Water Pressure Problems On Tap

Maui I is dry.

The well, for years the major source of water for Saipan residents from Chalan Kanoa through Susupe to San Jose and Chalan Laulau, inexplicably ran out of water earlier this month.

"It's mystical," said Tony Tenorio, former Acting Director of Public Works and now consultant for water and power emergencies. "Frankly, it's something I've never seen happen.

"It's quite possible that the well may have to be abandoned," he added.

Practically speaking, the loss of the 250-gallon-per-minute well means greatly reduced water pressure for residents and businesses in the areas it served. Seven new wells drilled earlier this year at Isley Field as part of the governor's water emergency are producing as expected, Acting Director of Public Works Juan C. Pangelinan said.

But they produce 50-60 gallons per minute each, according to water/sewer manager Epi Cabrera, and the supply is insufficient to meet demand.

Rather than a single vertical shaft, the Maui I well goes down vertically and then branches into two horizontal tunnels perpendicular to one another, Tenorio explained. "It's a really costly system," he said.

All three Public Works officials have made preliminary surveys at the well site, but said they would consult Saipan's hydrologist, Lt. Gov. Pete A. Tenorio, before deciding on a course of action. The Lt. governor was off-island this week and was expected to return by Thursday.

The cause of the problem is unknown, Tenorio freely admitted. One of the possibilities is that the new wells somehow caused Maui I to run dry, but the older well is a mile away, Tenorio said. Ground water can be different even in the same proximity, he said.

Navy Hill residents have also complained of little or no water pressure. "They are not on water hours, but we can't pump fast enough to maintain pressure," Pangelinan said. An

Zeder: Separate End To Trusteeship Possible

By Francisco T. Uludong

The United States has not ruled out the possibility of a piecemeal termination of the United Nations Trusteeship, according to Ambassador Fred Zeder.

Zeder, who stopped on Saipan to see High Commissioner Janet McCoy on his way to Washington from Palau, made the statement in a press conference at McCoy's residence Monday.

But Don Yellman, U.S. State Department Liaison Officer for the Trust Territory, said that it is still the policy of the United States Government to end the trusteeship simultaneously for the entire Trust Territory.

The Northern Marianas, impatiently awaiting the conclusion of negotiations between the United States, Palau, Federated States of Micronesia and the Marshalls, wants a separate end to the trusteeship for itself.

The UN Trusteeship Council is also opposed to terminating the trusteeship for individual entities, a position which was strongly and clearly stated on Saipan a few weeks ago by Paul Poudade, chairman of the UN visiting mission.

Zeder, who has finalized draft Compact of Free Association with Palau and the Marshalls, also said that he expects to reach final agreement with the FSM before the end of the year, possibly later this month in meetings with FSM negotiators in

Air Marianas Winging Its Way To Saipan

Two weeks from today a plane to service the Mariana Islands will be home-based on Saipan.

The 44-passenger Martin 404 is the property of Air Marianas, Inc., a newly incorporated airline which will serve the Marianas and eventually other parts of Micronesia, according to the firm's attorney, James Grizzard.

The company, whose incorporators are listed as

Vincent Calvo of Rota, Russell E. Weller of Guam and Michael Sweeley, a pilot, has considerable financial backing, Grizzard said. Although he did not know the exact amount of capital, he said the owners are confident the company is "adequately capitalized to start."

Schedules are being worked out and will adhere to the company's earlier Civil Aeronautics Board proposal as a minimum, the attorney said. The CAB proposal listed two round trips daily, seven days per week, on the Saipan-Tinian-Rota-Guam route.

Fares have not yet been set, but the company "intends to be very competitive," Grizzard said.

Air Marianas intends to hire local personnel for all positions except the pilot's seat, and about 40 applicants covering every position have responded to local advertising, Grizzard said. He estimated 15-20 persons will be hired at the outset.

Governor Cites Improvements For Chamber

Gov. Pedro P. Tenorio fielded questions from Saipan Chamber of Commerce members Monday after giving an optimistic outline of the first six months of his tenure.

"There has been marked improvement in each department according to their six-month reports," he stated. As examples he cited the following:

Beginning with the Department of Public Works, he noted that the campaign promise of 24-hour water had been "essentially fulfilled," and that maintenance and upgrading of the water system is ongoing. Rota and Tinian also achieved improvements with new storage tanks, he said.

Power is reaching an adequate dependable capability on each of the three main islands with the addition of more generating equipment, and numerous Capital Improvement Projects are underway.

Juan C. Pangelinan, the last of the Governor's cabinet members, was appointed Director of Public Works last week, and his name was submitted to the Senate for confirmation.

Improvements in the Department of Public Health and Environmental Services include the donation of two hemodialysis units and an X-ray machine, and the recruitment of two National Health Service Corps physicians.

The Department of

Guerrero Trial Delayed

The trial of Rep. Vicente DL Guerrero, originally scheduled for yesterday, Sept. 16, has been postponed until Oct. 14, according to the Attorney General's office.

The reason for the continuance is because the Congressman changed his counsel from the public defender to private attorney Eddie Arriola. Arriola requested more time to prepare for the proceedings.

Rep. Guerrero is charged with assault and battery in an Aug. 14 incident at the O.B. Restaurant. He pleaded not guilty at his arraignment Aug. 31.

Commerce and Labor has processed 1,779 work permits and 1,500 business licenses in six months, and a 1982 economic census has received federal funding approval.

The Office of Planning and Budgeting has been reorganized and has processed 29 federal grant applications. Its budget presentations to the U.S. Congress earlier this year were commended by the federal legislators. Alternate energy programs are also ongoing.

In the Department of Education, the new Rota

High School has opened and Northern Marianas Community College graduated its first class, the governor noted.

All government accountants and other staff of the Department of Finance have been receiving further training, and new forms have been developed to save money and time.

The Marianas Visitors Bureau and Commonwealth Port Authority assisted in seeing that air transportation to Rota was maintained as Island Air went bankrupt, and have negotiated new Japan routes to bring in more tourists.

The Attorney General's Office and Department of Public Safety have coordinated efforts, and an extensive Criminal Justice Academy was conducted.

In the question/answer session that followed his presentation, the governor responded to a number of diverse topics.

Asked about a critical audit report recently released by the federal comptroller's office, he noted that the findings were based on the prior administration, and that his administration is ready to correct the deficiencies noted.

