LOCAL NEWS.

Prof. Yarnley makes an announcement elsewhere of interest to music learners.

The new Nuanu omnibus line looks well, and it is pleasing to see it doing well.

The Honolulu Rifles will drill to-night, having postponed their regular muster from last night.

A boat club composed of a few schoolboys has been started under the name of the Maile Boat Club.

The barkentine Planter will be returned to her home on the wave from the Marine Railway this morning.

The bark Star of Devon will sail for Hongkong on or about the 5th of February, under command of Captain Holland.

The Post Office despatched per S. S. Australia for San Francisco, Jan. 19th, a mail of 2,479 letters and 895 packages newspapers.

The days for hearing civil cases in the Police Court have been changed from Mondays and Thursdays to Wednesdays and Fridays.

This is the second anniversary of the great fire at the corner of Fort and Hotel streets, when Messrs. Fishel, McInerney, Lane, Page and others were burned out.

The lecture by Mr. John T. Arundel, on "The Islands of the Pacific," in the Y. M. C. A. hall, is free to everybody. A large map, that has not its like anywhere, is to be used.

Mrs. Dr. Towsley, whose death at Rome, New York State, is announced in this issue, was the eldest daughter of Rev. Dr. Corwin, for ten years pastor of Fort-street Church in this city.

Mr. W. S. Maule has been appointed Road Supervisor-in-Chief for Maui, Molokai and Lanai, in place of G. E. Richardson, resigned. Miss E. W. Lyons has been appointed School Agent for Kohala, Hawaii, in place of Rev. L. Lyons, deceased.

Captain Schnauer, of the bark Wrestler, when settling with Messrs. Sorenson & Lyle for repairs done to that vessel on the Marine Railway, said that he never had such work more satisfactorily executed in any other port.

Comrade Jas. T. White, of the Geo. W. De Long Post, had a table placed for reporters at the memorial service last night. Although the HERALD man, arriving late and being used to "roughing it," did not avail himself of the facility, he is just as grateful as though he had for the intelligent and thoughtful kindness.

The annual meeting of the Hawaiian Agricultural Company was held yesterday, when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Hon. C. R. Bishop; Vice President, Mr. Saml. C. Allen; Treasurer, Mr. P. C. Jones; Secretary, J. O. Carter; Auditor, T. May; Directors, Hon. C. R. Bishop, Messrs. S. C. Allen and P. C. Jones. This is the company that operates the Pahala plantation, Kau, Hawaii.

Mr. Wm. G. Irwin is making considerable improvements at the Oceanic Steamship Company's wharf, for the purpose of expediting the delivery of freight therefrom. Mr. Irwin deserves the thanks of the mercantile community for his public spiritedness. In future there will be two gates of exit at the mauka end of the wharf instead of one, the Port Surveyor's office having been moved makai, thus making room for another large gate.

At the monthly meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association last evening, five new members were elected. Mr. Southwick, treasurer, reported a balance of $310.64 in the funds. The various committees reported on their work for the month. Mr. P. C. Jones, chairman of the temperance committee, and others spoke in hopeful anticipation of good results from the approaching series of lectures by Mr. R. T. Booth, the American temperance orator.

The first Christian burial of a Chinaman in Pittsburgh took place a few weeks ago. The services were held in the chapel of a Presbyterian church. The dead man was Yee Hing, who had committed suicide, and the Rev. Dr. McKibben said that he had no doubt that he had been driven mad by the persecutions of the heathen Chinese of the city, who practically ostracize their countrymen who profess Christianity.

The Best Tonic.

Mr. Henry Billings, Washington, D. C., writes: "I have used your Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky for medicinal purposes. As a tonic I consider it superior to the hundreds of concoctions which are now flooding the land as stimulant liquors."

LOGAN MEMORIAL.

Service by Geo. W. De Long Post, G. A. R.

Last evening the Young Men's Christian Association hall was packed and overflowing at 7:45 o'clock, the hour appointed for the memorial service of Geo. W. De Long Post, Grand Army of the Republic, in honor of the late General John A. Logan, Past Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army. Members of the Post were stationed on the left of the platform, the choir on the right, composed as follows: Sopranos—Mrs. J. E. Hanford, Misses Hopper and Jennie Grieve; altos—Mrs. Cruzan, Mrs. Brown and Miss Parke; tenors—Messrs. W. W. Hall and J. T. Waterhouse, jr.; basses—Messrs. H. W. Morse and J. W. Yarnley (conductor); pianist—Myron H. Jones.

Mr. R. W. Laine, Post Commander, presided, having on his right and left the speakers of the evening—Rev. J. A. Cruzan and His Excellency G. W. Merrill, United States Minister Resident. In front of the desk was a draped picture of the soldier and statesman in whose honored memory the service was devoted. American flags tapestried the wall in the rear of the platform.

After a piano duet, the Post was called to "attention," and the Post Commander, assisted by Adjutant Noble, performed the impressive memorial services of the Grand Army.

The ladies of the choir then gave with much effect the anthem, "Holy Redeemer."

His Excellency Geo. W. Merrill, American Minister Resident, also a comrade of the Grand Army, delivered an address on the theme, "General John A. Logan, the Soldier." When the news flashed forth that General Logan was dead, the exclamation burst spontaneously from all American lips, "A soldier is gone!" General Logan, when the Union was menaced, and loyal citizens scarcely knew which way to turn, was one of the first to sound the watchword of union against disunion. In the late hero, as in the case of his chief who died before him, were demonstrated the possibilities of the self-made man. General Logan's devotion to the Union cause, his skill in war and bravery in battle were depicted upon in eloquent periods. With Logan political affiliations and old associations were not to be balanced against the integrity of the Union, and he was early in the vortex of the strife at the head of loyal legions, his motto, "Conquer or die." One more has joined Grant, Thomas, McLellan and Hancock in the ranks of the great majority—one who was ever at the post of duty in the hour of danger—a man of whom it may be said, that, take him for all in all, we may not look upon his like again.

A quartet consisting of Prof. Yarnley, Mr. W. W. Hall, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Hanford, then sang with deep expression, "Rest, Soldier, Rest," accompanied by Mr. Myron Jones on the piano.

Rev. J. A. Cruzan then took up the memory of the hero as "The Man and Statesman." He began by adverting to the ravages by death among the leaders on both sides during the war. On the Union-side the only Generals surviving were Sherman and Sheridan, and of statesmen Andrew J. Curtin, war Governor of Pennsylvania; while Longstreet and Daly were the only Generals and Jefferson Davis the solitary statesman living as representatives of "the lost cause." The speaker described Logan as a man of sterling character. Proceeding, he glanced at the modest origin of the General's life and his scant opportunity for acquiring an education, from which he rose by the force of his native ability and integrity to a foremost place in the councils of the nation, having been candidate for the Vice Presidency on the unsuccessful Republican ticket in 1884 and spoken of for the leading place in 1888. Among other incidents in the dead General's career, illustrative of his manly character, it was told how he withheld the presentation of an order entitling him to supersede General Thomas, until he had given the latter one more chance to retrieve his lost favor at headquarters. Without claiming a place for Logan among the first rank of statesmen, the speaker cited the opinion passed on him by a recognized statesman, attesting his great strength of character and honesty, to justify allotting the lamented hero no mean rank among statesmen. The speaker closed with a sympathetic allusion to the great grief of General Logan's widow.

