VAII MOURNS FOR IUOKALANI PASSES TO

All Hawaii mourns today, for Liliuokalani, last Queen of the Island Kingdom, lies dead at Washington Place. The end came to the aged woman, former ruler of Hawaii, at eight-thirty o'clock Sunday morning. had been almost momentarily expected since Thursday evening, but the strong vitality of the Queen drove it back time and again, and even after she had more than once been thought to have passed on, she rallied and greeted the watchers who surrounded her.

The funeral of Liliuokalani will be held next Sunday from the Throne Room of the Capitol, which was formerly her home and palace. The body, after tonight, will lie in state in Kawaiahao Church until Saturday, when it will be removed to the Throne Room.

The bells of Kawaiahao Church and St. Andrew's Cathedral announced to the city Sunday morning the passing of the Queen, and the flags throughout the city were dropped to half-mast. Formal announcement of the death was issued by Curtis P. laukea, private secretary to the Queen, in accordance with former royal custom.

On behalf of the visiting Congressional party, Senator Ashurst, who remained behind when the others of the party left for Hawaii Saturday, called Sunday morning, as representative of the party, to offer his condolences.

Washington Place's own signal of the death was the hoisting of the Queen's royal standard at half mast upon the tall white flag-staff. As it reached its appointed position the creamy folds of the ensign caught the breeze lazily, revealing the design of the crown in red in the center. For an instant the folds stiffened to the breeze then drooped to the staff.

Throughout the night the same constant vigil had been maintained by chiefesses and attendants, watching the form so belover and from whose frail body the life was slowly ebbing, that had been kept since Thursday. In that dimity lighted chamber, hour by hour those in attendance cased the body of the monarch, chafed the hands when circulation seemed to have halted and renewed the laint had a true poise, the heart years carely perceptible. The dominant will of the once strong woman, strong mentally, strong physically, surged against the compelling ebb and quickened the life for an instant, but little by little the battle grew fainter and as the hours slowly moved and the eastern skies grew gray and then became tinted by the sun's early glory, the thread of life grew thinner, but there was no breaking. Its strands were severed one by one until the final one parted, almost imperceptibly. The heart had pressed the interpretation of the final moments of another queen, ran out and the light paled and flickered and was snuffed out. The Queen was dead—the last of the long line of rulers that for centuries had been sovereigns of the Hawaiis. Royalty was indeed dead, the title dying forever that had been carried by courtesy for nearly a quarter of a century after the scepter had been taken from her hand and the crown removed from her head.

ATTENDANTS MOUEN

There were those in the chamber of death, where royal kahilis slowly, rythmically were coaselessly waved over the frail form, who had grown up in the scintillating splender of the royal courts of Kalakana and the Liliuckalani. They bowed their heads as the meaning of the death was understood, the passing of the last claimant to the throne of her forefathers.

At the bedside, kneeling upon the carpet, two old women crouched, silent and devoted, at the side of the woman to whom all the world, decades before, had been bright and the future wrapped in the mystery which refused to reveal the tragedy to come into her life. They had entered her service young and were in it, old, watchful to the last. They were dry-eyed for the loss had been known to them for months and months.

The physician had watched the flual operations of life with the certain knowledge of the dissolution to come, for hours before he had seen the signs of the approaching shadow of death. At midnight the physician pronounced the end near—a matter of a few hours. The watchers saw little change even as daylight entered the silent chamber, and then suddenly the change that all so dreaded came. The breathing became shorter; the pulse became almost still; the immediate relatives and closest friends were summoned. Hardly were they within the room before death laid a cold hand upon her—Li/iuokalani was dead.

It was exactly half near eight when the physician aunonoused the close of

BELLS TOLL FOR QUEEN

It was exactly half-past eight when the physician announced the close of Liliuokalani's earthly career. Colonel Iaukes passed the sad news to Rev. Leopold Kroll of St. Androw's cathedral, who had been waiting for the summons through the night and the slow tolling of the cathedral bell told the outside world that the former monarch had been gathered to her forefathers. Then the bell of Kawaiahao joined its deep-toned announcement.