Asked whether the Internal Revenue Code would come into effect next January, the governor smiled and replied, "Yes and no." He explained that while the Covenant is "very specific" that the IRC will go into effect on Jan. 1, 1983, both houses of the legislature have passed resolutions requesting that the IRC be permanently deferred. Also, he has asked the U.S. Treasury for support in that regard. The Commonwealth has the authority to rebate any taxes collected, he added.

Joe Screen, general manager for Joeten Enterprises, later said that a House bill has been written to make technical corrections in the Covenant which would relieve the Commonwealth of the IRC in 1983, postponing it instead to the effective date of U.S. citizenship — the end of the trusteeship.

The governor's office has received no new word from the Department of Defense regarding the option of the Tinian land lease which expires Jan. 9, 1983, he said.

Asked about operating costs of the new health center, which is being constructed with federal funds, the governor cited three potential sources of income: reduction in medical referrals, which currently run $1.5 million per year; by qualifying for the federal Medicaid program; and by increased medical charges consistent with the better facilities.

Several Chamber members asked about incentives for foreign investment, and Gov. Tenorio said he has formed a committee on the subject and is discussing alternatives with the Department of Commerce and Labor.

He also noted that the retirement fund still needs money, but said that he had not yet read a proposed House bill which limits the benefits awarded.

In closing, he promised Chamber members that his office is open for dialogue, a policy hailed by some Chamber members as a welcome change from the previous administration.

Federal Auditor Criticizes NMI Financial Policies

A recently-released federal comptroller's report on the Northern Marianas' financial condition for FY 1981 turned up dozens of problems and questions about the NMI budget policies.

The NMI's General Fund balance sheet shows a cumulative operating deficit of $7.8 million. Five million of that sum was from previous operating years with a $2.8 million deficit from FY 1981 operations alone.

The report blames the $2.8 million shortfall in part on the government's failure to appropriate sufficient funds for the government's contributions to the NMI Retirement fund. Though government obligations were $2.7 million, only $1.2 million was appropriated.

The annual federal report also criticizes the Commonwealth for not having proper legislation to govern its budgetary affairs.

In 1978, the report states, the NMI did not have a budget at all. The FY 1979 budget was not approved until July 1979 — two months before the end of that fiscal year. The FY 1980 budget was not approved until April, 1980 — six months before the end of that fiscal year. Further, the FY 1981 budget was not approved until August 1981 — only one month before the end of that fiscal year.

The NMI was applauded in the report for its attempts to raise additional revenue through the passage of Public Law 3-11, which provides for tax increases, business license fees, and utilities payments. But the $2 million that the government is counting on from utility collection may not materialize unless stricter collection policies are enforced, the report warns.

The report also recommends that the NMI reduce its $1.1 million paid in medical referrals to Guam. Currently this includes transportation, per diem, incidental allowances, and medical expenses of patients. Presently no attempt is being made to force financially-able citizens to pay their own bills, the report charged.

Both executive and legislative officials questioned about the report noted that it concerned the previous administration, and said that the current powers-that-be are making corrections.

"We want to make sure this administration runs straight," said Ray Guerrero, the governor's special assistant for administration, who now screens all proposed expenditures of public funds.

WSZE Seeks to Overturn Default Judgment

Radio station WSZE wants a chance to be heard.

Attorney James Grizzard filed a motion in Commonwealth Trial Court Tuesday requesting to court to reconsider its default judgement against Micronesian Broadcasting Corporation, the parent company of WSZE.

Judge Robert Hefner last week granted judgment in favor of Marianas Public Land Corporation, to which WSZE owes over $30,000 in back rent. The station company has been ordered to vacate the publicly-owned studio by Sept. 23.

The hearing date on Grizzard's petition is Sept. 29. Asked what the company would do, considering the six-day discrepancy, Grizzard responded, "That's a good question."

He said that in a second telephone discussion with the company's president, Scott Kilgore who resides in California, Kilgore reiterated his claims that the station has equities on its side for all its years of public service. He also claims the government did not hold to the lease agreement because the station's tower was blown down in 1980 and not replaced.

Kilgore proposed that if the government would supply another tower, of which several old military ones are apparently available in the Pacific region, WSZE would provide the labor for installing it, Grizzard said.

Kilgore also agreed to retain Grizzard as attorney.

No further discussion on payments was held with Kilgore, but Grizzard said station manager Angel Ocampo is "doing his best" to reconcile accounts owed to WSZE and provide MPLC with a viable plan of paying the station's arrears and keeping its rent current.

Grizzard was unwilling to give a figure on the company's receivables, but said they are "considerable" and involve several reputable local companies.

MPLC officials were off-island and not available for comment.

SAIPAN SPEAKING

"HOW DO YOU FEEL ABOUT THE POSSIBLE CLOSING OF THE WSZE RADIO STATION?"

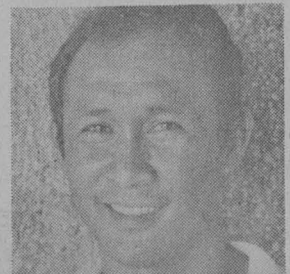

Frances Tenorio: "They should not close WSZE because it's good for announcements, like when someone dies you can go there and announce it."

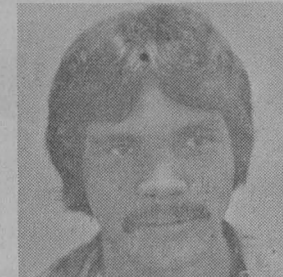

Roman Guerrero: "I think it's very unfortunate that they may close it down, but I think they are doing very good as a people's media. On many occasions they also help people in advertising and in giving out announcements."

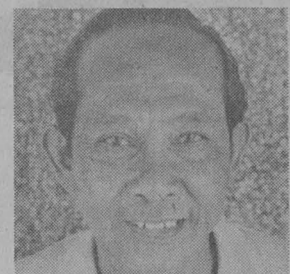

Levy Villegas: "I don't want it to be closed, because I enjoy the news and the music. Saipan has only two radio stations; with only one station, we would have no choice."

Ricardo Muna: "It's too bad for us — we will have only one radio station. WSZE is important to us because we heard lots of news on it and it's an interesting radio station."

Alisao Travilla: "It's better to have more than one radio station, because it's easier to spread the news with more than one. Not all people are always listening to KSAI."