The full choir, Mrs. Hanford taking the solo, gave with thrilling effect the hymn, "Heavenly Dwelling."

Mr. R. W. Laine, Post Commander, then in behalf of Geo. W. De Long Post and the Grand Army, thanked the audience for their attendance and called on Rev. Mr. Cruzan to close the exercises, which was done with a brief prayer.

"As a true tonic, effective invigorator and genuine appetizer, Duffy's Malt Whisky is unexcelled."

A Guilty Conscience.

To the Editor of the Herald:

SIR,—A chap, who has been somewhat conspicuous in the little confidence game connected with the issue of the opium license, is reported to have doubled his watch-dogs and established a system of pass-words, by which all-comers, not in possession of the requisite word, are denied admittance after nightfall. If the cautious and comprehensive military genius of the confidence man has not misled him, and divers disgruntled Celestials are really prowling around for an opportunity of getting square with him, he may not hope to escape them by increasing the number of his watch-dogs or by even the most complicated arrangement of pass-words known to military science. He should know that the Chinaman is more or less ubiquitous in character, and if there is sufficient inducement, can as easily remove a sheet from under a man while he is asleep or cut off his head even without waking him up, as he can braid his own hair, and that the only way to terrify him is to appeal to his spiritual nature; and this can be done in the following way: let him if he imagines himself in a state of siege and liable to inroads from Chinamen place, every night, large jack-o'-lanterns all around his yard on top of his fence, about fifteen feet apart, all different from each other and made as blood curdling as possible in appearance and each one illuminated by an electric light. This plan faithfully carried out will be perfectly successful so long as the jack-o'-lanterns look outwards, for no well-regulated and devout Chinaman would think for a moment of opposing such an array; but there are dangers connected with the scheme, and great care is required, for if by any mischance any of the jack-o'-lanterns should be turned inwards facing the house it would be impossible to forecast the consequences.

I contribute this proposition, hoping that its immediate and successful adoption may bring a sense of security where most needed. MASQUE.

Changes in Aliolani Hale.

The apartment lately occupied by the Marshal of the Kingdom, in the Government building, has been well fitted up for Judge Bickerton of the Supreme Court. With elegant but substantial furniture and attractive carpeting, it makes a very comfortable chamber for His Honor.

Judge Fornander has not yet had accommodation provided for him. It is suggested as a good move to give him the room at present used as the office of the Governor of Oahu. For the Governor it is proposed to fit up part of the large jury room, or legislative committee room on the ground floor. This, it is believed, would be more convenient for military headquarters and for the reception of foreign naval officers, besides giving an opportunity for the military sentry kept on duty at the Governor's office to show himself to the public. The apartment has much more space than is required for jury purposes, indeed is considered larger than is expedient therefore, giving too much scope for indolent jurors strolling away from the consultation board. It is important that all the Justices of the Supreme Court should be within easy communication, and at the same time situated near the clerk's office.

Judge Preston's room has been renovated, receiving a fresh coat of paint on the walls. The hat lobby of the Supreme Court room and legislative chamber has also been newly painted. A general touching up of the whole interior of Aliolani Hale would not be amiss and will probably be effected.

A Kentucky lady of large experience is reported as saying that there is hardly another city of its size, North, East, South, or West, where social rules are so lax as they are in Louisville. Almost any man with a gentlemanly appearance and good address can with little effort get into society there; and the young women are protected very little by their mothers. Hence plenty of scandal.

BUSINESS ITEMS.

Everybody says the imported Candies at the Elite are yum-yum. Go and try some!

Miss Tuck, at Miss Barry's, Punchbowl street, has received by last steamer a large assortment of Stamping Patterns for fancy work.

SUPREME COURT.

January Term.

Thursday, January 20th, before Chief Justice Judd, foreign jurors in attendance. The Court opened at 9:30 o'clock a. m., took an hour's recess at noon, at 4:30 p. m. adjourned for the day.

Ah Mung was arraigned for house-breaking and pleaded not guilty. His Excellency A. Rosa, Attorney-General, for the Crown; defendant in person.

Henry McChesney and Thomas McGiffin were arraigned for larceny and receiving stolen goods. McChesney pleaded guilty to the first count, larceny. The Attorney-General entered a nolle prosequi in favor of this defendant on the second count. McGiffin pleaded not guilty to both counts. The trial of McGiffin thereupon began before a foreign jury. Counsel for defendant having excused F. J. Lowrey and M. Davis from serving, the following jury was empanelled and sworn: S. Seig, W. G. Brash, G. J. Ross, C. J. Deering, E. G. Schumann, H. Hyman, H. Lose, John Lucas, W. H. Aldrich, J. H. Hare, C. H. Eldridge and Robert Grieve.

His Excellency the Attorney-General represented the Crown; A. C. Smith and C. Creighton appeared for the defendant McGiffin, and L. A. Thurston for the defendant McChesney.

The following witnesses were examined: E. F. McChesney, H. N. McChesney, A. Rosa, George Hawkins, J. M. McChesney, C. B. Reynolds and Frank Roche.

The circumstances of the case, as elicited at the preliminary examination of the prisoners before then Police Justice Bickerton, on October 28th last, were all given in the HERALD of the following day. They were to the effect that on the 22nd of October Harry McChesney, grandson of the senior partner in the house of M. W. McChesney & Son, abstracted an amount of about $800 from a pocket book in the store of that firm, gave the money into the hands of Thomas McGiffin and could not get it back after confessing the deed to his father.

About the only fresh evidence adduced yesterday, at McGiffin's trial, consisted in the accounts of conversations overheard between defendants while confined in the cells on the first floor of the Police Station. Reynolds, an agent of the Board of Health who holds a policeman's commission, had listened from concealed positions on two successive nights to such conversations. He testified that McChesney implored McGiffin to disclose the hiding place of the stolen money, and he (McChesney) would assume all the blame and get his fellow-prisoner off as lightly as possible. To this McGiffin's invariable response was in effect that they were now on their trial and it was for the authorities to prove their alleged guilt.

The trial will probably occupy most if not all of to-day.

IT IS SAID.

That Captain G. E. G. Jackson, late Navigating Lieutenant in H. B. M.'s navy, will be appointed Captain Commandant of the new gunboat Explorer.

That Mr. Geo. Beckley will be made First Lieutenant of the same vessel.

That at the expiration of six months Lieutenant Beckley will succeed Capt. Jackson.

That the inmates of the Reformatory School will be transferred to the gunboat to be instructed in naval science.

That the change will be greatly appreciated by all residents of the Palama suburbs.

That Cadet Boyd, of the Italian Naval Academy, will be brought home to receive the command of the royal yacht to be procured.

That little Hawaii will before long be mistress of the seas, at least so far as she sees.

That the opium license "boodle" is gone from the losers and their heirs forever.

That the subsidy matter, the security matter and the "boodle" matter all prove that the Kingdom is the prey of monopoly, oligarchy and autocracy; and that neither its independence nor its credit has much ground left to stand upon.

Chinese New Year.

Sunday next is Chinese New Year but the celebration will include the, preceding and the succeeding day.

The Marshal gives official notice of the conditions to be observed by the Chinese merry-makers in the use of fireworks, which their well-wishers ought to bring to their attention.