Pollowing the raising of the royal standard to half-mast before Washington Place, the American Plag over the Capitol was similarly raised and the Hawaiian flag half-masted upon the staff of the old palace nearest Washington Place. Soon that over the Armory was half-masted and then over the Judiciary building, while down town many flags were lowered out of respect to the former ruler. The huge Hawaiian flag of Prince Kalanianaole was half masted over the Kapiolani building.

Soon came many Hawaiian men, chiefs of the old regime, prepared to d Boon came many Hawaiian men, chiefs of the old regime, prepared to do their duty according to the picturesque and solemn customs prevailing among the Hawaiians with respect to their aliis. Among these were Henry F. Bertleman, who was a major upon the military staff of the Queen and of Kalakaua before her; David Hoopili, Jr., descendent of a famous warrior high chief; Jesse Makainai, Judge Hookano, John K. Kamanoulu, William Brede, James F. Holt, Fred W. Beckley, William Ahia, John H. Wilson, son of the Queen's marshal during her reign, and Edmand Stile, a time-honored friend.

Among the women who had held the long vigil of the night were several who had been prominent at the royal courts of Kalakaua and Idiiuokalani.

BODY TO LIE IN STATE

To these and to many others will be delegated the solemn task of selecting, groups of watchers and kahili bearers, for when the body has been embalmed it will lie in state, when the outward pomp of the ceremonies will commence.

The body will be embalmed by this morning and from then on until midnight the watchers will be those from Washington Place and the women who have been frequently calling at the home during the past four days.

Tonight, probably, but not earlier than nine o'clock, the remains of the queen will be conveyed from Washington Place to Kawaiahao Church and formally placed to lie in state. Immediately watchers, four at a side, each with i feather kahili, under a chief watcher, will take their places and remain silent during the two hours they ceremoniously wave the kahilis over the dead Queen. They will be replaced by another octette of watchers and so on through the night and the next day and for the entire week's period. Many will chant, many will sing dirges—but in all it will be the beautiful ear-haunting melodies of Hawaii, and music made more sad by the solemnity of the occasion.

ASK HAWAIIANS TO COME

ASK HAWAIIANS TO COME

Prince Kalanianacle expressed the wish yesterday that all Hawaiians come to see their former Queen and that all Hawaiian societies participate in the obsequies and the funeral march to the royal cemetery in Numanu Valley where rest the members of all her family who have gone before. Many heads of societies cailed upon the Prince yesterday and announced that their societies would turn out and also supply watchers and kahili bearers.

The transfer of the remains from Kawaiahao church next flaturday night to Iolani Palace, now the executive building, will follow the ancient custom, and may be as full of pageantry as when the remains of other rulers were given this honor. The casket will be borne from church to palace amid kahilis which was the emblem of her ancestors, and in the glare of kukui nut torches, the hearers of kahilis and the chiefs wearing their brilliant feather alnulas, symbols of their rank.

In the throne room the body will lie in state until possibly noon when the scal cortege will be arranged and the final journey start for Neusau. The ty will not be placed in the Mausoleum, but will be consigned to its niche in Kalakana dynasty tomb which was prepared for it years ago. It will be only body of the dynasty which has not first rested in the Mausoleum.

BERGER COMPOSING DIRGE For this occasion Captain Henry Berger, for forty-four years leader of the Royal Hawaiian Band, is composing a dirge, "The Lilinokalani Funeral March," which will be played while the remains are lying in state at Kawaiahao Church, and when the funeral cortege passes to the cenetery on Sunday. Captain Berger composed funeral marches for Lunalilo, Queen Kaptolani, Queen Emma, King Kalakaua, Prince David Hawananakoa and is now doing his duty again for the sovereign for whom he always expressed deep reverence. He directed the band when it played for monarchs going to their last rest, and for new monarchs as they assumed the crown he composed brilliant marches.