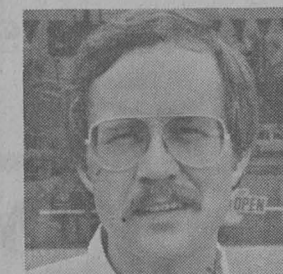

Norvin Guerrero: "Too bad, we aren't going to hear any more music. I hardly listen to KSAI."

Jess Atalig: "To my own view, they don't have to close it down. But, maybe they should close it down temporarily until the company pays off its debts."

Doug Campbell: "I hope they don't close. I hope they're able to stay on the air. I'd be sorry to see them close."

Tax Law Amendments In Conference Committee

The amendments to the 1982 tax law proposed by then-Acting Governor Pete A. Tenorio when he signed the bill on May 27 are slowly working their way through the legislative chambers.

A bill introduced by House Speaker Benigno Fitial on June 8 passed that body and passed first reading in the Senate on June 11. It then went to the Fiscal Affairs Committee, which issued its report on August 25, noting several amendments. The bill passed the Senate on Sept. 7, but the House rejected its amendments last Friday. The measure then went to a conference committee, which was expected to report late this week.

The provisions of the bill will be retroactive to June 1, 1982, when the new tax law went into effect. Among the changes are the following:

- allowing reasonable exemptions for personal use of items brought into the Commonwealth;

- clarifying that the general excise tax applies to items brought into the Commonwealth for business purposes only;

- exempting books and other educational materials purchased by schools and libraries from the excise tax;

- providing that social security and retirement benefits are not taxed as wages and salaries.

House Appropriations Committee Chairman Martin M. Taisacan said that he had received a petition signed by members of the business community protesting the imposition of the excise tax on businesses.

Joeten General Manager

Joe Screen stated at a Chamber of Commerce meeting Monday that the excise tax would unfairly double-tax businesses which also pay a gross receipts tax, increasing prices on goods so that consumers may find it cheaper to import some items rather than purchasing them here.

FY '83 Resource Hearings Held

The Senate and House began hearings with department directors this week to determine the financial resources available to the Commonwealth for fiscal year 1983.

While the governor has not yet submitted his FY '83 budget to the legislature, the solons were working from a letter he sent last week identifying projected FY '83 resources.

Estimated income from all sources for the Commonwealth in FY '83 totals $44.8 million, the governor's letter said. Of that amount, $16.7 million is expected to be raised locally, an increase of $2 million over FY '82.

Senate hearings called by Fiscal Affairs Committee Chairman Benjamin

Manglona, began Tuesday and continued both morning and afternoon all week. House hearings were slated to begin yesterday afternoon.

Among the concerns discussed were the possibility of raising medical fees to cover costs, settling accounts with the Trust Territory, installation of water and power meters, and collecting on receivables from Commonwealth customers.

The governor began meeting with his council this week on the FY '83 budget proposed by the Office of Planning and Budgeting. The council, which includes the four mayors, will meet with him again Monday. The governor's council must approve the FY '83 budget before it can be submitted to the legislature.

Hospital Offers Haven For Mentally Ill

By Bob Grimal

Years ago, they would wander the streets singing, acting foolish, begging for food. No one wanted them. There was no help or cure for them. They were the seriously mentally ill on Saipan.

Today, they have a place to go — the Psychiatric Ward at Dr. Torres Hospital, where Dr. Benusto R. Kaipat, Chief of Psychiatry, has been steadily building a refuge for the mentally ill over the past 30 years. "From 1944 to 1952 there was no mental health program. Psychotic patients were kept at home — or in jail. There was no treatment at all," Kaipat recalls.

Three decades later, Kaipat boasts of a program that offers round-the-clock care to the seriously disturbed patients, and community clinic programs that reach out to those with less-crippling problems.

LOCKED DOORS

The Psychiatric Ward of Dr. Torres is kept locked, tidy, wash their own dishes and create art projects. Writing, reading, pool and ping-pong are all offered. At least three times weekly, patients are taken off-grounds to bowl, picnic, or sight-see.

TV POPULAR

The walls of the 14-bed ward are plastered with gaily-colored travel posters. Patients sleep in tidy, bare rooms that contain only a standard hospital bed for each of two or three patients. Though children are rarely referred, a 12-year old girl — a victim of child abuse — was discharged only last week.

Activities take place in the dayroom. A large table in the center of the room serves eating and art purposes. A kitchen area stands against one wall of the room. While I visited, most patients seemed content to lounge on sofas, watching the hospital's only television set.

At one end of the ward are three seclusion rooms basis, six of the patients are considered permanent residents of the ward. A few have been at the hospital for as long as ten years.

"Some have a chance of getting out — but the problem with some is the home — I'm trying to teach the families how to cope with this kind of patient," the doctor explained. "Entire families have run away — one even to Guam — to avoid taking care of a patient."

Can working on the ward be dangerous?

and have everything that America has, but this brings problems, too," explained the 1952 graduate of the Fiji medical school.

"Progress brings changes, but progress brings many consequences — you have to learn to deal with the stress."

One consequence of that stress is alcoholism — Micronesia's number one mental health problem, Kaipat states. Every week, he sees homes broken, jobs lost, and livers damaged from excessive alcohol.

Drug abuse, teen-age pregnancies, and juvenile delinquency are all on the rise on Saipan, Kaipat observes — problems that were only slight 30 years ago. He sees the gradual break-up of family ties, more worry about money, and a generation gap developing.

To deal with these crises, Kaipat offers two clinics — one all-day Wednesday at the hospital to cover "General Psychiatric Problems", and a "Drug and Alcohol Clinic" on Fridays. During these times he attempts to counsel local residents either by appointment, or on a drop-in basis. Patients are also free to check into the ward to detoxify themselves, he added.

PROBLEMS EXIST

The ward is not without its share of problems. One June weekend, patients were left unattended for a 24-hour period because assigned nurses did not show up. Though fights or injuries among patients apparently did not occur, medications were not distributed during this time, and serious consequences to patients could have resulted.

Dr. Kaipat responded that this was a nursing and administrative problem that has not since been repeated. "I complained to the medical staff that I want 24-hour coverage — I don't want my ward left unattended," he explained.

Money, of course, is another drawback. Kaipat's department had its budget slashed from $68,000 to $26,000 in recent years, due to Reagan's block-grant program.

"I can barely operate," he said, and he finds paying for bills, equipment, and transportation a problem. Now there is too little time or staff to reach out to the people with mental health problems, to educate them about the evils of drugs and alcohol. For now, they must visit Dr. Torres Hospital.