There is a general flight from service of Chinese house servants at this season to engage in their national festivities. In consequence very many people have contracted for their meals with restaurateurs until the agony is over. Mr. Cavenagh, of the Club House, has applications from thirty or forty housekeepers already.

While the "Celestial" racket will doubtless be great, it will generally be borne with equanimity, as one of the unique features of the year in this cosmopolitan city.

The Honolulu Almanac and Directory.

This annual for the present year has been laid on our table. As its title page indicates, it contains complete statistical and general information relating to the Hawaiian Islands. The directory pages and commercial and vital statistics make it an invaluable work of reference. Beneath each month's astronomical table and calendar appear readable editorial remarks on subjects relating to the Islands, giving such information as tourists will like to have so compactly. Mr. Laine contributes an article on "Spanish Discoveries of the Hawaiian Islands." There is an editorial description of the Hawaiian Islands; also a review of the year 1886, an account of the King's jubilee last year, another of the great fire of April 18th last, a statement of the city improvements recently made and projected, and a description of the Royal Hawaiian Band and its doings. There are also reports of the wreck of the ship Dunnottar Castle, of improvements to the water works, marine casualties and other events of the past year. Mr. F. L. Clarke discourses in several pages on ferns and calabashes, being a recognized connoisseur in both fern lore and native archaeology. The editor describes graphically the voyage between San Francisco and the Colonies. Moreover, there are a historical sketch of the partially built St. Andrew's Memorial Cathedral and a notice of the new Kaunakapili native church. The almanac is finely printed and altogether a credit to the Advertiser office in mechanical execution. Mr. R. J. Creighton, the editor and compiler, has in this work made a monument to his literary capacity and industry in the Hawaiian archives.

A CURIOUS CASE.

A SUPPOSED DESERTER BEFORE A
FEDERAL COURT MARTIAL.

Contradictory Character of the Evidence.
The Court Nonplussed—A Captain's
Advice—An Explanation Made After
the Close of the War.

It was in the spring of 1865. Desertions were frequent from the rebel lines in front of Petersburg. Hugh Morris, a sergeant of a New Jersey regiment, had been reduced to the ranks. A detail for fatigue duty five miles away included Hugh. The following night a deserter who came in said he had a brother in the Union army, and on investigation it was ascertained to be Hugh. He was permitted to wait with Hugh's men until his return. Meantime, the commanding officer of Hugh's regiment had been detailed away from his command, and his successor was ignorant of the facts above narrated. He received, shortly after assuming command, an order from headquarters to send Hugh Morris' brother there. He reported that Hugh was away on detail, and had no brother in the regiment. In doing so he unconsciously signed the colonel's name in place of his own. The colonel had previously reported the deserter and obtained permission for him to wait for his brother's return. Meantime one of Gen. Meade's spies had come across the line and reported that Hugh had deserted and was giving the rebels all the information he could as to the Union army and position. The pretended brother was doubtless a rebel spy. It would seem, also, that the colonel was in the game.

CHARGED WITH DESERTION.
Meade quietly ordered Wilcox's division to surround the New Jersey regiment, and placed every one in it under arrest. The rebel deserter could not be found. The officers of the regiment were furious. The next morning Fort Steadman was surprised and captured by the rebels, as is known in history. On the same day Hugh Morris returned to his regiment, and was immediately arrested and brought before a court martial for trial, charged with desertion. There was no evidence against him except the spy of Gen. Meade, before mentioned. But that was direct and conclusive. He was on the rebel outpost when Morris came in, himself seeking an opportunity to reach the Union lines. He accompanied Morris to the rear and slept with him that night in the prison barracks near Petersburg. While Morris was asleep he took from him his diary, and also cut from his head a lock of hair, both of which he showed before the court. The last entry in the diary was mention of the fact of detail to repair a locomotive engine. The clip of hair appeared to exactly match a sheared lock of Morris' head. Other than this and the fact that he had been reduced from sergeant to private and had expressed emphatic discontent, there was nothing against him. This, however, was absolute and convincing. Morris, in his defense, produced the four mechanics who were detailed with him to repair and replace the railroad engine, which had been thrown from the military railroad and seriously impaired. They testified that he was with them continuously and only left for his company when the job was completed, a short time before he in fact rejoined his company. He admitted the diary was his and made no explanation of the lock of hair. The mechanics who worked with him identified him particularly by the lat, he wore, which had a peculiar feather in it, and also his coat sleeves showed the dark lines which had before been covered with the sergeant's chevrons. All the officers of his regiment testified to his uniform soldierly conduct through many campaigns and battles, and it also appeared that he had been deprived of his sergeant's rank because of communication with the enemy against express orders.

EXPLAINED AT LAST.
The court of which the writer was president was nonplussed by the evidence. It adjourned early until the next morning. Late that night they came to my tent one of the most reliable and conscientious captains in the whole army of the Potomac. I believed in him next to my Saviour. He simply said: "Morris ought not to be convicted, and went away. When the court assembled a vote was taken by the ballot. There were eight blanks and one 'Not guilty,' and so the finding was recorded.

Two months after, when the war was over and the army at Washington, I was invited to take supper at the Washington house, corner Third and Pennsylvania avenues, by this man Morris. There were assembled every member of the court martial, besides citizen friends of the accused man from New Jersey. He then made the following statement:

"When the war broke out my brother was in business at Atlanta. I learned he was in our front before Petersburg as a member of the Thirteenth Alabama. I had been detailed to go on advance picket duty during the following night. Afterward came the order for a 'locomotive mechanic,' and the orderly sergeant changed my previous detail, sending me, the only man from the regiment, to assist in repairing the engine. Now, when you understand I had made arrangements with the rebel picket to meet my brother between the lines you can imagine I had no taste for that locomotive detail. My chum looked almost like my twin brother. He knew a little something about machine iron work. I told him the facts. He refused to go in my place unless the captain would consent. It was asking a good deal of the captain. Well, we swapped clothing and he went in my place. My brother missed me and came over to our side. I missed my brother and went over to their side. The federal spy met me just as he testified, and I told him all the cock-and-bull stories I could think about the Union army. The assault on Fort Steadman was wholly unknown to me, but I got away in the melee and returned to my company. Then came the court martial. Had I told my story then as I do now I should have been shot at sunrise. But the facts you now know."

This man is now manager of the Michigan Southern railroad—Army Officer in Milwaukee Telegraph.

Donn Platt as Postmaster.
In a private note Col. Donn Platt indignantly denies that he has been writing comic-mantic essays for the press, and as to that Mac-o-Cleek postmasterhood he says: "It was greatest thrust upon me, as a practical joke. The patrons do not find it so funny now. I have moved the office to my home and taken down the old sign from my gate, which was, 'No Admission on Business,' and in its place hung up a tin horn, with directions which read, 'Any one having business with this postoffice will blow the horn and give the P. M. time to chain his dogs.' I have, to guard against county commissioners, lightning rod men, book agents and other nuisances, two huge mastiffs, one St. Bernard and a bulldog of amazing pertinacity of purpose."—New York World.

A Large Grape Arbor.
Probably the largest grape arbor in central North Carolina is a Scuppernon arbor on a plantation in Sumter county. It has 1,700 posts, covers nearly an acre of ground, and every year it bears an abundance of Scuppernons. —Chicago Times.

