THE NEW WORLD.

That charming syndicate writer Frank G. Carpenter has given to the American press a two-column tale on "Money Making in Asia." He has been out in the Orient since before the war opened. His account of the industrial and commercial possibilities of China, Japan and Korea has the thrill of a romance. The facts presented and the conclusions deduced, in their operation cannot but effect Hawaii, which is on the highway between the United States and the New World.

Mr. Carpenter rather thinks Japan the more inviting field. He says the payment of the indemnity by China will especially boom Tokyo and cities. The marvelous growth of Berlin after the French made a financial settlement with the Prussians. He is certain that in Tokyo all prices will go up and that millions may be made out of real estate alone. The Japanese have their stock exchange, and their waterworks, stock, their railroad stocks and their other stocks are regularly quoted in the newspapers. Many of the companies have been paying big dividends, and this is especially so of the banks. Tokyo has already 1,000,000 people. It is without electric railways and Yokohama, only fourteen miles away, through a thickly settled country, has no street car lines at all. When Commodore Perry went to Japan he found Yokohama a fishing village. Now it has 1,000,000 people, water works, gas and newspapers. Osaka has 1,200,000 people and no electric railway.

While Japan is the country favored by war, Mr. Carpenter, more on account of the conservatism of the Chinese, figures the possibilities of China to be even greater. There are comparatively very few foreigners in China. The end of the war finally will witness the inauguration of a period of military activity. There will be new gun works and a new navy is to be built. The Chinese need steam and electric railways, telegraphs, telephones and electric lights. They scarcely know these as yet. Peking has 1,500,000 people and Tientsin, 1,000,000 and there is not a street car line in either place. Cotton is a great staple in China. Everybody wears it. There are no flour mills in China. Labor is very, very cheap in that country and vast fortunes are to be made from its use.

BRING a picnic people, averse to war, remarks a Chicago writer, Americans have always had a weakness for a soldier President, and all other things being equal, most conventions would prefer a candidate who had served with the colors to a lawyer or a mere politician.

A MELBOURNE parson objected to his boys frequenting public billiard-rooms, but kept a table for them under the parental roof. One Sunday morning, just before church time, he told the young men he would have to take the table from them, as he heard they were in the habit of betting. "Well, father," said one of the boys, "if that is so we must have no sermon in church this morning, because just as you spoke to us we were arranging a bet whether you would preach 40 minutes or 35." Showing that if there is a disposition to bet, the means will be found, even outside billiard tables and horse-racing.

Timely Topics.

June 3, 1895.

In all the accounts of the explosion of the powder mills near Berkeley it is gravely stated there is no explanation of the cause. The chances are that this information was taken hence by one of the fifteen men torn to shreds and blown to atoms by the concussion. People in the powder manufacturing business calculate on their establishments being partially or wholly wrecked by explosions once every eighteen months. The men who work about these places are in the most reckless daredevil in any legitimate business. They take desperate chances and get big pay. Their only obituary is a bad picture in the papers and a line telling that the cross marks the spot where the head was found. And by the way how about moving the Government powder magazine, which is a menace to life and property? In St. Louis one time a powder mill went up. Half a score of men were hoisted, but escaped without serious injury. The superintendent docked them for the time used in the air and recovering from the shock. He was mean as the mule-train freighting magnate who charged the men for ammunition they used in repelling an attack by Indians.

What a grand field Formosa is just now for those who have mastered the trade of statesmanship. On that island there are 2,000,000 people and a republic is proposed for them. Perhaps 100,000 have an indistinct idea of what a republic is like. About nineteen-twentieths of the remainder don't care and the other twentieth is ready for any excitement or adventure. But it is a rich country. The Chinese have undertaken to deliver it to Japan and must turn it over in good order. Perhaps Japan will assist in the repairs. Perhaps Russia and a few other countries, both interested and disinterested will say: "A republic is a sacred thing and all hands must be kept off." Then Japan will get mad. The prospects for a pretty big racket of some sort are very good indeed. It is a peculiar spectacle afforded in all the heavy guns of the silver forty oratorical battery in use in Colorado, Nevada and other white metal States. Why don't their managers send them to people wanting to be convinced?

We propose to talk about lamps this week. Coal oil lamps of every conceivable sort and description.

We will start at the entrance of your house. Does your hall have a hanging lamp, or a lamp of any kind to brighten it up evenings and make it agreeable for your guests and family? Our hall lamps are beautifully made, the nicest kind have B & H burners improved. One of our hanging lamps ought to suit you even if you are very fastidious. If your hall is a large one you need a chandelier with two or more lights. We have some very unique designs and late styles, with Bradley & Hubbard tones. They are in enameled brass and hammered iron. All sorts of pretty globes and shades go with the hall lamps and chandeliers.