The hope has also been expressed by both Prince Kalaniananole and Colonian Indica, who has charge of all funeral arrangements, that mourning continue to be worn by the people of Hawaii for at least three weeks after the funeral.

The funeral will partike of a state funeral in many respects, for the Gevernor has already proclaimed, officially, the death of Her Majesty, and expressed the hope that all the people of Hawaii would join in the ceremonies attendant upon her final disposition; that flags be half-masted and the proper military guards perform their duty, that the obsequies will be official in their nature as a last tribute by the Hawaiian government to one who once was its ruler.

It was in her childhood that Liliue kalani met her future husband, John O. Dominis, son of an American sea captain. A day school for children was established by a Mr. and Mrs. Johnston next to the Royal School. A high adobe fence separated the yards of the School would climb the fence and peer over at the royal children. But the influence of the white man soon set to ork and even Kamehameha I by som duty toward his subjects that generally held in restraint his unlimited power. This same influence had its effect on other chiefs and rulers. They were anxious to learn the manners, customs,

First Constitution First Constitution

It remained for Kamehameha III to promulgate the 'First Constitution of Hawaii,' October 8, 1840. Thereafter the growth of constitutional government was rapid. The constitution contained a declaration of rights; freedom of religion was declared; the right of redress for personal injuries and trial to establish guilt were declared; the prerogatives of the King were set forth; a legislature with two houses and a supreme court were established supreme court were established and the importance of education was recognized. Following this a complete and exhaustive code of laws was en-acted including one that changed the and-holding system from feudal to m ern conditions. Minister Willis arrived in Honolulu
November 4. He obtained with difficulty Queen Liliuokalani's consent to grant amnesty to the heads of the Pro-cisional Government. On December 9, 1803, he made formal demand on he Provisional Government for the restoration of Queen Liliuokalani. The provisional authorities refused to listen on the demand.

On December 23, President Dole sent the reply of his government to Minister Willis, refusing to surrender its authority to Liliuokalani, the deposed Queen. Willis reported the situation to President dent Cleveland who in turn referred the matter "to the wider discretion of congress." There was little sympathy in congress with the restoration propo-sition, and a committee of the senate, under Democratic control, after investigation, repudinted the Blount report and reached a conclusion adverse to the President's recommendation. Death Is Announced

It becomes my melancholy duty to announce the death of Her Majesty Liliuokalani, of Hawaii, which sad event occurred at Washington Place, Honolulu, on the morning of November 11, 1917, at 8:30 o'clock,

The body will lie in state at Kawaiahao Church until Saturday night, when it will be removed to the Throne Room of the Capitol, where the obsequies will be held on Sunday,

> CURTIS P. IAUKEA, Her Majesty's Private Secretary.

HAWAII MOURNS QUEEN

It is with profound sadness the Governor of Hawali announces the death of Her Majesty Ex-Queen Liliuokalani, the last reigning monarch of the Hawaiian Islands.

I have been a witness of some of her sorrows. I have found her tender and kind to her own race, thoughtful and helpful to others and a valued and appreciative friend. Her last days have been devoted to aiding the Red Cross work with marked sympathy and liberal financial assistance.

Her Majesty has linked more strongly than ever, the Hawaiian and American races, who will join each other in paying their respects in this her final rest.

May all the people of Hawaii join in these last ceremonies. The Hawaiian and American flags on public buildings will be at half-mast during the time of the lying in state and proper military guards perform their duty.

LUCIUS E. PINKHAM.

HOOVER EXPLAINS WHY BELGIANS HAVE TO HUNGER

There is No Shortage of Funds As Has Been Alleged But Ship Shortage and Teuton Submarines Are Blamed As Causes

WASHINGTON, November 11-(As sociated Press)-Explanation, of the RETAIL FIGURES MAY BE present food shortage in Belgium was insued by Herbert C. Hoover yesterday

"There is no shortage of funds for the relief of the Belgians and so far as the money question goes it does not enter into the consideration. The funds are available," said Hoover, "The trouble is the lack of available shipping facilities and the submarine peril," he explained.