ABOUT REJECTED MANUSCRIPT.

Funny Story Concerning a Couple of
Poems—Value of Perseverance.

It stands to reason that the experienced writer who has outgrown any morbidity that can be produced by a rejected manuscript immediately tears off the wrapper upon its return, reads it and sends it once more upon the road. The result is very apt to be satisfactory. Mrs. Clara Doty Bates tells a funny story of the fate of two of the first poems she ever sent for publication. They were forwarded to religious magazines simultaneously, and simultaneously they returned, so she reversed the addresses and sent them away again. They were both accepted, and brought $10 apiece. Many professional writers keep a book, and under the name of each article write the list of magazines to which it has been sent, that they may not forward it twice to the same editor, and then keep it going till it finds a resting place.

There is one writer of this city who has tried a daring game with marked success. When a manuscript which his judgment told him was really good was rejected by a favorite paper, he kept it quietly awhile and then, trusting to the forgetfulness of the editor, sent it back again. A happier mood, or a better dinner, or one of those mysterious chances which govern the fate of manuscripts conspired to its acceptance.

Any magazine of high position is much affronted if it receives an article which it discovers to have been rejected by some rival periodical. Most of them, and it may be all of them, have some cabalistic little mark which they use in various ways, and now and then it can be found upon the return of a rejected manuscript. The experienced contributor knows this and never sends a manuscript away a second time without first carefully examining the pages. The fact that one editor rejects and another accepts an article, it should be borne in mind, is no reflection on the judgment of either. What is in keeping with the tone of one publication is quite unsuited to another. It is a mistaken idea too to suppose that magazine editors will not take a manuscript unless it bears the name of a well known writer. This is an obvious absurdity, for how, then, could those well known writers have first become known. The enterprising editor is always on the alert for strong, fresh writers whose names they may have the credit of introducing. —Chicago Tribune.

Lady Wilde's Eccentric Ways.
Marshall P. Wilder, who recently returned from London, speaks of Lady Wilde as being even more eccentric than her two sons. Her receptions are attended by the most prominent people in London, and are much sought after. She receives her guests seated upon a throne, with Oscar on her right hand and Willie on her left. Every now and then, in imploring tones, Willie will address his mother, "Mother, do you love me?" Then Oscar takes up the strain, "Mother, do you love your Oscar?" Then they will shake hands all around.

Lady Wilde, though quite advanced in years, will insist upon wearing her dresses very décolleté and pinned at the breast with a brooch containing the picture of her late lamented husband. This brooch, the day Mr. Wilder dined with them, would insist upon falling into the soup. Oscar Wilde's dining room is most peculiar in the design of its decoration. The entire floor is made of glass, to represent water, the walls being decorated in the same style, and the table is set upon an island in the middle of the room. The glass and china are equally unique, the dishes and plates representing various fishes, and the glass shells. The tables are waited upon by young girls in peasant costumes. —Chicago Herald.

A Woman's Ambition.
"I've just been out in Denver," said an erstwhile passenger, "and while there I met Mrs. Tabor, divorced wife of the senator. She has not married again, but is living quietly with her son. She has developed very good business tact, and has taken such admirable care of the $200,000 which she got from her husband that she is now a millionaire. Tabor, on the other hand, has been gradually going down hill. Not long ago he made a rather lucky hit in some mines, which revived his drooping fortunes a bit; but the prediction is freely made that in a few years he will flatten out into hopeless bankruptcy. Mrs. Tabor No. 1 says that she will yet have to take care of 'the old man,' and that when his hour of adversity comes, as come it will, he will be glad enough to return to his first love and her million. It seems to be the height of this woman's ambition to get her husband back, and to be able to set him up again financially." —Chicago Herald.

Building the Merv Railway.
The Invalide Russe gives the following account of the construction of the last stage of the Merv railway: "Between Karabent and Merv the rails were laid to the extent of 119 versts in the space of thirty-six days, which, if Sundays and festivals are excluded, become only thirty working days. To the 119 versts should be added seven versts of stations constructed during the same period, so that the total per diem was rather more than four versts, or nearly three English miles. The works were carried on in military fashion. Morning work began to the sound of the drums, the men proceeded to the line from their huts at a quick march, and the officers gave the signal for breaking off. The latter superintended the work on horseback. The soldiers worked with extraordinary emulation, and even the officers ate in haste and were never long absent from the line." —Boston Transcript.

News Agency of No-Man's Land.
No matter what any one may do he can never run down one of these reports of the night. They come as regular as the epidemics of wind, fire, ocean disasters, and the seizure of American boats in Canadian waters. But from where is never discovered. There must be a no-man's land "somewhere in desolate wind-swept space," in which there abides a spectral news agent, who, with a ghostly chatter of teeth and a hollow laugh, claps his bones together as he flings up one of these weird creations and starts it on a trip around the world. —Chicago Herald.

Women at the Theatres.
A bright actress says that she hates matinees because "women audiences are like a sea of poets." They eat bon bons, seem to regard the actresses as inferior creatures, and act as though the lightest commendation in the nature of applause would be a serious breach of propriety. It is unnecessary to say the actress was talking of provincial matinees. There is never a lack of appreciative applause in New York. —Chicago Herald.

On the Lake's Bottom.
The Natural History society of Worcester, Mass., has employed divers to hunt around on the bottom of Lake Quinsigamond for Indian relics. A chart of the bottom is to be made showing the cold springs, so much dreaded by swimmers.

The Conscience Fund.
The conscience fund in the treasury at Washington is approaching the round sum of $250,000.

"Peach-plucks" is the name given to those who are employed in gathering fruit from the peach tree.

A large edition will be printed each day, to be circulated in Honolulu and throughout the Islands, regardless of subscriptions, until a regular paying list of subscribers is obtained on the public becoming acquainted with the merits of the paper.

The DAILY HERALD will furnish a fresh and readable record of events in city and country. It will also give, from time to time as received, a summary of the latest news from the outside world, in concise and systematic form.

The DAILY HERALD will follow a straightforward, consistent, independent and moderate course in the discussion of public affairs. It will not be the servile organ of any clique, faction or party. At the same time an earnest support will be given to measures promotive of the public welfare, and to individuals or organizations that may appear in the political field, with claims to popular confidence backed by worthy records and unassailable principles.

The undersigned would, however, rather point to his record as a journalist in this city for the past two years, as conductor of the Daily Bulletin, than make promises that, in general estimation, are valueless until justified by performance. He can only pledge himself to do his best to produce a thorough, an influential, and in every way acceptable, daily newspaper.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 21, 1887.

LILIH STREET.

That notorious thoroughfare, Liliha street, is, whether through the pressure of public opinion through the papers or otherwise, receiving much needed repairs. Yesterday morning a gang of prisoners began operations at the junction with King street. By noon they had the shape of a road thrown up for a distance of about 150 yards, using material dug from the road side. The Road Supervisor, Mr. Hart, was seen later and, on being bantered about the unsubstantial structure, stated that the road was to be covered with coral rock and rolled. That would make an excellent road for, probably, three or four years, judging by the amount of travel on that street compared with the traffic on King street, where a similarly built road is found, at the lapse of two years, to have lost its capability of resistance to a rainy siege. It is a pity that a harder material, broken to the Macadam standard, such as has given Queen street its durability, could not be employed in the repair of Liliha street.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

A selected article on the so called "alligator pear," in this issue, will be appreciated here where the fruit in question grows large and luscious.