When you reach the parlor or drawing room you must have a lamp there. For a large room one of the chandeliers is needed and for one smaller a tasty and neat hanging lamp. Our banquet and stand lamps are also very attractive. These stands are trimmed in brass, nickel, plated and hammered iron, are in many designs of glass, and China, and have detachable founts and with the improved B & H burner. Speaking of this new burner—in lighting the lamp you simply push up part of the burner, raising chimney without smearing the polished glass with your moist fingers; and should the lamp blow out you are not obliged to wait until it is cool to prevent burning your fingers.

Have a piano you must have a lamp to go with it. Either the stand lamp we have just spoken of or a regular piano lamp, is the thing. The piano lamp is of various designs and resting on an extension of the piano, it is raised and lowered. To go with the stand and piano lamps we have some of the prettiest silk shades you ever saw. The colors are pleasing; they are made in many shapes and daintily trimmed with line lace, making the lamps when finished with one of these shades one of the most attractive features of a room.

For the dining room we have the banquet lamp and you can use some of the same designs as for the drawing room in hanging lamps and chandeliers. After talking so much about our elegant lamp fixtures, we do not wish to slight the old reliable Rochester lamp in brass and nickel. These lamps have been so long before the people that they have become one of the household words and as we always keep a large stock we can suit you in any pattern.

Have you bought a set of the Clausen bread and cake knives yet, we have told you about them often and you must know that they are indispensable articles in the kitchen and dining room.

Hawian Electric Company.

The cleanest, brightest and really, in the long run, the cheapest and best light for use in the family residence, is the incandescent electric light. Safe, nothing could be safer. A few days ago a prominent gentleman of Honolulu came rushing down to the office of the Electric Company and said: "Give me figures for wiring my house, and I will give you a new lamp for me. Last night a lamp tipped over and it came so near setting fire to the house and burning my children and I take no more risks."

This is the sentiment of quite a number in the past few weeks, who have ordered their houses fitted with the perfect light. Just think it over and make up your mind that you want the best and safest light; and for the Hawaiian Electric Company and tell them what you want.

We have a complete stock of everything in this line and have just received a lot of the very latest designs in chandeliers.

NEW GOODS.

We ought not to say anything about our new goods just yet as we have received so many the past 30 days that we have not had time to room to store them. However, we have had another story added to our King street warehouse, added largely to our back yard warehouse, and rented a new one on the Esplanade, and granded a little time we will have everything put away in shape, and be ready to sell you a great many things in our different lines, and all at very close figures.

Our MANILA ROPE from New Bedford is an article we were glad to get, as we had run short, and still the demand kept up. Woodbury Duck goes often with rope and by the "Helen Brewer" we received every size from No. 0 to No. 10. Nails all going up. "All previous quotations withdrawn" is the latest word we have from the United States. We had a good lot per "Brewer" and wish we had had more. Plenty 30 in. and 38 in. REVOLVING ROAD SCRAPERS in stock again. Our HAND SEWING MACHINE have also come, though not to stay, as they began to move off as soon as a case was unpacked, and each one that goes out sells a few more, such a stock of WOOD SCREWS, CARriage BOLTS, MACHINE BOLTS, PIPE and PIPE FITTINGS, we never had before and we have had to build new racks all through for these articles. ## THE AMERICAN GIRL.

WARD MALLISTER WRITES OF HER AS SHE IS IN NEW YORK.

She Says She Learned to Be Self-Reliant, While English Girls Are Slaves of Their Mothers—No Girl in This Country Has to Marry to Be Free From Home Dependence.

I have often been asked whether knowledge or ignorance is more beneficial to young women. As far as regards the self supporting class of women, I should most decidedly answer that it is better that she should know. Knowledge of life causes them to value themselves. They quickly acquire the ability to distinguish the right from the wrong, and their parents are thus enabled to trust them anywhere. Circumstances fortify this knowledge on our self supporting women.

There is probably no woman in any civilized country better able to take care of herself than the American. As a rule, she may be a little too eager to advance herself, for if nature has blessed her with good looks, she may be sure that she is fully aware of it, and will make the most of this rare gift. In this city, at least once a week, usually on Saturday afternoon, she makes it her business to appear, well dressed, on one of the principal streets and attract the attention of the passer-by. Our young men, who are not slow to appreciate a pretty girl, are sure to take her in and over after keep on the lookout for her.

She thus learns how to stand the fire of the gaze of a crowd in search of just such beauty as she possesses. She then takes her first lesson in expiating a man, and her half of life begins to count. She goes into the fight single handed, as to mother or chaperon accompanies her. It is remarkable what wonderful results she accomplishes. Provided only with such stock in trade as she has acquired before leaving her mother's arms, she in most cases secures a fitting companion for life.

