a halt she said:

"What you please ask that lady friend of mine if it was her husband or one of the children who died! I forgot to find out!"

She didn't find out on that trip.

The Best Sewing Machine.

(Somerville Journal.)

There is a good deal of dispute as to which of the many varieties of sewing machines in the market is the best, but nearly everybody seems to agree that a bright-eyed brunette, about 18 years and 120 pounds, possesses certain advantages that are rivaled by no other make.

Another Panorama.

(Chicago Herald.)

The Berlin painters, Bracht, Koch and Roehling, who executed the huge panorama of the battle of Sedan, have received a commission to paint the battle of Chattanooga on the same scale. The artists are to spend two months in Tennessee studying the theatre of the conflict, and then return to Berlin, where the picture is to be painted.

Puffer, Gambol and Sloan.

(Benjamin Northrop.)

"I wonder what is the trouble between Puffer and Gambol and Sloan. They hate him like poison," remarked the judge.

"Haven't you heard?" inquired the major. "No; what is it?"

"You know what a terrible hand Puffer writes! Some one told him once that he wrote a distingue hand, and it set him up so that he now writes worse than ever. Well, that happens to be his sensitive point. He prides himself on it. Gambol has a weak point, too—his eyes. He can't help being cross-eyed, but it worries him all the same. When he goes to the theatre he sits with his back to the stage to see the performance. He is a first-rate fellow, though. About a month ago Gambol asked Sloan to introduce him to Puffer. Now, Sloan can't help playing a practical joke any more than he can live without eating. 'I'll arrange that for to-morrow,' answered Sloan, 'but you had better take a pad of paper and a pencil along with you. He is as deaf as a post, poor fellow. He can't even hear the foreman swear at his copy. He is terribly sensitive about it, too. So when you meet him just act as if you knew all about it. I'll see you at his office at noon to-morrow.'

"A few minutes later Sloan was seated in the editorial rooms of The Leader.

"I want to bring a friend up here to meet you to-morrow," he remarked to Puffer.

"Glad to meet any friend of yours," responded the editor.

"He is a friend of yours, too," replied Sloan. "He greatly admires your editorials. There is one peculiarity about him, though."

"What's that?"

"He's deaf as a clam. He can't hear it thunder. He doesn't know it's raining until he misses his umbrella. He is very touchy on that point, and you had better have some paper and a pencil ready for him when he comes, and act as if you always knew he was deaf. It will make him feel easier."

"I am glad to meet you," wrote Puffer on his pad.

"The next day at noon Sloan and his visitor entered The Leader office. Puffer was waiting for them. Sloan took their cards, and gave Puffer's to Gambol, and vice versa. Both men smiled at each other encouragingly, and, producing pads of paper big enough to write a president's message on, sat down beside the editorial desk.

"I am glad to meet you," wrote Puffer on his pad.

"Gambol took the scrap and looked at it, first out of one eye and then out of the other. A puzzled look came over his face. Finally he turned the paper upside down, and a light of intelligence broke over his countenance. Taking up his pencil, he wrote:

"I am exceedingly sorry to hear it. Did you ever try Simpson's extract?" and handed it back to Puffer.

"What Puffer read this, his mouth opened with astonishment. He took his pencil and wrote on the bottom of the sheet:

"I don't want any extract. I am not sick. I simply said I was pleased to meet you."

"Then he shoved the paper over to Gambol, and waited for a reply. Finally he was puzzled at the first communication, he was in reality stricken dumb at the second. He glanced appealingly at Sloan, who was at that moment attentively looking at a picture on the wall, with his handkerchief in his mouth to smother his laughter. Finally he struck what seemed to him to be a clue, and he wrote in reply:

"Yes, thanks, don't care if I do; but don't you think we had better go to lunch first?"

"Then he handed back the roll to the editor, and smiled a smile of mingled self-satisfaction and relief.

"When Puffer saw the answer his disgust rose beyond his control. He rose up in his chair, took the paper and handed it to Sloan.

"See here, Sloan!" he shouted. "See what this grandson of a lunatic has written. This cross-eyed fool evidently doesn't understand his own language. What in Tophet did you want to bring such a strabismic ass up to this office to see me for! Here, take this paper and write to him that I am sick to-day, or dead, or anything, and don't want to write any more; and the next time you bring a deaf and dumb idiot up here to see me just let me know, and I'll run out of town for a week or so."

"That's all right!" yelled Gambol, as he danced around the table. "That's all right, but if I wrote a hand like yours I'd print my letters. I'd spell them out on my fingers. I'd hire a schoolboy to write for me. I'd—"

"Say," gasped Puffer, "ain't you deaf?"

"No," replied Gambol, "ain't you?"

"Then both men looked at each other a minute and simultaneously exclaimed:

"Where's Sloan?"

"But Sloan was a wise man. He was gone."

A Suspicious Dog Story.

(Hartford Times.)

A Danbury paper tells an astonishing story of a dog owned by Thomas Mitchell, who lives on the line of the Shepaug railroad. The dog had a habit of chasing trains, and one day recently was caught by the wheels and lost a piece of his tail. Two hours later he picked it up, carried it to some distance, and buried it as carefully as he would a bone.

The suspicious feature of the story is that a Shepaug railroad train ever ran fast enough to catch a dog.

Versatility.

(Danzville Breeze.)

The mosquito is a queer bird. He is versatile, and he can turn his hand to almost anything, and do it quickly, too. When you see one balancing on his tip-toes, like a girl crossing a muddy walk, you would swear he was all legs. When he dodges from one of your ears to the other like chain lightning you are confident that instead of legs they are all wings. At midnight, when all the world is hushed and still, and he patiently waits by your bedside until you drop asleep, so that his impending operations may not disturb you, he sings his happy, contented little ditty to while away the time, and then you are certain that he is all voice. When he lights down on you and begins to explore your anatomy, to find out what you are stubbed with, you swear on a stack of bibles—of the new version, Oxford edition, price $2—that legs, wings, voice and all had turned into red-hot drilling tools, soaked in pork brine. When you strike where he was and hit where he is not, you think he has smelted the whole business into a combination of Bessemer steel springs, oil tempered. Yes, the mosquito is a whole tool chest, with monkey wrench and oil can crown in, and a portable forge to keep his tools hot.