Mr. Grady, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, made a speech at the New England banquet, which was a magnificent revelation of the "reconstructed" Southern heart. It procured him an ovation of unexampled cordiality from the distinguished company, and will probably gain him a place on the next Democratic presidential ticket.

Alligator Pear.

A writer upon Mexico gives an interesting account of a fruit cultivated in that country. Not less entertaining is what he has to say of the manner in which this fruit came by its strange name among English speaking people: I must not omit to mention the aguacate, a very delicate semi-vegetable fruit, sometimes purple and sometimes green. It is something of the shape of a pear, though not so much so in Mexico as I have seen it in the Cape Verde and South America. It has one large round stone in the middle, and its contents are of a substance like butter, with a very delicate, nutty flavor. In Portuguese, in which language I fancy it was first known to our sailors, it is called Abacate; and this word not exactly suiting a mouth with a quid in it, and the shape of the fruit being familiar, our tars of the olden time jumbled the whole name into "alligator pear," which the learned have adopted.

"What would you call it, then?" said a passenger on board who did not like to be disturbed out of what he had called it for years.

Now that is a very dangerous sort of side issue to fall into in any serious argument.

"I would call it by its own proper name," I replied.

"But who's to twist one's mouth into it? Alligator pear will do as well as anything else."

"Well, then," said another, "anything else again will do, and I'll call it 'crocodile apple.'"

One of these names is, certainly, just as good as the other; but to the end of the world "alligator pear" will represent aguacate, or abacate.

If you want to know all the news you must read the HERALD.

LOCAL NEWS.

Prof. Yarnley makes an announcement elsewhere of interest to music learners.

The new Nuanu omnibus line looks well, and it is pleasing to see it doing well.

The Honolulu Rifles will drill to-night, having postponed their regular muster from last night.

A boat club composed of a few schoolboys has been started under the name of the Maile Boat Club.

The barkentine Planter will be returned to her home on the wave from the Marine Railway this morning.

The bark Star of Devon will sail for Hongkong on or about the 5th of February, under command of Captain Holland.

The Post Office despatched per S. S. Australia for San Francisco, Jan. 19th, a mail of 2,479 letters and 895 packages newspapers.

The days for hearing civil cases in the Police Court have been changed from Mondays and Thursdays to Wednesdays and Fridays.

This is the second anniversary of the great fire at the corner of Fort and Hotel streets, when Messrs. Fishel, McInerney, Lane, Page and others were burned out.

The lecture by Mr. John T. Arundel, on "The Islands of the Pacific," in the Y. M. C. A. hall, is free to everybody. A large map, that has not its like anywhere, is to be used.

Mrs. Dr. Tousey, whose death at Rome, New York State, is announced in this issue, was the eldest daughter of Rev. Dr. Corwin, for ten years pastor of Fort-street Church in this city.

Mr. W. S. Maule has been appointed Road Supervisor-in-Chief for Maui, Molokai and Lanai, in place of G. E. Richardson, resigned. Miss E. W. Lyons has been appointed School Agent for Kohala, Hawaii, in place of Rev. I. Lyons, deceased.

Captain Schnauer, of the bark Wrestler, when settling with Messrs. Sorenson & Lyle for repairs done to that vessel on the Marine Railway, said that he never had such work more satisfactorily executed in any other port.

Comrade Jas. T. White, of the Geo. W. De Long Post, had a table placed for reporters at the memorial service last night. Although the HERALD man, arriving late and being used to "roughing it," did not avail himself of the facility, he is just as grateful as though he had for the intelligent and thoughtful kindness.

The annual meeting of the Hawaiian Agricultural Company was held yesterday, when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Hon. C. R. Bishop; Vice President, Mr. Saml. C. Allen; Treasurer, Mr. P. C. Jones; Secretary, J. O. Carter; Auditor, T. May; Directors, Hon. C. R. Bishop, Messrs. S. C. Allen and P. C. Jones. This is the company that operates the Pahala plantation, Kau, Hawaii.

Mr. Wm. G. Irwin is making considerable improvements at the Oceanic Steamship Company's wharf, for the purpose of expediting the delivery of freight therefrom. Mr. Irwin deserves the thanks of the mercantile community for his public spiritedness. In future there will be two gates of exit at the mauka end of the wharf instead of one, the Port Surveyor's office having been moved makai, thus making room for another large gate.

At the monthly meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association last evening, five new members were elected. Mr. Southwick, treasurer, reported a balance of $310.64 in the funds. The various committees reported on their work for the month. Mr. P. C. Jones, chairman of the temperance committee, and others spoke in hopeful anticipation of good results from the approaching series of lectures by Mr. R. T. Booth, the American temperance orator.

The first Christian burial of a Chinaman in Pittsburgh took place a few weeks ago. The services were held in the chapel of a Presbyterian church. The dead man was Vee Hing, who had committed suicide, and the Rev. Dr. McKibben said that he had no doubt that he had been driven mad by the persecutions of the heathen Chinese of the city, who practically ostracize their countrymen who profess Christianity.

The Best Tonic.

Mr. Henry Billings, Washington, D. C., writes: "I have used your Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky for medicinal purposes. As a tonic I consider it superior to the hundreds of quack remedies which are now flooding the land as stimulant liquors."

LOGAN MEMORIAL.

Service by Geo. W. De Long Post, G. A. R.

Last evening the Young Men's Christian Association hall was packed and overflowing at 7:45 o'clock, the hour appointed for the memorial service of Geo. W. De Long Post, Grand Army of the Republic, in honor of the late General John A. Logan, Past Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army. Members of the Post were stationed on the left of the platform, the choir on the right, composed as follows: Sopranos—Mrs. J. E. Hanford, Misses Hopper and Jennie Grieve; altos—Mrs. Cruzan, Mrs. Brown and Miss Parke; tenors—Messrs. W. W. Hall and J. T. Waterhouse, jr.; basses—Messrs. H. W. Morse and J. W. Yarnley (conductor); pianist—Myron H. Jones.

Mr. R. W. Laine, Post Commander, presided, having on his right and left the speakers of the evening—Rev. J. A. Cruzan and His Excellency G. W. Merrill, United States Minister Resident. In front of the desk was a draped picture of the soldier and statesman in whose honored memory the service was devoted. American flags tapestried the wall in the rear of the platform.

After a piano duet, the Post was called to "attention," and the Post Commander, assisted by Adjutant Noble, performed the impressive memorial services of the Grand Army.

The ladies of the choir then gave with much effect the anthem, "Holy Redeemer."

His Excellency Geo. W. Merrill, American Minister Resident, also a comrade of the Grand Army, delivered an address on the theme, "General John A. Logan, the Soldier." When the news flashed forth that General Logan was dead, the exclamation burst spontaneously from all American lips, "A soldier is gone!" General Logan, when the Union was menaced, and loyal citizens scarcely knew which way to turn, was one of the first to sound the watchword of union against disunion. In the late hero, as in the case of his chief who died before him, were demonstrated the possibilities of the self-made man. General Logan's devotion to the Union cause, his skill in war and bravery in battle were dedicated upon eloquent periods. With Logan political affiliations and old associations were not to be balanced against the integrity of the Union, and he was early in the vortex of the strife at the head of loyal legions, his motto, "Conquer or die." One more has joined Grant, Thomas, McClellan and Hancock in the ranks of the great majority—one who was ever at the post of duty in the hour of danger—a map of whom it may be said, that take him for all in all, we may not look upon his like again.