A girl of this sort, born and brought up in this country, possesses of such an intuitive knowledge of the world and of man that the complete liberty of action allowed her is her safeguard, as it makes her wholly self-reliant. In some cases the self supporting girl is better off than the young society woman, for this same self-reliance and knowledge of right and wrong carries her safely over the pitfalls of life.

To deny absolute freedom to young women will do in England, or rather it has done up to date, but it will not work in this country. English writers now tell us that their girls, like ours, must be trusted. Emerson says that self respect and self-reliance in young women are the master keys to their lives. As to the liberty given young women of fashion, an English author tells us, "Two in a house must entirely sympathize, or one must rule." In England the mother is always the head of the house, but with us, from the hour when the fashionable daughter makes her debut into society, the head of that house is the daughter.

In some cases the mother is actually in the way of the daughter, who feels that her parents, having had their day, should now permit her to take charge of affairs. In some cases the daughter is jealous of the mother, for it not infrequently happens that the mother not only looks young, but is young. She cannot help it. She cannot help being merry and gay as long as her constitution is sound and her complexion provokingly clear. The daughter feels that she must be crowded out and made only a dandelion in the household.

But here she should remember that fair and 40 is often preferred to half baked 18. When the American young woman does not care to marry, but prefers to be independent, it often complicates matters. In England a girl rarely enters into matrimony in order that she may have a good time. In this country our young women do like to marry early, because the gay period of their lives comes to them when they are young girls. In old times, before the war was done mostly before marriage, but as our women become more Europeanized they prefer to marry later, to this delightful accomplishment.

We utilize our children and do not hesitate to make any sacrifice for them. In the summer a mother goes to Europe with the daughter to place her in the mother's hands, while the father is left to encounter the heat in a half shut up house, with usually one domestic to look after him. A man and his wife may have had a large circle of devoted friends. Their daughter, on coming out, finds them all intolerable bore, and at once seeks substitutes for them in gay and more fashionable people.

A man or woman of middle age rarely makes new friends. But for the sake of their daughter they are willing to abandon the friendships of a lifetime and substitute acquaintances. A man is often driven from the home of his own dinner table to see some empty headed numskull replace him there. The numskull is one of the gay young persons with whom the daughter wishes to surround her father's table, for they feel that they do not have the restraint imposed by middle age.

Fortunately no girl in this country need plunge into matrimony or make a loveless marriage of convenience to free herself from the restrictions of home life, as there are none. English writers tell us that in England a young girl cannot walk the length of two or three streets to visit a friend without a maid as an attendant. She cannot take an early stroll in the park without a domestic walking gloomily by her side, while, on the other hand, the young married woman walks through the streets alone and drive in a hansom alone.

The revolt of the daughters in England is now a fixed fact. It is a struggle against a bondage which they declare enslaves the whole race. In other words, it is a strike for that liberty and independence which our American young women enjoy. The young English woman in the past was loathed to her parents. Our American girl feels that she belongs to herself. In the past other people have looked for the English girl her destinies; now she asks that she may decide them for herself. The American girl quietly does it without peevishness or anybody.—Ward Mallister in New York World.

The Bill Was Long Enough.

A lawyer tells the following story concerning a client, something of a way in his way, with whom he had long kept an account. When the latter was finally made up, the lawyer, for trifling services, covered several yards of foolscap, as the lions enumerated the most minute details. When the client came round to settle, he refused to enter the office, but stood in the door, holding one end of the bill unrolled the voluminous document in the direction of his legal adviser, with the request that he would receipt it. "Come in," said the lawyer in his most genial tones.

"You'd charge me now if I did," said the client.

"No," replied the lawyer, "I'd charge you now if I did."—The Bill.

ITS TOO HOT To Advertise

Anything but SODA.

We know its just about as hot up in the valleys, where pineapples and strawberries grow, because those from whom we get these delicious fruits tell us so.

You can't get a fresh crushed Strawberry or Pineapple Ice Cream Soda in the valleys either.

When you want a glass of Soda, made exactly right, with lots of snap and vim in it, you don't go to the valleys to get it.

You know some firms lay undue stress on their antiquity. This brings some trade, perhaps, and again, may frighten the wary customer, especially so in regard to soda.

We would rather have the reputation of being established yesterday, among our soda patrons. This fact would insure freshness, at least.

When soda is made right, flavored with fruits juices, there's lots of pleasure and good health in it. We use fresh crushed fruits when in season, and when the fresh fruit cannot be procured, fruit juices.

Nor harm in any amount of our soda.