As he begins his fourth decade of work with the mentally ill of Saipan, Dr. Kaipat concludes that "the most urgent area is the head."

since some patients pose a risk to the rest of the hospital and community. Inside are eight schizophrenic patients — some catatonic, some paranoid, some hebephrenic, which Kaipat diagnoses as the most difficult to treat.

"They laugh, smile, grin, giggle like school girls," he explained. Causes of schizophrenia are still unknown, Kaipat said. It may be viral or chemical. Patients at Dr. Torres are treated with one or more of seven anti-psychotic drugs. These help control feelings of violence and depression.

According to the ward staff, a variety of activities are planned for patients throughout the day to help keep them in touch with reality. They do chores to keep the ward where dangerous patients may be locked up for 24 to 48 hours at a time. There, physical and medical restraints may be used to keep patients from harming others. Toilets in the rooms, behind low partitions, are flushed from a button in the main hallway by nurses. A small viewing window allows staff to keep an eye on the patient's activities. During my visit, only one woman was in seclusion, and the door was left open.

Court-committed rapists and murderers are often isolated in these seclusion rooms, Kaipat said, to protect the other ward patients.

FAMILIES SCARED

Though some patients stay only on a temporary

"Yes," admits Remy Haro, a mental health coordinator who assists Dr. Kaipat. "You may be attacked — last week a nurse was scratched in the face." Haro herself has been slapped, but is still unafraid to be on the ward, even alone. "I enjoy working with patients and people who need help and come to us."

BIGGEST PROBLEM: ALCOHOL

Kaipat's main concern, however, lies outside of the locked ward of Dr. Torres. A variety of community health problems are rapidly multiplying in the Northern Marianas, he says, due to the change of lifestyle that the islands are experiencing. Kaipat is alarmed.

"It's good to be rich,

Power Demand Not Slowed By Higher Rates

Meters Continue To Be Installed

By Doug Campbell

Despite June's near doubling of electric rates, customer demand for power has not decreased as hoped, said Acting Director of Public Works Juan Pangelinan recently.

Government officials had originally hoped higher power rates would not only increase revenues, but encourage energy conservation as well. "The electricity generated in one month averages seven million-plus kilowatt hours," said Pangelinan. "I cannot give you exact figures, but I am certain there has been little or no decrease in demand over the same period last year."

Pangelinan said the fact that power consumption has not decreased could be in part attributed to the warmer months of June, July, August, and September, but it is too early to tell if the trend is weather related only.

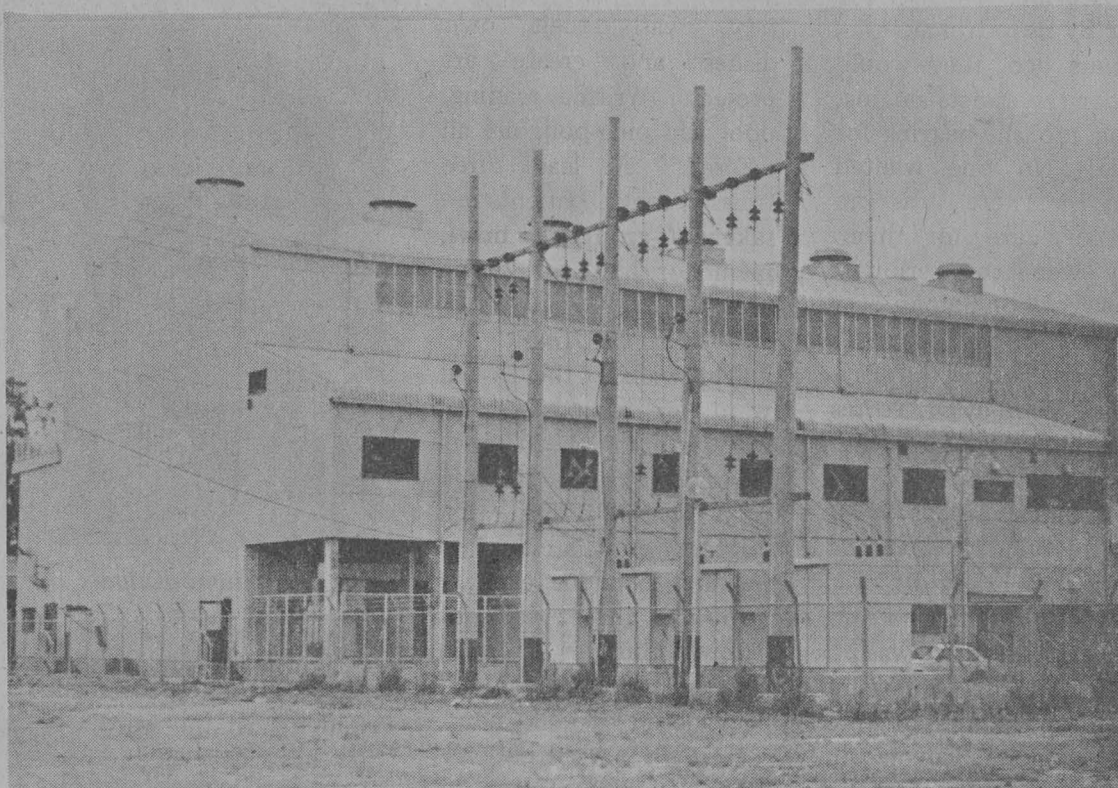

Masahiro Nishimoto, power plant maintenance supervisor, said generator load sheets confirm Pangelinan's statement. Nishimoto said the daytime peak demand averages 16 megawatts, with daytime average load running at 14.6 megawatts, and nighttime demand slumping to nine megawatts. These figures closely match load figures for the same period in 1981.

The continued high demand for electricity requires each of the three eight-megawatt generators at the Lower Base power plant to operate every day, providing minimal time for maintenance. An additional 2.7 megawatts is generated from the old power plant above Puerto Rico to satisfy demand during peak hours. Installation of the fourth eight-megawatt generator at Lower Base is slated for January 1983, Nishimoto said, and the new unit should be on line by September of the same year.

Pangelinan said Department of Public Works crews are continuing to install electric meters at user locations. "To date, crews have installed 1,041 meters at formerly unmetered businesses and residences," Pangelinan said. "That leaves approximately 2,004 meters to install. At $82 per meter, it looks as if the meters we have on hand will be it for a while."