A quartet consisting of Prof. Yarnley, Mr. W. W. Hall, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Hanford, then sang with deep expression, "Rest, Soldier, Rest," accompanied by Mr. Myron Jones on the piano.

Rev. J. A. Cruzan then took up the memory of the hero as "The Man and Statesman." He began by adverting to the ravages by death among the leaders on both sides during the war. On the Union-side the only Generals surviving were Sherman and Sheridan, and of statesmen Andrew J. Curtin, war Governor of Pennsylvania; while Longstreet and Daly were the only Generals and Jefferson Davis the solitary statesman living as representatives of "the lost cause." The speaker described Logan as a man of sterling character. Proceeding, he glanced at the modest origin of the General's life and his scant opportunity for acquiring an education, from which he rose by the force of his native ability and integrity to a foremost place in the councils of the nation, having been candidate for the Vice Presidency on the unsuccessful Republican ticket in 1884 and spoken of for the leading place in 1888. Among other incidents in the dead General's career, illustrative of his manly character, it was told how he withheld the presentation of an order entitling him to supersede General Thomas, until he had given the latter one more chance to retrieve his lost favor at headquarters. Without claiming a place for Logan among the first rank of statesmen, the speaker cited the opinion passed on him by a recognized statesman, attesting his great strength of character and honesty, to justify allotting the lamented hero no mean rank among statesmen. The speaker closed with a sympathetic allusion to the great grief of General Logan's widow.

The full choir, Mrs. Hanford taking the solo, gave with thrilling effect the hymn, "Heavenly Dwelling."

Mr. R. W. Laine, Post Commander, then, in behalf of Geo. W. De Long Post and the Grand Army, thanked the audience for their attendance and called on Rev. Mr. Cruzan to close the exercises, which was done with a brief prayer.

As Guilty Conscience.

To the Editor of the Herald:

SIR,—A chap, who has been somewhat conspicuous in the little confidence game connected with the issue of the opium license, is reported to have doubled his watch-dogs and established a system of pass-words, by which all-comers, not in possession of the requisite word, are denied admittance after nightfall. If the cautious and comprehensive military genius of the confidence man has not misled him, and divers disgruntled Celestials are really prowling around for an opportunity of getting square with him, he may not hope to escape them by increasing the number of his watch-dogs or by even the most complicated arrangement of pass-words known to military science. He should know that the Chinaman is more or less ubiquitous in character, and if there is sufficient inducement, can as easily remove a sheet from under a man while he is asleep or cut off his head even without waking him up, as he can braid his own hair, and that the only way to terrify him is to appeal to his spiritual nature; and this can be done in the following way: let him imagine himself in a state of siege and liable to inroads from Chinamen place, every night, large jack-o'-lanterns all around his yard on top of his fence, about fifteen feet apart, all different from each other and made as blood curdling as possible in appearance and each one illuminated by an electric light. This plan faithfully carried out will be perfectly successful so long as the jack-o'-lanterns look outwardly, for no well-regulated and devout Chinaman would think for a moment of opposing such an array; but there are dangers connected with the scheme, and great care is required, for if by any mischance any of the jack-o'-lanterns should be turned inwardly facing the house it would be impossible to forecast the consequences.

I contribute this proposition, hoping that its immediate and successful adoption may bring a sense of security where most needed. MASQUE.

Changes in Aliiolani Hale.

The apartment lately occupied by the Marshal of the Kingdom, in the Government building, has been well fitted up for Judge Bickerton of the Supreme Court. With elegant but substantial furniture and attractive carpeting, it makes a very comfortable chamber for His Honor.

Judge Fernander has not yet had accommodation provided for him. It is suggested as a good move to give him the room at present used as the office of the Governor of Oahu. For the Governor it is proposed to fit up part of the large jury room, or legislative committee room on the ground floor. This, it is believed, would be more convenient for military headquarters and for the reception of foreign naval officers, besides giving an opportunity for the military sentry kept on duty at the Governor's office to show himself to the public. The apartment has much more space than is required for jury purposes, indeed is considered larger than is expedient therefore, giving too much scope for indolent jurors strolling away from the consultation board. It is important that all the Justices of the Supreme Court should be within easy communication, and at the same time situated near the clerk's office.

Judge Preston's room has been renovated, receiving a fresh coat of paint on the walls. The hat lobby of the Supreme Court room and legislative chamber has also been newly painted. A general touching up of the whole interior of Aliiolani Hale would not be amiss and will probably be effected.

A Kentucky lady of large experience is reported as saying that there is hardly another city of its size, North, East, South, or West, where social rules are so lax as they are in Louisville. Almost any man with a gentlemanly appearance and good address can with little effort get into society there; and the young women are protected very little by their mothers. Hence plenty of scandal.

SUPREME COURT.

January Term.

Thursday, January 20th, before Chief Justice Judd, foreign jurors in attendance. The Court opened at 9:30 o'clock a. m., took an hour's recess at noon, at 4:30 p. m. adjourned for the day.

Ah Mung was arraigned for house-breaking and pleaded not guilty. His Excellency A. Rosa, Attorney-General, for the Crown; defendant in person.

Henry McChesney and Thomas McGiffin were arraigned for larceny and receiving stolen goods. McChesney pleaded guilty to the first count, larceny. The Attorney-General entered a nolle prosequi in favor of this defendant on the second count. McGiffin pleaded not guilty to both counts. The trial of McGiffin thereupon began before a foreign jury. Counsel for defendant having excused F. J. Lowrey and M. Davis from serving, the following jury was empanelled and sworn: S. Selig, W. G. Brash, G. J. Ross, C. J. Deering, E. G. Schumann, M. Hyman, H. Lose, John Lucas, W. H. Aldrich, J. H. Hare, C. H. Eldridge and Robert Grieve.

His Excellency the Attorney-General represented the Crown; A. C. Smith and C. Creighton appeared for the defendant McGiffin, and L. A. Thurston for the defendant McChesney.

The following witnesses were examined: E. F. McChesney, H. N. McChesney, A. Rosa, George Hawkins, J. M. McChesney, C. B. Reynolds and Frank Roche.

The circumstances of the case, as elicited at the preliminary examination of the prisoners before then Police Justice Bickerton, on October 28th last, were all given in the HERALD of the following day. They were to the effect that on the 22nd of October Harry McChesney, grandson of the senior partner in the house of M. W. McChesney & Son, abstracted an amount of about $800 from a pocket book in the store of that firm, gave the money into the hands of Thomas McGiffin and could not get it back after confessing the deed to his father.

About the only fresh evidence adduced yesterday, at McGiffin's trial, consisted in the accounts of conversations overheard between defendants while confined in the cells on the first floor of the Police Station. Reynolds, an agent of the Board of Health who holds a policeman's commission, had listened from concealed positions on two successive nights to such conversations. He testified that McChesney implored McGiffin to disclose the hiding place of the stolen money, and he (McChesney) would assume all the blame and get his fellow-prisoner off as lightly as possible. To this McGiffin's invariable response was in effect that they were now on their trial and it was for the authorities to prove their alleged guilt.