Four hundred thousand tons of visions for Belgium were delivered Rotterdam between the first day of February and the last day of October, Hoover explains. In addition to this 250,000 tons of food was shipped which has not reached its destination. This non-arrival is due either to the destruction of the vessel that was car rying it by a Teuton torpedo sent from a ruthless submarine or lumbility from other cause to make the delivery through the war sone. It is purely the shipping situation that has ranged and is causing a shortage of food in Belgium. It is the work of the Germans that prevents the United States from sending in all that the Belgians could wall require.

well require. The cost of the relief that is being afforded to Belgium or which the United States seeks to afferd amounts to twelve and a half millions of do lars each month, Hoover asserts.

This is in line with the policies praclacd on the mainland, where the food ommissioners in several states have already started to publish a daily built-tin of prices in the newspapers. Cali-fornia is doing this under the direction of Ralph P. Merritt, federal food controller for that state. The California anthorities publish the whole-ale prices only, as they believe that a knowledge of the price paid by the retailer will bid the consumer in refusing to pay an unjust price for his commodities.

In Chicago, where the publication system is already in force, wholesale rices are published with the selling rices following them for the guidance of the buyers. A scale of prices is given for the consumer, with the state ment that he should not pay less than the lowest or more than the high est. This is done in the effort to be fair to all. Some retailers have higher overhead charges through rendering more elaborate service and those whose overhead is less can sell goods at the lower price. May Publish Retail Prices

If it is found feasible after more horough investigation, Child will publish both wholesale and retail prices in his daily bulletin. He may publish the actual prices paid by merchants for the commodity in question and follow it with the prices asked by local mer chants instead of endeavoring to pub lish the prices which should be asked in fairness to the public and the mershanf. In this way the public can be the judge as to whether too fuch is eing asked for food materials. then me in their own hands to decide whether to buy at that price or to insist that the merchant lower his price until in their judgement it approximates fair price for the article in question comparison with the wholesale value.

Kausi Deeply Interested Recently the matter of homesteadands with the Congressional party, and ing public lands has come in for much A public mass for the new departure until his return of the chamber of commerce and the question was further discussed and resolutions were passed. The contention there is that homestending has saible daily statements of prices can be be even in the face of the difficulties gun on December 1. which the territorial government has placed in the way of settlers. There, if not before, the chances are, the national legislators will hear something of the homestead laws as they apply to the Territory and the policies of the present territorial government in dealing with the problem.
Officials Disapprove Laws

The present administration of ter-ritorial affairs has made it clear that does not approve of the regulations of the present homesteading laws. Even within the last few months the emmissioner of public lands went to Washington to get changes in the law such as the administration desires, notvithstanding that the legislature fused to approve of such changes. Not approving of the law the local govrament has seen fit, so far as it been able, to ignore provisions of that law so far as it could and lands for the opening of which petitions were filed accordince with the law are still closed to homesteading. Not only are there instances of this on Kauai but the Big Islanders can point to sev-eral. All of the Islands are more or less affected by the stand-pat, do-nothing policy that has been continued. Lands are Valuable

It is estimated that the public lands of the Territory are worth more than $9,000,000. The administration claims that under the present homesteading law the Territory will not realize what should and that homesteading has been a failure anyway. The would-be homesteaders point to the fact that the lands opened have not been of the best and most desirable type for agriulture, that despite this, homesteading s a proved success, that if opened and comestended, the improvements and he increased value will bring to the Perritory in increased valuations and righer taxes more than is secured brough lessing and that even if the idministration does not approve of the law, it is written on the statute books and is to be followed until it has been shanged, even if leasing be considered

Homesteading came in for considration at the last session of the legisature in the form of a resolution which sked congress to amend the Organic Act so as to provide for a land comnission and otherwise. This resolution cassed the senate and was killed in he house. It was after this that and Commissioner Rivenburgh took he matter up in the national capital.