Pangelinan said although some users complain of inaccurate meter readings, most consumers would rather be metered than pay a monthly flat rate. The flat rate is determined by a formula which assigns average fixed consumption levels to each appliance, light fixture, and outlet. "People believe that in the long run, they are more accurately charged if a meter is in service," said Pangelinan.

Continued efforts to collect long past due utility bills also continue, with some progress being made in the colossal task of bringing current the backlog of unpaid bills.

Boating Safety Act Passes Legislature

Transmitted to the governor this week was a bill to provide boating safety requirements for the Commonwealth.

Coast Guard Liaison Officer Bret K. McGough noted that the bill puts the NMI in line with federal boating safety regulations, and gives the Commonwealth responsibility for enforcing them. "I'll still be here to help; it doesn't relieve me of my responsibility for boating safety," the officer noted.

The Coast Guard, itself without a boat, has been attempting to register all boat owners in the Commonwealth. The bill, if signed into law, requires such registration and boat numbering, as well as reporting of accidents and the carrying of certain safety equipment. Water sports are also regulated to promote safety in such activities.

The Department of Public Safety is given the responsibility for enforcing the regulations.

By complying with federal requirements, the Commonwealth is eligible to send trainees to the National Boating Safety School in Virginia for a four-week enforcement course, McGough said. It will also qualify the Commonwealth to receive other federal boating safety funding.

The bill goes into effect upon the governor's signature.

be followed by a second identical plane in about three weeks, was purchased from Air Florida. That company went under because of problems related to the air controllers' strike in the States last year, Grizzard said. The seating area is all first class, and a conference area for four to six persons is set up in the front section. A cabin attendant will provide service on all flights.

The craft is currently undergoing certification by the Federal Aviation Authority on the West Coast. It will be flown to Saipan full of spare parts, and additional parts are being shipped, Grizzard said.

Expected to arrive Oct. 1, the plane will probably be used for promotional flights the first week and then begin its regular schedule, the attorney said.

Within three months, the company hopes to begin service from Saipan and Guam to Yap and Palau, and on a third route from the Marianas to Truk and Ponape. Those round-trips would be flown once daily, five days per week, according to the CAB proposal.

The company is setting up the far right-hand counter at Saipan International Airport for its ticket counter/check-in area, Grizzard said.

Peace Corps/Micronesia Aids UN Water Goal

In conjunction with the United Nations designation of the 1980's as the International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation Decade the Peace Corps recently conducted a training course on construction of ferro-cement water tanks and water seal toilets.

Volunteers from throughout Micronesia, mostly from the outer islands, participated in the two-week course on Saipan, funded by the Trust Territory Environmental Protection Board, according to Nachsa Siren, executive officer of the TTEPB.

Trainers include Carl Dannis, Federated States of Micronesia Environmental Health Coordinator; Eris Hain, Truk State Environmental Health technician and Ralph Hogge, a consultant from Guam Community College.

Volunteers in the outer islands will be able to assist in improving the water supply and sanitary facilities in those areas because most of the communities support the projects, Siren said.

The Kosrae State Legislature has appropriated funds for construction of water tanks for individual homes, and the Kosrae Environmental Health staff is providing technical assistance in constructing the tanks.

The Environmental Health staff of Truk has constructed 250 water tanks to date, and Ponape is also constructing water tanks and water seal toilets for private homes.

The National Congress of the Republic of Palau has adopted a resolution supporting the decade program, noting that less than half the people of Palau have clean water.

The TTEPB has placed house sewer connections and water as top priorities for government centers and is expanding to the outer islands with construction of water and sewage disposal systems for individual homes, Siren said. Seventy percent of all Micronesians live on the outer islands, he added.

Manpower development is being carried out through on-the-job training, overseas training and correspondence courses, according to Siren.

The President and Board of Regents of the Community College of Micronesia in Ponape recently approved the establishment of an Environmental Management curriculum, offered as a three-month certificate or two-year Associate in Science Degree program. Participants will include water and sewer treatment plant operators, and laboratory technicians, and Environmental Health staff.

Public education and participation is being conducted through public meetings and hearings on issues of concern, and through participation in primary health care activities, said Siren.

The target of the U.N. decade is to provide clean water and sanitation for all by the year 1990.

Convicted Rapist's Probation Revoked

A man on probation from one rape conviction and charged with a second rape was convicted of assault and battery and had his probation revoked recently.

William F. Camacho, 22, pleaded guilty to assault and battery Aug. 31 before Judge Herbert Soll and was sentenced to 25 days in jail. The charge stemmed from an Aug. 9 incident at the Descanzo Club in which he slapped another person in the presence of police officers.

The Attorney General's Office also moved to have his probation revoked. Judge Alfred Laureta in District Court granted the motion and sentenced Camacho to five years' imprisonment beginning Sept. 1.

The second rape case is pending. Camacho pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity, and a psychiatric examination is not yet completed, the AG's office said.

Few Trees On Asuncion, Maug

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) research ship Townsend Cromwell returned to Guam on August 31 after completing the third of three scheduled 40-day fisheries assessment cruises in the Mariana Archipelago, according to a press release.

The northern uninhabited islands of Asuncion and Maug in the Mariana Archipelago were visited a week after Typhoon Beth struck the area on July 29 with winds in excess of 200 miles per hour. The damage to the two islands was considerable, the NOAA officials said. An estimated 95% of the trees (primarily coconut trees) on Asuncion were blown down and the damage at Maug was 100% where all the trees were blown down and many were blown off the island.

Paul M. Shiota, Chief Scientist on the cruise, reported that data were collected on snappers and groupers, deepwater shrimps, and akule at selected sites in the Mariana Archipelago to estimate the distribution, abundance, and sustainable yield of these fishery resources. The purpose of the program is to identify and assess the fishery resources in areas of interest to the United States, including Guam and the Marianas Islands, said Shomura.

The Cromwell was scheduled to depart Guam on Sept. 3 to return to Hawaii.

Cheap, Effective Therapy For Diarrhea Promoted

By Doug Campbell

As bad as local health care problems might seem, Dr. Jose T. Villagomez, Director of the Department of Public Health and Environmental Services, says the people of the Northern Mariana Islands should count their blessings.

Villagomez returned recently from the Inter-regional Workshop on the Planning and Management of Diarrheal Disease in Children, held in Taiyuan, China. The World Health Organization (WHO) sponsored the 10-day symposium, and fully underwrote Villagomez' expenses.