The trial will probably occupy most if not all of to-day.

Chinese New Year.

Sunday next is Chinese New Year but the celebration will include the preceding and the succeeding day.

The Marshal gives official notice of the conditions to be observed by the Chinese merry-makers in the use of fireworks, which their well-wishers ought to bring to their attention.

There is a general flight from service of Chinese house servants at this season to engage in their national festivities. In consequence very many people have contracted for their meals with restaurateurs until the agony is over. Mr. Cavenagh, of the Club House, has applications from thirty or forty housekeepers already.

While the "Celestial" racket will doubtless be great, it will generally be borne with equanimity, as one of the unique features of the year in this cosmopolitan city.

The Honolulu Almanac and Directory.

This annual for the present year has been laid on our table. As its title page indicates, it contains complete statistical and general information relating to the Hawaiian Islands. The directory pages and commercial and vital statistics make it an invaluable work of reference. Beneath each month's astronomical table and calendar appear readable editorial remarks on subjects relating to the Islands, giving such information as tourists will like to have so compactly. Mr. Laine contributes an article on "Spanish Discoveries of the Hawaiian Islands." There is an editorial description of the Hawaiian Islands; also a review of the year 1886, an account of the King's jubilee last year, another of the great fire of April 18th last, a statement of the city improvements recently made and projected, and a description of the Royal Hawaiian Band and its doings. There are also reports of the wreck of the ship Dunnottar Castle, of improvements to the water works, marine casualties and other events of the past year. Mr. F. L. Clarke discourses in several pages on ferns and calabashes, being a recognized connoisseur in both fern lore and native archaeology. The editor describes graphically the voyage between San Francisco and the Colonies. Moreover, there are a historical sketch of the partially built St. Andrew's Memorial Cathedral and a notice of the new Kaunakapili native church. The almanac is finely printed and altogether a credit to the Advertiser office in mechanical execution. Mr. R. J. Creighton, the editor and compiler, has in this work made a monument to his literary capacity and industry in the Hawaiian archives.

A CURIOUS CASE.

A SUPPOSED DESERTER BEFORE A
FEDERAL COURT MARTIAL.

Contradictory Character of the Evidence.
The Court Nonplussed—A Captain's
Advice—An Explanation Made After
the Close of the War.

It was in the spring of 1865. Deserders were frequent from the rebel lines in front of Petersburg. Hugh Morris, a sergeant of a New Jersey regiment, had been reduced to the ranks. A detail for fatigue duty five miles away included Hugh. The following night a deserter who came in said he had a brother in the Union army, and on investigation it was ascertained to be Hugh. He was permitted to wait with Hugh's men until his return. Meantime, the commanding officer of Hugh's regiment had been detailed away from his command, and his successor was ignorant of the facts above narrated. He received, shortly after assuming command, an order from headquarters to send Hugh Morris' brother there. He reported that Hugh was away on detail, and had no history in the regiment. In doing so he (erroneously) signed the colonel's name in place of his own. The colonel had previously reported the deserter and obtained permission for him to wait for his brother's return. Meantime one of Gen. Meade's spies had come across the line and reported that Hugh had deserted and was giving the rebels all the information he could as to the Union army and position. The pretended brother was doubtless a rebel spy. It would seem, also, doubtless, that the colonel was in the game.

CHARGED WITH DESERTION.
Meade quietly ordered Wilcox's division to surround the New Jersey regiment, and placed every one in it under arrest. The rebel deserter could not be found. The officers of the regiment were furious. The next morning Fort Steadman was surprised and captured by the rebels, as is known in history. On the same day Hugh Morris returned to his regiment, and was immediately arrested and brought before a court martial for trial, charged with desertion. There was no evidence against him except the spy of Gen. Meade, before mentioned. But that was direct and conclusive. He was on the rebel outpost when Morris came in, himself seeking an opportunity to reach the Union lines. He accompanied Morris to the rear and slept with him that night in the prison barracks near Petersburg. While Morris was asleep he took from him his diary, and also cut from his head a lock of hair, both of which he showed before the court. The last entry in the diary was mention of the fact of detail to repair a locomotive engine. The clip of hair appeared to exactly match a sheared lock of Morris' head. Other than this and the fact that Morris had been reduced from sergeant to private and had expressed emphatic discontent, there was nothing against him. This, however, was absolute and convincing. Morris, in his defense, produced the four mechanics who were detailed with him to repair and replace the railroad engine, which had been thrown from the military railroad and seriously impaired. They testified that he was with them continuously and only left for his company when the job was completed, a short time before he in fact rejoined his company. He admitted the diary was his and made no explanation of the lock of hair. The mechanics who worked with him identified him particularly by the hat he wore, which had a peculiar feather in it, and also his coat sleeves showed the dark lines which had before been covered with the sergeant's chevrons. All the officers of his regiment testified to his uniform soldierly conduct through many campaigns and battles, and it also appeared that he had been deprived of his sergeant's rank because of communication with the enemy against express orders.

EXPLAINED AT LAST.
The court of which the writer was president was nonplussed by the evidence. It adjourned early until the next morning. Late that night they came to my tent one of the most reliable and conscientious captains in the whole army of the Potomac. I believed in him next to my savior. He simply said: "Morris ought not to be convicted," and went away. "When the court assembled a vote was taken by the ballots. There were eight blanks and one 'Not guilty,' and so the finding was recorded."

Two months after, when the war was over and the army at Washington, I was invited to take supper at the Washington house, corner Third and Pennsylvania avenues, by this man Morris. There were assembled every member of the court martial, besides citizen friends of the accused man from New Jersey. He then made the following statement:
"When the war broke out my brother was in business at Atlanta. I learned he was in our front before Petersburg as a member of the Thirtieth Alabama. I had been detailed to go on advance picket duty during the following night. Afterward came the order for a 'locomotive mechanic,' and the orderly sergeant changed my previous detail, sending me, the only man from the regiment, to assist in repairing the engine. Now, when you understand I had made arrangements with the rebel picket to meet my brother between the lines you can imagine I had no taste for that locomotive detail. My chum looked almost like my twin brother. He knew a little something about machine iron work. I told him the facts. He refused to go in my place unless the captain would consent. It was asking a good deal of the captain. Well, we swapped clothing and he went in my place. My brother missed me and came over to our side. I missed my brother and went over to their side. The Federal spy met me just as he testified, and I told him all the cock-and-bull stories I could think about the Union army. The assault on Fort Steadman was wholly unknown to me, but I got away in the melee and returned to my company. Then came the court martial. Had I told my story then as I do now I should have been shot at sunrise. But the facts you now know."

This man is now manager of the Michigan Southern railroad.—Army Officer in Milwaukee Telegraph.

Donn Platt as Postmaster.
In a private note Col. Donn Platt indignantly denies that he has been writing comic essays for the press, and as to that Mac-o-Cheek postmasterhood he says: "It was greatness thrust upon me, as a practical joke. The patrons do not find it so funny now. I have moved the office to my house and taken down the old sign from my gate, which was, 'No Admission on Business,' and in its place hung up a tin horn, with directions which read, 'Any one having business with this postoffice will blow the horn and give the P. M. time to chain his dogs.' I have, to guard against county commissioners, lightning rod men, book agents and other nuisances, two huge mastiffs, one St. Bernard and a bulldog of amazing pertinacity of purpose.—New York World.