As the leases on public lands are exuore and more pressing so long as presat policies are continued.

HOMESTEAD NEEDS E. D. TENNEY SAYS ISLAND SHIPPING

May Be Necessary To Dispense With Many Nonessentials Hawaii Is Receiving From Coast

Transportation needs of the Territory will be eared for as satisfactorily as can be expected at this time when the world is engaged in a conflict the success of which vitally affects every nation, and which has disarranged the steamer schedules of every port of the United States. While it may be neessury to dispense with some of the nonementials which the Islands are now receiving from the mainland. President E. D. Tenney, president of the Matson Navigation Company, be-lieves in general that the transporta-tion needs of the Islands will be cared for, not with such clock-like regularity us in the past, but in a manner which will be satisfactory to its citizens, in view of the world conditions now pre vailing.

Mr. Tenney's, signed statement fol

Ask For Tonnage List "On October 18 the San Francisco representative of the Shipping Board received instructions from Washington o promptly ascertain the earliest dates upon which the Matson steamers Maui Matsonia, Wilhelmina, Manoa and Lurline could be despatched to Atlantic ports, they to replace them with ex-Ger man and coastwise tonnage. The situation was carefully canvassed, a list of available tonnage to replace com-piled, and the board was advised that the steamers could be despatched to the Affaulte or or about the following dates: Matsonin, December 1, 1917e Maui, December 15: Wilhelmina, Janu-try 1: Manon and Lurline in February and March, 1918. Need Ships Now

"No reply was received to this mes-Francisco representative received imperative orders to despatch the Maui Matsonia and Withelmina to Atlantic ports at the earliest possible date, and o replace them with coastwise tonnage as far as possible. "After conferring with representatives of the Matson Navigation Com pany and Pacific Coast Steamship Company he decided to take possession of the Maus on November 10, Matsonia on November 26, and Wilhelmina on December 2, and arrangements were made posal of the Matson Navigation Comernor, to be operated on the schedules of the Matsonia and Maui, in order that the passenger traffic might be taken care of, tonnage to replace the freighting space lost to be designated

Needs To Be Satisfied Throughout all these negotiations assurances have been given to the company that the freighting requirements of Hawaii would be taken care of, that the United States government and its shipping Board were thoroughly familar with the needs and requirements of he Islands, and that ample tonnage would be provided to move our crops and furnish us our supplies. This as-surance covers all necessities, and it was specifically stated that a large tanker of a capacity sufficient to reof the Matson steamers would be furnished to bring fuel oil. Island Friends Working

"The general public may rest assured that everything possible is being done to insure our transportation needs being cared for. The Islands have several very powerful friends who are serving on government boards in Washington who are taking time from their multitudinous duties to keep in touch with the transportation situation, and do what they can to insure our protec-tion. It may be that we will have to dispense with some of the nonessentials, but I believe that in general the trans-portation needs of the Territory will be sared for, not with such clock-like regularity as in the past, but in a manner which should be satisfactory to its citizens, in view of the world conditions now prevailing. The more hopeful expressed the belief that Kerensky would soon be found in full control of the Russian situation

KERENSKY ACTIVE Kerensky is working steadily and with at least some degree of success to hold the army, was told in a despatch from Petrograd received in London and forwarded here. There are known to be troops that are loyal to the Kerensky regime near Petrograd and a division of Cossack troops is marching in from Finland.

The unstability of the Petrograd garrison, faithful to one then to another and then faithless is shown by the closing words of the despatch which said: "The Petrograd garrison, once solid in its support of the new Maximilist government is now uncertain and is wavering in its allegiance." These messages are taken to inlicate that even in Petrograd the 'Peace Government' is not so strong as had been reported and that its stability is very uncertain.