Villagomez said WHO annually records nearly four million deaths of children under five years old from severe dehydration due to diarrheal disease. A simple, inexpensive therapy is being used successfully in many countries. "Oral rehydration solution (ORS) has been around for many years, and the workshop convinced me of the great value of the treatment," said Villagomez.

Dehydration from diarrheal disease is especially critical in children because of the smaller body mass. ORS therapy utilizes a solution containing electrolytes, a substance which aids the retention and absorption of body fluids. Electrolytes have been used by athletes for years to avoid dehydration. Such products are available over-the-counter, but Villagomez says ORS is superior to simple electrolyte products.

He said the traditional treatment for diarrhea, especially in western medical practice, is rest, and fluids if the patient is able to accept them. Water, soft drinks, and intravenous solutions (IV) are used to replenish fluids lost during diarrhea and associated vomiting. But the advantage to ORS is twofold.

"ORS is 100 percent more effective over other fluids such as soft drinks in absorption into the body," said Villagomez. "IV's require a set up that costs about $5, whereas a full day's dosage of ORS costs only about 40 cents. I am not down-playing the value of orally taken fluids or IV's, but I am saying ORS therapy is very cost-effective."

Villagomez said two boxes of ORS was recently found at the pharmacy at Dr. Torres Hospital, and doctors and staff have expressed interest in using the treatment. A public education program for using ORS in the home is being planned, and will begin as soon as Public Health staff and medical workers have been trained.

Villagomez said that while on the average only five children die each year from diarrheal disease in the Commonwealth, it is hoped that ORS treatment will reduce that number. No deaths from diarrheal dehydration have been reported in the Northern Marianas since last November, but Villagomez said there have been several "very close" cases.

"When you look at the number of deaths taking place in other countries so close to Saipan, it makes you want to count your blessings and work hard to maintain the good health of the people. We live on a beautiful island, and we want to keep the quality of life and good health at a high point," Villagomez said.

APPLES AND OSBORNES — One of twenty new school system computers waits to be put to use at Marianas High School.

Computers Come To Classrooms

Could a computer speak Chamorro?

Many local high school and college students may be putting that question to the school's system's 20 new computers, as soon as they become proficient in computer terminology. The schools' $42,000 worth of Apple and Osborne brand computers arrived on-island last week from the U.S. mainland.

Are computers needed on Saipan?

"Computers are the most efficient and effective way to handle data," explained computer instructor Brian Millhoff, who holds a master's degree in Computer Education. "More and more small businesses are learning to use computers." Saipan now leads Guam in the field of computer education, he added.

Currently, sixteen students are enrolled in computer courses at Marianas High School, and approximately twenty-five students at the community college will begin computer classes next week. Before students begin using the computers, Millhoff explained, they must first learn computer logic, terminology and hardware. But for now, "everybody's curious," he said, and he may jump into using the Apples and Osbornes a bit early.

At least seven local businesses offices and businesses currently use computers, including Joeten's, Pacific Enterprises, and Herman's Bakery, Millhoff stated. Additionally, at least 12 word processors are in use on Saipan — a computer with a special and specific function.

Could a computer speak Chamorro?

"You could make it write anything you want in English characters," Millhoff clarified, "even Chamorro." But, he added, the Japanese developed a computer that could print their characters only in the past two years.

RULES OF THE ROAD

In passing other vehicles, the law provides that:

You must pass on the left, except when it is impossible to do so because it is blocked, or when the vehicle in front of you has signaled its intent to turn left. Under those exceptions you may pass on the right.

In looking at the illustrated example above you will note that Car A intends to turn left at the intersection, but it must wait until Car C goes through first. Therefore if Car B can do so safely, it may pass on the right. "Safely" under these circumstances means that the driver should have sufficient room to pass on the paved road, and that he use extreme caution to be sure that there are no pedestrians or bicycle riders at the edge of the road.

Of course, you may not pass on the right or the left in an area which is a marked No Passing Zone.

House Minority Seeks Restoration Of District Court Power

A bill which would reinstate the powers of the U.S. District Court on Saipan has been introduced by Representative Gregorio C. Sablan and Vicente M. Sablan, both of Chalan Kanoa.

Under a law passed last June and due to go into effect January 10, 1983, the Commonwealth Trial Court would take over about 90% of the cases now covered by the District Court. Only cases concerning the U.S. Constitution and laws would be tried by the District Court under the new law. This will leave the U.S. District Court with only 10 to 15 cases a year, Clerk of Court John Halaole estimated.

Representative Greg Sablan, whose bill would repeal the new law, explained that he wants power restored to the District Court for several reasons.

"I think people should have access to a fulltime district court," he said. "They should have as many avenues to justice as possible."

Also at stake is the District Court's facilities in a proposed new federal building. With only a minimum of cases each year, it is likely that plans for the $6 to $7 million facility will be halted, Sablan said.

Additional personnel which were to be hired — a clerk and two deputy clerks — will also be unneeded when the new law goes into effect. Those positions are now frozen in anticipation of the reduced caseload.

A reduction of current staff, especially of local residents, is also expected. Sablan also expressed fear that "as a result of Public Law 3-14, there is a move within the Interior and Justice Departments and the Ninth Judicial Circuit to amend the Covenant and to redefine the role of the Northern Marianas District Court. If this move is successful, there would be a precedent for more tampering with the Covenant by federal officials whether the Northern Marianas likes it or not."

The House Committee on Judiciary and Governmental Operations is awaiting opinions from CTC Chief Judge Robert Hefner and District Court Judge Alfred Laureta before making a decision regarding the Sablans' bill.

TAGA HOUSE — An October opening is planned for this combination restaurant/cultural center in San Vicente, where island dancers will entertain locals and tourists.

SEAC Gives Education Priorities

Language arts, math, science and social studies should be given to top priority for federally funded education programs, the Northern Marianas State Education Advisory Council voted recently.

The Council, comprised of over 30 parents and members of the community prioritized their recommendations in a recent letter to Acting Superintendent of Education Agnes McPhetres. The top five include: language arts, "core" subjects (math, science, social studies), vocational education, handicapped programs and library services training.

The subject areas were selected from a list of program areas identified by Roger Ludwick, DOE liaison to SEAC, as federal funding candidates under the Block Grant. However, Council Chairperson David Maratita urged McPhetres to incorporate the priorities into the planning and budgeting of all education programs, whether federally funded or not.

