HAWAIIAN GAZETTE.

AN INDEPENDENT JOURNAL,
DEVOTED TO HAWAIIAN PROGRESS.

PUBLISHED AND EDITED BY HENRY M. WHITNEY.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1877.

His Majesty the King returned from Kauai by the Marion on Monday afternoon.

QUEEN DOWAGER EMMA returned to town on Saturday afternoon, accompanied by a considerable mounted retinue of both men and women.

THE Committees having charge of the arrangements for the celebration of His Majesty's birthday have almost completed their labors. The festivities of the occasion will consist chiefly of the regatta in the morning and a dance in the evening at the Hawaiian Hotel. In another part of to-day's paper will be found a list of entries for the regatta.

OUR readers, particularly the tax paying portion of them, will not fail to observe the following notice from the Registrar of Public Accounts: "Notice.—All tax payers whose returns show liabilities which have not been deducted from their personal assets, may obtain adjustment thereof at this office up to the first day of December." Of course this does not affect the question of incumbrances on real estate; that matter is settled by the recent decision of the Supreme Court.

The effect of the action now proposed to be taken by the Finance Department will be simply to put the matter of the effect to be allowed against personal assets, on the same ground it has always occupied previous to this year. In thus overruling the recent action of the Assessor in the premises, the Executive Department of the government have done an act of justice to the tax payers, which no one can be more ready to acknowledge than ourselves.

By the bark Courier which arrived on Friday last we have San Francisco dates to Oct. 24th.

The reported Russian victory in Asia is confirmed. Its exact proportions and importance we are unable as yet to determine, our information being mostly from Russian sources.

There was no important change in the condition of things at the seat of war in Europe. The siege of Plevna still continues.

The French elections, on the 10th October, resulted, as was expected, in an overwhelming triumph for the Republicans, who will have a clear majority of considerably over a hundred in the new Legislative Assembly.

There has been a terrible colliery explosion at High Blantyre, near Glasgow, accompanied by great loss of life.

The special session of Congress called by President Hayes, at Washington, opened Oct. 15th. The House of Representatives organized by the election of Randall, Democrat, as Speaker over Garfield, Republican, by 19 majority. The President's message was brief, being confined almost entirely to the subjects the special session was called to consider, and not going into any discussion of general matters.

Thursday, November 29th, is Thanksgiving Day in the United States.

Henry Meigs, the former California defaulter and fugitive and more recent South American Railroad magnate and millionaire, is dead.

THE Advertiser is in error in stating that we, in our last number, "took up the cudgels" in behalf of our correspondent who signed himself "O. O." If our neighbor will take the trouble to read again the last number of the GAZETTE, he will discover that there is no allusion of any kind thereto, either editorial or otherwise, to our correspondent "O. O." or to anything contained in his letter. We will take the liberty furthermore of stating the fact, that every line of last week's editorial matter, except the notice of His Majesty's departure for Kauai and the closing paragraph of the article on the Tax Decision, was not only written but actually in type before the communication in question was received. We would suggest that a paper which is capable of making (honestly, no doubt) such gross mis-statements concerning a matter which happened here in Honolulu, only last week, can hardly be considered very reliable authority on events which took place in Connecticut more than two hundred years ago.

THE Attorney General on the Tax Decision.

We only allude to the subject of the tax law this week for the purpose of pointing out what seem to us to be certain fallacies in the communication of his Excellency the Attorney General, which appeared in last week's GAZETTE.

The first point on which we would take issue with his Excellency, is on his definition of double taxation, which he defines as, taxing the same person twice for the same property. The italics are his own. We do not of course deny that taxing the same person twice for the same property is double taxation, but we also assert, what we think cannot be fairly denied, that taxing two different persons for the same property, constitutes double taxation just as really as the other. It should be remembered that our tax system is supposed to be based on the taxation of property and not of persons. The law undertakes to tax property and that alone, and does not know persons in the premises at all, except as the owners and holders of the property, and the property itself is reached. If a man has property he is supposed to be taxed for the value of that property, that is to say the property is taxed through him, and if he has no property, the theory of our law is that he pays no taxes. This is the theory on which taxation proceeds, is proved by the fact that whenever any person fails or refuses to pay taxes on his property, the government does not undertake to punish the man himself by imprisonment or otherwise, but it seizes the property and proceeds to sell so much thereof as may be required to satisfy the claim. The only exception to the statement that our system is one of taxing property rather than persons, is found in the case of certain minor imposts, such as the poll tax, the road tax, etc., which are levied uniformly on all men, regardless of their property. Now if our law contemplates the taxing not of individuals but of property, then the taxation of the same property twice constitutes double taxation. And in practice it makes not the slightest difference to A, B, and C, who are all taxpayers, whether they are taxed two or three times over on their own property, or whether, in addition to paying once on their own, they are also required, in the capacity of stockholders, mortgagees, etc., to pay on what belongs to their neighbors. The net result, both to the taxpayer and to the government, is in either case precisely the same.

