published his "Origin of Species" when 50, and his "Descent of Man" when 62. Grote wrote the larger part of his "History of Greece" between the ages of 52 and 62, and Hallam occupied nearly the same period of life with his "Introduction to the Literature of Europe." The two works by which Thomas Hood has survived the grave, "The Bridge of Sighs" and "The Song of the Shirt," were composed when he was 46, and on a sick bed from which he never rose. Longfellow gave us "Hiawatha" when 48, "Tales of a Wayside Inn" when 58, and after that was as prolific as he was excellent. We need only mention his translation of Dante's "Divinia Commedia," and his exquisite poem, "Morituri Salutanus." "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" was published when Holmes was 45, and "Songs in Many Keys" when he was 55. Washington Irving completed "Tales of the Alhambra" at 49, published "Mahomet" at 67 and "The Life of George Washington" after that age. Prescott wrote, we believe, "The Conquest of Mexico" between the ages of 45 and 47, and "The Conquest of Pera" between 47 and 51. Moley completed "The History of the United Netherlands" at 53, and after that began the history of "John of Barneveld," which he published when he was 60.