IMMEDIATE PEACE FOREMOST AMONG RUSSIAN'S PLANS

Three Months Armistice And Election Of Peace Delegates From All Nations But No Diplomats Part Of Program RADICALS TAKE MOSCOW

WASHINGTON, November 10-(Associated Press)-Aspects of the Russian debacle admittedly took on a more serious coloring yesterday when advices were received from Ambassador Francis that the influence of the Bolshe-Vikis, pro-Germans and ultra-radical parties had spread outside of Petrograd, reached Moscow and that there the revolutionary committee, supported by the military garrison had taken all of the government offices. Ambassador Francis had received, he said, a despatch from the United States consul at Moscow under date of Thursday,

DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATIVES CONFER

Further seriousness of the situation was evidenced in the fact that the diplomatic repesentatives of the allied nations held a meeting to consider measures for safety. Following the meeting, however, the ambassadors announced that they had arrived at the conclusion that at the present time there was not the occasion to take which forms a great valley running proceed immediately with the work, concerted action looking to the protection of the foreign colonies in Petrograd although the situation might become such as to demand it.

The whereabouts of Kerensky are unknown. There have been reports that he was arrested but none of these reports have been confirmed. Meantime the Bolshe-Vikis and other ultra-extremists IMPORTANT CHANGES are going on with their plans of securing an early peace. Such plans do not have the appearance of resulting in proposals that would be acceptable to the Germans and they would certainly not be acceptable to the Allies for they are largely the same proposals that were drafted by the radicals several weeks ago and which Great Britain said at the time could not for a moment be seriously considered.

NO DIPLOMATS ARE WANTED

In connection with such peace talk it is proposed that there shall be a conference to determine peace the delegates to which shall be other than those in any way connected with the diplomatic corps of the warring nations.

The most serious phase, perhaps, of the whole situation is the announcement that a three months' armistice will be sought at once a procedure which would result in the immediate releasing of still larger forces of the Teuton armies now placed along the Russian fronts which at present are not a direct menace to the Allies while in idleness in those sectors.

Advices from Petrograd quote Lenine as one of the chief spokes men of the Maximilists. In an address which he made before the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates Council on Wednesday he'is reported to have said:

PARIS IS SAFE FROM 'We shall offer to the world terms of peace which will be ac ceptable to the proletariat of all of the warring countries. We shall cause to be published all treaties that have heretofore been secret and will promulgate no further secret treaties. We shall take over the control of all land and we shall give to the workmen control of all of our industries."

Before the same body yesterday he said. "Our plan is to offer an immediate armistice of three months during which time elected representatives of all of the warring nations, none of whom shall in any way be connected with or representative of the diplomatic corps will meet to settle the question of peace. We shall present our terms but we are ready to consider the terms that others may suggest as well. It will not matter from which side these may emanate We shall offer a just peace and we will not accept unjust terms,"

PEACE TERMS DOUBTFUL

The peace terms which Lenine mentioned are pactically the same ones that were drafted for and adopted by the Workmen's and Soldiers' Council several weeks ago.

Following Lenine Trotsky is reported to have spoken to the council yesterday and to have further outlined a program. Included The imports in August were 1,680,000 in this was the abolition of capital punishment and the death penalty. the immediate release of all political prisoners arrested and incarcerated under orders from Kerensky, the arrest of Kerensky himself and the arrest, conviction and punishment of all of those who than before the war, netwithstanding aided him in making his escape.

"Our first act," said Trotsky, "will be to offer to the nations a democratic peace based upon a policy of no annexations and no indemnities.

Germans Beat Vainly Against New Lines; Hun Defeat On Vosges Front Is Told

NEW YORK, November 12—(Associated Press)—French and British reinforcements, sent to Italy in her hour of tried to British reinforcements, sent to Italy in her hour of trial have effectually strengthened the Italian defenses along the northerly line. Batteries from both countries and intantry to man the trenches and fight alongside of their Latin allies have had the desired effect and yesterday the Allies held their own on all parts of the new line of defense, checking the advance of the Austro-German forces that had previously swept all before them. They beat like waves against a sea wall on the new line of defense but all attacks of the day were futile, according to official Italian and Ally reports.