On the subject of shares in corporations, his Excellency says: "It is immaterial that 'property in different forms may receive 'taxation while in the ownership of different persons who derive distinct benefits from its 'use.' We admit that when property in different forms, or in one form, is in the ownership of different persons, it is perfectly proper that all those persons, or, more correctly speaking, those persons' interests, should be taxed; but only on condition that they be taxed upon their several actual interests therein, and on condition furthermore that the whole amount so taxed does not exceed the actual value of the property. If the law, as expounded by the Supreme Court, confined itself to such taxation, no one could object, but we all know that such is not the case. It is useless to lay down such general propositions to which no one can reasonably object, and then try to make it appear that they are applicable to a condition of things entirely different. His Excellency tells us that 'shares 'are property in fact and by statute, and are 'not corporate property.' We know perfectly well the difference between shares in a corporation and property owned by a corporation. The shares are not corporate property, it is true; but they are evidences of ownership in that property, and when you tax the whole property of the corporation and then tax the shares, which, as we have just said, are nothing but an evidence of ownership therein, it is very much the same, so far as the essential equity of the case is concerned, as though you taxed a man for the full value of his real estate and then turned around and taxed him the same amount on his title deeds. We confess we are very much surprised that the Attorney General should have attempted to draw the parallel he did between bank notes and stock in corporations, and to make the taxation of the former an argument for taxing the latter. Surely a man of Mr. Hartwell's intelligence and a lawyer as well, cannot be ignorant of the radical difference between bank notes and stock—the one an evidence of ownership in the corporation and the other an evidence of debt owed by the corporation. The status of the stockholder in a bank and of the holder of the notes of the bank, so far from being identical or even similar are in reality antagonistic, the parties in question, actually occupying to each other the relation of debtor and creditor.

We fail utterly to see any point or relevancy in the following quotation from his Excellency: "As well say that all the Bank of England notes should be exempted from taxation in the hands of their unfortunate owner, 'because the Bank may be taxed for its corporate property or for the basis of the notes, 'or that in case all the notes are destroyed 'there would be no loss of intrinsic value.' It is the corporate property of a Bank? What is all the property of every kind owned by, or the title of which is for the time being, vested in the said bank. It is, in other words, the entire bona fide assets of that Bank, and if Mr. Hartwell means to assert that the corporate property of a Bank, that is to say the assets of the Bank, are taxed in full without deducting the liabilities of the Bank to the holders of its notes, he asserts what is not true. If that is not what he means, then his illustration is wide of the mark and illustrates nothing. Banks are taxed on their capital (sometimes on their capital and surplus), and the capital and surplus represent the corporate property, that is to say the assets, over and above all liabilities except to stockholders, and the stockholders are but another name for the Bank itself. They are in fact owners of the corporation, or we may say the corporation itself, and except by a fiction of bookkeeping, are not in reality creditors at all, and in this respect their position is exactly the same as stockholders in a plantation. Does his Excellency know of any civilized country where Banks are taxed on their capital, that is to say on their corporate property, over and above their liabilities, and where the shareholders are also taxed on the value of their shares? If so, he knows a country where a gross injustice is done, and a country moreover with a system of taxation for corporate property, precisely identical with that which our Legislature, with the endorsement of our Supreme Court, have bestowed on us. One more point and we have done. Does the gentleman mean to suggest that in case all the notes of the Bank of England were destroyed, there would be any loss of intrinsic value? If so, we desire to take issue with him most decidedly. Neither the destruction of all the notes of a Bank nor the destruction of all the certificates of stock in a plantation, would involve the loss of a single dollar of intrinsic value, beyond the value of the paper notes and certificates were printed on, and the actual cost of replacing them. The Attorney General of this Kingdom surely knows the difference between an existing debt or obligation and the mere written or printed evidence of that debt or obligation, and will be understood to hold that the destruction of the latter cancels or invalidates the former? If Mr. Hartwell held Bishop & Co's note for one thousand dollars, would he consider that the accidental or even intentional destruction of that note cancelled Bishop & Co's obligation to pay the money? What is the legal status of the holder of Bank of England notes, or in fact any other bank's notes? They are simply creditors of the Bank to the amount of the notes they hold. The Bank has received value for the same, and the note is simply an acknowledgment of the obligation and a promise to pay, and even were every one of the notes destroyed, the position of the Bank as a debtor would remain unchanged, and both the legal and moral obligation to pay would remain unaffected. It is true that it might be extremely difficult for the holder of the notes to establish the fact of their ownership of the notes and the actual destruction of the same, but these facts being legally proven, their claim on the bank would be perfect. We presume no one will undertake to claim that the validity of a debt is in any way affected by the difficulty of proving it. And finally, even were we to admit the immoral and illegal suggestion, that the loss or destruction of the written or printed evidence of a debt cancelled the debt itself, even then there could be no loss of intrinsic value, for the debtor would be in that case the gainer by just so much as the creditor had lost. There would be simply a change of ownership, a redistribution of property and neither gain or loss of any intrinsic value whatever. We regret having been obliged to give so much space to answering these few points in his Excellency's letter, but the high source from which they proceeded seemed to demand a thoroughness of treatment not warranted by the intrinsic weight or importance of the arguments themselves.