A Large Grape Arbor.
Probably the largest grape arbor in central North Carolina is a Scuppernon arbor on a plantation in Sumter county. It is 1,700 feet, covers nearly an acre of ground, and every year it bears an abundance of Scuppernons.—Chicago Times.

ABOUT REJECTED MANUSCRIPT.

Funny Story Concerning a Couple of
Poems—Value of Perseverance.

It stands to reason that the experienced writer who has outgrown any morbidity that can be produced by a rejected manuscript immediately tears off the wrapper upon its return, rereads it and sends it once more upon the road. The result is very apt to be satisfactory. Mrs. Clara Doty Bates tells a funny story of the fate of two of the first poems she ever sent for publication. They were forwarded to religious magazines simultaneously, and simultaneously they returned, so she reversed the addresses and sent them away again. They were both accepted, and brought $10 apiece. Many professional writers keep a book, and under the name of each article write the list of magazines to which it has been sent, that they may not forward it twice to the same editor, and then keep it going till it finds a resting place.

There is one writer of this city who has tried a daring game with marked success. When a manuscript which his judgment told him was really good was rejected by a favorite paper, he kept it quietly awhile and then, trusting to the forgetfulness of the editor, sent it back again. A happier mood, or a better dinner, or one of those mysterious chances which govern the fate of manuscripts conspired to its acceptance.

Any magazine of high position is much affronted if it receives an article which it discovers to have been rejected by some rival periodical. Most of them, and it may be all of them, have some cabalistic little mark which they use in various ways, and now and then it can be found upon the leaves of a returned manuscript. The experienced contributor knows this and never sends a manuscript away a second time without first carefully examining the pages. The fact that one editor rejects and another accepts an article, it should be borne in mind, is no reflection on the judgment of either. What is in keeping with the tone of one publication is quite unsuited to another. It is a mistaken idea too to suppose that magazine editors will not take a manuscript unless it bears the name of a well known writer. This is an obvious absurdity, for how, then, could those well known writers have first become known. The enterprising editor is always on the alert for strong, fresh writers whose names they may have the credit of introducing.—Chicago Tribune.

Lady Wilde's Eccentric Ways.

Marshall P. Wilder, who recently returned from London, speaks of Lady Wilde as being even more eccentric than her two sons. Her opinions are attacked by the most prominent people in London, and are much sought after. She receives her guests seated upon a throne, with Oscar on her right hand and Willie on her left. Every now and then, in imploring tones, Willie will address his mother, "Mother, do you love me?" Then Oscar takes up the strain, "Mother, do you love your Oscar?" Then they will shake hands all around.

Lady Wilde, though quite advanced in years, will insist upon wearing her dresses very décolleté and pinned at the breast with a brooch containing the picture of her late lamented husband. This brooch, the day Mr. Wilde dined with them, would insist upon falling into the soup. Oscar Wilde's dining room is most peculiar in the design of its decoration. The entire floor is made of glass, to represent water, the walls being decorated in the same style, and the table is set upon an island in the middle of the room. The glass and china are equally unique, the dishes and plates representing various fishes, and the glasses shells. The tables are waited upon by young girls in peasant costumes.—Chicago Herald.

A Woman's Ambition.

"I've just been out in Denver," said an east bound passenger, "and while there I met Mrs. Taber, divorced wife of the senator. She has not married again, but is living quietly with her son. She has developed very good business tact, and has taken such admirable care of the $400,000 which she got from her husband that she is now a millionaire. Taber, on the other hand, has been gradually going down hill. Not long ago he made a rather lucky hit in some mines, which resulted in his dropping fortunes a bit; but the prediction is freely made that in a few years he will flounder into hopeless bankruptcy. Mrs. Taber No. 1 says that she will yet have to take care of the old man; and that when his hour of adversity comes, as come it will, he will be glad enough to return to his first love and her million. It seems to be the height of this woman's ambition to get her husband back, and to be able to set him up again financially."—Chicago Herald.

Building the Merv Railway.

The Invalide Russe gives the following account of the construction of the last stage of the Merv railway: "Between Karybent and Merv the rails were laid to the extent of 119 versts in the space of thirty-six days, which, if Sundays and festivals are excluded, becomes only thirty working days. To the 119 versts should be added seven versts of stations constructed during the same period, so that the total per diem was rather more than four versts, or nearly three English miles. The works were carried on in military fashion. Morning work began to the sound of the drum; the men proceeded to the line from their huts at a quick march, and the officers gave the signal for breaking off. The latter superintended the work on horseback. The soldiers worked with extraordinary emulation, and even the officers ate in haste and were never long absent from the line."—Boston Transcript.

News Agency of No-Man's Land.

No matter what any one may do he can never run down one of these reports of the night. They come as regular as the epidemics of wind, fire, ocean disasters, and the seizure of American boats in Canadian waters. But from where is never discovered. There must be a no-man's land "somewhere in desolate wind-swept space," in which there abides a spectral news agent, who, with a ghostly chatter of teeth and a hollow laugh, claps his bones together as he fixes up one of these weird creations and starts it on a trip around the world.—Chicago Herald.

Women at the Theatres.

A bright actress says that she hates matinees because "women audiences are like a sea of poets." They eat bon bons, seem to regard the actresses as inferior creatures, and act as though the lightest commendation in the nature of applause would be a serious breach of propriety. It is unnecessary to say the actress was talking of provincial matinees. There is never a lack of appreciative applause in New York.—Chicago Herald.

On the Lake's Bottom.

The Natural History society of Worcester, Mass., has employed divers to hunt around on the bottom of Lake Quinsigamond for Indian relics. A chart of the bottom is to be made showing the cold springs, so much dreaded by swimmers.

The Conscience Fund.

THE DAILY HERALD.

To-day, September 1st, 1886, is issued the first number of THE DAILY HERALD, a morning newspaper, to be printed for the proprietor under contract by the "Press Publishing Company," Merchant street, Honolulu.

Price Six Dollars per Annum or Fifty Cents per Month.

All who receive a copy of the initial or any succeeding number are respectfully

INVITED TO SUBSCRIBE.

Business men are solicited to test the advantages of THE DAILY HERALD as an

ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

A large edition will be printed each day, to be circulated in Honolulu and throughout the Islands, regardless of subscriptions, until a regular paying list of subscribers is obtained on the public becoming acquainted with the merits of the paper.

The DAILY HERALD will furnish a fresh and readable record of events in city and country. It will also give, from time to time as received, a summary of the latest news from the outside world, in concise and systematic form.

The DAILY HERALD will follow a straightforward, consistent, independent and moderate course in the discussion of public affairs. It will not be the servile organ of any clique, faction or party. At the same time an earnest support will be given to measures promotive of the public welfare, and to individuals or organizations that may appear in the political field, with claims to popular confidence backed by worthy records and unassailable principles.

The undersigned would, however, rather point to his record as a journalist in this city for the past two years, as conductor of the Daily Bulletin, than make promises that, in general estimation, are valueless until justified by performance. He can only pledge himself to do his best to produce a thorough, an influential, and in every way acceptable, daily newspaper.

Try the "Daily Herald" for a month at least.