ITALIAN LINES NOW HOLD

The Italian line held its own tenacionsly along both the middle and the southerly reaches of the Piave River, the reports said and this was admitted by the official German reports in Berlin last night which said that the Italians had attacked and pressed back the Teuton forces on the Trentino front and had stood firmly and repelled all efforts at further advances on the middle and lower Piave River fronts, but claimed that on the upper Piave River Austro-German forces had taken Belluno.

PAINLEVE RETURNS PLEASED

Upon the return of Premier Painleve of France to the Prenci capital from his visit to the Italian front he expressed himself as con 6dent that with the assistance which France and Britain were lend ig to their Southern Ally victory for the forces of freedom would now be achieved. He told of the appointment of an Inter-Allies permanent staff of generals to conduct the affairs of the war on that front and to be composed of Generals Foch, Wilson and Cadorn: and expressed the confidence that their skill, science and known ability would not only stem the Hun tide but beat it back into Austria once more.

The celerity with which the Allies responded to the call for aic of Italy had particularly impressed the Italians, he said, and enthu siasm for the war had risen to a pitch higher than has ever before been known. There is a new confidence felt, also, and men who have previously held back from service are now coming forward willingly while many who are above the age limit have sought an opportunity to come to the assistance of their nation in its time of need. There is a spirit of determination manifested which spells the defeat of

PURPORTED WILL OF QUEEN MAKES COLBURN EXECUTOR

Notice Served On Kalanianole And Trustees Almost Before Breathe Leaves The Body Of Liliuokalani

MAY AFFECT TRUST DEED

Almost before the last fluttering breath had left the body of Queen Liliuokalani yesterday morning notice was served by John F. Colburn upon Prince Kalanianaole and upon Col. C. P. laukes also provided for the appointment of and W. O. Smith, the two latter as trustees of the Liliuokalani Trust that Colburn was named as executor of the Queen's estate under a hitherto unheard-of will executed by Liliuokalam, and announcing that he demanded to take charge of the funeral arrangements.

According to statements made yesterday by Attorneys Lorri Andrews and W. B. Lymer, representing Colburn, the purported las will and testament of the Queen, said by them to have been signed by her on August 29, 1917, may vitally affect all the provisions of the Liliuokalani trust deed, previous wills devising properties and annuities to relatives and friends, and may involve even the suit stil pending which Kuhio brought some time ago to annul the trust deed itself on the ground of the Queen's alleged mental incapacity.

Strong intimations of legal action, if necessary, to enforce Mr Colburn's demands were made, both by Colburn himself and by hi attorneys.

SECRET SIGNATURES

Both the attorneys and Mr. Colburn declared last night that the will bears the signature of Liliuokalani, although none of them saw the Queen place her signature to the document, stating that "a per OF OLD REGIME son" obtained it secretly and under great difficulties, but that the Queen had desired this "person" to draw up the purported will which she desired to sign.

Notice of the document and its radical provisions and the im portant present feature of the appointment of Colburn to take charge of the funeral obsequies, was served yesterday morning upon Prince-Kalanianaole, and Col. C. P. Iaukea and W. O. Smith, the two latter being trustees under the Liliuokalani Trust deed, just as the Queen was passing into eternity. Hardly had Col. laukea left the deatl chamber and was about to order the bells tolled to announce deatl than he was served with the notice, which resulted in a hurried con ference in the Liliuokalani Trust office, where Attorney D. L. With ington joined them, the meeting lasting an hour. At its close the preparations for the funeral went on, undertaken by the Prince and the trustees, despite the fact that the demand upon them was to give Colburn sole charge.