To the Editor of the Hawaiian Gazette: Sir.—Unity is strength, a truth which applies to Governments as well as to other bodies. The body is never at war with itself. The head is never against the hands nor the hands against the head. When the officers of any Government pursue a course which is opposed to the best interest of the people there will be clashing. The greatest despotism is the weakest Government. This Government although the smallest and weakest among the nations has stood like a rock in the ocean. It started with the motto which translated reads "The strength of the Government is in Justice" and hitherto it has tried to carry out that principle in its practices. The people were poor but they paid their taxes cheerfully because they were light and the Government mild. But now a new era dawns upon us! Our ship of state, which has been sailing in smooth waters is likely to meet with rougher seas. How else can we weather it? Let us stick to our motto and we shall be safe. Depart from it and we shall be wrecked!

The late decision of the Supreme Court looks like a departure from this principle. Take a case which has actually occurred. A sells a house lot to B, say for $6,000 and takes a mortgage for the whole amount, and the Government taxes A for his note, and B for the privilege of owing the money! Can B, obtain no redress in the Courts of this Kingdom for this wrong?

A tax upon this which was enacted by the California Legislature was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court (full bench) and money paid under protest by the people, was returned to them. It is to be hoped, that for the honor of this Kingdom such will be the case here.

To the Editor of the Hawaiian Gazette: Sir.—The communication of his Excellency the Attorney General on the subject of the Tax Decision, in the last number of the GAZETTE, is to my mind, chiefly noticeable for the confirmation it affords of your remark that no one, "either lawyer or layman," could be found to come forward and endorse that "decision, or attempt to defend either the Justice or "the expediency of the law as therein laid down." If any one could be expected to "endorse the decision" and the "law as therein laid down," surely it is the attorney for the winning party; yet even he declines to go further than to endorse the good faith of the judges making the decision, (which has not been called in question), and to remind us that something can be said in favor of their view of the case.

I met quite his own words: "I will not venture an opinion as to the Constitutionality of the 'law.' I desire to show that there are two sides to the 'question.'"

Surely the case must be a desperate one indeed, when even the attorney for the successful party in a suit, declines publicly and over his own signature, to endorse the correctness of the view he himself advocates in Court and in favor of which he has obtained a decision. Mr. Alfred S. Hartwell declines to express any opinion on a point which his Excellency Attorney General Hartwell has already argued before the Court and won. Shakespeare perhaps had lawyers and their doings in his mind when he put into the mouth of the melancholy and meditative Jacques, the well known words:

"All the world's a stage,
And men are but mere players,
And one man in his time plays many parts."

It appears to me that the gentleman in question has undertaken to play one part too many. In the character of attorney for the winning party against the tax payers, he has brought down the house—big bagging, I mean the Court—but when he speaks to the larger audience of the general public in the role of an apologist for the view of the law and the Constitution heretofore advocated by the Attorney General and won.