Other subject areas considered, ranked from sixth highest to the least, were: curriculum development, teacher training, advisory council, adult basic education, gifted and talented, value clarification, art and physical education.

Water...

additional booster pump is being installed to put more water into their reservoir.

But Tenorio added that pipelines feeding the Navy Hill tank, and from the tank to the residential area are "in very bad condition." "We're getting quotations and hope we can find funds to replace it with better quality pipe," he said.

Another area with badly deteriorated pipelines is the Dandan housing area, the officials said. "Our water crew is patching up there very regularly," Tenorio noted.

New piping has been ordered and should be here by the end of the month, Pangelinan said. 11,000 linear feet — about two miles — is on order, and installation of the pipes, expected to take 45-50 days, will be contracted to a private company, Pangelinan said. "We're so loaded with work, we (Public Works) don't think we can handle it," he explained.

The new PVC pipelines will replace six-year-old "invasion" pipes usually used by the military for temporary purposes, Tenorio said. The line feeds the San Vicente and hospital areas, where residents have also reported pressure problems, Cabrera noted.

"There's more to go, but we have to tackle the real bad ones first," Tenorio said.

Capitol Hill had experienced low pressure some weeks ago due to leaks in its water tank. Pangelinan said a crack in the seam of the tank was located and repaired, and valves have been replaced to correct the problem.

In total, the wells on island are producing some 3½ million gallons of water daily, Pangelinan said. The amount is down about a million gallons from the expected output with 15 new wells drilled since the water emergency took effect, but still amounts to over 200 gallons per capita daily, he noted. (The U.S. standard for water supply is 150 gallons per person per day, which includes heavy industrial usage.)

Pangelinan noted that while people do have valid complaints about low water pressure, they often erroneously complain that there is "no water." "When we go there, there is water, but not enough pressure," he said.

CHILD ABUSE — BEYOND DISCIPLINE

by C. Ebert-Santos, M.D.

The first public law to deal with child abuse and neglect was passed in the Commonwealth in July. Since then teachers, police, social workers and medical personnel have been attending seminars dealing with this subject. Professional workers who care for children are required by law to report possible cases of abuse and can be fined and jailed if they ignore this responsibility.

Many parents are asking, "Will I be arrested if I spank my child?" This is far from the intention of the law. Children need and expect discipline in order to grow into healthy, law-abiding adults.

However, spanking that consistently leaves bruises, hitting on the face and head, tying a child up or locking a child in a room or closet for many hours will not teach a child to behave. Overly forceful punishment will only teach a child to hate and resent the person inflicting the injury. All disciplining must be done with a spirit of love and not in a fit of rage or temper when the parent loses control.

In the United States, 4,000 children die every year at the hands of abusive parents. Another 6,000 suffer permanent brain damage. The Marianas people are not an exception to these statistics. During the last three months, twelve cases of physical or sexual abuse and 17 cases of neglect have been identified in our islands.

Police or medical personnel report the case to the Department of Youth Services. A social worker investigates the information and finds help for the family involved to prevent recurrence. Few cases go to court and only one or two percent would require permanent placement of the child outside the family.

There are many types of child abuse and neglect. Physical abuse is the most common and is frequently fatal in children less than 6 months old.

Sexual abuse can involve boys as well as girls, with a peak incidence around 11 years of age.

Emotional abuse may leave life-long scars on a child who is threatened, downgraded, lock-up or insulted repeatedly by those he loves most.

Neglect of safety, such as leaving small children unsupervised, can have serious consequences. Medical neglect includes failure to give prescribed medications or inadequate immunization.

Purposely drugging or poisoning a child is often associated with severe psychiatric illness in a parent. Intentionally burning a child with a cigarette or scalding hot water is an unacceptable form of punishment for bad behavior.

Most abusing parents are not mentally ill. They were often themselves abused as children and believe that harsh physical punishment is necessary in raising a child. They are temperamental, with poor impulse control and often alone without emotional support. They may be under financial stress or experiencing marital strife.

The abused child is frequently a demanding, difficult or handicapped boy or girl who taxes the parent's patience and coping skills. Premature babies are three times more likely to be the victims of abuse than full term infants.

By relieving stresses and teaching parents better methods of discipline, social agencies seek to prevent child abuse from recurring and keep the family together. The child abuse law is for everyone's benefit.

Many members of the Chamber were more than a tad bit disappointed with the governor's presentation at their meeting Monday.

"It was a snorefest," stated one.

The governor had been asked a month in advance to be the guest speaker at the Chamber's September meeting, and probably near a record crowd of members showed up for the Oceana House luncheon. The previous Friday the governor had been given a list to discuss of 18 questions and concerns raised by Chamber members, Chamber officials said.

But the presentation given was instead a one-sided, everything's-coming-up-roses story better suited to a group of naive visitors than discerning businessman who live and work on this island. The governor merely glossed over the achievements of each department, borrowing from their six-month reports, without even balancing the picture with problems and issues that remain to be resolved. Is the governor back on the campaign trail only eight months after he took office?

Joe Screen offered the business leaders more insight on their tax situation than did the governor.

But at least Teno promised an open-door policy, so maybe those concerned will get their 18 questions answered yet.

A few months ago a hullabaloo was raised about whose responsibility it is to dispose of dead animals found on the road. The Department of Public Safety was designated the appropriate agency.

Since Monday afternoon, a dead dog has been decomposing on Beach Road Puerto Rico. As if the smells of the dump and the sewer plant in that area aren't bad enough already, now you can catch the pungent vapors of rotting flesh half a mile away if the wind is right (or wrong, depending on how you look at it).

I don't know when the creature was first reported to DPS, but one woman who called in Wednesday was given an answer to the effect of, "Sorry, Ma'am, we only take care of new dead animals." She was told to take her concerns to the Department of Public Health. After getting the classic run-around there, she gave up her crusade.

By Thursday noon a bicyclist who couldn't stand it any longer reported the now bloated, rotting carcass to DPS again. The officer on duty said he hadn't heard of it previously, and didn't exactly promise to take action.

Since when is there a distinction between getting rid of "old dead animals" and "new dead animals"? If anything, the longer the beast has been dead, the sooner it should be disposed of once a report is received.

Late bulletin: By 2:30 p.m. Thursday, the carcass was removed, thanks to a sanitation crew. Word is that the woman who reported it to DPS Wednesday called the Director of Public Health's office, and they put the heat on Sanitation, who finally responded.