DEMAND IS BOMBSHELL

The demand upon the trustees was like a bombshell, particular ly as both had spent a long night of vigil at the dying Queen's bed side. That they felt it incumbent upon them to proceed with the plans was apparent when they received leaders of Hawaiian societie and accepted their proffers of assistance and participation in the veremonies. These preparations continued without reference to the harsh interruption, and they named the day for the lying-in-state reremonies at Kawaiahao and the obsequies at the Capitol on Sun day next. Mr. Colburn did not put in an appearance at Washington Place during the day.

Mr. Colburn, in his letter which was dated November 9, but un delivered until yesterday morning, referred to the probable fatal ill ness of the Queen and announced that he had in his possession " document purporting to be the last will and testament of Liliuoka lani, dated August 29, 1917," or just a little over two months ago He added that this document stated that he should be sole executo of her estate, and also that "knowing you hold a certain delegation of authority under instruments prepared conveying portions of he estate," expressed a wish to see the trustees of the trust with regard to the disposition of Her Majesty's remains, in case of her death and to take charge of her funeral arrangements.

HINTS AT LEGAL ACTION

Mr. Colburn said that "no one would wish unseemly controver sy at this time over this matter, but under the will it is indisputable that Mr. Colburn act as representative of Her Majesty's Estate (hi attorney was writing), and he has expressed his desire to work is harmony with you in all matters-connected with the obsequies." H also stated that he wished to have the probate of will deferred unti after the funeral, and "that there shall be no necessity for any un pleasant legal controversy in regard to the last rites to be performe-

(From Monday Advertiser) With the flag half-masted out of respeet to the memory of Hawaii's Queen, whose death occurred while the B special train bearing the troops was on the way to Kawailon, the National Guard of Hawaii went into camp yeaterday morning more than 2000 strong It was a perfect day for the encamp ment, and on the dunes swept by the strong salt breezes the tents were pitched in record time after urrival. More companies are to arrive today from Maui, Kauni and Hawati, bring ing the total strength for the camp up to about 3000 men and officers, The two Honolulu battalions report ed at the armory at six-thirty o'clock yesterday morning ready for the journey. They collected their blanket rolls and baggage and were ready to station before seven-thirty.

Many Races Mingle When the companies lined up prior to marching out they were an interenting sight, for nearly every race of the Territory was represented. In the center of the drill hall the Pilipino center of the drill hall the Pilipino company atood stiffly in even ranks. At the left was a Japanese company, and at the right the Chinese company was lined up. A Hawaiian company occupied the outside ranks on either hand. When the companies started for the station the Hawaiians from each side came first, marching to the center with military precision before turning to go out to Hotel Street.

The line of march to the station was on Hotel Street to Alaken, on Alaken.

CONGRESSIONAL PARTY IS NOTIFIED

Committee Of Three On Resolutions Named

HILO, November 11-(Special to The Advertiser)-Announcement of the death of Queen Liliuokalani to the members of the congressional party was made by the Governor this morning immediately following the receipt by him of a wireless message from Honolulu telling of the end of her illness, and arrangements for the taking of appropriate action were im-

When the congressional party met following the Governor's announcement of the Queen's death, Senstor Myers of Montana was elected chairman of the meeting and on the adoption of a motion for the appointment of a committee to draft suitable resolutions of regret and respect he named Senator King of Utah, Representative Temple of Pennsylvania and Representative Reavis of Nebraska. The same committee was named to telegraph the news of the death of the former Queen to Presi-

The selection of Senator King as chairman of the committee on resolutions was the more appropriate because he, and his father before him, had been personally acquainted with the last monarch of Hawaii.

The death of the Queen may materially alter the plans of the party, for this afternoon there was considerable discussion of the proposal to omit Mani from the present trip and to return to Honolulu when the program for this island shall have been completed. Such change is a possibility to be reckoned but determination of it may not be made until near the end of the visit here.

antime it is proposed that all social functions shall be abandone and that the visitors shall see the sights as tourists and investigate island conditions in their capacity as legislators. It is probable, however, that the public reception which had been planned will be held or a substitute plan adopted so that the people who may have any matters which they desire to present to the attention of the visitors may have the opportunity