It is true that our public schools need a lot of help in subject matters. But I find it unfortunate that physical education was ranked at the very bottom of a list of priorities by an advisory council of parents and community members. Kids need to develop their bodies, too.

Is it any wonder we can scarcely find qualified athletes to send to off-island competition? Athletic skills should be encouraged and developed early in life and throughout a child's growing years — not just a month before a free trip to Samoa, or Fiji, or Hawaii, or Guam.

While WSZE programming is not always exactly my favorite, it would be a loss if the station goes off the air. A community of this size, particularly so far distant and cut off from "the rest of the world," should be able to support and enjoy its own radio station.

Many people can pick up KUAM on their radios, but it doesn't offer local coverage.

KSAI has its reason for being, that of religious programming and community service, but it doesn't offer everything a commercial station does. Advertising, for example.

Unfortunately, rumors are flying that it is the advertisers who have not supported WSZE. Certain large retail outlets on this island are said to owe the station over $5,000 each, and if WSZE manager Angel Ocampo could collect on all the debts, the company could pay off the $30,000 it owes in back rent.

Which would seem to be the solution to the current dilemma. How about it, WSZE creditors?

'Essential Air Service' Discussed

Representatives of air carriers, American Pacific island governments and federal agencies met on Guam last week to discuss the meaning of "essential air service" for the region.

The two-day workshop was called by the Pacific Basin Development Council in response to a new federal law directing the Council to submit recommendations to the Civil Aeronautics Board for changes in "essential air service" definitions, according to Ramon S. Guerrero, the NMI representative at the session.

In the think session, the group came up with several factors to include in EAS requirements. Among the topics suggested were passenger and cargo configurations and capacity, air carrier economics/markets, emergency services, financial capability/subsidy concept, mail capacity and regional hub factor for U.S. access, Guerrero listed.

Guerrero said each of the island governments involved — Guam, American Samoa, Hawaii and the NMI — will submit its EAS proposal to PBDC by Oct. 21. The PBDC will meet again on Saipan in mid-November, and a final stage of discussions will be held in Honolulu on Dec. 7.

Zeder...

of the Office of Territorial Affairs expressed optimism that the draft Compact of Free Association could be put to a vote in the Marshalls, Palau and FSM in the near future, possibly early next year.

In fact, Zeder has reached agreement with Palau on the ballot language to be used in the plebiscite on free association. The same language has been proposed to the Marshalls and will be discussed with the FSM in the Hawaii meetings.

According to Zeder, the ballot would offer the voter a choice of "yes" or "no" on free association. If the voter votes "no", he would then be required to vote to instruct his government to negotiate with the U.S. for either independence or closer ties with the United States.

Asked about a possible veto by the Soviet Union in the Security Council where Micronesia's political future will eventually be decided, Zeder downplayed any possibility of a Russian veto of the Covenant or the Compacts.

"I am not anticipating any problem at the United Nations," he stated.

Zeder said under the Compact, the Micronesians would get their money up front at the start of each year.

Zeder repeated that the U.S. would not discuss the Kwajalein problem with the Marshalls until the occupation by Marshallese landowners has ended.

Drunk Drivers Net Stiff Sentences

A man charged with drunken driving who refused to take the breathalyzer test wound up with a stiff sentence from Judge Herbert Soll.

Stopped by police for reckless driving around midnight Aug. 27, Roque A. Santos, 22, of Navy Hill, refused to take the test which measures a person's blood alcohol level, traffic prosecutor Tim Bellas said. Police had asked him to take the test when they smelled alcohol on his breath. By law, if a person refuses to take the test and an affidavit is filed in court, the judge has the right to revoke the person's drivers license for six months, Bellas explained.

On Sept. 10, Santos pleaded guilty to driving under the influence of alcohol. Judge Soll sentenced him to two days in jail to be followed by a year's probation, suspended his drivers' license for six months and fined him $150. A reckless driving charge was dropped.

He had allegedly pulled out in front of an off-duty policeman who narrowly avoided an accident and then chased Santos as he passed a number of vehicles at one time. A marked police car then took up the chase and stopped Santos.

In another DUI case, 62-year-old Jesus S. Taisacan of San Antonio, whose blood alcohol level read a high 0.25 upon his arrest, was sentenced by Judge Soll on Sept. 9 to 30 days in jail suspended for one year, 20 hours of community service and revocation of his driver's license.

16 Complete Japanese Courses

Sixteen local students completed a twelve week course of study in the Japanese language last week, and a graduation ceremony was held at the Hyatt Regency on Saturday, Sept. 11. The group was the first to complete a course of study with the newly-formed "Saipan Language Center".

"Language is a thing that is accomplished over a period of a lifetime," SLC founder Joe Hill explained in his remarks to the guests and graduates. The hour long ceremony was highlighted by comments from Lt. Gov. Pete A. Tenorio, Monsignor Thomas Camacho, and local education and business officials.

The center employs three native Japanese teachers. The course graduates and their sponsoring agencies are:

THE LOST HAS BEEN FOUND

Acting Head of Library Services Ruth Tighe stands before a mountain of books that she purchased last January from a Kentucky school system. The system was closing its doors, and Tighe couldn't resist a bargain: she bought the 28,000 books for less than 10 cents a volume. Though lost for a while upon their arrival, the 64<sup>1</sup> boxes were eventually located and are now housed in the Education Department's Lower Base warehouse. Lots of Saturdays will be needed to unpack, sort, catalog, and deliver the books to each of the school system's libraries. Tighe added that books will also be donated to the Mt. Carmel and Municipal libraries.

Odyssey of a modern-day canoe

The mission of Mobil's chartered tanker "Micronesia Sunrise" is to ensure availability of essential petroleum products in Micronesia when needed. Like the canoes of long ago, the "Micronesia Sunrise" travels the waters of Micronesia providing a vital link among island groups. From its Guam loading port, the 5,000 ton steel canoe delivers its cargo to Mobil's ten bulk storage plants (Majuro, Palau, Ponape, Saipan, Truk, Yap, Ebeye, Kosrae, Rota and Tinian) strategically located throughout the islands. These bulk plants in turn distribute the energy needed by Micronesians to light and cool their homes, cook their food, and power their air, land and sea transportation. The "Micronesia Sunrise" odyssey is a symbol of Mobil's commitment to supply the energy needs of Micronesia.
